LIBRARY
SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY
CLAREMONT, CALIF.

THE

HOLY BIBLE,

WITH

NOTES, REFERENCES AND PRACTICAL

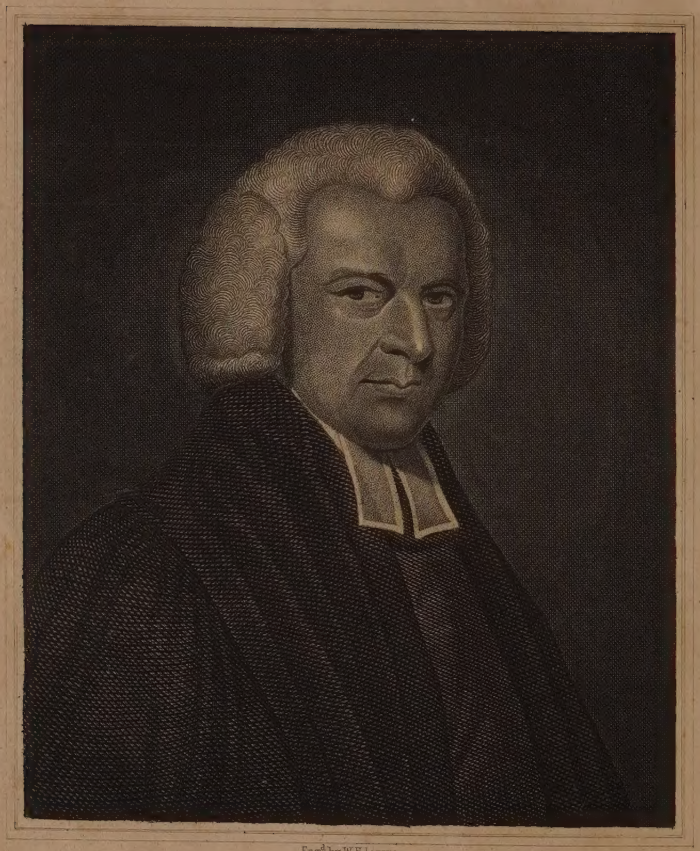
OBSERVATIONS.

The Nativity.

GLASGOW

ARCHIBALD FULLARTON & CO.

MDCCCXXXVI



Engd by W.H.Lizars

REVp THOMAS HAWEIS, L.L.B. & M.D.

Rector of Aldwinkle, Northamptonshire, and Chaplain to the late Countess of Huntingdon

Published by Archd Fullarton & Co Glasgow

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;

OR,

A COMMENTARY

ON THE

NEW TESTAMENT,

WHEREIN THE

SACRED TEXT IS EXPLAINED AND ELUCIDATED;

WITH

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS,

FOR THE USE OF FAMILIES AND PRIVATE CHRISTIANS.

BY THE REV. THOMAS HAWEIS, LL.B. M.D.
LATE RECTOR OF ALDWINKLE, NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

TO WHICH ARE ANNEXED,

MARGINAL REFERENCES AND READINGS,

BY THE LATE REV. JOHN BROWN OF HADDINGTON.

GLASGOW:
ARCHIBALD FULLARTON AND CO., 34, HUTCHESON STREET; AND 6, ROXBURGH PLACE, EDINBURGH.

MDCCCXXXVII.

GLASGOW.
FULLARTON & CO., PRINTERS, VILLAFIELD.

PREFACE.

AS it is the professed belief of every Christian that the Scriptures alone contain the way of salvation, it is therefore their greatest interest as well as duty, to consult those sacred oracles, and diligently inquiring after the mind and will of God therein revealed, to follow with simplicity and sincerity the path marked out to them in this sure guide to heaven. To be a believer upon trust, or a Christian by education, is only to abuse the name, without a real possession of the thing. We must go then to the word and to the testimony, that on the foundation of scriptural knowledge we may raise the glorious superstructure of real Christianity, and be enabled, not merely to have a good hope through grace, in ourselves, but be able also to give to others a reason of the hope that is in us.

Though the sacred text attentively read, with a heart directed to him who giveth wisdom and understanding to the simple, will generally afford the best comment on itself, by comparing spiritual things with spiritual; yet, it will conduce not a little to enlarge our views, and to warm our hearts, if we borrow the assistances which the wise and faithful Expositors have given us, either to elucidate the more difficult passages, or to apply the more obvious to the conscience, or to spiritualize the ceremonies, or to enliven the parts purely historical, with observations practical, and naturally arising from the subject.

This exposition goes forth with this professed design, and is commended to the blessing of the Divine Spirit, who alone can make our feeble efforts effectual to the end proposed. The author has been indebted to several Expositors who have gone before, but owns his greatest obligations to Mr Henry, whose excellent Exposition hath received sufficient commendation in the many editions it hath passed. But as the length and expensiveness of so large a work prevents its usefulness to many, who can neither afford the time nor expense it requires, so manifold repetitions and explications, perhaps sometimes unnecessary or tedious, render it less acceptable to others. The following work, therefore, will be included in a compass much more convenient; and, whilst it is attempted to remove all superfluous enlargements, it is hoped, that Mr Henry's spirituality will be preserved, with what additional improvement, either in matter or manner, the reader must determine.

I desire to look up to God for help and assistance in this important work which was undertaken in the country, where a small charge afforded me more than usual leisure: and if, by the powerful operations of the Holy Spirit, it shall be made useful to the churches of Christ, I shall count my labour not in vain, and give God the praise; as I have reason to be thankful to Him, who hath blessed it, in any communications of farther knowledge or edification to my own soul.

THOMAS HAWEIS.

ALDWINCKLE,
June 28th, 1765.

Testimonials in favour of this Work.

Copy of a Letter from the Rev. Mr Venn, of Huddersfield, in Yorkshire, to the Publishers.

I have received the sheets of Mr Haweis's Evangelical Expositor. I heartily approve of his design, to make the blessed Word of God more read, and more understood. The great Masters in Israel, of whose Comments he intends to make much use, must render his Work valuable; and whoever knows his spirited manner of writing, and truly evangelical principles, (as he has published them to the world in his Volume of Sermons), and has a zeal for the advancement of the Redeemer's glory, will be glad to recommend, to serious Christians of all denominations, Mr Haweis's Exposition.

Huddersfield,
April 23, 1765.

Copy of a Letter from the Honourable and Reverend Mr Shirley, Rector of Loughrea, in Ireland, to the Author.

I had the pleasure of your Letter, and the very great pleasure of some sheets of your Exposition. I was really charmed with it; and if you conceive that my name will be of any service in the recommendation of it, I think I owe this not only to you, but to the public.

WALTER SHIRLEY.

April 13*th*, 1765.

Copy of a Letter from the Rev. Mr Townsend, Rector of Pewsy, in Wiltshire, to the Publishers.

I have read the sheets of Mr Haweis's Evangelical Expositor, which you sent me, and think the Work fully answers the Title. It appears to me to be far beyond any Expositor I have seen; more spirited, and fully as experimental. I can with pleasure recommend to others, a Book, from which I expect so much pleasure and edification myself.

JOSEPH TOWNSEND.

Pewsy,
April 22*d*, 1765.

Copy of a Letter from the Rev. Mr Newton, of Olney, in Bucks, to the Publishers.

I have perused the Sheets you sent me of the Evangelical Expositor. The design has my hearty approbation: I hope and believe it will conduce to the great end of advancing the Redeemer's glory, and the knowledge of his word and grace amongst us. So far as my influence will reach, I shall most cordially recommend it to serious Christians of every denomination.

JOHN NEWTON.

Olney,
April 16*th*, 1765.

PREFACE.

THE sum and substance of all the Scriptures is Jesus Christ. Him we have seen as the great object of faith and hope proposed in the Old Testament, and the great subject of all the foregoing prophecies. In the New, we behold him in the fulness of time appearing, accomplishing all the things written concerning himself, putting a period to the former shadowy and typical dispensation, and establishing that church which is to endure to the end of time.

Between these inspired writings, certain books are often inserted in our Bibles, called apocryphal, or hidden; books not only destitute of Divine authority, but of any authority; and which, with holy indignation, a gracious spirit grieves to behold intruded between the sacred volumes of God's word, and stamped with a kind of reverence by their situation there, though some of them are evidently infamous forgeries. Not one of them but contains evident falsehoods; and many of the stories are as absurd, ridiculous, false, and fabulous as any of the most lying romances, or heathen mythologies. It is to be lamented as one of the things our pious reformers left unfinished, that these unhallowed books should still remain in our calendar, as first lessons for near two months of the year; among which, not to mention the ridiculously absurd and lying stories of Bel and the Dragon, or Susannah and the Elders, even in the best of them, the Book of Wisdom, and the Ecclesiasticus, besides a multitude of palpable falsehoods, there are advanced many wicked and false doctrines, which a Christian cannot but regard with abhorrence; and which to hear read in the house of God, sounds still more shocking. As in the Book of Wisdom, chap. iii. 13—18. where the marriage-bed is condemned as sinful, and bastards excluded from salvation. Chap. xxv. the Divine Logos is spoken of as a vapour. Chap. viii. 20. the transmigration of souls into good or bad bodies, according to their deserts, is intimated, with other follies and falsities too many to be recapitulated. And in the Book of Ecclesiasticus the Divine Logos is said to be created, according to the Arian heresy, chap. xxiv. 9. Honouring parents and giving alms are said to make atonement for sin, chap. iii. 3—30. And chap. xii. 4, 5. the writer dissuades from helping sinners, or charitably relieving the ungodly; doctrines diametrically opposite to the most glorious truths of God's word; besides a number of other mistakes and untruths; which justly should expunge them from a place between the two sacred volumes, and consign them at least to the shelf, among other legends of antiquity, or the ethics of heathenism. Nor need any minister of our church count himself at all bound to the use of them, because they stand in the calendar; nor should there be any objection to the Liturgy in general, since by the preface to the Homilies we are enjoined to consider the first lessons to be read, and to change them for any other out of the New Testament which we shall judge more to edification, with a commendation on such diligence.

The book now before us, called the New Testament, contains,

1. The four Gospels ; in which we have an account of the appearing of the Messiah's harbinger, John the Baptist, with the promise of which, the Old Testament closed. And shortly after Christ himself is manifested in the flesh ; the history of whose life, from his miraculous conception to his death upon the cross, is contained in these four volumes: a multitude of his miracles are recorded; the sermons he preached; the doctrines he maintained; the persecutions he endured; and the fulfilment of all the prophecies concerning his incarnation, descent, the place of his nativity, the nature of his office, &c. Finally, after seeing the Saviour dying upon a cross, and laid in his grave, we are told of his glorious resurrection, confirmed by incontestable evidence, and his ascension to the right hand of God, whereby he completed the glorious work he had undertaken, and obtained eternal redemption for us.

2. The Acts of the Apostles. The book opens with an account of the ascension of our Lord, and the qualifications he shortly after bestowed on the apostles, by the gift of the Holy Ghost, on the day of Pentecost, to fulfil the commission he had before given them, to preach the gospel to every creature: in consequence of which, we are informed, they went forth spreading the gospel, working miracles, suffering a variety of persecutions, yet seeing the success of their labours in every place; forming churches not only in Judea, but more abundantly in the Gentile world, the wall of partition being now broken down: and especially we have an account of the labours of Paul, the great apostle of the Gentiles, witnessing to small and great the glorious truths he once persecuted, and now as zealously espoused, even to prison and to death.

3. The Epistles ; occasioned, many of them, by disputes which early arose in the Christian church, and thereby occasioned the great and distinguishing doctrines of Christianity to be more distinctly, explicitly, and fully committed to writing ; and the various duties thence depending, personal or relative, to God or man, to be urged upon the faithful from right principles, and from those strongest motives which the truths of Christianity furnished. Such good hath accrued to us from the unhappy divisions which we lament whilst we read some of the epistles.

4. The Revelation of St John ; which closes the canon of Scripture, and is prophetical of those great events which should happen in the world, and particularly as they respect the church of Christ to the end of time ; wherein are many things dark indeed and hard to be understood, the fulfilment of which will be the surest key to the events predicted ; and till then, our search after the meaning of them should be attended with humble diffidence and reverential awe, praying that God would accomplish the number of his elect, and hasten his kingdom, when all that is now mysterious will be unfolded.

THE

EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;

OR, A

PRACTICAL COMMENT UPON THE

GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST MATTHEW.

Introduction.

WE have now before us, 1. The New Testament of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, so this second part of the Holy Bible is entitled; The New Covenant, so it might as well be rendered; the word signifies both; but when it is (as here) spoken of as Christ's act and deed, it is most properly rendered a Testament, for he is the Testator, and it becomes of force by his death, Heb. iv. 16, 17; nor is there, as in covenants, a previous treaty between the parties; but what is granted is owing to the will, the free will, the good will of the Testator Jesus Christ. This is called a New Testament, to distinguish it from that which was given by Moses, and was now antiquated, and to signify that it should be always new, and should never wax old, and grow out of date.

2. We have before us the four gospels: Gospel signifies good news or glad tidings; and this history of Christ's coming into the world to save sinners, is, without doubt, the best news that ever came from heaven to earth; the angel gave it this title, Luke ii. 10. Ευαγγελιζομαι ὑμιν, I bring you good tidings; I bring the gospel to you. And the prophet foretold it, Isa. lii. 7. lxi. 1. where it is said, that in the days of the Messiah good tidings should be preached. Gospel is an old Saxon word; it is God's spell or word. The whole New Testament is the Gospel; St Paul calls it his gospel, because he was one of the preachers of it. O that we may each of us make it ours, by our cordial acceptance of it and subjection to it! But the four books which contain the history of the Redeemer, we commonly call the four gospels, and the inspired penmen of them the evangelists; not exclusively, for all the preachers of the gospel are evangelists, but by way of eminence.

3. We have before us The gospel according to St Matthew. The penman was by birth a Jew, by calling a publican, till Christ commanded his attendance, and then he left the receipt of custom to follow him, and was one of those that accompanied him all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out, beginning from the baptism of John, unto the day that he was taken up, Acts i. 21, 22. and was therefore a competent witness of what he has here recorded. He is said to have written this history about eight years after Christ's ascension. Many of the ancients say he wrote it in the Hebrew or Syriac language, but the tradition is sufficiently disproved by Dr Whitby; doubtless it was written in Greek, as the other parts of the New Testament were; not in that language which was peculiar to the Jews, whose church and state were near a period, but that which was common to the world, and in which the knowledge of Christ would be most effectually transmitted to the nations of the earth; yet it is probable there might be an edition of it in Hebrew, published by St Matthew himself, at the same time that he wrote it in Greek; the former for the Jews, the latter for the Gentiles, when he left Judea to go and preach among the Gentiles. Let us bless God that we have it, and have it in a language we understand.

CHAP. I.

This Evangelist begins with the account of Christ's parentage and birth, his ancestors from whom he descended, and the manner of his entry into the world, to make it appear that he was indeed the Messiah promised; for it was foretold that he should be the Son of David, and should be born of a virgin; and that he was so is here plainly shown; for here is, 1. His pedigree from Abraham, in forty-two generations, three fourteens, ver. 1—17. 2. An account of the circumstances of his birth, so far as was requisite to show that he was born of a virgin, ver. 18—25.

1. THE [a] book of the generation of Jesus Christ, [b] the son of David, [c] the son of Abraham. 2. [d] Abraham begat Isaac; and [e] Isaac begat Jacob; and [f] Jacob begat Judas and his brethren; 3. And [g] Judas begat Phares and Zara of Thamar; and [h] Phares begat Esrom; and Esrom begat Aram; 4. And Aram begat Aminadab; and Aminadab begat [i] Naasson; and Naasson begat Salmon; 5. And Salmon begat Booz of [k] Rachab; and [l] Booz begat Obed of Ruth; and Obed begat Jesse; 6. And [m] Jesse begat David the king; and [n] David the king begat Solomon of her that had been the wife of Urias; 7. And [o] Solomon begat Roboam; and Roboam begat Abia; and Abia begat Asa; 8. And [p] Asa begat Josaphat; and Josaphat begat Joram; and Joram begat Ozias; 9. And [q] Ozias begat Joatham; and Joatham begat Achaz; and Achaz begat Ezekias; 10. And [r] Ezekias begat Manasses; and Manasses begat Amon; and Amon begat Josias; 11. And * Josias begat [s] Jechonias and his brethren, about the time they were carried away to Babylon: 12. And after they were brought to Babylon, [t] Jechonias begat Salathiel; and Salathiel begat Zorobabel; 13. And Zorobabel begat Abiud; and Abiud begat Eliakim; and Eliakim begat Azor; 14. And Azor begat Sadoc; and Sadoc begat Achim; and Achim begat Eliud; 15. And Eliud begat Eleazar; and Eleazar begat Matthan; and Matthan begat Jacob; 16. And Jacob begat [u] Joseph the husband of Mary, of [x] whom was born Jesus, who is called Christ. 17. So all the generations from Abraham to David are fourteen generations; and from David until the carrying away into Babylon are fourteen generations; and from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ are fourteen generations.

a Luke 3. 23—38. with Gen. 5. 1. & 10. 1. & 6. 9. & 2. 4. & 11. 10, 27. & 25. 12. & 36. 1, 9. Num. 1. 20. Ruth. 4. 18.
b 2 Sam. 7. 12—14. Ps. 132. 11. Is. 11. 1. Jer. 23. 5. & 33. 15. ch. 22. 42. Luke 1. 31, 32. Acts 13. 23. Rom. 1. 3. c Gen. 12. 3. & 22. 18. & 26. 4. & 28. 14. Luke 3. 23—34. Gal. 3. 16. d Gen. 21. 3. Acts 7. 8. Heb. 11. 11, 12, 17. Luke 3. 34. Josh. 24. 3.
e Gen. 25. 26. Josh. 24. 4.
f Gen. 29. 35. Acts 7. 8. Gen. xxix, xxx, xlvi. Exod. 1. 1—4. 1 Chr. 2. 1, 2.
g Gen. 38. 27. 1 Chr. 2. 4. h Ruth 4. 18—22. 1 Chr. 2. 5, 9—15. Luke 3. 31—33.
i Num. 1. 7. & 10. 14.
k Josh. 2. & 6. 22—25. Heb. 11. 31. Jam. 2. 25.
l Ruth ii—iv. 1 Chr. 2. 11, 12.
m 1 Sam. 16. 1. & 17. 12. 1 Chr. 2. 15.
n 2 Sam. 12. 24. 1 Chr. 3. 5. & 14. 4.
o 1 Chr. 3. 10—17. 1 Kin. 11. 43. & 14. 31. & 15. 8. 2 Chr. 9. 31. & 12. 16. & 14. 1. p 1 Kin. 15. 24. 2 Kin. 8. 16. & 14. 21. 2 Chr. 17. 1. & 21. 1. & 26. 1.
q 2 Kin. 15. 7, 38. & 16. 20. 2 Chr. 26. 23. & 27. 29. & 28. 27. r 2 Kin. 20. 21. & 21. 18, 26. 1 Chr. 3. 13, 14. 2 Chr. 32. 33. & 33. 20, 25.
* Some read, Josias begat Jakim, and Jakim begat Jechonias.
s Or Jehoiakim. 1 Chr. 3. 15, 16. 2 Kin. 23. 30, 34. & 24. 17. 2 Chr. 36. 1, 4, 10. t 2 Kin. 24. 12. & 25. 27. 1 Chr. 3. 17, 19. Hag. 1. 1, 12. & 2. 2, 23. Ezra 3. 2. & 5. 2. Neh. 7. 7. & 12. 1. Luke 3. 27.
u Ver. 18, 19. Luke 1. 27. & 2. 4, 5, 43.
x Ver. 18, 20, 25. Luke 1. 35. & 2. 7. Mark 6. 3. Is. 7. 14. & 11. 1. & 53. 2. & 9. 6. Mic. 5. 2. Jer. 31. 22. Rom. 1. 3. & 9. 5. 1 Tim. 3. 16. John 1. 14. Gen. 3. 15.

Verses 1—17. As the Old Testament opened with the generation of the heaven and the earth, the New begins with the generation of Him who, in the fulness of time, became incarnate for man's redemption from the curse he had brought upon himself, and under which the whole creation groaned. We have here his genealogy from authentic records, to prove the accomplishment of the prophecies which went before concerning him, as sprung, according to the flesh, from David and Abraham, Gen. xiii. 3. 2 Sam. vii. 12. for which purpose these genealogical tables are produced, abundantly sufficient for the conviction of those in that day, that Jesus was descended from these patriarchs, whatever cavils have since been raised, or difficulties started against them.

In this genealogy we may observe, (1.) That the line of descent is not always through the first-born, but in many, as Abraham, Jacob, Judah, David, &c. from the younger sons. (2.) That of the four women mentioned, we have two Gentiles and two adulteresses, who would seem to add no honour to their descendants: but herein we have an intimation, that Christ's salvation was not designed to be confined to the Jewish people, but to be extended to the Gentiles also; and that the most guilty need not despair, when they see that our Lord, in taking the likeness of sinful flesh, humbles himself to derive his descent from such as these. (3.) In the genealogy there are several persons passed over; for what reason it is difficult, and of little import to resolve; and the lineal descendant, though at the distance of three generations, is said to be the son of his remote ancestor, as in the case of Ozias, ver. 8. and some suppose of Jesse also. (4.) The generations are divided into three fourteens; not that there were no more persons really in the descent, but that the Evangelist thought fit to mention no more. In the first, we see the family of David rising to the throne; in the second, a race of kings descended from him; in the last, the royal family declines even to a poor carpenter; so fading is this world's greatness. Yet then, when to human view all prospect of the kingdom's being restored to David's house seemed desperate, Jesus arose to sit on his father's throne, Luke i. 32; when God promises we never need despair. (5.) Jesus is called Christ, ver. 16. or Messiah, the Anointed One, uniting in his person the threefold offices, to which men were anointed under the law, of prophet, priest, and king; and all his followers are called Christians; an honourable title, and most applicable to those who have indeed received an unction from the Holy One, and are consecrated to God as kings and priests, to reign at last with their exalted Head.

Year of the World 4000.

18. ¶ Now the [y] birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was † espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child [z] of the Holy Ghost. 19. Then Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her [a] a publick example, was minded to put her away privily. 20. But while he thought on these things, behold, [b] the angel of the LORD appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife; for that which is ‡ conceived in her [c] is of the Holy Ghost. 21. [d] And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his y Luke 1. 27.

† It was usual for some space to intervene, generally a year or six months, between the espousals and the nuptials. Deut. 20. 7. — Beausobre.
z Luke 1. 35. Jer. 31. 22. Gal. 4. 4. Heb. 10. 5.
a Deut. 24. 1. & 22. 21—25.
b Luke 1. 10, 26. ch. 2. 13. & 4. 11.
‡ Gr. begotten.
c Ver. 18. Luke 1. 35. Heb. 10. 5 Jer. 31. 22.
d Luke 1. 31. & 2. 7, 21. Gen. 3. 15. Is. 7. 14.

name JESUS: [c] for he shall save his people from their sins. 22. Now all this was done, that [f] it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, 23. [g] Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and [h] they shall call his name Emmanuel, which, being interpreted, is, [i] God with us. 24. Then Joseph, being raised from sleep, [k] did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife: 25. And knew her not till [l] she had brought forth her first-born son: and he called his name JESUS.

c Gen. 22. 18. & 49. 10. Ps. 72. 17. Jer. 23. 6. & 33. 16. Dan. 9. 24. Hos. 1. 7. Acts 4. 12. & 5. 31. & 13. 23, 32, 38. Tit. 2. 14. Heb. 7. 25. 1 John 3. 5, 8. Rev. 1. 5, 6. 1 Pet. 1. 19.

f Num. 23. 19. 1 Sam. 15. 29. Is. 44. 26. 1 Thes. 5. 24. Tit. 1. 1, 2. Heb. 6. 18.

g Is. 7. 14. Gen. 3. 15. Jer. 31. 22.

h Or his name shall be called. Acts 26. 19.

i John 1. 14. Rom. 1. 3, 4. & 9. 5. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Is. 9. 6.

k Deut. 12. 32. 1 Sam. 15. 22. Acts 26. 19.

l Ver. 21. Luke 1. 7, 21. 1 Thes. 1. 10. Heb. 7. 25.

Verses 18—25. The account of the birth of Jesus follows his genealogy. And we have here,

1. His miraculous conception, ver. 18. His mother Mary had been betrothed to Joseph; but before the marriage was consummated she was found with child, through the wondrous operation of the Holy Ghost, who formed Christ's human nature, that it might be pure from every spot of that corruption that naturally descends with his being to every son of Adam; and that he might thus be a Lamb without blemish, fit for God's altar.

2. Joseph's prudent resolve, ver. 19. Probably Mary herself communicated to him the circumstances of her case; and though a thousand suggestions might rise up to question her veracity, and to take her to his bed in such a situation, he could not think of, being a just man; yet was he unwilling withal to make her a public example, and to have her punished with death, as an adulteress: her artless story and unaffected simplicity, though strange the relation, might well have caused him to hesitate; and where the shadow of a doubt remains, a just man will ever lean to the side of mercy and charity; therefore he resolved to put her away privily, as little as possible to wound her character, whilst duty bids him preserve his own. Note, (1.) Though apparently the greatest injuries may be done us, it is wise to suppress rash anger, and deliberate before we punish. (2.) In very dark cases, where any circumstances appear that will admit of a favourable interpretation, charity, which thinketh no evil, will gladly entertain them.

3. The Lord relieves Joseph from his perplexity: while he deliberates what was fit to be done for God's glory and his own peace, in Mary's case, the angel of the Lord in a dream directs him how to act. For when we are in doubt, yet in simplicity desire to know and follow God's will, we shall be directed, if not by an angel, or a dream, yet by some word of God, or intimation of providence. Joseph is now diverted from his purpose, and bid, without hesitation, take to him his wife, since her conception is not the fruit of adultery, but of the Holy Ghost; and the angel calls him Joseph, thou son of David, to lead his thoughts from this extraordinary circumstance to the Messiah, who should descend from him: assuring him withal, that this child now conceived is designed to be the very person, as the name given him imports; he shall be called Jesus, or the Saviour; this being the great end of his appearing; to save his people from their sins, from the punishment and the power of them. Note, They to whom Jesus is a Saviour, are hereby distinguished; they are saved not only from guilt, but from corruption; every one who nameth the name of Christ, must depart from iniquity, or they are none of his; yet from him alone it cometh that they are enabled so to do.

4. The accomplishment of the Scriptures herein is observed by the Evangelist. The prophecy of Isaiah, chap. vii. 14. had foretold, a virgin should conceive, and bring forth a son, and his name be called Immanuel, which was now fulfilled, Mary being that virgin, and God himself become incarnate in her womb; and thus uniting in his own person the two natures, the divine and human, Jesus was enabled to execute the office of a Saviour, having a body to offer for the sins of men, and infinite value to enhance the sacrifice, arising from the dignity of his person, by which means God became reconciled to us, and we, who were far off, were brought nigh unto God. How mysterious this union! Let us wonder, love, and adore!

5. Joseph no sooner awaked than he obeyed the heavenly vision, which carried undoubted evidence to his mind of its original, and publicly celebrated his marriage, though he knew not Mary as a wife; at least not till after the birth of Jesus: whether afterwards he did or no is not said, and immaterial for us to know; this holy abstinence of Joseph was sufficient to show the child Jesus was the virgin's son, and in obedience to the angel's command, he called his name Jesus. Note, (1.) When God commands, we must obey without hesitation. (2.) Since Jesus is now come into the world, we are called upon to accept of his salvation; for if we neglect or despise it, how shall we escape?

CHAP. II.—YEAR OF THE WORLD, 4000.

In this chapter we have the history of our Saviour's infancy, where we find, 1. The wise men's solicitous inquiry after Christ, ver. 1—8. 2. Their devout attendance on him, when they found out where he was, ver. 9—12. 3. Christ's flight into Egypt to avoid the cruelty of Herod, ver. 13—18. 4. Christ's return out of Egypt into the land of Israel again, ver. 19—23.

1. NOW, when [a] Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the King, [b] behold, there came wise men from [c] the east to Jerusalem, 2. Saying, Where is he that is [d] born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him. 3. ¶ When Herod the king had heard these things, [e] he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him. 4. And when he had gathered all [f] the chief priests and [g] scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born. 5. And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet, 6. [h] And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda; for out of thee shall come a [i] Governor, that shall [k] rule my people Israel. 7. Then Herod, when he had [l] privily called the wise men, enquired of them diligently what time the star appeared. 8. And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, [m] Go and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that [n] I may come and worship him also.

Year of the world 4000, and 4th before our common account called Anno Domini, or year of our Lord.

a Mic. 5. 2. Luke 2. 4—7. ch. 1. 25. Gen. 49. 10. Dan. 9. 24—26. Hag. 2. 7, 9. Mal. 3. 7, 14.

b Gen. 22. 18. & 49. 10. Is. 11. 10. & 60. 3. Zech. 8. 23.

c Gen. 25. 6, 18. Job 1. 3. Judg. 6. 3. 1 Kin. 4. 30.

d Is. 9. 6, 7. & 52. 13. Num. 24. 17. Is. 60. 3.

e Ps. 2. 1—6. Acts 4. 27, 28. John 15. 18. ch. 8. 29.

f Heads of the 24 courses. 1 Chr. 24. 4—18. 2 Chr 36. 14.

g Ezra 7. 11, 12. 1 Chr. 24. 6. 2 Chr. 34. 13. ch. 7. 29. & 13. 52. Jer. 8. 8.

h Mic. 5. 2. John 7. 42.

i Ps. 9. 6, 7. Ps. 2. 6. Col. 1. 18. Eph. 1. 22.

k Or feed. Is. 40. 11. Ezek. 34. 23, 24. & 37. 24.

l Gen. 3. 1. Exod. 1. 10. Ps. 10. 8, 9. & 12. 2. & 40. 14. & 45. 21. & 64. 4.

m Job 5. 12. 1 Kin. 19. 2. Is. 59. 13—15.

n 2 Sam. 15. 7 1 Kin. 21. 9. Tit. 1. 16. Ps. 12. 2. & 55. 21. ch. 46. 48, 49. ver. 16.

Verses 1—8. Though the birth of Jesus, the King of kings, was ushered into the world with none of those rejoicings that usually attend the nativity of the princes of the earth, we have some instances of very distinguished notice paid to the infant Saviour.

1. Wise men came from the east, led by the observance of an extraordinary star which appeared in the heavens: who they were, and from whence they came, we are not clearly told; the most approved opinion seems to be, that they were of the Persian Magi, among whom some tradition seems to have obtained of a great prince at that time about to come into the world; which might arise from Balaam's prophecy, or from their acquaintance with the Jewish scriptures, which, during the captivity, were probably brought among them; and this expectation, Tacitus observes, was spread through the east. As these Magi were much conversant in astronomy, the uncommon luminous phenomenon, a meteor, or star, which they observed over Judea, might have led them thither, concluding this was the signal of his appearing, as they might be assured also by a divine impulse on their minds. They were Gentiles it is certain, and this was a happy presage of their future conversion: and their wisdom most eminently appeared in coming to him, the knowledge of whom alone could make them wise unto salvation. The highest attainments in science without this wisdom, are no better than splendid ignorance.

2. They directed their journey to Jerusalem, the capital, naturally concluding there to meet with all needful information. Herod at that time reigned in Judea, an Edomite, set up by the Romans, under whose power the Jews were, the sceptre being now departed from Shiloh; and to him it should seem they applied themselves, inquiring after the child who was born King of the Jews, concerning which they speak with the greatest confidence; and having seen his star in the east, the intimation of his birth, were come to worship him; either to pay him their civil homage, or to offer divine adoration. Note, (1.) They who know the value of Christ's favour, will stick at no pains in following him whithersoever he calls them. (1.) Jesus is truly the object worthy of our adoration, even in his lowest humiliation; the Babe in the manger is still the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace.

3. This inquiry of the wise men exceedingly affected Herod. He could be no stranger to the prophecies concerning the Messiah, and the time of the accomplishment of them was confessedly now at hand. He was troubled therefore lest his own throne should be shaken, and all the people who heard the story seem to have been alike disturbed, fearing the tumults which they might suppose would be the consequence of a struggle for the crown, as they had in general no notion of the Messiah as a spiritual Saviour, but as a mighty prince and conqueror. Note, Worldly hearts are ever afraid, lest the spreading of the kingdom of Jesus should clash with their interests.

4. To give them a solution of the question, and perhaps to gain particular information himself for purposes his mind already harboured, he called a council of the chief priests, those most distinguished for station and abilities, and the scribes, learned in the law, and most conversant in the prophecies, that he might have their concurring sentiments concerning the place where the Christ, the Messiah, should be born. And thus by divine providence, this wicked king, who consulted them with the vilest design, is made the instrument of obtaining a distinguished suffrage, even from the wisest of the Jewish nation, to the place of the Messiah's birth, and where the babe Jesus actually was born.

5. They are unanimous in their opinion, for the prophet Micah hath expressly determined the place to be Bethlehem of Judea, chap. v. 2. and they cite the prophecy, in sense the same with the original, though with some variation in the expression. Thence the Ruler and Governor of his Israel should arise, and who is and ever will be the Lord of the redeemed, reigning in their hearts, and bringing them into subjection to his blessed self.

6. Herod hereupon dismisses the wise men in search of this child, after examining them in private with the greatest accuracy concerning the time when the star appeared, and having concerted in his own mind the bloody project of cutting off him whom he eyed already with jealousy, as the rival of his throne; and therefore he strictly charges them, after having made diligent search at Bethlehem, to return and acquaint him with the place of his abode; hypocritically pretending a desire to pay his worship to the young child born and destined of God to such distinguished honour. So often hath the mask of religion concealed the foulest designs.

None of his courtiers were sent with these strangers; perhaps he was afraid to awaken the suspicion of the parents of Jesus, his ambition and cruelty being fully known; or so God, in his overruling providence, ordered it, who taketh the wise in their own craftiness, and can divert the enemies of his people from using the most obvious means which they seem to have in their power, to distress or destroy them.

9. ¶ When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the * star which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was. 10. When they saw the star, they ° rejoiced with exceeding great joy. 11. ¶ And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and [p] worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they [q] presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh. 12. And, being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, [r] they departed into their own country another way.

* It appears to have been a fiery meteor in the lower sky. Ps. 25. 12. Prov. 2. 1—6, 8, 11. 2 Pet. 1. 19.

° Luke 2. 10, 11. Deut. 32. 43. Ps. xcvi—c. & 105. 3.

[p] Ps. 2. 12. & 45. 11. John 5. 23. Ps. 22. 29. & 72. 17.

[q] Or offered. Ps. 72. 10—15. Is. 60. 6. with Gen. 43. 11. 25. 1 Sam. 9. 7, 8. & 10. 27. 1 Kin. 10. 2. Prov. 18. 16.

[r] Exod. 1. 17. Acts 4. 19. & 5. 29.

Verses 9—12. With attention and respect, the wise men received their directions, and departed in search of the King of the Jews. And,

1. We find them happily conducted to the spot where he is. The star which they had seen at Christ's birth, afterwards disappeared, at least, if, as some suggest, it led them to the borders of Judea, it then left them, but now returned, hanging low in the sky, and moving on before them till it stood over the house where Jesus was: for before this, it seems, his parents had changed the place of his birth, a stable, for a more commodious abode. The return of the star, as it promised them a happy issue of their journey, rejoiced them exceedingly; and under its guidance being led to the house, they entered without farther inquiry; and finding the child with his virgin mother, they immediately prostrated themselves before him, worshipping him as their God, or honouring him as their King. And according to the eastern custom of making presents to their monarchs, when they make their addresses to them, they opened their treasures, and presented to him gold, frankincense, and myrrh, Isa. xl. 6. and thus also providentially supplied Joseph, and Mary with a sufficiency for the long journey they were quickly after called to undertake. Note, (1.) When we are found in the way of duty, using the means God hath given us, we shall not be left without a guide. (2.) The word of God, and the ministry of it, is now this star to lead us to Jesus, and blessed and happy are they who follow its direction. (3.) When for a while we have been left in the darkness of affliction, temptation, or desertion, with double joy we behold the re-appearing of the day-star to our benighted souls, and rejoice with exceeding great joy. (4.) Jesus is the object of our adorations; to him every knee must bow. (5.) The Lord, by strange and unexpected ways, often supplies the wants of his people; they who trust him will assuredly own, that he hath never failed them in time of need.

2. To prevent their return to Jerusalem, according to Herod's desire, God, by a dream which carried its own evidence that it came from him, probably the very day or night after their arrival at Bethlehem, warned them not to go back to Herod, and accordingly they immediately departed into their own country another way. So easily can God blast the malicious designs of the ungodly.

13. And when they were departed, behold, * the angel of the Lord [s] appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, [t] Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him. 14. † When he arose, he took the young child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt; 15. And was there until the death of Herod; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, [u] Out of Egypt have I called my son.

* The angel: rather an angel of the Lord.—Bishop Pearce.

s Ch. 1. 20. Num. 12. 8. Heb. 1. 1.

t Hos. 11. 1. Rev. 12. 4. ch. 10. 23.

† Whether this happened about two months, or about a year after Christ's birth, we know not.

u Hos. 11. 1. with Num. 24. 8.

Verses 13—15. No sooner were the wise men departed, than God, who knew the cruel intention of Herod, takes care of the safety of the child Jesus.

1. The Lord, in a dream, apprises Joseph of the danger to which the young child was exposed, and bids him without delay secure the babe with his mother in Egypt, from the fury of this bloody king, and expect further directions there. Immediately, that very night, he arose and fled with his family to this appointed place of refuge, and there continued till the death of Herod, which soon followed the massacre of the infants. Note, (1.) The place where God's people suffered the bitterest persecution, affords an asylum for his Son; so easily can he, who hath in his hands the hearts of all men, make our once inveterate enemies our firmest friends. (2.) God's commands, the faithful heart obeys without hesitation or delay; having committed our all to him, we must be safe under his guidance.

2. Particular notice is taken of the fulfilling of the Scriptures herein; Out of Egypt have I called my Son, Hos. xi. 1. which, whatever reference it hath to Israel as a people, had now its most direct accomplishment in the flight of Jesus thither, and his return from thence.

16 ¶ Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, [x] and sent forth, and [y] slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had diligently enquired of the wise men. 17. Then was ‡ fulfilled that which was spoken by [z] Jeremy the prophet, saying, 18. In Rama was there a voice heard, lamentation, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not.

x Prov. 27. 3. Dan. 3. 13.

y Prov. 1. 16. Is. 59. 7. ch. 10. 34. John 15. 18. Prov. 20. 21. & 21. 30. Thus the time of Christ's birth was publicly marked; and none left to rival his honours.

‡ Again fulfilled, as it had been at the captivity of Babylon.

z Jer. 31. 15. with Gen. 35. 19. Josh. 18. 21, 23. Jer. 40. 1. & 41. 3. The 3d year before the account called Anno Domini.

Verses 16—18. We are told here, as we might have expected from the character of this wicked prince,

1. The fury he was in, at being disappointed of the wise men. He waited from day to day, in expectation of receiving intelligence from them; but hearing at last they were gone home another way, his jealousy was more inflamed against his supposed rival, and his wrath more exasperated.

2. The politic, but inhuman, contrivance he formed to rid himself of his fears. He slew all the male children under two years of age, in all Bethlehem, and the territory belonging to it; being satisfied, from the information he had received of the wise men, that the infant king could not exceed that age, and therefore must perish in the general massacre. An instance of barbarity which, though most agreeable to the character of that savage monarch, who had with his own hand slain his own children, we cannot read without horror; so that Augustus might well say, it was better to be Herod's swine than his son. The first crown of martyrdom for Jesus was won by these infant sufferers, and the honour to which they are advanced, infinitely repays the torments they endured.

3. The fulfilment of the Scripture herein is again observed; and to this event, no doubt, the prophet had immediate regard, Jer. xxxi. 15. For though we see it fulfilled in a measure, when the sword of the Chaldeans, and the captivity of the Jews which ensued, awakened Rachel, as it were from her grave, which was near Bethlehem, to lament her children destroyed or led to Babylon; yet, in a peculiarly striking manner, may this tender mother's griefs be now said to overflow, when so many of her daughters raved with inconsolable anguish for their infants torn from their bosom, and writhing on the spear of inhuman murderers. Note, Though God forbids us not, with acutest anguish, to bewail the ravages death makes in our families, inconsolable grief is sinful. Christians must never sorrow as if they had no hope, or as if their comforts were all bound up in a dying worm.

19. ¶ But when Herod was dead, [a] behold, an angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joseph in Egypt, 20. Saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and go into the land of Israel: for they are dead which sought the young child's life. 21. And he arose, and took the young child and his mother, and came into the land of Israel. 22. But when he heard that ‖ Archelaus § did reign in Judea in the room of his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither: notwithstanding, [b] being warned of God in a dream, he turned aside into the parts of Galilee: 23. And he came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a [c] Nazarene.

a Ch. 1. 20. ver. 13. Ps. 32. 7, 8. Prov. 3. 5, 6. Ps. 91. 11, 12. Exod. 4. 19.

‖ Who was very furious and cruel.

§ Did reign: being declared king by his father's will, but afterwards Augustus Cesar reduced him to the inferior dignity of ethnarch, and took from him the half of his dominions.—Diodati.

b Ps. 46. 1. & 32. 8. & 121. 8. & 48. 14. 1 Sam. 2. 9.

c i. e. branch, the Saviour, separated, or crowned one. Is. 11. 1. Zech. 6. 12. Job 7. 10. Num. 6. 2. Judg. 13. 5, 7.

Verses 19—23. The sojourning of our Lord in Egypt was but short. Quickly after the massacre of the infants, Herod was struck with a mortal disease, loathsome and incurable, that made him a spectacle to others, and a torment to himself. So soon can God humble proud tyrants, and make them feel that wrath they would not fear. Hereupon,

1. The Lord sent his angel, who informed Joseph, in a dream, of Herod's death, and bids him arise, since he may now safely return to the land of Israel. They who are driven far from the ordinances of God, and his people, wish to be no longer absent from them than necessity obliges them.

2. Joseph is all obedience: cheerful readiness in following God's direction, being the sure effect of real devotedness to his will. He returns with the child and his mother to the land of Israel; but hearing that Archelaus, a son of Herod, and an inheritor of his brutal temper, reigned in Judea, he was justly afraid of settling under his jurisdiction; and in this emergence again the Lord signifies his pleasure to him by his angel, and points him out a place of safety in the obscure retreat of Nazareth, a little town in Galilee, then under the government of Antipas, another of Herod's children, but a man of a milder temper than his brother. Note, (1.) They who are willing to follow the path of duty, if they knew it, shall be directed aright. (2.) No danger must deter us, when we have God's call to go; but we must not willingly rush into temptation. (3.) God will find a quiet resting place for his people, sometimes under the sun, but assuredly above it.

3. This was done also, that the Scripture might be fulfilled which said, He shall be called a Nazarene; either this refers to Isa. xi. 1. where Christ is called a branch, netzer, out of the root of Jesse, the city Nazareth deriving its name from this word: or to Judg. xiii. 5. Samson being the type of the great Nazarite and Saviour, Jesus. Or rather, in general, the prophecies which foretold his mean appearance, and the contempt and reproach he should be exposed to, were thus fulfilled: Nazareth being a despicable place, and his very coming from thence was urged by his enemies as an argument against his mission, Can any good thing come out of so mean and contemptible a place as Nazareth? Note, They who are followers of Jesus of Nazareth, need not be ashamed of his reproach, nor of any opprobrious names with which his enemies or theirs may seek to render them odious or despicable. The disciple is then but as his Lord.

CHAP. III.—ANNO DOMINI, 27.

In this chapter we have, 1. The life, doctrine, and baptism of John, ver. 1—12. 2. Jesus baptized of him, ver. 13—17.

a Mark 1. 4. Luke 3. 2, 3. & 1. 5—25, 57—80. John 1. 6, 7, 20. Josh. 15, 61. Is. 40. 3. b Ch. 4. 17. Acts 2. 38, 39. & 3. 19. Luke 13, 3, 5. Isa. 55. 7. Ezek. 33. 11. c Dan. 2. 44. & 7. 13, 14. i. e. the gospel-dispensation. ch. 4. 17. & xiii, xxv.
d Is. 40. 3. Mark 1. 3. Luke 3. 4. John 1. 23. Mal. 3. 1. & 4. 2, 5, 6.
e Mark 1. 6. 2 Kin. 1. 8. Mal. 4. 5. Luke 1. 17. Zech. 13, 4.
f Ch. 11. 18. Lev. 11. 22.
g Mark 1. 5. Luke 16. 16. & 3. 3, 7. John 1. 6, 7, 15—28. & 5. 35. ch. 11. 12. Acts 19. 3, 4, 18. & 2. 38, 39. Mal. 4. 6.

1. IN those days came [a] John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, 2. And saying, [b] Repent ye; for [c] the kingdom of heaven is at hand. 3. For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, [d] The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. 4. And the same John [e] had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins; and [f] his meat was locusts and wild honey. 5. ¶ [g] Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, 6. And were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins.

Verses 1—6. Prophecy, under the Old Testament, closed with the promise of the coming of Elijah, that is, of one in his spirit and temper; and here we find that prophecy accomplished in John the Baptist, so called from the ordinance of baptism he administered to his disciples; who appeared in those days, not immediately after the events related in the preceding chapter, but at about twenty-seven or twenty-eight years' distance; during which time we never but once hear any thing of our blessed Lord, who lived in obscurity, and not improbably maintained himself by manual labour. We have,

1. The place where John opened his ministry, in the wilderness of Judea; not a place literally uninhabited, but a place not so populous as the other parts of the country. See Josh. xv. 61, 62.

2. The doctrine he preached: Repentance; a change of mind and principles, and of manners and practice, in both which respects the Jewish people were exceedingly corrupt: and this he urges on that evangelical consideration, that the kingdom of heaven is at hand; the kingdom of the Messiah, the gospel dispensation, which affords the strongest engagements to draw the minds of sinners to return to God, from the views of the riches of his grace therein revealed. Note, (1.) It is a sense of God's pardoning love, revealed in the gospel, that alone can work the effectual repentance unto salvation never to be repented of. (2.) The kingdom of Jesus is the kingdom of heaven; for all who are now partakers of his grace are heirs of his glory, and sure to reign with him for ever. (3.) All the members of Christ's kingdom are real penitents, whose minds and hearts are changed by grace, and their lives renewed in holiness.

3. Herein John fulfilled the prophecy delivered concerning him, Isa. xl. 3, 4. The voice of one crying, loud as the ox bellows; intimating the fervour and vehemence with which John preached, Prepare ye the way of the Lord; make his paths straight. As the harbinger or herald, he goes before to clear the way for the King of glory, preaching that repentance which was so peculiarly needful at a time when the traditions of men had made God's word of no effect, and the corruption of the general practice was the natural effect of their corrupt principles; and pointing them, from their sinful courses, to him who was the way, the truth, and the life, by whom alone they could be saved. Note, (1.) The ways of sin are crooked ways, that lead down to death and hell. (2.) Nothing can save us from them but repentance towards God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ.

4. His garb and diet were austere, as his word was startling. He seemed an uncouth courier to prepare the way of the eternal King. A rough garment, girt with a leathern girdle, was his clothing, as being the promised Elias, see 2 Kings i. 8. and his meat was plain and abstemious, such as the wilderness afforded, locusts and wild honey. Note, They who preach mortification and repentance to others, should themselves show a becoming indifference to this world, and the gratifications of it.

5. A numerous auditory attended his ministry; struck by the singularity of his appearance and manners, and, above all, by the power of the word he preached. Multitudes from Jerusalem, Judea, and the country beyond Jordan, resorted to him, a general expectation of the Messiah being now raised through the land: and so far were many affected with his discourses, that they made profession of repentance, confessed their sins, and were baptized in Jordan. But, among a multitude of professors, the sequel showed there were few real penitents. Uncommon zeal and striking delivery will often collect an audience, and excite curiosity; but divine grace alone can effect conversion.

It hath been a much disputed point respecting the manner of administering the ordinance of baptism; whether by immersion or sprinkling; and where the form is rested upon, instead of the power of godliness, there is room open for abundant debate. I must confess, for my own part, I see no reason to suppose such immense multitudes were all dipped in Jordan; nor how it would be practicable to provide dipping garments for them: nor does the word βαπτιζω (baptizo) convey the same meaning as βαπτω (bapto) but rather seems to intimate sprinkling, or pouring water upon them; and the baptism of the Holy Ghost, which this baptism of John's prefigured, would lead us strongly to that meaning of the word. But whilst we should avoid all rigid censures on those who differ from us in these ceremonials, and see that in whatever manner baptism be administered, we do not rest upon the ordinance; it is an essential concern, that our souls be really partakers of the thing signified, even sprinkled with the blood of Jesus, and saved by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost.

7. ¶ But when he saw many of [h] the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, [i] O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the [k] wrath to come? 8. [l] Bring forth therefore fruits * meet for repentance: 9. And think not to say within yourselves, [m] We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able [n] of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham. 10. And [o] now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: [p] therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. 11. [q] I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance; but he that cometh after me [r] is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: [s] he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire: 12. [t] Whose fan is in his hand, and he will throughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire.

h Acts 15. 5. & 26. 5. & 23. 8, 9. ch. 22, 23, 34. & 23. 1—29. Luke 7. 30.
i Ch. 12. 34. & 23, 33. Luke 3. 7. & 13. 9, 11. Acts 23. 3.
k 1 Thes. 1. 10. 2. Thes. 1. 9. Rom. 5. 9.
l Acts 26. 20. Gal. 5. 22, 23. 2 Pet. 1. 4—10. 2 Cor. 7. 1, 11.
* Or answerable to amendment of life.
m John 8. 33, 39. Acts 13. 26. Jer. 7. 4.
n Josh. 4. 3, 8. with ch. 8. 11, 12 & 21. 43. Luke 19. 40.
o Deut. 20. 20. Luke 3. 9. & 23. 31. & 19. 42. John 12. 35. 2 Cor. 6. 2. Heb. 2. 1, 3. & 3. 7—13. & 4. 1. & 10. 26—29. p Ch. 7. 19. John 15. 2, 6. 1 Pet. 4. 17, 18. Is. 33. 14. Heb. 6. 8. & 10. 27. Ezek. 15. 5.
q Mark 1. 8. Luke 3. 10. John 1. 26. Acts 1. 5. & 11. 16. & 19. 4.
r John 1. 15, 27. & 3. 28—36. Luke 1. 16, 17. s Is. 44. 3. Mal. 3. 2, 3. Gal. 4. 6. Tit. 3. 5. Acts 1. 5. & 2. 3, 4. & 11. 15. John 1. 33.
t Luke 3. 17. ch. 13. 30, 42 Mal. 4. 1. & 3. 3. Mic. 4. 12. Job 21. 18.

Verses 7—12. The Pharisees and Sadducees were men of very different characters; the one pretended uncommon sanctity, and were rigid observers of the rituals of religion, deriving their name from that separation of themselves from other men, in which they gloried. The Sadducees, on the other hand, so denominated from their master, Sadok, were the very reverse; avowedly infidel in their principles, and it is to be feared, as licentious in their practice. Yet many of both these sects, either struck with John's preaching, or more probably to gain the higher veneration with the people, who were strongly engaged in John's favour, as a prophet sent from God, applied to him for baptism; and to them he here addresses his discourse.

1. He opens with a most severe reproof, and mortifying appellation. O generation of vipers, specious, yet venomous as a serpent, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? either from their temporal calamities which were approaching, and their repentance might have averted; or from the eternal ruin they had provoked by their pride, hypocrisy, infidelity, and wickedness. Note, (1.) To flee from the wrath to come, is every sinner's great concern: but none will take the warning till they see and feel the imminence of their danger. (2.) Ministers must deal plainly and freely with men's consciences; nor must the self-righteous formalist be addressed with less severity than the abandoned sinner.

2. He admonishes them of their duty. Bring forth, therefore, fruits meet for repentance; without which all the water in the river would never profit them any thing: for all who are baptized unto repentance, must see that in all humility and lowliness of mind, in all patience and perseverance in well-doing, in all holy conversation and godliness, they prove the truth of the grace which is in them; else shall the baptized sinner be as the heathen man and the publican.

3. He cautions them against trusting to their external privileges, on which he knew they depended for acceptance before God. Because they were Abraham's children, they flattered themselves with safety, and thought repentance in their case unnecessary; but John will undeceive them; and pointing probably to those stones which Joshua set up in Jordan, Josh. iv. 20. assured them God could from these raise up children to Abraham, and needed not his descendants after the flesh to compose his church. Note, (1.) Many flatter themselves, that their being members of the visible church, and having partaken of baptism and the Lord's supper, will stand them in stead in the day of God, who will find themselves wofully disappointed. (2.) Ministers must lay open those refuges of lies, to which the self-righteous and the sinner betake themselves, and rouse those to a sense of their danger who rock themselves asleep in vain imaginations. (3.) The nearer we are related to great and good men, so far from being a protection to us, it will but aggravate our guilt, if we degenerate from their piety.

4. He gives them fair warning. The time was short ere judgment would begin at the house of God: the axe was now laid to the root of the tree, by the preaching of the gospel; and the last moment of probation expiring. If they rejected the counsel of God, and refused to repent and amend their ways, then they were marked for ruin, as trees that bear no fruit, fit only for fuel. The temporal judgments of God shall consume them with their city; or, worse, the eternal wrath of God shall overwhelm them in hell. Note, The day of grace is a precious season, not to be trifled with; our eternity of happiness or misery depends on our neglect or improvement of it.

5. He directs them to that glorious personage, whose forerunner he was; acknowledging his pre-eminence in all things. He could indeed call them to repentance, and administer baptism to those who make profession of it; but a greater than himself must give the grace to repent; concerning whom, he owns he was not worthy to perform the meanest offices to him, even to carry his shoes after him: so lowly are the saints of God in their own eyes. He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire; either at the day of Pentecost, Acts ii. 3. or his influences, like fire, should purify, warm, and enliven their souls. Or, as some suggest, this baptism may refer to the judgments he would pour out on the impenitent; when, having, like the husbandman, separated the wheat, his people from the chaff of hypocrites and unfaithful professors, he would burn up the latter with unquenchable fire. Note, (1.) The operations of God's Spirit in the believer's heart, like fire, illuminate his understanding, consume his vile affections; and raise him, as the flame mounts upwards, to high and heavenly things. (2.) The church is Christ's floor; in it there is a mixed multitude of good and bad, faithful and hypocrites, as the chaff and wheat lying together; but the day is near when the separation shall be made; sometimes even here, by the divine word and providences; assuredly at Christ's appearing, when the eternal state of men shall be determined. The redeemed then shall be gathered as the wheat into God's garner in heaven, separated from all chaff for ever, and not a grain lost: and the impenitent and reprobate be consigned to the everlasting burnings.

13. ¶ [u] Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him. 14. But John forbade him, saying, [x] I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? 15. And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now; for [y] thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him. 16. [z] And Jesus when he was baptized,

An. Dom. 29.
u Mark 1. 9. Luke 3. 21. with ch. 2. 22.
x Gen. 32. 10. 1 Chr. 29. 14. 2 Chr. 2. 6. Eph. 3. 8.
y Ps. 40. 6—8. Jer. 30. 21. Heb. 7. 22. Is. 42. 21. Dan. 9. 24. Phil. 2. 6—8. Gal. 4. 4, 5. Rom. 5. 15—21. & 3. 25, 26. 2 Cor. 5. 21. Is. liii. z Mark 1. 10. Luke 3. 21, 22. John 1. 32, 33. & 3. 34. Ps. 45. 7. & 89. 20. Is. 11. 2—4. & 42. 1. & 61. 1. Col. 1. 10.

went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a * dove, and lighting upon him: 17. And lo a voice from heaven, saying, [a] This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

* The emblem of purity, gentleness, and love.—Scott.

[a] Ps. 2. 7. Is. 42. 1, 4, 21. ch. 12. 18. & 17. 5. Mark 1. 11. Luke 3. 22. & 9. 35. 2 Pet. 1. 17. Col. 2. 13. Eph. 1. 6.

Verses 13—17. Christ, who had hitherto lived in obscurity, began now to enter upon his glorious work; and, in order thereto, comes to John to be baptized, whose preaching had raised men's expectations concerning the glorious person of whom he spoke. Not that Christ needed this baptism, but he would show his approbation of it, as well as receive that public testimony that John on this occasion was appointed to bear to him.

1. John, who knew Jesus by divine revelation, John i. 33. appears unwilling to admit his Master to the ordinance of baptism which he administered. He who had no sin, could surely need no repentance. Besides, counting himself unworthy of pouring water upon him, from whom himself needed the greater baptism of the Spirit, he would humbly have excused himself from the office. I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? Note, (1.) The most holy souls are ever the most humble. (2.) Christ's condescensions are so amazing, that our faith sometimes is ready to stagger at the view of them. (3.) The greatest saints and prophets have need of the baptism of Jesus; both of the sprinkling of his blood to cleanse their consciences, and of the influences of his Spirit to purify their hearts; and they are always most sensible of their wants. (4.) They who preach repentance to others, had need be deeply concerned to be baptized with the Holy Ghost themselves, lest, after having been the means of saving others they themselves should be cast away.

2. The Lord overrules John's objection. In his present state of humiliation, it became him to submit to this, among other divine institutions, that he might in all things be a pattern of righteousness, and therefore John must for the present comply, nor does he any longer hesitate, but admitted him to baptism accordingly, fully satisfied in the will and wisdom of his Lord. Note, (1.) It is becoming to countenance and encourage every good work; and those who may be higher in wisdom and grace than their teachers, are bound nevertheless to attend their ministry, and set an example to others. (2.) Christ fulfilled all righteousness, ceremonial as well as moral; and by his obedience is become the end of the law, for righteousness, to every one that believeth. (3.) There are often reasons for the divine procedure, concerning which we must be content to be ignorant. Thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter.

3. God is pleased to bear a signal attestation to the glory of the Redeemer on this occasion. Immediately as he went up from the river's brink, or from the water, where he had been baptized, the heavens were opened, a chasm being made in the firmament as if the everlasting doors were wide unfolded, and John, as well as Jesus, beheld the visible descent of the Holy Ghost upon him, in a hovering dove-like motion, and it rested upon, or over his head. He being constituted the great prophet of his people, as the man Christ Jesus had the Spirit without measure bestowed upon him, to enable him for the discharge of his office; and in him, as the head of his church, all fulness dwells, that he may from thence communicate both gifts and graces to his members, according to their wants. And besides the visible appearance here described, an audible voice was heard from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. God's Son, not by creation, as angels, or by adoption as the saints, but by filiation peculiar to himself, being self-existent and eternal as the Father, yet standing in this relation towards him. Beloved, because the express image of his person; and being now become incarnate for our redemption, according to the eternal counsels, therefore, God the Father delighted in him, expressing his entire satisfaction in his undertaking: in whom I am well pleased; which he never could say of any of the sons of men beside, all having sinned and come short of the glory of God. Jesus alone is the one glorious character, on which God can look with approbation; whose righteousness is perfect, and for whose sake it is, as having made the atonement, that any of the sons of men can find acceptance before God. Because he is well pleased with Jesus, he hath now opened the kingdom of heaven to all believers in him; and whosoever cometh to God by him, shall be in no wise cast out. Thus, whilst every other character, considered in itself, from the first man to the last, must be God's abhorrence, since altogether born in sin; we may, notwithstanding, be sure of acceptance in this beloved; and shall be regarded as complete in him, when we by faith receive him as God hath sent him forth to us, as our wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption; our all in all.

CHAP. IV.—ANNO DOMINI, 29.

When Jesus entered upon his ministry, John is scarce heard of again, as the stars disappear when the sun arises. We have in this chapter, 1. The temptation Christ underwent, the triple assault the tempter made upon him, and the repulse he gave to each assault, ver. 1—11. 2. The teaching work he undertook, the places he preached in, ver. 12—16. and the subject he preached on, ver. 17. 3. His calling of disciples, Peter and Andrew, James and John, ver. 18—22. 4. His curing of diseases, ver. 23, 24. and the great resort of people to him, both to be taught and to be healed.

1. THEN was [a] Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be [b] tempted of the devil. 2. And when he had [c] fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterward [d] an hungered. 3. And when the tempter came to him, he said, [e] If thou be the son of God command that these stones be made bread. 4. But he answered and said, [f] It is written, [g] Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. 5. [h] Then the devil taketh him up into the [i] holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple, 6. And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, [k] He shall give his angels charge concerning thee; and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone. 7. Jesus said unto him, [l] It is written again, [m] Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. 8. [n] Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them; 9. And saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me. 10. Then saith Jesus unto

[a] Mark 1. 12, 13. Luke 4. 1—13. 1 Kin. 18. 12. Ezek. 3. 14. & 8. 3. & 11. 1, 24. & 40. 2. & 43. 5. Acts 8. 39.
[b] Heb. 4. 15. & 2. 18. Gen. 3. 15. John 14. 30.
[c] Exod. 34. 28. Deut. 9. 9, 18. 1 Kin. 19. 8.
[d] Mark 1. 13. Luke 4. 2. ch. 21. 18. John 4. 6.
[e] Luke 4. 2, 3. with ch. 3. 17. & 17. 5.
[f] Eph. 6. 17. 1 Pet. 5. 9.
[g] Deut. 8. 3. Exod. 23. 25. Luke 4. 4. & 12. 15. 1 Tim. 4. 5. Prov. 30. 22. & 30. 8.
[h] Job 1. 11—19. & 2. 6. John 19. 11.
[i] Neh. 11. 1. Is. 48. 2. & 52. 1. Dan. 9. 16. ch. 5. 35. & 27. 53.
[k] Ps. 91. 11, 12. Luke 4. 9—11 1 Tim. 3. 16. ver. 11.
[l] Ver. 4, 10. Rom 15. 4. Eph. 6. 17 1 Pet. 5. 9.
[m] Deut. 6. 16. Luke 4. 12. 1 Cor. 10. 9. Heb. 3. 8, 9. Exod. 17. 2, 7. Num. 14. 22. Ps. 78. 18. & 106. 14.
[n] Luke 4. 5—7. 2 Cor. 4. 4. 1 Cor 7. 31. 1 John 2. 15, 16. Jam. 4. 4. Ps. 17. 14.

o Ch. 16. 23. Jam. 4. 7. 1 Pet. 5. 9. p Deut. 6. 13. & 10. 20. 1 Sam. 7. 3. Luke 4. 8.
q Jam. 4. 7. Luke 4. 13. Mark 1. 13. 1 Tim. 3. 46. ch. 26. 53.

him, ° Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, ᵖ Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve. 11. ᑫ Then the devil leaveth him, and, behold, angels came and ministered unto him.

Verses 1—11. Jesus being now prepared for the battle, enters the lists against the great enemy of souls, whose kingdom he came to destroy. We have,

1. The time of this conflict. Then, immediately after he had received the attestation of God to his Sonship, and the fulness of the Spirit for the exercise of his office as Mediator. Note, (1.) Before God calls us into temptation, he will furnish us with spiritual strength. (2.) Great manifestations are often the prelude to our severest conflicts. (3.) The confidence of our adoption of God, will be the most effectual shield to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked one.

2. The place. In the wilderness; far from the abode of men, amidst lonely wastes, where only the savages of the forest roamed, to give the enemy every advantage against him, and therein more gloriously to display his own power and all-sufficiency. The first man fell in a paradise of delights: the second man stood unmoved against every blast of temptation, firm as the rocks of the wilderness, his present dreary dwelling.

3. The preparatives to the combat. He was led up of the Spirit, by a divine impulse on his mind, into the higher, more mountainous, and uninhabited part of the country; and this with design to meet the tempter and defeat all his wiles. And hereunto he condescended, (1.) That feeling what sore temptations mean, he might be a compassionate high priest, having been tempted in all points as we are, only without sin. (2.) To encourage us to trust him in every time of need. He who defeated that enemy once himself, can by the same strength make us more than conquerors. Forty days, like Moses on the mount, he continued there alone, and without sustenance: at last he felt all those acute cravings of hunger, which, as man, he was subject to, in common with us, and which gave the enemy another advantage against him, and rendered the Redeemer's triumphs more illustrious. The first representative of mankind, when wallowing in plenty, was tempted by one forbidden tree; the last Covenant-head of his people, though famishing for want, is deaf to every solicitation of the wicked one.

4. The temptations themselves; a three-fold cord, and yet broken with ease. The design of them was to shake Christ's confidence in God, and lead him to some dishonourable step; which, had it been possible, must have utterly unqualified him for the work of redemption.

(1.) In the first temptation, the devil sought to lead him to a distrust of God's providential care and goodness; and in order thereto, the tempter came to him. He had by his secret suggestions, during the forty days before, sought to disturb the mind of Jesus, but in vain; now therefore he assumes a visible form: not such a fearful figure as our early misguided apprehensions suggest, and our delusive prints hold him forth, but some pleasing human shape, or perhaps transformed into an angel of light. The tempter well knew the circumstances of our Lord, and directed his assaults where the weakest side appeared: he hoped the cravings of hunger might lead him to some undue means of relief. Thus vigilant and crafty is the wily adversary to suit his temptation to our situation and condition; and particularly in want and distress, to suggest some sinful expedient to extricate ourselves from our troubles, without waiting God's leisure, or consulting his will. He often says, Better steal than starve; though God says, It is better die than sin. He prefaces his temptation with a sly insinuation: If thou be the son of God; as if he doubted the fact, though so lately the voice from heaven had affirmed it: and he desired to shake the faith of Jesus, suggesting that if this really were the case, it was inconceivable that God would leave such a one to starve in the wilderness. Or, seeing thou art the son of God, he admits the fact and wishes to see a present exertion of his divine power in a miracle so necessary for his own support: command that these stones be made bread. Note, (1.) The great battery of the devil is raised against our faith; for if the foundation of our confidence be shaken, the superstructure must needs totter. He is ever striking at this, to make the children of God doubt their adoption; and in order thereto, he urges against them sometimes their outward distresses, sometimes their inward weaknesses and infirmities, as if both the one and the other were inconsistent with the relation they claim. (2.) If once the enemy can engage us to entertain hard thoughts of God, then he is sure to prevail.

Christ repels the assaults of the wicked one with the shield of faith, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, and therein teaches us how to ward off the like temptations. He answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. The Lord hath other ways of supporting men's bodies than by bread merely; and therefore it was not so absolutely necessary for his sustenance, but that he could be supported without it; nor would he, at Satan's instigation, do that which might look like distrust of his Father's care, doubt of his word, or suspicion of his relation to him. Note, (1.) The written word is the only rule of our faith and practice: if Christ himself adhered to that alone, let no pretences of the Spirit's superior teaching, lead us off from this sure guide. (2.) God's time is the best time: and he that believeth will not make haste, will take no rash step for his own relief under his trials, but patiently expect the salvation of God.

(2.) The first attack being repelled, a second is prepared; since he cannot lead the Saviour to distrust or despair, he will try to puff him up with presumption. So unwearied is the tempter, and often changing his wiles, according to our circumstances, from one extreme to the other.

He taketh him up, by divine permission, with the consent of Jesus, who suffered the devil to have such power over his body, and to carry him into the holy city, (Jerusalem,) so called from the peculiar privileges it enjoyed of God's worship and ordinances, and set him upon a pinnacle or wing of the temple; one of the battlements probably, which were of an immense height. And since Jesus had expressed such confidence in his Father, and unshaken dependence on his word, he grounds thereon his temptation, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down, and give an incontestible proof of it to the priests and people worshipping below; who will no doubt receive thee as the Messiah, when thus coming as if immediately from heaven into the temple; nor will there be any danger in the experiment, since it is written, and therein thou art fully satisfied, he shall give his angels, &c. The application of which words to Christ was right; but a part of the text is artfully suppressed, in all thy ways; for out of the way of duty we may never hope for protection. And it is misapplied, being designed not to tempt men to rush into temptation, presuming upon the divine care, but to engage the faithful to trust God in time of trial, assured of divine support. From all which we may observe, (1.) That one grand engine of the tempter is, to make our heads giddy by setting us up on high. The pinnacle of the temple is a dangerous exaltation. Those who are eminent in station, fortune, or reputation, advanced to dignities in church or state, or distinguished with abilities, gifts, graces, or even success in their ministry, need to tremble for themselves; and the higher they stand, to cleave the faster to Jesus their temple, lest their exaltation prove their destruction. (2.) Though the devil can tempt, he cannot compel. Sin is our own act: and without our consent, the most dire temptations fasten not the least evil on our consciences. Should we be tempted to the greatest crimes, to self-murder, or blasphemy, the Son of God was himself thus tempted, yet without sin. (3.) Scriptures may be suggested by the enemy to the minds of God's people, much to their distress and discouragement on the one hand; or, on the other, to lull their consciences in a fatal security: therefore we must search the Scriptures diligently, that we may know what is God's mind therein, and be kept from those dangerous errors and delusions which often the Scriptures are vouched to patronize. (4.) We must never separate the means from the end; nor expect, out of God's way, the protection of his providence and grace. Though Jesus is a Saviour to the uttermost, we may not sin that grace may abound; and predestination to life eternal necessarily includes the diligent improvement of all the means needful to make our election sure.

The same word of truth supplies our Lord with a full confutation of Satan's sophistry; for in the Scriptures there is an answer ready for every case; and we can be in no circumstance or temptation, but that word will afford us direction, strength, and comfort, It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. The tempter hath said, It is written; but the Scripture cannot contradict itself, and therefore to know the mind of God, we must compare spiritual things with spiritual, and not mutilate the word of truth, nor apply it contrary to the intention of the Spirit. To trust God is duty; to tempt him is sinful. Christ needed no confirmation of what he was already assured; nor was he called unnecessarily to make an experiment of God's power in such a miraculous preservation.

(3.) Once more, though baffled, the enemy returns to the charge, and summoning up all his force in one blow, by the most glaring display of this world's glory, tempts our Lord to the horrid crime of idolatry. The sorest of our temptations is sometimes reserved for the last, that God's power and grace may be more gloriously displayed, and the devil's malice most bitterly disappointed.

Again the devil taketh him up; probably transported him through the air, into an exceeding high mountain, that the fictitious scene he was about to display might appear real; and there he showed him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them. Whatever grandeur, wealth, pleasure, reigned in them, were set before him in the most enlivened colours, to catch his fancy, and engage his admiration: and all these he offers to bestow on him on one condition which thousands, without any such reward, were daily doing: If thou wilt fall down and worship me. A proposal so horrid would not bear a thought, and is rejected with detestation: Get thee hence, Satan; such insolence provoked the Saviour's righteous indignation, and he drives the tempter from his presence, unable to endure such a daring attempt upon the majesty of Jehovah, the only object of worship; for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve. Note, (1.) The minds of God's greatest saints may be sometimes harassed with the most blasphemous suggestions, and they should not count this as if some strange thing happened unto them. (2.) The glory of the world is the grand snare the enemy lays for men's souls; and it looks very desirable to the eye of sense; but faith sees through the delusion, beholds vanity stamped on every thing beneath the sun, and scorns all this which Satan offers, as dung and loss compared with the excellency of the knowledge of Christ, and the glories of his grace. (3.) Some temptations come under the guise of plausibility and harmlessness, and require recollection before we can discover the craft of the devil; others bring the brand of hell in their forehead, and would bear men down merely with the weight of the present advantage thence accruing: these must not be parlied with a moment, but rejected with abhorrence. (4.) God is alone the object of worship; and whatever else be made the idol of our adoration, whether the horrid forms of monsters in a pagod, or the images of saints, and virgins, and crucifixes, in a popish chapel, it is no better than falling down to the devil.

5. Satan, now vanquished, and unable to resist the commanding word of Jesus, quits the field. He found him more than man, invulnerable in every part, and feels himself a vanquished foe. Thus shall the sons of God, through this great Captain of their salvation, tread Satan under their feet; enabled to wrestle with spiritual wickedness, and to prevail against the powers of darkness. Though hard the conflict, the victory is sure to all who stand fast, strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.

6. The angels, the attendant servants of Jesus, now visibly appeared, and ministered unto him. They had beheld, as spectators, the conflict and triumphs of the Lord, and now congratulate his victory, and supply him with those needful refreshments which his exhausted body craved. Note, (1.) Christ alone obtained the victory for us; his own arm hath brought salvation unto him. (2.) Angels minister to the heirs of salvation; we need not fear, therefore, what devils can do against us. (3.) Though our relief be for a while delayed, it shall assuredly come at last. Trust in the Lord, therefore, and verily thou shalt be fed. (4.) Our Master was himself tempted, that he might feel for us, and supply us with all needful supports, when we are in like manner sore thrust at that we should fall.

A. D. 30.

12. ¶ [r] Now, when Jesus had heard that John was * cast into prison, he departed into Galilee; 13. [s] And leaving Nazareth, he came and dwelt in Capernaum, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthalim: 14. [t] That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, 15. [u] The land of Zabulon, and the land of Nephthalim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles; 16. The people which sat in darkness saw great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up. 17. ¶ [x] From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent; for [y] the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

[r] Mark 1. 14. & 6. 17. Luke 4. 14. & 3. 19, 20. John 4. 43. ch. 14. 3.
* Or delivered up.
[s] Luke 4. 30, 31. Mark 6. 1—6.
[t] Num. 23. 19. 1 Sam. 15. 29. Is. 44. 26. Tit. 1. 2. 1 Thes. 5. 24. 2 Tim. 2 13. Heb. 6. 17, 18. Ps. 12. 6. Prov. 30. 5, 6.
[u] Is. 9. 1, 2. & 29. 18. & 30. 26. & 42. 6, 7. & 60. 1—3. & 11. 10. & 52. 15. & 53. 11. Zech. 14. 7, 8.

A. D. 30.

[x] Mark 1. 14. Luke 9. 2. ch. 3. 2. & 10. 7.
[y] Gospel dispensation. Ch. xiii, xxv. Acts 1. 3, 8.

Verses 12—17. Christ now having entered upon his ministry, began to publish the glad tidings of that salvation he came to procure. Many events are recorded which intervened between his temptations on the mount and his abode at Capernaum; these we shall meet with in the other evangelists. Matthew hastens forward to the time when John was cast into prison; on which occasion Jesus departed from Nazareth to Galilee, and fixed his abode at Capernaum, a city in the tribe of Nephthali, bordering on Zabulon, situate on the sea of Tiberias, called elsewhere the lake of Gennesareth. The men of Nazareth had rejected him, Luke iv. 29. and therefore God justly leaves them to themselves, and sends his Son and his gospel to a place that will more cheerfully welcome them.

1. Especial notice is here taken of the fulfilment of the Scripture in this removal of our Lord; as Esaias had before of old prophesied, that the people in these regions of Zabulon and Nephthali, called Galilee of the Gentiles from the intermixture of a multitude of strangers of other nations among the Jews; which sat in darkness, in spiritual darkness and ignorance: saw a great light, Christ the Sun of Righteousness arising with healing in his wings, and bringing life, and light, and liberty to those who sat in the region and shadow of death, dead in trespasses and sins, till quickened by the effectual power of the Saviour's grace, and enlightened by the glorious gospel he preached. Note (1.) They who are destitute of the knowledge of Christ, are in darkness respecting all the things that make for their everlasting peace, and near the borders of eternal death. (2.) Christ is to the soul what the sun is to the world; yea, more; for he is not only the author of light, but gives the faculty of vision also, without which the light would shine in darkness, and the darkness never comprehend it. (3.) The way in which spiritual light is diffused, is, by the preaching of the gospel; where this is not truly ministered, darkness must needs reign uncontrolled.

2. We are told what was the subject of his ministry from the time he began to open his commission; Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand; the same words and the same subject on which John, his harbinger, had preached before: for in the great essential doctrines, all faithful ministers of the gospel perfectly agree. Jesus preached repentance not only as what we must do, but what he would give, without which in vain were every call to repent.

z Mark 1. 16. Luke 5. 2. John 1. 42.
a Num. 34. 11. Deut. 3. 17. Josh. 11. 2. & 19. 35. ch. 14. 34. John 6. 1. b John 1. 37. Acts 2. 1. ch. 16. 24. 1 Cor. 11. 1. c Luke 5. 10. Ezek. 47. 10. Acts iii—xix. 1 Cor. 3. 5. d Ps. 119. 60. Gal. 1. 16. ch. 10. 37. & 19. 27. Mark 10. 28. 1 Kin. 19. 19, 20.
e Mark 1. 19. ch. 10. 2. & 17. 1. & 20. 20, 21. & 26. 37. Luke 9. 54. Acts 12. 1, 18. Rev. 1. 1. f Mark 1. 20. Luke 14. 33. & 5. 11. 1 Kin. 19. 19, 20.

18. ¶ [z] And Jesus, walking by the [a] sea of Galilee, saw two brethren, Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers. 19. And he said unto them, [b] follow me, and I will make you [c] fishers of men. 20. And they [d] straightway left their nets, and followed him. 21. And going on from thence, he saw other two brethren, [e] James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, in a ship with Zebedee their father, mending their nets: and he called them. 22. [f] And they immediately left the ship and their father, and followed him.

Verses 18—22. Christ being now about to erect his kingdom in the world, he is pleased to make choice of certain persons to be the constant attendants of his ministry, and spectators of his miracles, that they might afterwards go forth to tell of the things they had heard and seen, and spread the gospel of their Master to the ends of the earth.

1. The persons he made choice of were such, as to human view were very unfit instruments for the work; but the more evident would it be that the power was of God, and not of them, when afterwards they appeared so mighty in word and deed. They were by occupation fishermen, whom Jesus, as he walked by the seashore, saw employed in their honest and laborious vocation: the first two were casting a net into the sea; brethren by blood as well as business; their names Simon and Andrew; men unlettered, unknown, and unnoticed: the next two were of the like employment, and with their father Zebedee mending their nets. Note, (1.) Not only to the poor, was the gospel preached by our Lord, but from them the great pillars of the church were taken: let them therefore never be despised. (2.) It is happy in a family, when brethren in blood are brethren in the Lord, and heirs together of the grace of life. (3.) Industry is highly commendable: and Jesus wills that all his servants should be found well employed; idleness is the sure characteristic of Satan's service.

2. They had it seems before, see John i. 37. become acquainted with Christ, but now they are called to constant attendance upon him, Follow me; and, by an image taken from their present employment, he lets them know the more honourable service for which he designed them, I will make you fishers of men, the instruments of gathering souls by the gospel into his church. And what he calls them to, he will qualify them for: in following him they shall learn a wisdom which the schools can never teach them. Note, (1.) Unless ministers have a divine call, as well as a human ordination, they will run without being sent, and can expect no blessing in their work. (2.) None can truly preach Christ, who have not first faithfully followed him. (3.) If in our ordinary vocations diligence is necessary, how much more needful is it, that fishers of men should be indefatigable and laborious, when the gain of immortal souls will so amply repay their toils.

3. These disciples immediately obeyed the call, quitting their employment, and leaving their dearest relatives, to devote and attach themselves entirely to their divine Lord and Master: such power had his constraining word, and so readily and cheerfully did they follow him. Note, (1.) When Christ effectually calls a sinner, such power accompanies his word, as draws the heart by irresistible bonds of love unto his blessed self. (2.) There are seasons, when for the sake of Christ we must be ready to part with all. (3.) Those who are employed in the ministry, have especial need to detach themselves from worldly concerns, that they may give themselves wholly up to their awful trust and charge.

g Gen. 3. 15. & 49. 10. Deut. 18 15, 18. Is. 61. 1. & 42. 4, 7. & 35. 3—6. ch. 9. 35. Mark 1. 25. Luke 4. 43, 44.
h Luke 4. 37, 40. Is. 52. 13. & 53. 12. & 45. 22. Exod. 15. 26. Dan. 2. 44. Acts 10. 38. Gen. 3. 15. & 49. 10. Is. 11. 10. & 49. 6. & 60. 1, 2. Zech. 8. 20—23. Deut. 32. 43. Heb. 7. 26. John 6. 37. Rev. 7. 4, 9, 10. Mark 3. 7.
* A small province, so called because it contained ten cities; it lay on the border of Palestine, towards Syria. Mark 7. 31.—Diodati.

23. ¶ And [g] Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people. 24. And [h] his fame went throughout all Syria. And they brought unto him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatick, and those that had the palsy; and he healed them. 25. And there followed him great multitudes of people from Galilee, and *from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem, and from Judea, and from beyond Jordan.

Verses 23—25. We have here,

1. Christ's labours as a preacher. All Galilee heard his teaching; he appeared publicly in their synagogues, and published the gospel of the kingdom, the glad tidings of salvation, exhorting his hearers to that repentance and newness of life, which became those who had received the grace of God in truth.

2. His cures as a physician, wrought in confirmation of his doctrine. He did good to men's bodies as well as souls, and, by a word, healed all manner of sickness and diseases among the people, however violent, inveterate, or of long standing: the incurables of other physicians went from him restored to perfect health and soundness. Nor did he merely relieve the most tormenting disorders of the body, but the more deplorable ones of the mind: the lunatic recovered the perfect exercise of his reason: and the possessed, whose bodies by divine permission Satan's legions had seized and miserably harassed, were set free, and the foul fiends ejected. No painful operations, no tedious course of medicine, almost as bad as the malady, were employed: a word, a touch completed the cure; and all was freely done, without money and without price. The most wretched, the poorest never applied in vain. No marvel that his fame spread through the adjacent coasts of Syria, and that multitudes of patients sought this great Physician's help. His cures bespoke his character, and vouched for his mission; they were innumerable, public, immediate, perfect, such as none could dispute or gainsay, his very enemies being judges. And they represent the more noble cures of men's souls, by divine grace, from all the diseases of sin, wherein we see the Saviour's power still displayed.

2. His popularity arising from both. An immense auditory from all parts, near and distant, assembled, curious to hear, or desirous to be healed, or convinced by his preaching and miracles, or enviously waiting for an opportunity to destroy him. Note, (1.) The preachers of the gospel will be generally popular; their message engages the attention of an auditory. (2.) Multitudes hear the gospel, but few receive it to the saving of their souls.

CHAP. V.—ANNO DOMINI, 30.

This chapter, with the two following, contains our Saviour's sermon on the mount; the design of which seems to be not only to rescue the law from the corrupt glosses of the elders, but, by opening its spirituality, to show the necessity of a better righteousness than our own, in order to our acceptance with God. After the preparatory circumstances, ver. 1, 2. He shows, 1. Wherein true blessedness consists, ver. 3—12. 2. Prescribes the standing rules of his disciples' duty, ver. 13—20. 3. Gives the true exposition of God's law, in opposition to the corrupt glosses of the Scribes and Pharisees, ver. 21—48.

1. AND seeing the multitudes, [a] he went up into a mountain: and when he was set, [b] his disciples came unto him: 2. And he [c] opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,— a Is. 42. 2. John 5. 41.

b Ch. 4. 18—22. & 10. 2—4. Luke 6. 13—16. c Prov. 10. 21. Eph. 6. 19, 20. Deut 18. 15, 18. Is. 50. 4. Prov. 8. 1, 2, 6. & 1. 20, &c.

Verses 1, 2. Among the multitudes who followed him, many professed themselves his disciples. For their sakes therefore especially, as well as for the improvement of all who attended him, he took the present opportunity to lay open to them at large the doctrines of truth. For the convenience of being heard, he went up to a mountain, where, surrounded by his disciples and seated amidst the attentive throng, He opened his mouth, and taught them; whilst they hung upon his lips, and in silence, with their eyes fixed on him, drank in the sacred truths he uttered. Note, It is enlivening and encouraging to the ministers of the gospel, to behold a numerous and attentive auditory; and that is sacred fire, which not the desire of being popular, but the hope of being extensively useful, kindles in their heart, and gives energy and warmth to their discourse.

3. [d] Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. 4. [e] Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted. 5. [f] Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth. 6. [g] Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled. 7. [h] Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy. 8. [i] Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God. 9. [k] Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God. 10. [l] Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. 11. [m] Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you * falsely for my sake. 12. [n] Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for [o] so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.

d Is. 57. 15. & 66. 2. & 61. 1. Prov. 16. 19. & 29. 23. ch. 11. 25. & 13. 16. & 19. 23. Luke 6. 20, 24. & 14. 21, 33. Ps. 51. 17. 1 Cor. 1. 26—31. Jam. 2. 5.
e Ezek. 7. 16. & 9. 4. Is. 61. 3. Eccl. 7. 2, 3. Luke 6. 21. & 16. 25. John 16. 20. 2 Cor. 1. 4, 7. Jam. 1. 12. Rev. 7. 17. Is. 35. 10. & 51. 11, 12. & 30. 19. & 57. 18. Ps. 51. 17.
f Ps. 22. 26. & 37. 11. & 76. 9. & 149. 4. Is. 57. 15, 16. Zeph. 2. 3. 1 Pet. 3. 4, 13. Rev. 5. 10. g Luke 1. 53. & 6. 21, 25. Ps. 42. 1, 2. & 63. 1, 2. & 84. 2. & 17. 15. & 65. 4. John 4. 14. & 6. 35. & 7. 37, 38. Is. 65. 13. & 44. 3. & 55. 10. Rev. 7. 17.
h Jam. 2. 13. Ps. 41. 1—3. & 18. 25. & 37. 25, 26. Prov. 14. 21. & 19. 17. ch. 6. 14. Mark 11. 25. Heb. 6. 10. Dan. 4. 27. 2 Tim. 1. 16. Heb. 4. 16. i 1 Tim. 1. 5. Heb. 9. 14. & 10. 22. Ps. 18. 23. & 15. 2. & 24. 4. 1 John 3. 2, 3. Job 19. 26, 27. 1 Cor. 13. 12.
k 2 Cor. 5. 20. Rom. 16. 20. 1 Cor. 14. 33. 2 Cor. 13. 11. Phil. 4. 9. 2 Thes. 3. 16. Heb. 13. 20. & 12. 14. Rom. 14. 17—19.
l Luke 6. 22, 23. 1 Pet. 3. 14. & 4. 13. 2 Tim. 2. 12. & 3. 12. 2 Cor. 4. 8—17. 2 Thes. 1. 5—7. Rom. 8. 17, 18.
m Luke 6. 22. & 7. 33, 34. Ps. 35. 11. 1 Pet. 4. 14.

* Gr. lying.
n Rom. 5. 3. Jam. 1. 2. 1 Pet. 4. 13. Luke 6. 23. Acts 5. 41. & 16. 25. Col. 1. 24.
o Neh. 9. 26. 2 Chr. 36. 16. ch. 23. 31—37. Acts 7. 52. 1 Thes. 2. 15.

Verses 3—12. To be happy is the universal desire; but whilst all pursue this as their aim, few, very few attain the accomplishment of their wishes; and the reason is evident: they mistake both where man's true happiness consists, and the means which lead to it; consequently are ever bewildered in a fruitless search, and tormented with continual disappointment. To divert us from our wrong pursuits, to inform us what is our true good, and to direct us to the attainment of real blessedness, is the gracious design of our adored Lord. Yet, to many, the doctrines he advances will appear paradoxical and strange; though, blessed be his name, every enlightened and converted soul will own, that, however strange they seem to others, they are found by his happy experience, to be indeed the true sayings of God.

In eight characters Christ shows wherein true blessedness consists; and pronounces on each, Blessed are ye: at present they are the truly happy souls on earth, and their reward awaiteth them eternally in heaven. O may this blessedness be mine!

The first beatitude:

Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Wherein then does this poverty of spirit consist? I answer, (1.) In a deep and humbling sense of our own spiritual wants and wretchedness, which brings off the sinner from every dependance upon his own goodness for acceptance with God, and his own abilities to walk and please him, to a constant renunciation of himself, to a repose in his confidence on the blood and righteousness of Jesus alone, as his title to God's regard, and on the grace of Jesus for all-sufficiency to think or act aright. (2.) In an entire resignation of ourselves to God, and contentment with our lot; sitting loose to the world, and all the things of it; in poverty cheerful, our minds conformed to our condition; in prosperity humble, condescending, kind, and sympathizing with the necessitous. (3.) In low thoughts of ourselves, our abilities, attainments, and possessions, of whatever kind: in honour preferring others to ourselves, the last and least in our own opinion, and seeing much, very much to humble us, in the view of our misimprovement of those blessings which God hath bestowed on us, and in which he hath made us to differ from others. Now such as these are blessed in the present satisfaction arising from the exercise of such a spirit and temper, and in a happy freedom from the murmurs, repinings, discontent, and mortifications which make the proud and discontented perpetually uneasy. They are blessed with the experience of God's love and favour, who looks with delight and approbation on him that is poor and of a contrite spirit: and, as the summit of all felicity; theirs is the kingdom of heaven; the riches of the kingdom of grace below, and all the unsearchable riches of Christ and glory above, are their assured and eternal portion.

The second beatitude:

Blessed are they that mourn. We are apt to count mourners miserable, and to judge of happiness by the smiles of the countenance; but Christ teaches us a different lesson. Not that all who mourn are blessed: there is the mourning of discontent, the sorrow of the world that worketh death, the inconsolable tears of those who lament, like Micah, after their idols, and the melancholy of despair: these bring a curse and torment, instead of a blessing. The mourning here commended is, (1.) A penitential mourning over sin, in the views of our base ingratitude; a mourning after God, under darkness and desertion; a mourning over the dishonour brought upon him by the impieties of the wicked, and the unfaithfulness of his people; a mourning over the distresses of the miserable, and especially a mourning over lost souls, which makes our tears, like those of Jesus, flow, whilst we are pouring forth before God our fervent prayers on their behalf. These are blessed: the tears shed for sin have a sweetness unutterable: a sacred pleasure mingles with them, to which all the noisy mirth of fools, exclusive of the heaviness which succeeds, is not to be compared; and they are the seed of eternal joy: for they shall be comforted, here below in a sense of God's love shed abroad in their hearts, in the consolations arising from a sense of pardoning love, in the sacred delight of beholding sinners turned from the evil of their ways; and, hereafter, in the eternal fruition of God, and the inconceivable blessedness thence arising, when every tear shall be wiped from our eyes, and we shall drink of pure, unsullied, and eternal pleasures, as out of a river.

The third beatitude:

Blessed are the meek. Respecting God, submissive to his word and providences; never replying against the one, or murmuring against the other: respecting man, mild, inoffensive, easy to be entreated, unmoved with provocation, forbearing and forgiving, resenting no injuries, actuated by no private revenge, in patience and peace possessing their souls; yet not mean-spirited, cowardly, and tame, through fear of man; but whilst in their own cause gentle as the lamb, in the cause of God and truth bold as lions; zealous to maintain the rights of others, whilst they recede from their own; and steady patrons of the injured and absent. They are blessed; they are, like their Lord, happy in themselves; beloved of all who know the value of such a spirit, and dear in the sight of God. They shall inherit the earth, shall have as much of this present world as is for their good; but above all, and what seems here chiefly intended, they shall have a part in that better new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness, and be counted inheritors among the saints in light.

The fourth beatitude:

Blessed are those who hunger and thirst after righteousness. The righteousness here spoken of as the object of desire is, (1.) The imputed righteousness of Jesus Christ, which the guilty sinner who feels his spiritual nakedness, eagerly longs for, as the famished cry for food, or the parched throat craves the cooling draught, assured without it he must perish. (2.) The implanted righteousness which the Spirit of Jesus communicates: and for this the poor and helpless sinner hungers more than for his daily bread; inasmuch as the life and health of his soul are infinitely preferable to the life and health of his body. These are blessed souls, for every such desire is in a measure the proof of our possessing the righteousness after which we pant; and they shall be filled out of the fulness of Jesus, who hath enough of both to supply all our wants, to make them completely righteous in himself here, and to fill them with joy and peace in believing, and hereafter to perfect them in holiness, and bring them to happiness eternal.

The fifth beatitude:

Blessed are the merciful. This is the most amiable character of God, and herein his people resemble him. (1.) Mercy is their temper; they have a heart that can be touched with human wretchedness; and though they may not have it always in their power to relieve, they are ever tenderly compassionate towards the distresses of the miserable. (2.) Mercy is their practice; so far as their power extends, they are ready to show mercy; yea, they take delight therein, and count this work its own reward. They are merciful to men's souls; pitying and instructing the ignorant, warning the unruly, comforting the feeble minded, helping the weak, and labouring to snatch the wicked as brands from the burning. They are merciful to men's bodies; relieving the necessities of the poor, the friendless, and the destitute; they are eyes to the blind, feet to the lame, physicians to the sick, supports to the aged and infirm; ready to assist with their advice, their purse, or influence; according to the various distresses of those who apply to them: yea, diligent to discover those objects of modest worth and neglected indigence, that are ashamed or backward to apply for relief. They are merciful even to the brute beasts; not only their servants and labourers are never vexed with unreasonable burdens; their very cattle share their clemency, and own the kind and tender master. This is blessedness. They who are thus like God in spirit, will taste something of divine felicity; and of all the joys beneath the sun, none will be found comparable with the exalted pleasure of doing good. And they shall obtain mercy; such merciful ones plead no merit; the more they are enabled to do, the less opinion they entertain of their deserts, as every advance in grace brings proportionably greater light, and therewith greater humility. They cast themselves, therefore, wholly on the mercy of God in Jesus Christ, and they shall find mercy of the Lord in the great day; and more they need not wish for, since his mercy includes eternal life and glory.

The sixth beatitude:

Blessed are the pure in heart; who, by faith, are cleansed from all allowed hypocrisy, covetousness, pride, and sensuality; jealous to keep themselves unspotted from the world; maintaining undefiled religion; in simplicity and godly sincerity walking with God; and desiring, as the summit of their happiness, to be perfect as their Father who is in heaven is perfect. They are blessed in the present paths of pleasantness and peace in which they go, and they shall see God as the consummation of all felicity; be with him where he is; be like him as he is; and, from the light of his countenance, and the constant effusions of his love, drink in blessedness unutterable and eternal.

The seventh beatitude:

Blessed are the peace-makers; men of peace themselves, and desirous to cultivate the like disposition among others: following it with all men, as far as is consistent with truth and purity; averse to all disputes and angry contentions; softening the spirits of the exasperated; and kindly interposing, though sometimes at the expense of much ill will, to repair the breaches, and heal the divisions, which the fiery and self-willed spirits of others have occasioned; the first to forgive, the last to be offended; and, where others prepare themselves for battle, still ready, though injured, to seek reconciliation. Such men shall be blessed in their deed: they shall be accounted faithful subjects of the Prince of peace, and be called the children of God, who is the God of peace; and if children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ, appointed to reign with him in glory everlasting.

The eighth beatitude:

Blessed are they that are persecuted for righteousness' sake. All who follow Christ must expect his cross; and every godly man, as long as a child of wickedness is in the world, must suffer persecution of one kind or other: where power is with oppressors, there it will reach to fines, imprisonment, and even death itself; where milder governments give protection from grosser injuries, there the lower methods of reviling, calumny, falsehood, insult, ridicule, and vile misrepresentation, will be the lot of Christ's disciples. Various pretexts, indeed, are commonly used to give a specious colouring to this conduct in lands professing godliness, as if it was not righteousness men persecuted, but what they were pleased to call enthusiasm, or to stamp with some other opprobrious name: but whatever occasional offences may have been given, the ground and root of the malignity shown against the people of God is, their profession of the doctrines of the divine righteousness, which the proud and wise men must ever scoff at; and the practice of experimental godliness, which is equally reproving and offensive to the formal and profane: on which accounts therefore, now and ever, the few faithful must expect to follow Jesus bearing his reproach. But however they are regarded among men, they are pronounced blessed by the Author of all blessing, and theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Nor need any now marvel at these things among us, when among God's professing people of old, the prophets were so persecuted before us, Jeremiah, Isaiah, Elijah, &c. and therefore we are commanded to rejoice and be exceeding glad to be numbered among such worthies; and expect that great reward in glory which God hath promised to those who, by patient continuance in well-doing, seek, with them, glory, honour, and immortality.

13. ¶ [p] Ye are the salt of the earth: [q] but if the salt hath lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men. 14. [r] Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid. 15. Neither do men [s] light a candle, and put it under † a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. 16. Let your light so shine before men; [t] that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.

p Col. 4. 6. 2 Cor. 2. 14, 16.
q Mark 9. 49, 50. Luke 14. 34. Heb. 6. 4—6. 2 Pet. 2. 20, 21. r John 1. 9. Phil. 2. 15. Rev. 1. 20. 1 Thes. 5. 5. John 12. 36. Luke 16. 8. Eph. 5. 8. 2 Cor. 6. 14. Prov. 4. 18.
s Mark 4. 21. Luke 8. 16. & 11. 33.
† The modius was about a peck measure.
t 1 Pet. 2. 12. Phil. 2. 15, 16. Prov. 4. 18. John 15. 8. 1 Pet. 3. 1, 10. 1 Cor. 14. 25.

Verses 13—16. These words are directed to the disciples in general, and to the apostles and ministers of Christ in particular, and their character is set forth under two similitudes.

1. As the salt of the earth. Their lives and conversations must be exemplary; not only free from taint themselves, that is, from the allowed practice of sin, but endeavouring to preserve others from the putrefaction of it; seasoning the earth with the doctrines of the gospel; diffusing the savour of the knowledge of Christ in every place, and thus becoming blessings to mankind. But should they depart from the truth, disgrace their character, degenerate into lukewarmness and indifference, or apostatize to erroneous principles and licentious practices, their state, if not utterly desperate, is seldom ever retrieved; like stars, they fall to rise no more: though their profession may continue, their savour is lost; they become insipid and tasteless, and are doomed to be cast out and trodden under foot of men, as worthless and contemptible, expelled from the communion of the saints below, and everlastingly excluded from the assembly of the blessed above.

2. As the light of the world, to spread the bright truths of salvation among benighted mortals, and point out to them the path which leads to eternal day; especially to lead sinners to Christ, the light of life: and in so doing, they would be distinguished as a city set on a hill, and needed peculiar circumspection whilst so many eyes would be fixed upon them. Every minister, every Christian, stands on an eminence; more is expected from them than from others, and many watch for their halting; as candles are lighted not to be covered; but to be set on a candlestick and give light to all in the house, so were they endued with gifts and graces to illuminate the church of Christ, and diffuse the gospel word around, neither through fear nor shame concealing ought of the whole counsel of God; and in their lives, as well as lips, must their light shine, in every work of faith and labour of love which may be profitable to men's bodies or souls; that, whilst others are stirred up to holy emulation thereby, abundant praise also may redound to God, who is then eminently glorified, when his people bring forth much fruit.

17. ¶ Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, [u] but to fulfil. 18. For verily I say unto you, [x] Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. 19. [y] Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the [z] kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be [a] called great in the kingdom of heaven. 20. For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed [b] the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye [c] shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.

u Ch. 3. 15. Ps. 40. 6—3. Is. 42. 21. Gal. 4. 4, 5. Rom. 10. 4. & 3. 31. & 8. 3, 4. Col. 2. 17. Gal. 3. 24. John 8. 29.
x Luke 16. 17. Is. 51. 6. & 40. 8. Rom. 3. 31. & 8. 3, 4. & 10. 4. Dan. 9. 24. John 17. 4.
y Jam. 2. 10. Ps. 2. 3. 1 Cor. 3. 15. 1 Sam. 2. 30.
z Ver. 3, 20. ch. 3. 2. & 4. 17. & 13. 11, 31, 41, 43. & 25. 1, 14, 34.
a 1 Sam. 2. 30. ch. 19. 28. Dan. 12. 3. 1 Pet. 5. 4. b Ch. 23. 3—28. Rom. 9. 31. & 10. 3. Luke 11. 39. & 18. 11. ch. 15. 3. c John 3. 3, 5. Heb. 12. 14. Rev. 21. 27. & 19. 8.

Verses 17—20. As the former verses seemed particularly addressed to his disciples, our Lord here more generally directs his discourse to the multitude.

1. He obviates the prejudices he knew many would entertain, and confutes the objections his enemies would make, as if he was about to abrogate the law, and introduce a new system, when in fact he only meant to rescue the oracles of God from the corrupt glosses the false teachers had put on them.

(1.) He is not come to destroy the law and the prophets, as some of them might think, but to fulfil them. To fulfil the moral law, by his own perfect obedience; the ceremonial, by answering, in his own person and oblation of himself, all the types and figures; the prophets, by accomplishing all their predictions; yea, and so far from loosening the obligations to obedience, he came in perfect correspondence with God's ministers before him, to enforce them, and to vindicate the everlasting rule of moral righteousness, from the mistakes and adulterations of the Scribes and Pharisees; to explain its spirituality and extent, and from right principles, to urge the practice of true holiness.

(2.) He asserts the perpetuity and eternal obligation of the moral law: whilst heaven and earth endures, not a tittle shall pass from it unaccomplished, nor the least of its commands ever be abolished. It is the transcript of God's holiness; he can require nothing less; the least failure is eternally mortal; and though we are relieved by the blood and righteousness of our Divine Substitute, from the condemning power of the law, our duty still remains the same, and we are as much as ever bound to regard this as the one unerring rule of obedience. Whoever, therefore, dares avowedly to transgress the least command, and teach others to do so by his example or his preaching, as if it might be done with impunity, which was the case with many of the Rabbins of that day, he shall be rejected of God as least esteemed and worthless, and have no part in the kingdom of heaven; whilst they who, by the purity of their doctrine and the exemplariness of their conduct, enforce the necessity of obedience to every command, accounting none too trivial to be observed, they shall be esteemed and honoured of God as faithful here, and exalted to eternal glory hereafter. Note, (1.) The least sin hath eternal death for its wages. (2.) They who extenuate the evil of sin, and promise transgressors impunity, will be reckoned with as the most daring rebels against God's government.

2. He professes it his purpose to enforce a righteousness beyond that of their most admired characters, the Scribes and Pharisees, who were thought even to go to works of supererogation; and yet, what perhaps they would hear with astonishment, he assures his hearers, their righteousness must exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, or they may never hope to enter the kingdom of heaven. The most extensive Pharisaical righteousness of doctrinal orthodoxy, scrupulous exactness in the forms of religion, abstinence from grosser vices, accompanied with whatever alms, or fastings, or prayers, comes infinitely short of the spirituality of God's law; a perfect righteousness is required, which can alone be found in the adored Jesus, and that everlasting righteousness he was ordained to bring in, which faith embraces, and, working by love, its genuine fruit, enables the redeemed to act on principles a Pharisee never knew; it purifies the heart, engages the soul to a universal delight in the law of God after the inward man, and begets the desire of unreserved obedience thereunto. And though in many things we will offend, yet are our persons and services then acceptable to God in Jesus Christ, whilst all the duties of the formal and self-righteous, when strained to the highest pitch, are only a greater abomination in the sight of God.

21. ¶ Ye have heard that it was said ‡ by them of old time, [d] Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment: 22. But [e] I say unto you, That [f] whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment: and whosoever shall say to his brother, [g] Raca, shall be in danger of the council: but whosoever shall say, Thou [h] fool, shall be in danger of hell fire. 23. [i] Therefore, if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee; 24. Leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift. 25. [k] Agree with thine adversary quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison. 26. Verily I say unto thee, [l] Thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing.

‡ Or to them.
d Exod. 20. 13. Deut. 5. 17. Gen. 9. 5, 6. Lev. 24. 21. Num. 35. 16, 17, 30. e Is. 50. 4. Deut. 18. 18. Exod. 23. 21. Heb. 2. 3.
f 1 John 3. 15. Prov. 3. 29.
g Empty fop. 1 Sam. 20. 3. 2 Sam. 16. 7. & 6. 20. not Jam. 2. 20.
h Graceless wretch; not as ch. 3. 7. & 12. 34. & 23. 13, 17, &c. John 8. 44. Acts 13. 10. & 23. 3.
i Prov. 25. 8, 9. Mark 9. 50. 1 Tim. 2. 8. Rom. 12. 18. & 14. 19. Phil. 4. 7. Eph. 4. 26, 27. Heb. 13. 1. Jam. 3. 13—18. Job 42. 8. Lev. 19. 18. 1 Pet. 3. 7.
k Luke 12. 58. Gen. 32. 3—20. 1 Sam. 25. 28. Prov. 25. 8. with Job 22. 21. Ps. 32. 6. Is. 55. 6, 7. 2 Cor. 6. 2. Heb. 3. 7—13.
l Luke 12. 59. Prov 25. 8. John 15. 22. with 2 Thes. 1. 9. ch. 13. 41. & 25. 46.

Verses 21—26. Our Lord here gives a spiritual exposition of part of the moral law, and very different from that of their Pharisaical teachers.

1. He begins with the sixth commandment. Ye have heard out of the law, read in the synagogue every sabbath day, that it was said by them of old time, by the ancients, the elders, who expounded the law, or to the ancients, their forefathers, thou shalt not kill; and, confining the command merely to the act of murder, they taught, that only such as had been thus capitally criminal, were liable to the sword of justice, either of God or man, excluding all inferior deeds of the like tendency, from being accounted breaches of the law. But Christ teaches them far otherwise: I say unto you, and he speaks as having authority, that not only you are forbidden to murder yourselves or any other person, directly or indirectly, but whosoever entertains rash or causeless anger, or harbours a malicious wish or design against any man, though it never be executed, is liable to God's judgment, and criminal at his bar, as a murderer in his heart. If the evil within break forth into opprobrious or contemptuous language, such as, Thou empty fellow, it deserves the cognizance of the Sanhedrim; but if it proceeds yet farther, to bitter revilings and rash censures, to say, Thou fool, thou vile reprobate, such a breach of the law shall be punished with hell fire. This should, (1.) Awaken in our minds a deep sense of our guilt and sin, and humble us before God in the review of our past transgressions; well may we cry on the rehearsal of this law, Lord have mercy upon us. (2.) It should make us more watchful over our hearts, to suppress the risings of anger on trivial provocations, the inadvertencies or mistakes of others, or our own groundless surmises; yea, though the provocation be great, and the cause of anger just, we must see that it be not excessive, vehement, hurtful, or abiding. Our lips should be under the like restraint, that nothing hasty, perverse, spiteful, contemptible, reproachful, insolent, abusive, or malignant, proceed out of our mouth. The right government of the tongue is the sure proof of grace in the heart.

2. He recommends the exercise of that Christian love and peace, which is the fulfilling of the law; and if offences come, as they will in this corrupted state, we should be ever ready to confess our faults, ask pardon, make restitution, and seek reconciliation; and this,

(1.) Because till then we can offer to God no acceptable service; for all our worship and duties without charity are nothing worth. If therefore we have done an injury to any man, such as the breach of the commandment above remarked, before we presume to offer our gifts at God's altar, our praises, prayers, or whatever religious services we propose, we must reflect wherein and how much we have offended, and seek immediate reconciliation; since hatred and uncharitableness would make our best works an abomination, and love is better than all burnt-offering. Should our brother continue inexorable, and refuse all the submissions we are ready to make, we may not then be restrained from drawing near to God, and may humbly expect that forgiveness from him which we cannot obtain from man.

(2.) Because till this is done, the wrath of God abideth on us. For as it would be highly prudent for the debtor to seek to accommodate matters with his creditor before a suit commences, lest he should be summoned before the civil magistrate, and, the proof being clear, he should be consigned to the officer and cast into prison, without the possibility of deliverance; much more should the guilty sinner solicitously desire reconciliation with God and man, lest dying in hatred and uncharitableness, his iniquities should witness against him at God's bar, and he should perish everlastingly. God is every sinner's adversary; our eternity depends on being at peace with him; therefore we need be anxious about it: the moment of time which is hurrying by, is the space allotted us to agree with him; therefore every delay is highly dangerous: if we die in unpardoned sin, we have nothing to expect but a fearful judgment, where we are sure to be cast; the officers of vengeance are ready to execute the sentence, and the prison of hell is prepared to receive the condemned soul, where, in everlasting burnings, the guilty must be for ever paying, yet be never able to discharge the debt they owe to inexorable Justice.

27. ¶ Ye have heard that it was said ‖ by them of old time, [m] Thou shalt not commit adultery: 28. But I say unto you, [n] That whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart. 29. [o] And if thy right eye [p] offend thee, ‖ Gr. to them.

m Exod. 20. 14. Deut. 5. 18. Lev. 20. 10. Deut. 22. 21—25. Eph. 5. 5. Heb. 13. 4.
n Job 31. 1. Prov. 6. 25. 2 Pet. 2. 14.
o Ch. 18. 8, 9. & 19, 20. Mark 9. 43, 45, 47. p Or do cause thee to offend. Ps. 119. 37. Job 31. 1. 2 Pet. 2. 14. Col. 3. 5. 1 Cor. 9. 27. Rom. 8. 13. Gal. 5. 24. Prov. 1. 10, 15. & 4. 14, 15. & 5. 8—14.

pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into * hell. 30. And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell. 31. It hath been said, [q] Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement: 32. But I say unto you, That [r] whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of † fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery.

* The Greek word Gehenna, here rendered hell, is compounded of two Hebrew words gai Hinnom, that is the valley of Hinnom, a place near Jerusalem, in which children were cruellysacrificed by fire to Moloch the idol of the Ammonites: 2 Chr. 33. 6. It was also called Tophet. In process of time this place came to be considered an emblem of hell; and its name was employed to designate that placeof torment, reserved for the wicked in a future state.—Jones' Bib. Dict.

q Deut. 24. 1. ch. 9. 7. Mark 10. 4.

r Mark 10. 11, 12. Luke 16. 18. 1. Cor. 7. 10, 11.

Mal. 2. 14, 15. ch. 19. 9. Rom. 7. 3. † Fornication before marriage, or adultery after it.

Verses 27—32. The seventh commandment is here expounded by the same infallible interpreter; and well may we say, in the view of the spirituality of the law, Thy commandment is exceeding broad. The commandment delivered to the ancients, at mount Sinai said, Thou shalt not commit adultery; and the Pharisaical expositors had confined the breach of it literally to this grossest act of lewdness, excluding all the lower degrees of impurity in thought, word, or deed: but Christ gives a very different extent to the command, to confound their proud claims, who dared to boast they were no adulterers. Luke xviii. 11.

1. Every unchaste desire in the heart, is adultery in the sight of God. The eye, the hand, the feet, the tongue, that by amorous glances, wanton dalliance, or impure discourse, tend to kindle the unhallowed fire of lust, or blow it up into a flame; and every contrivance to gratify this impurity of heart, though it be never brought to effect, involves the conscience in the same horrid guilt.

2. We are commanded therefore to cut off the right hand, and pluck out the right eye which would lead us to offend; not literally indeed to maim or mutilate our bodies, though that, if commanded, should be readily complied with, rather than commit sin; but figuratively it signifies, however near and dear to us the sin may be, by long habit become incorporated as it were with our very frame, and hard to part with, as these most useful members of our bodies, yet must it be torn away, and cast from us with abhorrence. The heart must be kept with all diligence; no lewd vain thoughts harboured, especially when alone, solitude being often a great temptation to impurity. The eyes must be restrained from gazing on a tempting object, and kept as under a covenant from looking on a maid; yea every object which would awaken evil desire must be shunned; lascivious representations on the stage, impure pictures, books of amours, lewd plays, &c. not to forget curious, expensive, and indecent dress, that exposes the person with a design to catch the wandering eye, and at once declares the spirit of the temptress, whilst it is a net to ensnare unstable souls. The hand, the foot, that can convey the silent inuendo, must be restrained from every motion of evil, since he that toucheth her shall not be innocent. The tongue must be rather plucked out, than utter corrupt communication; or be suffered, by discourse grossly impure, or more dangerously and wittily lascivious, in sly insinuations and double meanings, to breathe poison into the ears of the unwary. As the grand means to restrain these evils, every approach to them must be guarded by daily abstinence and self-denial, making no provision for the flesh to fulfil the lusts thereof.

3. A powerful argument is used to enforce this. Raging appetite will not be conquered by any thing short of the terrors of the Lord. The damnation of hell is the wages of uncleanness; and they who burn with impure desires, must lie down in everlasting burnings, where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched; and dearly do men purchase carnal delights at this price of eternal misery. The sentence is repeated, because men are very unwilling to believe what sounds so terrible in their ears; but the decree is fixed and immutable; those who refuse to fear it now must feel it for ever. Better therefore, far better is it to suffer the present crucifixion of vile affections, than indulge them at the penalty of never ending torments.

4. All divorce is unlawful, except in the case of adultery. The Jews indeed, for the hardness of their hearts, were permitted to put away their wives by a public instrument before witnesses; but this was contrary to the original institution of marriage, and therefore our Lord utterly condemns all separation, except in case of a breach of the matrimonial bond: and should the person divorced marry again, she would commit adultery, as well as he who should take her to wife, and the crimes of both would also lie at the door of him who put her away; for they who lead others into sin, shall be chargeable with all the guilt they bring upon them.

33. ¶ Again, ye have heard that it hath been said ‡ by them of old time, [s] Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths: 34. But I say unto you, [t] Swear not at all: neither by heaven; for it is God's [u] throne: 35. Nor by the earth; for it is his footstool: neither by Jerusalem; for it is [x] the city of the great King. 36. Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black: 37. [y] But let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these [z] cometh of evil.

‡ Gr. to the ancients.

s Exod. 20. 7. Lev. 19. 12. Deut. 5. 11. & 23. 21—23. Num. 30. 2. Eccl. 5. 4. Ps. 76. 11. & 50. 14. & 119. 106. & 61. 5, 8. Nah. 1. 15.

t Jam. 5. 12. Eccl. 9. 2.

u Is. 66. 1. & 57. 15. Ps. 115. 3, 16. & 99. 5. ch. 23. 22. Rev. 4. 2.

x 2 Chr. 6. 6. Ps. 48. 2. & 87. 1, 2. & 78. 68, 69.

y Jam. 5. 12. 2 Cor. 1. 17, 18.

z Ch. 15. 19. & 13. 19.

Verses 33—37. The third commandment forbade perjury, and enjoined the performance of the vows which were made unto the Lord, or to men, under the sanction of an oath in his name; and hereunto the scribes restricted the commandment, accounting oaths in common allowable, if true; reckoning it no sin to swear by the creatures, and that such oaths laid them under no obligation to fulfil them: but Christ would give them a better exposition.

I say unto you, Swear not at all. Not that every oath is unlawful, since in matters of controversy, before a judge, an oath for confirmation is an end of all strife; and on solemn occasions, such appeals to God are high acts of religious worship, see 2 Cor. i. 23. but all rash swearing, on trivial occasions, in common discourse, is forbidden, with all unnecessary multiplication of oaths, under which this land groans. God's sacred name must never be taken in the lips thoughtlessly, irreverently, wantonly; nor may we use any creature to swear by, neither heaven nor earth, nor the temple, nor our heads, our lives, our souls; much less the idols of heathenism, such as Jupiter or the like, this being equally criminal as to swear by the name of God himself. Therefore our communication must be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay: simply affirming or denying, without oath or imprecation; for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil, or from the evil one the devil, or from the fountain of evil in the corrupted heart. Where more than simple affirmation or denial is thought to be necessary, there is implied a suspicion of veracity, which every rash oath for confirmation will serve but to increase; for they who make no conscience of an oath, cannot be supposed to make conscience of a lie.

38. ¶ Ye have heard that it hath been said, [a] An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: 39. But I say unto you, [b] That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also. 40. And [c] if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also. 41. And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain. 42. [d] Give to him that asketh thee; and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away.

a Exod. 21. 24. Lev. 24. 20. Deut. 19. 19, 21.
b Prov. 20. 22. & 24. 29. Lev. 19. 18. Luke 6. 29. Rom. 12. 17, 19. 1 Cor. 6. 7. Is. 50. 6. Lam. 3. 30. 1 Thes. 5. 15. 1 Pet. 3. 9.
c Luke 6. 29. 1 Cor. 6. 7. ch. 27. 32. d Deut. 15. 8, 10. Luke 6. 30—35. Rom. 12. 20. Prov. 3. 27, 28. & 19. 17.

Verses 38—42. The law of retaliation, Exod. xxi. 24. which permitted the magistrate to execute a punishment of the same kind as the injury; or, as some suppose, to fix a mulct upon the offender equivalent to the harm done; had been grievously abused to extortion, and pleaded in vindication of private revenge. Christ therefore teaches his disciples of what spirit they should be. Magistracy is God's institution, and the punishment of men's crimes righteous and just, but all private revenge is forbidden. It is true indeed that self-preservation, the care of our families, the honour of God, and the good of society, may often make the redress of injuries not only lawful, but necessary; but in innumerable instances our duty is, meekly and silently to bear and forbear.

1. If a man strike us on the right cheek, or otherwise injure our person, or treat us with indignity, we may not render evil for evil, and by a return of the blow inflame the quarrel, but put up with it; or, if it be needful, put the case into the hand of the civil magistrate: and though our patience may be counted pusillanimity, and our forbearing may expose us to fresh insults, as if in fact we turned the other cheek, yet it is infinitely better for conscience' sake towards God, thus to suffer, than to maintain our character, or gratify our revenge, by a challenge or a fray, which must provoke his wrath and end in our perdition.

2. In cases of injury to our property, whether by litigious, malicious, and false persecutions, or in private disputes, though our coat were taken from us, it were better, for peace' sake, to give our inner garment too, than fly to the law for redress: for if the matter of injury be small, which we may sustain without hurting our families, it is not only the most pious, but most prudent also, to sit down with the first loss, since the expenses of the suit often exceed the value of what we may recover.

3. If we are compelled by force to accompany a person a mile, rather than struggle or contend, it is better to go two. And thus in all other cases of affronts and injuries the like rule holds. Hard tasks indeed for flesh and blood! but let it be remembered, Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God.

4. We must not only revenge no injuries, but do every kindness in our power to our neighbour; ready to relieve the wants of every real object of charity which presents itself to us, according to our abilities; and freely lending, without interest, to the industrious, but necessitous: a small sum to help such a one in his trade, without any real loss to ourselves, may be of vast service to him. And in the manner also of exercising our bounty we never should appear reluctant, frowning, or giving as if it was extorted from us; but be happy to have it in our power to relieve the wants of our poor petitioners.

43. ¶ Ye have heard that it hath been said, [e] Thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy. 44. But I say unto you, [f] Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you; 45. That [g] ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: [h] for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust. 46. [i] For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the [k] publicans the same? 47. And [l] if ye salute your brethren only, what do you more than others? do not even the publicans so? 48. ¶ [m] Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.

e Lev. 19. 17, 18. Exod. 17. 14, 16. Deut. 7. 1, 2. & 23. 3—6. & 25. 7. Ps. 139. 21, 22.
f Luke 6. 27. & 23. 34. 2 Kin. 6. 22. Acts 7. 60. Prov. 25. 21. Rom. 12. 14, 20. 1 Cor. 4. 12, 13. 1 Pet. 3. 9.
g May be manifested. John 13. 35. 1 John 3. 1, 14—18. Luke 6. 35, 36.
h Job 25. 3. & 5. 10. & 38. 26. Acts 14. 17. Ps 145. 9.
i Luke 6. 32. ver. 47.
k Infamously wicked tax-gatherers, ch. 9. 10, 11. & 11. 19. & 18. 17. & 21. 31, 32. Luke 18. 11, 13.
l Exod. 23. 4, 5. Lev. 19. 17, 18. Deut. 15. 7, 8. & 22. 1. ch. 10. 12. with Luke 10. 5. m Lev. 11. 44. & 19. 2. & 20. 7, 26. Luke 6. 36. Job 2. 3. 1 Cor. 14. 20. 2 Cor. 13. 11. Eph. 5. 1, 2. Phil. 4. 8. Col. 1. 28. & 3. 8—15. & 4. 12. Jam. 1. 4. 1 Pet. 1. 15, 16. 1 John 2. 6 29. & 3. 3—10.

Verses 43—48. The whole law being fulfilled in one word, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, this is here insisted upon, and who that neighbour is, declared.

The Jewish expositors had vilely corrupted this divine precept by the addition they had made to it, Thou shalt hate thine enemy. And as they confined their neighbour to those merely of their own religion and nation, they interpreted this as a command to hate all mankind beside, in direct opposition to the letter of God's law, Exod. xxiii. 4, 5. Deut. xxiii. 7. But Christ teaches us very differently.

1. He recommends universal charity: I say unto you, Love your enemies. We cannot place confidence or take complacence in them or their evil ways; but we must bear all good will towards them, remark with satisfaction whatever is commendable in them, and sincerely desire their present and eternal happiness; returning their curses with blessings, showing every act of kindness to their bodies and souls, who express the bitterest enmity against us; and, if they will suffer us to do no more, at least praying for those who dispitefully use and persecute us; such being the treatment the true disciples of Jesus may expect, and such the gracious returns they are bound to make. And this is the distinguishing spirit of Christianity, and what nothing but the grace of Jesus can produce.

2. He enforces his command with these strong arguments:

(1.) In so doing we shall resemble our Father who is in heaven, and prove our adoption of him, who, in the distribution of his providential mercies, causes his sun to rise, and his rain to fall indiscriminately upon the evil and the good. Note, (1.) Our commonest, though most unnoticed blessings, are those for which we are most deeply indebted to God. (2.) No man's state is to be known by any outward gifts of providence; the just and unjust share them alike. (3.) If God thus sets us the example, we must diligently copy it.

(2). We must show the distinguishing spirit of our profession, and adorn it. If we loved only them who love us, or paid civility and respect to our brethren alone, what thanks would be due, where the obligation was reciprocal, and where even publicans would rival us. We must do more than others, if we profess more; not confining our regards to our nearest friends or relations, to those of our own party or nation, but opening our hearts wide as the world, and doing good to all, even to the evil and unthankful.

(3.) Our eye must be fixed not on the attainments of others, but on that perfection which is in our Father; and to be perfect like him, should be our holy ambition; not that we shall be able absolutely to attain thereunto, but after this we must reach, and take up with nothing short of it. And as this must be our study, labour, and prayer in general; so particularly in this love towards our enemies, should we desire to resemble him, which is a temper truly divine and godlike.

CHAP. VI.—ANNO DOMINI, 30.

Christ having, in the former chapter, armed his disciples against the corrupt doctrines and opinions of the Scribes and Pharisees, next rebukes the corrupt practices of which they were notoriously guilty, hypocrisy and worldly-mindedness; sins which, of all others, the professors of religion need to guard against, as most easily besetting those who have escaped the grosser pollutions that are in the world, through lust. We are here cautioned, 1. Against hypocrisy; we must not be as the hypocrites are, nor do as the hypocrites do. (1.) In giving of alms, ver. 1—4. (2.) In prayer, ver. 5—8. We are here taught what to pray for, and how to pray, ver. 9—13. And to forgive, ver. 14, 15. (3.) In fasting, ver. 16—18. 2. Against worldly-mindedness, [1.] In our choice, which is the destroying sin of hypocrites, ver. 19—24. [2.] In our cares, which is the disquieting sin of many gracious souls, ver. 25—34.

1. TAKE heed that ye do not your [a] alms before men, to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward * of your Father which is in heaven. 2. Therefore [b] when thou doest thine alms, [c] do not sound a trumpet before thee as the hypocrites do in the synagogues, and in the streets, that they may have glory of men. Verily I say unto you, they have [d] their reward. 3. But, when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth; 4. [e] That thine alms may be in secret: and thy Father, which [f] seeth in secret, himself shall reward thee [g] openly.

a Or righteousness. Deut. 24. 13. Ps. 112. 9. Dan. 4. 27. 2 Cor. 9. 9, 10.
* Or with.
b Rom. 12. 8. Eph. 4. 28. Prov. 19. 17.
c Or cause not a trumpet to be sounded. Prov. 20. 6. 2 Kin. 10. 16. 1 Cor. 10. 31. Hos. 10. 1. Zech. 7. 5, 6. d Ver. 5, 16. i. e. human applause.
e Luke 14. 14. 1 Cor. 10. 31. ver. 3.
f Ver. 6, 18. Ps. 44. 21. Jer. 23. 24. Ps. 139. 12. Heb. 4. 13. Rev. 2. 23. Jer. 17. 10. g Ch. 25. 34. Dan. 7. 10, 18, 27. Luke 14. 14. 1 Cor. 4. 5. Rev. 20. 12. Eccl. 12. 14.

Verses 1—4. Having before rescued the law from the false expositions of the Pharisees, our Lord here shows the true religion of the heart, as expressed in the three great duties of alms, prayer, and fasting, in which these deluded teachers gloried, but erred exceedingly in the performance of them.

1. Our Lord cautions us against all ostentatious show, in bestowing our alms. Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them; hypocrisy is a subtle sin, and where we are least apprehensive of danger is ever ready to insinuate itself; yet the fear of being wrong must not keep us from doing right. Alms giving is every Christian's bounden duty; and though not to be trusted upon as our righteousness before God, nor done to engage the applause of men; must nevertheless, according to our ability, be practised for God's glory, and the assistance of our brethren: and God, who is not unrighteous, will remember and reward the works of faith, and labours of love.

2. He describes the methods the hypocrites used to proclaim their own goodness, and solicit the estimation of others. They sound a trumpet, either literally to gather the poor to their doors; or they gave their alms in the most public manner, on purpose that they might be seen and admired.

3. They had the reward they sought, and all they had to expect; the ignorant blessed their liberality, and praised their charity. Note, The hypocrite's portion is all in hand, and hereafter he hath nothing to hope for.

4. Christ gives direction concerning the proper way of doing our alms. Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth; the expression is proverbial, and intimates the secrecy we should use: never designedly letting others know our alms deeds, nor desirous they should be acquainted with them. And with regard to ourselves, we should forget them; and never dwell upon them, even in our thoughts, to flatter our own vain-glory and self-conceit.

5. Such good deeds as these, flowing from faith which worketh by love, shall not fail of their reward; secret as they are. He that seeth in secret will record them; and, when we have forgotten them, and would be ashamed to hear them mentioned, he will remember and recompense them openly, before men and angels, at the resurrection of the just.

5. ¶ And [h] when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues, and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, they have their reward. 6. But thou, when thou prayest, [i] enter into thy closet; and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret, and thy Father, which seeth in secret, [k] shall reward thee openly. 7. But when ye pray, [l] use not vain repetitions, as the * heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking. 8. Be not ye therefore like unto them: [m] for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him.

h Ch. 23. 14. Luke 18. 11.
i 2 Kin. 4. 33. Is. 26. 20. ch. 14. 23. & 26. 39—44.
k See ver. 4.
l Eccl. 5. 2, 3, 6. 1 Kin. 18. 26—29.
* Thus, in one place of the Greek poet Æschylus, 100 verses are filled with a repetition of the same invocations to the gods. So the priests of Baal called from morning to noon, O Baal, hear us. 1 Kings 18. 26. And the Ephesians, for the space of two hours, cried great is Diana. Acts 19. 24.—Dr Hammond.
m Ver. 32. John 16. 27. Neh. 9. 32. Ps. 139. 1—5. & 38. 9.

Verses 5—8. Prayer next comes to be considered. It were an open declaration of impiety, irreligion, and Atheism, to live without some acknowledgment of God's goodness, and profession of dependence on his care: at least, none who bear the name of Christian can be supposed to live without prayer, any more than the body can live without breath. We have here two grand directions concerning this most necessary duty.

1. That it be not performed hypocritically, to be seen of men. The Pharisees chose the synagogues, and the corners of the streets, for the places of their devotions, that men's eyes might be upon them, standing up, that they might be more conspicuous; and loving the work, merely for the sake of the reward they proposed to themselves; which they received, and a miserable reward it was, to be applauded of poor mortals, like themselves, when they were abhorred of the great and holy God. Our Lord teaches his disciples to pray in a different manner; public places are unfit for private prayer. We must retire therefore from the observation of men, as much as may be; not only to avoid ostentation, but in order to be alone with God, removed from all interruption that would distract our thoughts; and out of the hearing of others, that we may freely speak before our Father who is in secret; to whom alone it should be our desire to approve ourselves, comparatively indifferent what men may think or say of us, if he regards us with paternal love, and expecting from him the answer of our petitions, which he promises to bestow. For he who seeth in secret, though invisible to us, is yet present with us, and acquainted with our inmost soul, and will reward us openly; answering our requests in present blessings, owning us at the great day of his appearing and glory, and bestowing the promised eternal reward, a reward not indeed of debt, but of grace.

2. That we use not vain repetitions as the heathen do, who think that they shall be heard for their much speaking; not that repetitions or much speaking in prayer are condemned; seeing the same petitions may be often reiterated, and speak thus the deepest sensibility of our wants, and the greatest importunity of desire, Matt. xxvi. 44. Dan. ix. 18. Psalm cxxxvi. as also when our wants are many and great on particular occasions, and our spirit at liberty, we are never restrained from pouring out all our requests into the bosom of our compassionate God and Father, Luke vi. 12. The practice censured is, (1.) The vain babblings of those who pray by rote, like Papists, as they tell their beads, repeating so many Ave Maries, or Pater Nosters; and constantly, without life or spirituality, going over the same dull round of words, like a packhorse with his bells, pleased with the tinkling of his own unmeaning music. (2.) The much speaking which arises from an affectation of prolixity, especially in social prayer, where, instead of speaking to God, men love to hear the sound of their own voices, and want others to admire their gifts, their fluency, their fervency, and zeal; making a vast parade of words, adoration, thanksgiving, requests, intercessions, &c. like Baal's priests, from morning unto noon, crying, O Baal, hear us: such lip labour is not only lost labour, but worse, an abomination unto the Lord, and to be avoided by all his spiritual worshippers. For our Father, who is in heaven, knoweth what things we have need of before we ask him, therefore does not want to be particularly informed, as if he were ignorant; or was to be prevailed upon merely by our cries. But, as our Father, he expects to be called upon, and is ever ready to hear and answer us; omniscient, he knows our necessities; and all-sufficient, he will relieve them; even when we through our blindness, know not what to ask, or, through our ignorance, ask amiss; yea, sometimes cannot ask at all, overwhelmed with distress, and speaking only in tears and groans which cannot be uttered, Rom. vii. 27.

9. After this manner therefore pray ye: [n] Our Father which art in heaven, [o] Hallowed be thy name. 10. [p] Thy kingdom come. [q] Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. 11. [r] Give us this day our daily bread. 12. [s] And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors. 13. [t] And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil: [u] For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen. 14. ¶ [x] For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you: 15. But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

n Luke 11. 2. Ps. 8. 1. & 115. 3. Is. 66. 1.
o John 12. 28. Is. 6. 3. & 8. 13. Ps. 111. 9. & cxlv—cl.
p Ch. 3. 2. & 4. 17. Ps. 103. 19, 21. Is. 2. 2, 3. Jer. 23. 5, 6. Dan. 2. 44. & 7. 14. q Ps. xciii.—c, cxiv—cl. ch. 16. 28. Rev. 22. 20. ch. 26. 42. Acts 21. 14. Ps. 103. 19—21.
r Ch. 4. 4. Prov. 30. 8. Luke 11. 3. Exod. 16. 21. 1 Tim. 5. 8. & 6. 8. Job 23. 12. John 6. 3. Gen. 43. 25—34. Is. 58. 10, 11.
s Is. 43. 25. Ps. 130. 4, 8. ch. 18. 21, 22. Col. 3. 13.
t Ch. 26. 41. John 17. 15. 1 Cor. 10. 13. 1 Pet. 5. 8. 2 Chr. 12. 7, 9. 2 Pet. 2. 9. Rev. 3. 10. u 1 Chr. 29. 11. 1 Tim. 6. 15. Eph. 1. 19. 1 Pet. 1. 5. Ps. 47. 2, 7. & 96. 7, 8. & 135. 6. 1 Tim. 1. 17. Eph. 3. 21. x Ch. 18. 21—35. Mark 11. 25, 26. Eph. 4. 32. Col. 3. 15. Prov. 21. 13. Jam. 2. 13.

Verses 9—15. Having condemned the prayers of formality and pride, our Lord here suggests both matter and words for our use.

The prayer before us may be considered both as a form and as a directory. It is concise, yet comprehensive, containing our chief wants in a few words; not that we are always bound to the use of it, or should regard it as more sacred than other prayers of the Scripture; but, being in frequent use, we need be well acquainted with its meaning, that when we repeat it we may pray with the spirit, and with the understanding also.

We have,

1. The preface. Our father which art in heaven. The great object of prayer is God alone; the encouraging motives to approach him are, that he is our Father; our reconciled God and Father in Christ Jesus, from whose paternal heart we may expect the tenderest compassions and most gracious attention; and as he is in heaven, adored by saints and angels, he knows our necessities better than we can express them, and hath all power to supply them exceeding abundantly above all we can ask or think; so that we may come to him in faith, nothing doubting. As our common Father also, we are taught the spirit of love and charity, which should breathe in all our prayers; and profess ourselves hereby one of those many brethren whom, through Christ Jesus, he is bringing to glory: and for whom, as they for us, we are mutual advocates.

2. The petitions. They are six in number; the first three more immediately relate to God's glory, the last to our own wants.

(1.) Hallowed be thy name. The name of God comprehends his being, perfections, and all the manifestations he hath made of himself in his works and word. That it may be hallowed, or sanctified, signifies our ascription of praise to him, according to his excellent greatness: and our desire that he may be ever more and more exalted: that we ourselves and all others may believe in him, love him, fear and serve him, as we ought to do; and in our lips and lives show forth his glory; and that since all good is from him all may be ascribed to him.

(2.) Thy kingdom come. The kingdom of the Messiah seems principally here intended, which was now ready to appear; and being once set up in the world, we are required to pray for its enlargement and final consummation. As a kingdom of grace, we beg it may be erected in our own hearts more and more, till every thought be brought into the obedience of Christ; that it may diffuse its benign influence far and wide, and the light of the gospel word, and the power of the gospel grace cover the earth, as the waters cover the sea; that God may thus accomplish the number of his elect, and hasten that eternal kingdom of glory, when all his saints collected round his throne shall, to eternity, adore him, enjoy his favour, and be made for ever happy in his service.

(3.) Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven; God is glorified, and his kingdom comes when his will is made ours; his preceptive will obeyed, his providential will acquiesced in: thus we pray that, without dispute, we may receive the revelation he hath given us, believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, receive him as our King, and approve ourselves obedient subjects to his government in all things; never murmuring against his commands as severe, or his prohibitions as grievous, but counting his will to be always holy, just, and good. We pray for resignation to all his afflictive dispensations, contentment in every station, submission under every burden, and a heart to bless him, not only when he gives, but when he takes away: in short, that we may be as the clay in the hands of the potter, to be, act, and suffer, according to the good pleasure of his will; and this cheerfully, universally, continually, as the spirits of just men made perfect, and the spotless angels fulfil his will in heaven. Note, (1.) It is mockery of God to pray that his will may be done, and daily live in allowed opposition to it. (2.) None may hope to serve God in heaven, who have not made on earth his glory their end, his word their rule, his will their delight.

(4.) Give us this day our daily bread; either for our souls, the bread of life that we may be strengthened in the inner man, and increase with the increase of God; or for our bodies, the food which is convenient for us; not delicacies, but necessaries; not such as pampered appetite craves, but what, used with temperance and sobriety, may best fit us for the work of our station, and God's service. We ask our own bread; not what we have a right to, for all is God's gift, but what is honestly come by, neither the bread of idleness nor deceit; we are taught to ask daily for it, as acknowledging our dependence upon God for all we have and enjoy; and for this day only, not excluding a provident care, but as mindful of our jeopardy every hour, as dead to carking solicitude and perplexing suggestions about futurity, and content to trust him for the morrow, in the use of the same means we employ to-day. And this we beg for others as well as ourselves, that they and we may praise God together, who filleth our hearts with food and gladness. Thus all repining, envy, and discontent, will be excluded; content with our allotted portion, we shall wish for nothing more.

(5.) And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors. Our debts are our sins: having failed in the debt of duty, we become liable to the debt of punishment. These sins are innumerable, great, and aggravated; and we have nothing to pay, unable to make the least satisfaction for them to divine justice: they are daily increasing, and if God deals with us according to our deserts, we are undone for ever. Therefore we cry, forgive; which intimates the deep and humble sense we have of our miserable and insolvent state, and our hope in the mercy of God, through Jesus Christ, for pardon. However numberless, great, and aggravated our sins may be, they are not beyond the blood of atonement, and God's boundless grace: he can pardon even beyond all that we can ask. A plea also is put into our mouths, not as meritorious, but as an argument founded on God's promise, ver. 14. and an encouragement to our own souls to hope in his mercy, as we forgive our debtors; for if we do so, how much more shall the Father of mercies forgive us! Whilst on the other hand, we may not dare to hope or pray for pardon, if we can retain allowed malice against one creature upon earth, and do not from the heart forgive our brother his trespasses. Though the offences or injuries done us may have been ever so great, we are called upon to pardon them fully, freely, without reserve, or upbraiding: yea, to forget them, as though they had never been; and how reasonable the injunction, when none can ever have offended us as we have provoked God! since he, therefore, for Christ's sake hath forgiven us, so ought we to forgive one another. To pray this petition, with rancour, resentment, or ill-will abiding in the heart, would be to imprecate a curse upon our souls, instead of obtaining a blessing.

(6.) Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil; conscious of our own weakness, we beg to be kept from the power of temptation, or to be supported under our trials that we may not fall. Not that God can be tempted with evil, or tempteth any man; but if he withholds his grace, our own corrupted hearts naturally rush into the snare, and our adversary, the devil, is ever going about seeking whom he may devour; from his power, that wicked one, the author of all evil, we pray to be delivered: so that, if assaulted, we may not be overcome by him: and from all the evil with which we are compassed on every side, from the evil world with all its snares, from evil men with all their wiles, or violence: from our own evil hearts with all their traitor lusts; from the evil of sin and punishment, in time or in eternity.

3. The doxology and conclusion. For thine is the kingdom and the power, and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen. Which may be considered as a solemn ascription of praise to God; as an act of faith in his power and grace: and a plea to enforce our petitions, in which God's own glory is so greatly concerned. All praise and honour are in the highest to be ascribed to him; whilst, after all, we must own he is far exalted above all blessing and praise. His power is able to supply all our wants, we may therefore confidently trust him; since his is the kingdom, we may expect protection, and his own glory engages him to grant the requests which his word and Spirit teach us to ask. We may therefore well add our warm Amen; earnest that our requests may be answered, and God therein glorified: in faith resting assured that it will be so, and therefore rising from our knees rejoicing in hope of the glory of God.

[y] Is. 58. 4, 5. 1 Kin. 21. 27. Luke 18. 12, 14. with ch. 9. 14. Joel 2. 12—17.

16. ¶ Moreover, [y] when ye fast, be not, as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance: for they * disfigure their faces, that they may appear unto men to fast. Verily I say unto you, they have their reward. 17. But thou, when thou fastest, [z] anoint thine head, and wash thy face: 18. That thou [a] appear not unto men to fast, but unto thy Father which is in secret: and thy Father, which [b] seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

* That is, look rueful, and 'suffer their faces to remain unwashed and their heads unanointed.'—Bishop Pearce.

[z] Ruth 3. 3. Eccl. 9. 8. 2 Sam. 14. 2.

[a] 2 Cor. 5. 9. & 10. 18. Col. 3. 22—24. 1 Pet. 2. 13.

[b] See ver. 4. Acts 9. 11. John 1. 48.

Verses 16—18. Having given directions for almsgiving and prayer, our Lord proceeds to fasting, a needful, though much neglected duty. This flesh needs the curb of constant mortification, and our sins call for such humiliation. We are here,

1. Cautioned against the hypocritical show of the Pharisees. They made a vast parade of mortification, outwardly disfiguring their faces, and putting on an affected rueful countenance, pretending that deep contrition of soul which they never felt, that men might admire the austerity of their lives, and reverence them for their extraordinary sanctity, and so far they had their reward. They were highly esteemed among men: but how poor a consideration this, when, for their hypocrisy, they were an abomination in the sight of God. Note, Many who have denied the cravings of the body, have fallen victims to the pride of their heart.

2. We are directed how to fast. As the humiliation is before God, we must studiously avoid all external show; appear in dress and countenance as on other days, alike dead to men's applause or censures, desiring only God's acceptance and regard in Christ Jesus, which in this way we are sure to find, and our Father who seeth in secret shall reward us openly.

19. ¶ [c] Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal: 20. [d] But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: 21. [e] For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. 22. ¶ [f] The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light. 23. But if [g] thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, [h] how great is that darkness! 24. ¶ [i] No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and † mammon.

[c] Ps. 62. 10. Prov. 23. 4, 5. ch. 19. 21. Luke 12. 33. & 21. 34. 1 Tim. 6. 9, 17. Heb. 13. 5. Jam. 5. 1—4. & 4. 4. 1 John 2. 15.

[d] Luke 12. 33. & 18. 22. 1 Tim. 6. 18, 19. ch. 19. 21. Col. 3. 1—3.

[e] Luke 12. 34. Phil. 3. 20. 2 Cor. 4. 18. Col. 3. 1—4.

[f] Luke 11. 34—36. Rom. 12. 8. 1 Cor. 10. 31

[g] Mark 7. 21. ch. 20. 15. Prov. 23. 6. Deut. 15. 9. & 28. 54, 56.

[h] Is. 5. 20. Rom. 1. 21, 22, 28. 1 Cor. 1. 19—21. 2 Cor. 4. 4.

[i] Luke 16. 13. ch. 4. 10. Josh. 24. 19 Jam. 4. 4. 1 John 2. 15, 16.

† i. e. riches, gains, and treasures, which are the idols of carnal hearts, set up in opposition to God.

Verses 19—24. No sin is so besetting and dangerous to the professors of religion, as worldly mindedness; and where it prevails, there is no surer proof of the hypocrisy of the heart. Against this, therefore, our Lord especially warns his disciples.

1. He cautions them against laying up their treasures upon earth. Nothing under the sun should be regarded by us as our portion; nor ought we, with increasing eagerness, to be still grasping at more, and continually adding to our stores; we must neither take up our rest in these things, nor depend upon them as a substantial and abiding good, for a thousand accidents may deprive us of all. The moth may corrupt our garments; the rain, blasting, mildew, or vermin destroy our corn: and thieves rob us of that gold and silver we treasured up with so much care. It were folly therefore to count these our treasures.

2. He tells us how we may secure a better, and a more enduring substance. Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven: in the way of God's grace seek to secure the riches of his glory: especially by a right employment of this world's wealth, make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness: send your wealth before you in works of charity, and then you will find it again, with abundant interest, laid up in that sure place, where it will be exposed neither to corruption nor violence.

3. He enforces his advice by that weighty argument, that where your treasure is, there will your heart be also; if it be on earth, our minds will be earthly, sensual; if in heaven, our hearts will be drawn up to high and heavenly things; for as the needle follows the magnet, so do our affections pursue what we count our treasure; where this is, thither are our desires drawn out; our hopes and fears, joys and sorrows, are all influenced hereby. When God is made our portion, then on him will our souls be fixed.

4. According to a man's spirit and temper, so will his conduct be. The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, which was a common and well known phrase for a liberal temper, then thy whole body will be full of light; the actions will all correspond with the principle, and the whole conversation will abound with good, to the glory of God; but if thine eye be evil, if a sordid temper governs thee, thy whole body will be full of darkness, all the faculties will be enslaved by it: the whole conduct influenced by it to use mean, avaricious, and base ways to gratify such a spirit. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness! if covetousness extinguish every generous and noble sentiment in the soul, what a train of vile and unbecoming deeds will follow, whilst every consideration is absorbed in that one of gain, greedily sought by any means, lawful or unlawful! and the consequence must needs be, that such a one will sink into eternal darkness and misery. Such seems to be the sense of the words, which most exactly corresponds with the context. Some by the eye, understand practical judgment; according as that is endued with just discernment, or is erroneous and corrupt, so will the corresponding practice be good or evil; and this particularly will appear in the preference given to heavenly or earthly treasures.

5. We must make our choice which world we will have, and which master we will serve, the commands of both being incompatible. There is no dividing the heart: God will have all or none; but the hypocrite wants to secure both worlds together, and to serve God just so far as consists with his interest and convenience; but no man can serve two masters, whose commands are contradictory; and never were two masters more opposite than God and mammon. God demands the heart, enjoins contentment, honesty, charity, deadness to this world, and bids his servants forego their ease, their gain, their honour, their esteem among men, to seek in the first place, his kingdom and righteousness. Mammon commends the glittering stores of this vain world; bids his servants eat, drink, and be merry, pursue their worldly interests, honours, and esteem; mind chiefly themselves, live for themselves, spend on themselves, and, by every means secure wealth as the principal thing, and man's chief good. Thus opposite are these masters; the service of the one must be attended with abhorrence of the other; we are called upon to make our choice, and let us remember eternity depends upon it.

25. Therefore I say unto you, [i] [k] Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment? 26. [l] Behold the *fowls of the air: for they sow not neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they? 27. [m] Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his [n] stature? 28. And [o] why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: 29. And yet I say unto you, That even [p] Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. 30. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, [q] which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye [r] of little faith? 31. Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, what shall we drink? or, wherewithal shall we be clothed? 32. ([s] For after all these things do the Gentiles seek:) for [t] your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. 33. [u] But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. 34. [x] Take therefore no [z] thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

i Ps. 55. 22. Luke 12. 22. 1 Cor. 7. 32. 1 Pet. 5. 7. Phil. 4. 6. 1 Tim. 6. 8.
k Gr. Be not anxiously careful, Ver. 31, 34.
l Job 38. 41. Ps. 104. 27, 28. & 147. 9. Luke 12. 24.
* There is no where to be found so just and so elegant a reproof of eagerness and anxiety in worldly pursuits, closed with so forcible an exhortation to confidence in the goodness of the Creator as in this passage. —S. Jenyns.
m Luke 12. 25, 26. Ps. 75. 6. Eccl. 9. 11. n Or age. John 9. 21, 23.
o Ver. 25, 31, 34. Luke 12. 27. Ps. 4. 6. p 1 Kin. iv, ix, x. 2 Chr. i, viii, ix.
q Ps. 129. 6. & 102. 4. Is. 40. 6, 7. 1 Pet. 1. 24.
r Is. 50 10. ch. 14. 31. Mark 9. 24. s Ch. 5. 46, 47. Ps. 4. 6. & 17. 14. Phil. 3. 19.
t Luke 12. 30 Phil. 4. 19. 1 Pet. 5. 7. ver. 8.
u Luke 12. 31. John 6. 27. 1 Kin. 3. 11—13. Ps. 34. 9, 10. & 37. 8, 19, 25, 29. Mark 10. 30 1 Tim. 4. 7, 8. Luke 10. 42. 1 Cor. 3. 22. Rom. 8. 31, 32.
x Exod. 16. 18—20. ver. 11, 25. Prov. 16. 3. 1 Tim. 4. 8.
y Gr. anxious thought. Ver. 25, 27, 28, 31.

Verses 25—34. Many think themselves far removed from covetousness, whose hearts, notwithstanding, are overcharged with the cares of this life; and though not sordidly avaricious, evidently show their affections more set on things on earth, than the things in heaven. We have therefore,

1. An admonition against all inordinate anxiety about a worldly provision. Take no thought, &c. There is a thoughtfulness and care needful and commendable, Prov. xxvii. 23. Our families cannot be otherwise provided for, nor the duties of our station discharged: but the caution here given, is levelled against tormenting solicitude, and unbelieving distrust of God's providence, which is as dishonourable to him, as distressing to ourselves. Our life is in his hands, and whilst we are employing the appointed means in dependence upon his blessing, we must with satisfaction cast our care upon him, to give us sickness or health, comforts or crosses, want or abundance, as he pleases; and when we do so, we have his promise to assure us, we shall have just that which is good for us.

2. Christ enforces his admonition by several considerations, which, if we seriously thought upon, would ever furnish us with abundant arguments to silence all disquieting carefulness.

[1.] If God gives the greater blessings, will he withhold the less? Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment? If God hath freely given us these without our thought or care, and hitherto hath preserved them amidst innumerable dangers, can it be supposed he will suffer us to perish for lack of food or raiment?

[2.] Behold the fowls of the air, numerous and voracious as they are: without any care of theirs, by the Divine Providence a daily provision is made for them, though they sow not, nor reap, nor gather into barns. And if God thus provides for them, are ye not much better than they? more excellent in nature, and therefore, much more the objects of his care; can the heirs of heaven be famished, when the fowls of heaven are fed?

[3.] Unprofitable, as well as unnecessary, are all our anxious cares. Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature, or age? Will our solicitude add to our height, or will our thoughtfulness lengthen our lives a year, a month, a day, an hour beyond the boundary decreed? How vain and foolish then to disquiet ourselves about other things equally out of our power? We are called upon here to make a virtue of necessity, and submit quietly to the determinations of Providence.

[4.] To silence our carefulness about raiment, Christ points to the flowers, which were probably near him, and made the application more beautifully striking. Consider the lilies of the field, that grow without care or culture, without toil or labour; yet even Solomon, on his throne, adorned with the richest robes, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which is so worthless, fading, and transitory, which to-day is, in such beauty, and to-morrow is cast into the oven to burn, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith! Note, (1.) All our anxiety about worldly things arises from unbelief. (2.) It is the height of folly and vanity to be proud of fine clothes, when every flower of the field must far outshine us. (3.) Every object around us, if our minds be rightly disposed, will afford us arguments of faith, and quiet dependence on God's care.

[5.] Such anxiety is heathenish, and utterly unbecoming those who have the light of revelation. Gentiles indeed, who have no knowledge of a particular providence, may be concerned after these things, and imagine they must get them merely by their own care and labour; but it is a shame for Christians, who are better taught, not to show the excellency of their principles by the nobler practice of deadness to the world and confidence in God.

[6.] Our heavenly Father knoweth we have need of all these things; and therefore we may confidently expect the supply of every want. He hath a father's bowels to feel for us; we have a sure interest in him; he knows our wants, and, be they ever so many or great, he can abundantly relieve them. His care for us, makes our carefulness for ourselves needless.

3. Christ directs us to the proper object of our cares; Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness. Religion is our great business: to be a living member of Christ's church, is infinitely more our concern, than how our bodies shall be fed; and his righteousness, which is our title to the kingdom, is the robe we should be more solicitous to put on than any other raiment; and with this divine righteousness, internal purity must be sought with diligence, in the use of every means of grace: and, in the first place, counting all but dung and loss, compared with the great concerns of our souls, and the eternal world, which should in a measure, swallow up all other considerations. Indeed the trifles of time will sit light upon those who have the glories of eternity in view. Besides, this is the way to secure all the rest of our wants; for he who is able abundantly to supply them, is pleased to assure us, that then all these things shall be added unto us; they shall be thrown in, as over and above all the spiritual blessings. Oh! that we were but wise to know our true interests! we should find, by experience, nothing was ever lost by faith unfeigned, and diligent caring for the soul.

4. As the conclusion of the matter, we are, without solicitude about futurity, to cast our care upon God, who will care for us. Take no thought for the morrow; which doth not forbid prudent foresight, or enjoin an absolute disregard about our business or our families, but all perplexing anxiety, all disquieting fears about what may never happen, or, if it doth, may give us no such trouble as we apprehend; and all unbelieving distrust of God. Our business is to mind present duty, and leave events to God. The morrow shall take thought for the things of itself; it is folly to be disquieted about what may never come to pass. Who knows whether to-morrow belongs to time or to eternity? and if it return, He who supplied our wants to-day, will supply our wants to-morrow. Sufficient for the day is the evil thereof; we need not anticipate our troubles, or torment ourselves with imaginary ills: each day has sufficient, without borrowing to-morrow's burden to increase the load; and which not all our previous cares and fears will make the lighter. It is God's curse on the wicked world, that they are self-tormentors; whilst they who live by faith, may always rejoice in hope.

CHAP. VII.—anno domini, 30.

This chapter continues and concludes Christ's sermon on the mount. We have, 1. Some rules concerning censure and reproof, ver. 1—6. 2. Encouragements given us to pray to God for what we need, ver. 7—11. 3. The necessity of strictness in conversation urged upon us, ver. 12—14. 4. A caution given us to take heed of false prophets, ver. 15—20. 5. The conclusion of the sermon ver. 21—27. 6. The impression which Christ's doctrine made upon his hearers, ver. 28, 29.

1. JUDGE[a] not, that ye be not judged. 2. [b] For with what judgment ye judge ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete it shall be measured to you again. 3. [c] And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye? 4. [d] Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the * mote out of thine eye; and, behold, a † beam is in thine own eye? 5. Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye. 6. ¶ [e] Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

[a] Luke 6. 37. Is. 65. 5. Rom. 2. 1. & 14. 3, 4, 10, 13. 1 Cor. 4. 3—5. Jam. 4. 11, 12. & 2. 13. & 3. 1. Gal. 6. 1, 2.

[b] Judg. 1. 7. Ps. 18. 25, 26. & 41. 2. Mark 4. 24 Luke 6. 38. 2 Cor. 9. 6. Jam. 2. 13. Gen. 4. 7. Obad. 15. Eph. 6. 8. 2 Thes. 1. 6.

[c] Luke 6. 41. Lam. 3. 40. 2 Cor. 13. 5.

[d] Luke 6. 42. & 18. 11.

* Lesser sin.

† Greater sin.

[e] Prov. 9. 7, 8. & 23. 9. Phil. 3. 2. ch. 10. 11, 14. & 15. 26. Acts 13. 45—47. Heb. 10. 29. & 2. 3.

Verses 1—6. The proud and self-righteous are ever most censorious. Against such is this reproof levelled.

1. Our Lord forbids all rash judgment, unreasonable jealousies, evil surmisings, and rigid censures. Judge not, uncharitably, unmercifully, under a spirit of revenge or prejudice; decide not concerning a man's spiritual state, from some single act or circumstance, nor pretend to know his heart, much less to determine concerning his everlasting state; to his own master he standeth or falleth. This precept doth not forbid the judgment of the civil magistrate, nor our forming conclusions of others' state, as well as our own, agreeably to the word of God: for though our own judgment may be fallible, his must be according to truth.

The prohibition is enforced by a weighty reason; Judge not, that ye be not judged. Our charity and mercifulness to others will be the means of securing the like favourable judgment to ourselves; whilst a spirit of censoriousness will provoke the resentment and ill-will of others, and be returned generally in as liberal abuse: besides, what is infinitely more to be feared, God will give judgment without mercy to those who showed no mercy; and with rigour of severest justice, will call those to his bar who dared usurp his throne, and sit as self-authorised judges of their brethren.

2. He gives us some rules about reproof; not forbidding the kind jealousy of love, but condemning the magisterial rebukes of self-sufficient pride. Before we look at others' faults, we should well consider if there be not greater in ourselves. For how unreasonable and unjust would it be, with malignant eye to mark, aggravate, and with severity, condemn the infirmities and follies of others, the mote which is in their eye, whilst we extenuate, excuse, or justify what is far more culpable, the beam which is in our own? or with what face of hardened effrontery can we dare set up for reformers of them, whilst greater evils unredressed lie at our own door; This is the grossest hypocrisy, and such pretended zeal against sin but a greater abomination in God's sight, who trieth the heart. Before we presume to correct others, we should therefore reform the evils in ourselves, lest they should retort, Physician, heal thyself; and our admonition, though just in itself, be rejected with contempt.

3. Christ forbids not only uncharitable censures and magisterial rebukes, but imprudent and unseasonable reproofs. Give not that which is holy to dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine. Where men discover their profaneness and impiety, professedly infidel, or avowed enemies to the truths of God, who despise instruction, and are but more exasperated by admonition, there it would be folly, and abuse of things sacred, to persist in rebuking them, and we can only expect insult and harm to ourselves, without any profit to them or glory to God: but, whilst prudence is enjoined, we must take care not to make our caution an excuse for our cowardice; nor to think men swine till we have found them so; nor be afraid of any consequences, when duty calls us, even in the face of persecutors, to bear a faithful testimony to the truths of God.

f Gen 32. 26—28. Ps. 10. 17. & 34. 15. & 118. 5. & 145. 19. Prov. 15. 29. Jer. 29. 12, 13. Is. 30. 19. & 58. 9. & 65. 24. ch. 21. 22. Mark 11. 24. Luke 11. 9—13. & 18. 1—8. John 14. 13, 14. & 15. 7. & 16. 23, 24. Jam. 1. 5, 6. & 5. 16. 1 John 3. 22. & 5. 14. Dan. 2. 23. Prov. 8. 17. Ps. 50. 15. & 91. 15.

g Gen. 6. 5. & 8. 21. Eph. 2. 1, 2. Tit. 3. 3. ch. 15. 19. Jer. 17. 19.

h Luke 11. 13. & 18. 7, 8. Ps. 103. 13. Is. 49. 15. & 63. 7. Hos. 11. 8. Heb. 12. 10. John 3. 16. 1 John 3. 1. Rom. 8. 32—39. Exod. 34. 6, 7. Ps. 95. 3. Jer. 3. 4, 19. & 29. 12, 13. Ezek xx, xxxvi.

7. ¶ [f] Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: 8. For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. 9. Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone? 10. Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent? 11. If ye then, being [g] evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, [h] how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?

Verses 7—11. Prayer is the means appointed of God to obtain of him the supply of every want, spiritual and temporal; and therefore,

1. The command given is, Ask, seek, knock; implying the fervour, diligence, constancy, and importunity which must be used, if we would obtain the relief of our necessities; and a deep and humbling sense of our wants, and faith in God's promises, will engage us to do so; without which there can be no availing prayer.

2. A gracious promise is annexed. They who thus pray, shall surely speed: God will hear and answer them according to their various wants. Every petitioner, without respect of persons, that thus in faith draws near unto God, receives an answer of peace, finds acceptance and favour with him, hath the door of mercy opened, and is welcome to enter, and freely take out of God's fulness whatever blessings he needs. Note, They who refuse or neglect to ask, deserve to want. The prayerless soul will be left inexcusable.

3. As an engagement to pray with assurance of being heard, our Lord enforces his command by an argument drawn from the compassion of our earthly parents. Evil as we are by nature, scarce one can be found so unnatural as to be deaf to the cries of his own flesh and blood, much less, inhumanly to give his children things noxious, instead of the food they crave. If then, in such corrupted creatures as we are, such compassions and regards are found towards our offspring, much more will the Father of mercies graciously hear and grant the petitions of his dear children who wait upon him: his love, his power, are infinitely greater than ours: and therefore they shall want no manner of thing that is good. Their own requests perhaps may be sometimes improper, unnecessary, unreasonable; and these prayers he will best answer by kind denials; whilst all that his wisdom and goodness sees fit shall be given them, in such manner and measure as shall be most for their benefit and his own glory.

12. [i] Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets. 13. ¶ [k] Enter ye in at the strait gate: for [l] wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: 14. ‡ Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and [m] few there be that find it.

i Luke 6. 31. ch. 22. 39, 40. Rom. 13. 8—10. Gal. 5. 14, 22, 23. Tit. 3. 2. 1 Tim. 1. 5. Col. 3. 8—15. Eph. 4. 25—32. Jam. 2. 8. with Gen. 4. 7. Obad. 15. Eph. 6. 8.

k Ch. 18. 3, 4. Luke 13. 24. Rev. 21. 27. John 3. 3, 5. & 10. 9. & 14. 6. Luke 13. 3, 5. Ezek. 33. 11. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Is. 55. 7.

l Prov. 7. 26. 1 John 5. 19. Rev. 13. 3, 8.

Gen. 6 12. Acts 14. 16. 22. 14. Luke. 12. 32. & 13. 24.

‡ Or how.

m Deut. 4. 34. Ps. 147. 19, 20. ch. 20. 16. &

Verses 12—14. We have here,

1. The conclusion and sum of the foregoing commands; the golden rule, universally applicable in all cases. To do unto our neighbours as, according to reason and religion, we might expect they should do for us, if our situations were reversed: to do them no injury; to give them every assistance in our power; to deal with them in uprightness and integrity, without taking the least advantage of their ignorance or necessities. And this doctrine both the law and the prophets inculcate; and in this one word the commands of both, respecting our duty towards our neighbour, are summed up. The rule is short, and easy to be remembered: but how wide and difficult the practice!

2. Christ urges us all to diligence in securing eternal life, and points out the only way thereto; Strive to enter in at the strait gate. The gate is Christ, his blood and righteousness; it is strait, as it admits none of the trappings of pride and self-righteousness, and calls us to part from our most beloved sins, to deny ourselves, take up our cross and follow Christ. And as this will require much labour, prayer, and self-denial; Christ urges the necessity of striving to enter in:

[1.] Because of the ruin and danger which attend the ways of sin, in which the multitude walk unconcerned; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction. There no restraint withholds the unbridled appetite; there pleasure, riches, honour, spread their lure; there all may find the gratification of their darling passion, or are engaged so to hope by that wily tempter, who welcomes all the fairest promises of joy and happiness; and many there be which go in thereat, naturally disposed to follow the bent of their fallen minds, and walking every one in his own way. To swim therefore against the stream of inbred corruption, and the tide of custom too, is difficult; but let us remember that the end is destruction; that these paths lead down to hell; that, whether they be those of carelessness and neglect about the soul, open immorality, or self-righteous hypocrisy, all tend to eternal misery, and meet in the place of torment.

[2.] Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it. There we must stoop low, our pride be mortified, all self-dependence be renounced; there the restraints of God's law hedge up the way, and leave us the narrow path of holiness only to walk in; there our very nature must be changed, our inveterate evil habits subdued, our corruptions mortified; there we must expect to meet with many trials, afflictions, and temptations, from inbred evil and outward enemies; there every inch must be won with perpetual war against sin, earth, and hell; and every step must be taken with watchful care, since dangers and snares are at the right hand and at the left: no marvel then there be few that find it, comparatively few at least: a remnant, a little flock, according to the election of grace. When therefore the difficulties are so great, the diligence should be proportionable; and since there are but few saved, we should strive to be of that number, and the issue will repay our pains: eternal life will infinitely more than compensate for all the struggles of the way.

15. ¶ [n] Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. 16. [o] Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? 17. Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. 18. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. 19. [p] Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. 20. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.

n Deut. 13. 3. Jer. 23. 16. Mic. 3. 5. Zech. 13. 4. ch. 23. 14. & 24. 4, 5, 11, 24. 2 Cor. 11. 15. 2 Tim. 3. 3. Rom. 16. 17, 18. 2 Pet. 2. 1, 1 John 4. 1. Acts 20. 29, 30. Col. 2. 8. Eph. 5. 6.

o Luke 6. 43, 44. ver. 20—23. ch. 12. 33—35. & 3. 10. 1 John 4. 1—3. 2 Pet. 1. 1, 2. Jude 1—20. 2 Tim. 3. 1—9. 2 Cor. 11. 13, 15.

p Ch. 3. 10. Luke 3. 9. Acts 5. 38. Rev. 2. 16. John 15. 2, 6. Heb. 6. 8. 1 Tim. 1. 20. Ezek. xv. Is. 33. 14. 2 Thes. 1. 8, 9. Is. 3. 11.

Verses 15—20. False Christs and false prophets would shortly arise; and false teachers were already abundantly numerous. Against these the Lord therefore cautions his disciples, and sets down marks whereby they may be distinguished.

1. Our Lord describes them as wolves in sheep's clothing; such as the Pharisees and Scribes were, who, with exterior marks of sanctity and austerity in their manners and garb, were inwardly full of enmity against the doctrines of grace and true holiness, and in their spirit hypocritical, proud, and covetous. And probably our Lord hath respect to the false apostles, the Judaizing teachers, and all that should ever afterwards appear in his church, preaching the abominable doctrines of man's self-sufficiency, free-will to good, justification by works, and the like; grievous wolves, Acts xx. 29. whom gain, not godliness, Rom. xvi. 18. hath drawn into the ministry. Beware of them.

2. He lays down the rule by which we must prove all who pretend a mission from him. Ye shall know them by their fruits, just as easily as a tree is known. They who are evil, can no more preach the truth and live in it too, than a thorn can bear grapes. And, on the other hand, where the soul is right with God, there the fruits of truth and holiness naturally and necessarily are produced. Two ways the prophet may be known:—

[1.] By his life. Is his conduct exemplary, self-denying, humble, meek, zealous? doth the love of God, and of men's souls, appear to influence and actuate him in all his works and ways? at least in the general temper of his mind, and tendency of his conversation, is this manifested? these are good fruits of a good tree. But is he worldly-minded, proud, sensual, indolent, more willing to fleece than to feed the flock, rigid in exacting the wages, but unwilling to be employed in the work of the ministry, encouraging, instead of reproving sinners by his example, conforming to the ways of a wicked world, instead of being transformed in the spirit of his mind? these are evident proofs of the falsehood of such a prophet's pretensions.

[2.] By his doctrine; which seems chiefly intended here: for a false prophet may, with the veil of hypocrisy, cover his iniquities so as to appear righteous unto men. But are his doctrines according to truth, and drawn from the sacred fountain? doth he preach the dignity, or the desperate wickedness of the human nature, the freedom of man's will, or his utter impotence to every good thought, desire, or work? doth he declare the damnable nature of sin, the utter guilt of every man by nature and practice, and the wrath of God revealed from heaven against all unrighteousness, or encourage the false hopes of sinners by smooth prophecies, and soften the harsh terms of hell and damnation, that he may not offend the ear with such inharmonious sounds? doth he exalt the divine Redeemer, his person, his offices, his blood, his righteousness, or slightly pass over these glorious subjects, for dry ethics, and lectures on morality? doth he enforce religion as an experimental thing, as the work of God's Spirit in the heart, purifying the inner man, or doth he dwell on mere external forms and duties, as silent about Divine agency, as if he knew not whether there were any Holy Ghost? doth he offend sinners by the freedom of his rebukes, and the formal and self-righteous by his scrutinizing detection of their hypocrisy, or doth he study to please men, and, like the false prophets of old secure the good word of the deluded and misguided world? by these and the like fruits shall they be known. Try therefore the spirits, whether they be of God; for many false prophets are gone out into the world, 1 John iv. 1.

3. He declares the terrible end of these wolves in sheep's clothing. As the barren tree is only fit fuel for the flames, so are these marked for ruin; the axe of death shall shortly be laid to their root, and eternal ruin be their portion. Beware therefore of false prophets, lest, deluded by them, you partake of their plagues.

21. ¶ Not every one that saith unto me, [q] Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. 22. [r] Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? 23. And [s] then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity. 24. ¶ Therefore, [t] whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock: 25. [u] And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and [x] it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock. 26. And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened q Rom. 2. 10. Jam. 1. 22 Jer. 7. 4. Hos. 8. 2. Luke 6. 46—49. & 13. 25. ch. 5. 19. John 13. 17. & 15. 14. Ps. xv. & 24. 3, 4.

r Ch. 12 27. & 25. 119. Luke 13. 25, 26. Num. 24. 4. John 11. 51. 1 Cor. 13. 2.

s Luke 13. 27. ch. 25. 12, 41. Ps. 6. 8. & 1. 6. & 11. 115. & 5. 5. Hab. 1. 13. with Gal. 4. 9. 2 Tim. 2. 19.

t Ps. xv. & 24. 3—6. Rom. 2. 13. Jam. 1. 22. John 13. 17. & 15 14. ch. 12. 50. Luke 11. 28. 1 John 3. 7. Rev. 22. 14.

u Acts 14. 22. John 16. 33. Col. 1. 24. 2 Tim 3. 12.

x Ps. 34. 19. & 125. 1. 2. ch. 16. 18. 2 Tim. 2. 19 1 Pet. 1. 5, 23 Jude 1. 1 Cor. 3. 11.

unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: 27. [y] And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it. 28. [z] And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine: 29. For he taught them [a] as one having authority, and not as the scribes.

[y] Ch. 13. 18—22. & 11. 20—24. Job 8. 13. Luke 22. 47, 48. Heb. 10. 26—31. & 6. 4—8. 2 Pet. 2. 20—22. ch. 12. 43—45. & 21. 33—44.

[z] Ch. 13. 54. & 21. 23. Mark 1. 22. & 11. 28. Luke 4. 32 & 7. 16. & 20. 2. John 7. 46. Is. 48. 17. & 50. 4. Ps. 45. 2.

[a] Is. 50. 4. Deut. 15. 18. ch. 28. 18. John 7. 46. Eccl. 8. 4.

Verses 21—29. We have here the conclusion of this awakening discourse, and the deep impression it made on the hearers.

1. Our Lord shows that no profession of religion, destitute of the power of godliness, will stand a man in any stead at a judgment-day.

(1.) It is not saying, but doing, must prove our calling and election of God. Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, in boasting profession and noisy devotion, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, be enrolled as living members of his church, or be admitted as inheritors of his glory; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven, who truly believes on him whom God hath sent, takes him for his Lord and Master, not merely in word and tongue, but in deed and truth: obedient to his commands, following him in righteousness and true holiness, desirous to do his will on earth, as he hopes shortly to do his will in heaven. Reader is this character thine?

(2.) Many in the day of Christ will appear to have deluded themselves with false hopes, whose pleas will then be fearfully silenced. Many will say to me in that great day of judgment, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? Many of those who may have filled the highest stations of the church on earth, have been, to appearance, the most zealous preachers or public professors in it, yet proved no better than Balaam or Caiaphas: yea, and in thy name have cast out devils, as Judas and many others no doubt; and in thy name done many wonderful works? even working the most astonishing miracles: and yet Christ declares, Then will I profess unto them, I never knew you, never called or owned you for my servants; depart from me all ye that work iniquity. Notwithstanding all your pleas, your hearts have been false and faithless, and your professions utterly unsound: and therefore your portion must be to depart accursed with the devil and his angels. Learn hence these awful truths! (1.) That a man may be a professor, a minister, yea distinguished with gifts, and successful in his labours, and yet be finally cast away: may be the instrument of saving others and perish himself; may cast out devils from the hearts of others, and harbour them in his own. (2.) Names may impose upon men, but God searcheth the heart. There are secret sins to be found in many under the cloak of most glaring profession; and they shall receive greater damnation. (3.) In the day of judgment, terrible will be the disappointment of those who all their lives long were working, as they thought, for life, were esteemed as patterns of piety, and cried up as the excellent of the earth, and yet will be found not only to have deceived others, but to have deluded themselves, falling from the height of self-righteous hopes into the depths of endless despair, and from the gates of heaven, driven into the belly of hell. Let every man prove well his own work, and judge himself, that he may be found sincere and without offence at the day of Christ.

2. He enforces the truths he had delivered by an apposite parable of a wise and foolish builder, describing the different foundations they laid, and the different issue of their labours.

(1.) The wise builder, his labours and success are described. 1. His character is given: He heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them. Herein is seen the mind that hath wisdom. He receives the truth in the love of it, obeys the precepts, is influenced by the gospel as a living principle of action, and seeks conformity in heart and life to his divine Lord and Master. 2. He builds upon a rock, on Jesus Christ, the only sure and safe foundation, depending on his blood and righteousness alone, for pardon and acceptance; and under the teachings of his word and Spirit, and the supports of his grace, the glorious superstructure rises of righteousness and true holiness. As he builds for eternity, he is zealous in labouring to make his calling and election sure, and in every good word and work seeks to approve himself to the great Master. 3. His work stands against every storm. He may expect, and will meet with many a severe blast: the rain of temptation, the floods of corruption within, the overflowings of ungodliness without, the wind of persecution, all may unite their fury against him, to move him from his steadfastness, to shake his confidence in Christ, to discourage or seduce him from the good ways of the Lord; but in vain: the gates of hell can never prevail against the weakest believer. He shall be made to stand in the day of evil; in the hour of death he shall be supported; his work shall stand the fiery trial; and, in the day of judgment, he shall be approved and rewarded by the Lord of life and glory.

(2.) The foolish builder and his sad end are set forth for our warning. 1. His character is, that He heareth these sayings of Christ, and doeth them not. He makes profession of religion, and attends upon the ordinances, but goes no farther; the doctrines of the gospel have no deep effect upon his heart, nor a universal and abiding influence on his conduct. 2. He builds upon the sand, leaving Christ, to rest upon something in himself, and looking for acceptance, in whole or in part, on account of some external things wherein he differs from others, whether moral duties, alms, honesty, and the like; or on the form of godliness, baptism, prayers, frequenting the house and table of the Lord, &c. or if he hath a speculative knowledge of the truth, and knows the vanity of these things, he rests on that knowledge without any experimental possession of the blessings of the gospel, and then it profiteth him nothing; or, if his notions are yet more spiritualized, he makes his inward feelings, or supposed gifts and graces, his confidence, depending on what he calls the Christ within, which is but a more refined self-righteousness, and a more subtle delusion: and therefore, when the time of trial comes, his house will fall, and crush him under its ruins. If persecution arises for the word's sake, such are quickly offended; in times of affliction and trouble, their hopes cannot support and comfort them, and in death they utterly fail; at least, if the hypocrite's hopes stand out to the last, they die with him; destruction and despair from that moment seize him, and too late he discovers the fatal mistake, when it is irremediable, and his eternal state is determined.

3. Great was the impression made by this discourse of our Lord on his audience: they were as men thunderstruck; astonished with the uncommon power, weight, and energy which attended his preaching. They admired the dignity with which he spoke, addressing them in his own name, as one invested with authority: and his sentiments were new as well as weighty; utterly unlike the flat and spiritless comments of the Scribes, who servilely adhered to the traditions and decisions of their rabbins. And yet, alas! the impressions soon wore off from many, from the most of them. So easy, so common is it to hear with admiration, the eloquent or powerful preachers of his gospel; to feel a transient glow, and, notwithstanding, to continue in ignorance and unbelief, under the power of sin, and to perish everlastingly.

CHAP. VIII.—ANNO DOMINI, 31.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's cleansing of a leper, ver. 1—4. 2. His curing a palsy and fever, ver. 5—18. 3. His commun- ing with two that had a mind to follow him, ver. 19—22. 4. His controlling of the tempest, ver. 23—27. 5. His casting out devils, ver. 28—34.

1. WHEN he was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed him. 2. [a] And, behold, there came a leper and worshipped him, saying, Lord, [b] if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. 3. [c] And Jesus put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will; be thou clean. And immediately his leprosy was cleansed. 4. And Jesus saith unto him, [d] See thou tell no man; but go thy way, [e] shew thyself to the priest, and offer the gift that Moses commanded, [f] for a testimony unto them.

a Mark 1. 40. Luke 5. 12. Lev. 13. 46. Num. 5. 2, 3. 2 Kin. 5. 27.
b Mark 9. 24. ch. 6 30. & 14. 31.
c Mark 1. 41, 42. Luke 5. 13. Exod. 15. 26. ch. 11. 4, 5. d Ch. 9. 30. & 12. 16. & 16. 20. & 17. 9. with ch. 12. 13—19. Is. 42. 2. John 5. 41. & 7. 18. & 8. 50.
e Lev. xiii, xiv. Mark 1. 43, 44. Luke 5. 14.
f 2 Kin. 5. 7, 8. ch. 5. 17. Mark 6. 11. John 10. 37.

Verses 1—4. Struck with the power of his word, the multitude who had heard Christ preach, followed him when he came down from the mount; and, lo! a fresh occasion offers to raise their admiration, and confirm their faith in him as a teacher sent from God: for they who follow on to know the Lord, shall see fresh manifestations of his power, grace, and glory, every step they advance. We have,

1. A miserable leper's address to our Lord. The leprosy was esteemed by the Jews a disease immediately sent from God, incurable by human art, 2 Kings v. 7. so defiling, as to exclude the unhappy object not only from the sanctuary, but, for the most part, from human converse and society; a lively figure of the fallen sinner, covered with guilt, full of corruption, excluded from God's presence, cut off from the communion of the saints, incurable by any human means, himself unclean, and communicating defilement to all around him. Yet, deplorable as the case appears, blessed be God, it is not desperate; there is balm in Gilead, and a Physician there. Behold, there came a leper, who had himself perhaps heard our Lord preach, or drawn by the fame of his wondrous works, and worshipped him; either with deepest respect as a prophet, or endued with the knowledge of his divine character, and paying him due adoration; saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. He doubted not his power and all-sufficiency, and therefore cast himself on his mercy for a cure. And herein is the emblem of the awakened sinner, brought to a sight of his native misery. (1.) He casts himself down at the feet of Jesus in prayer, laying his guilty and polluted soul before him. (2.) He looks up to him as able to save to the uttermost; nor dares distrust, that his blood and righteousness can justify the most guilty, and his grace renew the vilest heart: but often he hesitates on the view of his own unworthiness, and fears whether the Lord will have respect to one so utterly unworthy. (3.) However, as he sees no hope any where else, he presents his desperate case, assured he must perish unless the Lord hath respect to him. But none ever yet perished at the feet of Jesus: for,

2. Jesus put forth his hand and touched him, saying, I will; be thou clean; and immediately his leprosy was cleansed. Such power accompanied his word and touch, as instantly effected the cure. And with like words of grace doth Jesus speak to every poor sinner who applies to him. His answer is ever, I will; as ready as able to pardon and save the miserable and the desperate, who come to him; be thou clean; thy guilt is cancelled, thy soul is delivered from the bondage of corruption; my blood, my grace, are sufficient for thee, and freely extended to thee: and, by faith, his word is realized to the soul; the scales drop off, guilt no more terrifies the conscience, nor hath corruption any longer dominion over the heart.

3. Our Lord charges him not to divulge the means of his cure; but to go immediately to the priests, obtain their acknowledgment of his being healed, and offer the sacrifices prescribed. And this he did for the man's sake, lest, out of envy, the priests should refuse to pronounce him clean; and that his offering might be a testimony of the fact to all, when it should be more publicly known how the cure was wrought; as well as to cut off occasion from those who desired to represent our Lord as a breaker of Moses' laws, and thereby to prejudice the people against him. Note, Every soul cleansed by grace, will not fail to offer the grateful sacrifice not only of his lips, but of his heart, to God; and will seek to approve himself, to his Redeemer's glory, a living testimony of his power and grace.

5. ¶ [g] And when Jesus was entered into Capernaum, there came unto him a [h] centurion, beseeching him, 6. And saying, Lord, [i] my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy, grievously tormented. 7. And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him. 8. The centurion answered and said, Lord, [k] I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof: [l] but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed. 9. For * I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me: and I say to this man, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it. 10. When Jesus heard it, [m] he marvelled, and said to them that followed, Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel. 11. And I say unto you, [n] That many shall come from the east and west, and shall † sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven: 12. [o] But the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. 13. And Jesus said unto the centurion, [p] Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the self-same hour.

g Luke 7. 1—10. Gen. 49. 10. Is. 11. 10. & 60. 3, 8.
h A captain of a hundred soldiers. Ch. 27. 54. Acts x. He sent to Christ first by the Jews, and then by his friends. Luke vii. i Job 31. 13. Rom. 12. 15, 16. Col. 4. 1.
k Gen. 32. 10. Luke 15. 19, 21. ch. 15. 27. l Ps. 107. 20. John 6. 63. Ps. 33. 9. Eccl. 8. 4.
* If I, a servant, have such power over men, what power must God-man have over diseases.
m Ch. 9. 2. & 15. 28. with John 3. 4, 10. ch. 11. 24.
n Gen. 22. 17. & 49. 10. & 28. 14. Is. 2. 2, 3. & 11. 10. & 42. 6. & 43. 6. & 49. 6, 12. & 25. 6. & liv, lx. Zech. 2. 11. & 8. 22, 23. Mal. 1. 11. ch. 24. 31. Luke 13. 29. Acts x—xix. Eph. 3. 6, 8.
† A metaphor taken from banquets; for they that sit down together are fellows in the banquet.—Beza o Ch. 3. 10, 11. & 13. 42, 50. & 21. 43. & 22. 7, 13. & 24. 51. & 25. 30. & 23. 38, 39. Rom. 11. 12, 15. Luke 13. 28—30. p Mark 9. 26. John 4. 50. ch. 15. 28.

Verses 5—13. Capernaum was the place where the Lord had fixed his abode, and whither he returned after his journey through Galilee; and there we are told,

1. The application made to him by a Roman centurion, the captain of a troop consisting of a hundred men. A soldier, from whom religion is least expected; but there are some faithful in all professions; a man of rank; few of whom were numbered among the followers of Jesus: not many such are called; blessed be God, it is not said not any: a Gentile too, and for a Gentile; for Christ came a light to lighten the Gentiles, as well as to be the glory of his people Israel. After sending messengers to beg the help of Jesus, Luke vii. 2. he came himself, an humble supplicant on the behalf of his sick servant, afflicted with the palsy, and grievously tormented, commending his miserable case to the compassion of Jesus. And herein he showed, (1.) His high respect for the Lord Jesus, and his dependence upon him. (2.)

His great humanity towards his sick servant: not turning him out of doors because unable to work, but tenderly taking care of him, and seeking every means for his relief; a noble example! and which should also be an encouragement to servants to discharge their station with fidelity and honesty, as this will naturally endear them to their masters, see Luke vii. 2.

2. The answer Christ gave to his request: I will come and heal him. Though a poor servant, diseased, a Gentile also, Jesus is no respecter of persons; and his ministers herein must resemble him, ready on the first application to visit the meanest of their flock.

3. The deep humility and distinguished faith expressed by the centurion. Lord I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof; so lowly were the thoughts he entertained of himself, so high his estimation of the dignity of the Redeemer! A gracious soul ever acknowledges himself thus less than the least of all God's mercies. Nor does he think Christ's presence necessary; so full was his confidence in the power of Jesus, that he is assured a single word will be sufficient to effect the cure; the most inveterate disease being entirely under the command of Jesus, and coming and going at his bidding! for if he, who was but an inferior officer, met with such ready obedience from his soldiers and servants, much more would a word from him, who had no superior, be obeyed. Learn hence, (1.) The character of a good servant; he obeys his master without answering again or hesitating. (2.) The nature of diseases: they are Christ's servants; they come and go only as he orders, and execute that commission he gives them. (3.) The duty of every Christian; to be obedient in all things, to do what Jesus pleases to command, and cheerfully to suffer what he ordains.

4. The high approbation of the centurion expressed by our Lord on this occasion. When Jesus heard it he marvelled; not that he was surprised as with an unexpected thing, since this faith was his own gift; but he expressed himself as admiring what was so excellent and uncommon, that it might be more remarked by others, saying to his followers, Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel; none of that generation had given such proofs of faith as this Gentile. Note, The attainments of those who have enjoyed less means than others, will condemn the unprofitableness, and rise up in judgment against the slothfulness and carelessness of such as, blessed with every advantage for their souls, have abused or neglected them.

5. Christ takes occasion, from hence to foretell the calling of the Gentiles, and the rejection of the Jews for their unbelief. Though the Jews, prejudiced to their nation, could not bear the thoughts that the heathen should share in the common salvation, our Lord assures them, that from all lands, multitudes should be gathered unto him, and admitted to the same privileges, and have a place in the same kingdom as the most distinguished patriarchs; whilst, to their great astonishment, they who boasted themselves as, exclusive of all others, the children of the kingdom; will, so far from having any part or lot in it, be cast into outer darkness, as guests excluded from the bridal feast and thrust out; where shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, the expressive signs of most poignant anguish, which will especially be the case with damned souls in the place of torment. Note, (1.) We shall see many in the kingdom of heaven whom we least expected to find there, and multitudes cast out of whom we had the most confident expectations. (2.) It will profit a man nothing at the day of judgment, to have been a professed member of Christ's kingdom and a nominal child of God, if he is not possessed of the Spirit of adoption, and hath not approved his fidelity as a loyal subject. (3.) The torments of hell should be often remembered, to quicken us with greater diligence in fleeing from the wrath to come.

6. The servant is cured. Jesus said unto the centurion, Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. With a double grace the favour is conferred; his faith approved, whilst his request is granted: for instantly the cure was wrought: His servant was healed in the self-same hour. He that said, Let there be light, and there was light, need but say, and it is done in every other case. What confidence then should we repose in this almighty Saviour, and never, in our deepest afflictions, distrust his power and love!

14. ¶ [q] And when Jesus was come into Peter's house, he saw his wife's mother laid, and sick of a fever. 15. And [r] he touched her hand, and the fever left her: and [s] she arose, and ministered unto them. 16. ¶ [t] When the even was come, they brought unto him many that were possessed with devils: and he cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick: 17. That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, [u] Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses.

[q] Mark 1. 29. Luke 4. 38. 1 Cor. 9. 5.
[r] Exod. 15. 26. Ps. 107. 20.
[s] Ch. 9. 6. John 5. 8, 9. Acts 3. 7, 8.
[t] Mark 1. 25, 32—34. Luke 4. 40, 41. Ps. 107. 20. Acts 10. 38. ch. 4. 23, 24. & 11. 5. Gen. 3. 15. Exod. 15. 26.
[u] Is. 53. 4. 1 Pet. 2. 24. John 1. 29.

Verses 14—17. The great Physician is continually manifesting his healing power. We have,

1. Another cure wrought by him on Peter's wife's mother, who lay ill of a fever in Peter's house. He was married we find, in opposition to the Popish celibacy. His care of his aged relations bespoke his gracious spirit. Jesus, who will never fail to repay the entertainment given him in our houses, or in our hearts, by a touch rebuked the disorder, and instantly every symptom vanished, and her strength was perfectly restored, so that she was able to wait upon him and the guests, as an evidence of her cure, and a testimony of her gratitude. Note, They whom Christ heals, are bound to employ the strength and health he gives in his blessed service.

2. At even, it being a sabbath-day, see Mark ii. 11. and their days being reckoned from one sunsetting to the other, the people thronged the door with their sick, and those possessed of devils, Satan being at that time permitted to exercise uncommon dominion over men's bodies, that the power of Jesus might more eminently appear. But whatever the diseases were, or however strong the possession of these unclean spirits, one word of Jesus effectually drove them out, and healed every disease.

3. The fulfilment of the Scripture herein is observed; for the prophecy, Isa. liii. 4. not only includes Christ's suffering the punishment due to our sins, 1 Pet. ii. 24. but also his sympathizing tenderness towards us under the diseases that are the fruits of sin, and his gracious power exerted to deliver us from them.

18. ¶ Now, when Jesus saw [x] great multitudes about him, he gave commandment to depart unto the other side. 19. [y] And a certain scribe came, and said unto him, Master I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest. 20. And Jesus saith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; [z] but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head. 21. And another of his disciples said unto him, Lord, [a] suffer me first to go and bury my father. 22. But Jesus said unto him, [b] Follow me; and let the [c] dead bury their dead.

[x] Mark 1. 33, 38. Is. 42. 2. John 5. 41. & 7. 18. & 8. 50. ch. 14. 2. & 15. 39. Gen. 49. 10.
[y] Luke 9. 57—61. ch. 13. 20—22. John 6. 26. 1 Tim. 6. 5.
[z] Ps. 22. 6. & 40. 17. & 69. 29. & 109. 22.
[a] Luke 9. 59. Hag. 1. 2. Lev. 21. 11, 12. Num. 5. 6, 7. with 1 Kin. 19. 20. ch. 4. 22. & 19. 29.
[b] Luke 9. 60. 2 Tim. 4. 2. 1 Cor. 15. 10.
[c] Luke 15. 32. Eph. 2. 1. 1 Tim. 5. 6. Lev. 21. 10—12. Num. 6. 6, 7.

Verses 18—22. Great multitudes being some time after, see Mark iv. 35. collected together, more from curiosity or secular views, it is probable, than desirous of his divine instructions, our Lord commanded his disciples to remove to the other side of the lake, to avoid the crowd, to enjoy some needful retirement, to prove their obedience, or to spread the gospel in other places, whither those who were hearty in his cause would follow him, and the rest give it up. Hereupon we are informed of a conversation which passed with two persons who seemed desirous to join him.

1. One of them was a scribe, who seemed to express great forwardness, zeal, and resolution to follow Christ wherever he went; but his warmth soon cooled, when he understood that he must expect none of those worldly advantages with which he flattered himself, from being an apostle of Jesus; since, instead of earthly grandeur and the conveniences of life, the Messiah, the Son of man, was more destitute even than the birds or foxes, and had not a place of his own to repose his weary head, or refresh himself with the sleep he now wanted after his toils. Note, (1.) Sudden starts of zeal, and hasty resolutions, are far from being the best evidences of faithful adherence to Christ. (2.) Many are willing to follow Christ if they get by him, who quickly cool in their ardour, when their worldly interest, character, or ease must be denied for his sake. (3.) The poverty of the Lord Jesus, and his wants, should teach us in every state therewith to be content.

2. Another man who had professed himself a disciple, and might be perhaps an appointed evangelist, wanted at this time to be excused from attending his Master. His plea was plausible: his father was either aged and sick, and he desired to stay with him till he should have discharged the last offices to him; or rather he was now dead, and wished to wait upon him to his grave before he went with Jesus; but Christ will not admit the excuse; he must leave all, and come; there were enough dead in trespasses and sins, who might take care of the corpse and the funeral, whilst a more urgent and noble employment called for his service, even to follow Jesus and preach the gospel. Note, (1.) Worldly engagements, even about necessary things in our families, are apt to prove a great hinderance to our following Christ. (2.) They who want an excuse for declining duty, will easily find it. (3.) There are times when God's service may demand our attendance, and engage us to leave father, mother, house, and all; and he is not worthy of Christ who can set any thing in competition with him.

23. ¶ [d] And when he was entered into a ship, his disciples followed him. 24. [e] And, behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, insomuch that the ship was covered with the waves: but he was [f] asleep. 25. And his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying, [g] Lord, save us: we perish. 26. And he saith unto them, [h] Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith? Then he arose, and [i] rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm. 27. But the men marvelled, saying, [k] What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him!

d Mark 4. 36—41. Luke 8. 22—25.
e Mark 4. 37. Luke 8. 22, 23. Is. 54 11.
f 1 Sam. 23. 26. John 21. 14. 15. Ps. 44. 22, 23.
g 2 Chr. 14. 11. & 20. 12. Ps. 6. 3, 4. & 69. 1, 2, 13, 14.
h Ch. 6. 30. & 14. 3. Mark 5. 36. Is. 41. 10—16. & 43. 1, 2. Phil. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 7.
i Is. 50. 2. Ps. 104. 7. & 65. 7. & 102. 13—19. Nah. 1. 4. see ver. 27.
k Luke 8. 25. Ps. 89. 9. & 65. 7. & 107. 29.

Verses 23—27. Christ having issued his orders to cross the lake, his chosen disciples immediately obeyed and launched forth; for no dangers or difficulties will deter those from following Jesus, who know the blessedness of his service. Since their master was with them, they counted, no doubt, they were perfectly safe; but, for the trial of their faith, and the manifestation of his glory, we find them plunged into the greatest danger and distress.

1. No sooner were they got to sea, than a violent hurricane overtook them. The waves, like mountains rolled, broke over them with dreadful roar; and their boat filled almost with water, was ready instantly to founder in the deep; whilst Jesus, as if unconcerned and unacquainted with the danger, wearied with his labours, sweetly slept. Note, (1.) They who follow Christ will meet with many a storm. (2.) Christ often seems to disregard his people when their dangers seem most imminent. (3.) The temptations permitted to overtake the faithful, are designed not to harm them, but to exercise, strengthen, and brighten their graces.

2. With deep distress the affrighted disciples ran to their Lord, and with their cries awoke him, saying, Lord, save us, we perish; their case was desperate if he did not immediately interpose. Note, (1.) Awakened consciences feel their perilous condition, and see their inevitable destruction without divine grace and help. (2.) Prayer will be then fervent and importunate, when the deep sensibility of danger raises the cry. (3.) They who come to Jesus must exercise faith in his sufficiency to save, though utterly despairing of help in themselves. (4.) Even doubts and fears will sometimes mingle with the prayer of faith.

3. Jesus with calmness and majestic dignity arose, rebukes their fears, then bids the storm be still, and suddenly the foaming billows subside, the winds are hushed, the troubled waters now are smooth, and not a breath of air dimples the polished surface. Note, (1.) In the stormy seasons of temptation, many a fear distresses the faithful heart. (2.) Those may have true faith who have but little faith. (3.) The weakness of our faith, and the prevalence of our fears deserve rebuke, as they reflect dishonour upon the faithfulness, power, and grace of Jesus; wherefore are ye fearful? (4.) Though the storm of temptation be never so violent, no sinner that cleaves to Jesus shall ever perish. (5.) Where the distresses of the soul have been peculiarly deep, and the trials uncommonly severe, there usually the strongest consolations, and the most delightful sensations follow, of joy and peace in believing.

4. The effect produced by the miracle was, the astonishment of the mariners or disciples who were in the ship, or of both. Never was such an amazing change known before: and this naturally leads them to express their admiration of this wonderful person, whom even winds and waves obeyed. Note, They who have experienced the power of a Saviour's grace, in circumstances where every prospect seemed covered with darkness and despair, cannot but wonder and adore.

28. ¶ [l] And when he was come to the other side, into the country of the Gergesenes, there met him [m] two possessed with devils, coming out of the * tombs, exceeding fierce, so that no man might pass by that way. 29. And, behold, they cried out, saying, [n] What have we to do with thee, Jesus thou son of God? art thou come hither to torment us before the time? 30. And there was a good way off from them [o] an herd of many swine feeding. 31. [p] So the devils besought him, saying, If thou cast us out, suffer us to go away into the herd of swine. 32. And he said unto them, [q] Go. And when they were come out, l Mark 5. 1—20. Luke 8. 26—40. ch. 18. 11—13. Acts 10. 38. Is. 63. 1.

m One of them especially. Mark v. Luke 8. 27.
* The tombs were often caves dug out of the rocks; and robbers often lurked in them. — Macknight.
n Luke 8. 28. Mark 5. 7, 8. 2 Cor. 6. 14. 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude 6. Mark 1. 24, 25. Acts 16. 17, 18.
o Mark 5. 11. Lev. 11. 7. Deut. 14. 8. Is. 65. 4. & 66. 3.
p Rev. 12. 12. & 20. 1, 2. Job 1. 11. & 2. 5. Phil. 2. 10.
q 1 Kin. 22. 22. Job 1. 12. & 2. 6. Rev. 20. 7.

they went into the herd * of swine: and, behold, the whole herd of swine ran violently down a steep place into the sea, and perished in the waters. 33. [r] And they that kept them fled, and went their ways into the city, and told every thing, and what was befallen to the possessed of the devils. 34. And, behold, the whole city came out to meet Jesus: and when they saw him, they [s] besought him that he would depart out of their coasts.

* Christ could not have encouraged the notion of real possessions more than by his conduct on this occasion; and it is highly probable that this extraordinary occurrence was permitted chiefly to prove the reality of these possessions.—Doddridge.

r Mark 5. 14—16. Luke 8. 34—36.

s Luke 8. 37. Mark 5. 17. 1 Kin. 17. 18. Deut. 5. 25. Luke 5 8. Gen. 25. 34. Acts 16. 39. with ver. 29.

Verses 28—34. Continued miracles of mercy mark every step of the divine Redeemer.

The country of the Gergesenes here mentioned, bordered on the side of the lake which they had crossed; and they were no sooner arrived, than a fresh occasion offers to display the power and grace of Jesus.

1. Two miserable objects met him, possessed of devils, coming out of the tombs, the place where they took up their residence: driven thither by the wicked spirits who actuated them, to make their abode the more dreary and dismal, or to confirm the notion of spirits haunting these melancholy places, or by solitude to increase their ferocity, and render them more mischievous, for they were exceeding fierce, so that no man durst pass that way for fear of them. Note, When anger, malice, and revenge dwell in the bosom, there Satan's power reigns, and men then turn worse than savages to their kind.

2. The devils address the Lord as trembling at his presence, and fearful of being dispossessed. What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God? They well knew his power and Godhead, and their hopeless state: he never came to be a Saviour unto them, but to be their destroyer; and all their desire is, that he would let them alone, at least in the heathen world, if he drove them from Judea, and not come thither to torment them before the time. Torment eternal they expected: they were persuaded he would be their terrible Judge, and they ask only a momentary respite before the last and dreadful day, when their misery will be complete. Note, (1.) The devils know and tremble. (2.) They who say to Jesus and his servants, What have we to do with thee? depart from us; and reject the counsel of God against their own souls, must perish with the fiends of darkness.

3. Being unable to keep possession of the bodies of men, they desire to enter into a herd of swine that fed there; for even over these they could have no power without divine permission; and this they besought even from their innate pleasure in mischief, or rather from a crafty design to make Christ an unwelcome guest in that country; and Jesus, from whom none of their wiles could be hid, permitted it; perhaps, because these swine belonged to the Jews, who kept them for food, in defiance of God's laws, or, for covetousness, to make merchandise of them; and he would thus punish their owners; or he designed thereby to manifest his own divine power, to prove the reality of the miracle, and confound the Sadducean doctrine, which denied the existence of spirits good or evil. No sooner had these fiends obtained their request, than they flew, as to their prey, and all the herd of swine madly rushed down a precipice into the sea, and were choked; to the great terror of those that kept them, who fled, and filled the city and country with the report. And so grieved were they at their loss, and affrighted with the apprehensions of greater judgments, that, instead of adoring him for the miracle he had wrought on the two possessed persons, or welcoming him to their country, they besought him to depart, like many other worldlings, who love their swine better than their souls. We may observe here, (1.) The restraint laid upon these spirits of wickedness: they cannot touch a swine without permission; and however malignant and fierce the devil is, Jesus holds his chain, and in all his temptations saith, Hitherto mayest thou go, and no farther. (2.) Where Satan rules in the children of disobedience, he fails not to drive them into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which necessarily drown both body and soul in perdition. (3.) By nothing doth the god of this world hold firmer possession of men's hearts against Christ, than by suggesting the losses and crosses to which his service may expose them, and bewitching them with the love of gain in preference to the love of God.

CHAP. IX.—ANNO DOMINI, 31.

We have in this chapter remarkable instances of the power and pity of the Lord Jesus, sufficient to convince us that he is both able to save to the uttermost all that come to God by him, and as willing as he is able. His power and pity appear here in the good offices he did, 1. To the bodies of people: in curing the palsy, ver. 2—8. Raising to life the ruler's daughter, and healing the bloody issue, ver. 18—26. Giving sight to two blind men, ver. 27—31. Casting the devil out of one possessed, ver. 32—34. and healing all manner of sickness, ver. 35. 2. To the souls of people: in forgiving sins, ver. 2. Calling Matthew, and conversing freely with publicans and sinners, ver. 9—13. Considering the frame of his disciples with reference to the duty of fasting, ver. 14—17. Preaching the gospel, and in compassion to the multitude, providing preachers for them, ver. 35—38.

1. AND he entered into a ship, and [a] passed over, and came into his [b] own city. 2. [c] And behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed: and Jesus, seeing their faith, said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, [d] be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee. 3. And, behold, certain of the scribes said within themselves, [e] This man blasphemeth. 4. And Jesus, [f] knowing their thoughts, said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts? 5. For whether is easier to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee: or to say, Arise, and walk? 6. But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power [g] on earth to forgive sins, (then saith he to the sick of the palsy,) [h] Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house. 7. And he arose, and departed to his house. 8. [i] But when the multitude saw it, they marvelled, and glorified God, which had given such power unto men.

a Ch. 7. 6. Ps. 81. 11, 12. Rev. 22. H. Ezek. 3. 27. Dan. 12. 10.

b Ch. 2. 23. Luke 2. 39, 51. & 4. 16—29. or rather ch. 4. 13.

c Mark 2. 1—12. Luke 5. 18—26.

d Ps 32. 1, 2. Is. 40. 1, 2. & 43. 25. & 44. 22. Rom. 5. 11. Eph. 1. 7. Col. 1. 14. Luke 7. 48. Lam. 3. 39.

e Luke 5. 21. Mark 2. 7. Job 14. 4. Is. 43. 25. & 44. 22. Mic. 7. 18.

f Ps. 139 2. ch. 12. 15. 25. & 16. 7. 8. Mark 8. 16, 17. Luke 6. 8. & 9. 47. & 11. 17. John 2. 24, 25. & 6. 61, 64. & 13. 11. & 16. 19, 30. & 18. 4. & 21. 17. Heb. 4. 12, 13. Rev. 2. 23.

g Luke 7. 48. with John 17. 2. Acts 5, 31. & 7. 60.

h Mark 2. 11, 12. Luke5. 24, 25. & 13. 11—13. John 5. 8—10.

i Luke 5. 26 Mark 2. 12. Luke 7. 16. Acts 3. 11, 12. Ps. 103. 1—4.

Verses 1—8. Jesus will not abide where he is an unwelcome guest; but wo to those who bid him depart, for nothing but wrath and misery are left behind him. Leaving the country of the Gergesenes, he returned to Capernaum, the usual place of his residence, where we find him curing a poor paralytic: for his work was ever to be doing good.

1. His friends brought him to Jesus, being unable himself to stand or walk: they had compassion for their brother, and counted no pains too great to obtain his cure, and they were persuaded the Lord both could and would relieve him from his misery. Note, Those of our dear friends and relatives, who are themselves benumbed in spirit as with the palsy, and cannot come to Christ, we must carry in the arms of prayer and love, and spread their case before him; perhaps in so doing we may save a soul from death.

2. Christ kindly received them: seeing their faith, either of those who brought him, or of the sick man also, and to revive the heart of the poor afflicted patient, more distressed probably by his sins than his sufferings, Jesus saith, Son, be of good cheer, thy sins be forgiven thee. Note, (1.) Sin is the bitterest of all our burdens; the sting of sickness and death itself, is taken out when our iniquity is pardoned. (2.) They who come to Christ are called upon to be of good cheer: no poor beggar ever went from his door with a denial. (3.) God sometimes severely afflicts his dearest children; they must not question their adoption because of their sufferings, but should rather conclude, that God then dealeth with them as sons, Heb. xii. 5.

3. The scribes, who were the doctors of the law, and expounded it to the people, highly offended with what Jesus had said, though they did not speak their sentiments, yet in their hearts regarded him as a blasphemer, for presuming by his own authority to forgive sins, which is the prerogative of God alone; and contains a strong argument for his divinity, in which light these men evidently regarded his declaration. Note, Many among us are like these scribes; though they will not say it is blasphemy in Jesus to pardon our sins, they are ready to brand those as blasphemers, who say they have the pardon Jesus pronounces.

4. To give them a proof of his divinity, and confute their vain imaginations, Jesus lets them know he perceived their thoughts. Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts? censuring him as a blasphemer; for whether is easier to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee, or to say, Arise and walk? He that by his own power could effect the one, evidently proved he had a right to pronounce the other. Note, Our hearts are naked and open before the Lord; and he observes and is displeased at every evil thought which rises or lodges there.

5. He demonstrates the power he had to forgive sin, by removing that disease which was the punishment of it, and bids the paralytic arise before them all; and, as a proof of his health and strength being perfectly restored, to take up that bed on which as a cripple he lay, and go unto his house. And, lo! to the astonishment of the multitude, who glorified God for so great a miracle, and, to the confusion of these murmurers, the man instantly arose, took up his bed, and departed, cured of every infirmity. Note, (1.) Though we have no strength of ourselves to help ourselves, when Jesus speaks to the paralytic soul, power accompanies his word, and enables us for that which he commands. (2.) The mercies shown to others demand our praises; and for every good gift bestowed on the sons of men, God is to be glorified.

9. ¶ [k] And as Jesus passed forth from thence, he saw a man, named Matthew, [l] sitting at the receipt of custom: and he saith unto him, [m] Follow me. And he arose, and followed him. 10. ¶ And it came to pass, as Jesus sat at meat in the house, behold, many [n] publicans and [o] sinners came and sat down with him and his disciples. 11. And when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto his disciples, [p] Why eateth your Master with publicans and sinners? 12. But when Jesus heard that, he said unto them, [q] They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. 13. But go ye and learn what that meaneth, [r] I will have mercy, and not sacrifice: for I am not come to [s] call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

k Mark 2. 14—28. Luke 5. 27—39.
l 1 Cor. 6. 11. 1 Tim. 1. 13. ch. 4. 18—22.
m Gal. 1. 16. 1 Kin. 19. 19—21. n See ch. 5. 46, 47.
o Notorious sinners. Gen 13. 13. Num. 16. 38. John 9. 31. 1 Tim. 1. 9, 13, 15, 16.
p Luke 15. 1, 2. & 19. 7. ch. 11. 19. & 23. 23. Gen. 43. 32. Ps. 101. 5. Dan. 1. 8. John 4. 9. Acts. 10. 28. 1 Cor. 5. 11. 2 John 10. Is. 65. 5.
q Luke 5. 31, 32. Mark 2 17. Luke 18. 11—13 ch. 18. 12 Luke xv. 1 Tim. 1. 13—16. Is. 1 18. & 55. 7. Rom 7. 9—24.
r Hos. 6. 6. ch. 12. 7. 1 Sam. 15. 22. Prov. 21. 3, 27. Eccl. 5. 1. Is. 1. 11—15. Mic. 6. 6—8. s 1 Tim. 1. 13, 15, 16. Luke 19. 10. ch. 18. 11—13. Luke xv. Eph. 2. 1—8. Is. 1. 18. & 55. 7. & 45. 22. Rom. 5. 6—21. 1 Cor. 6. 11.

Verses 9—13. The publicans were those who farmed or collected the customs imposed by the Romans, and were not only therefore odious to the Jews, who abhorred this mark of servitude, but were also, for the most part, men of infamous conduct; who enriched themselves by exaction, being sure of having the government on their side. Hence publicans and sinners are so often used to include the most guilty and abandoned characters: yet such as these Jesus came to save, and out of them was pleased to choose one of his most eminent disciples, an apostle and evangelist, the penman of this gospel. We have,

1. His call. His name is Matthew, the gift of God, which some suppose was given him by our Lord on this occasion, when before he was known by that of Levi, as the other evangelists call him, though it was common for the same person to have two names. He was sitting at the receipt of custom, in the office where it was to be paid, and, perhaps, little thought of following Christ: but the Lord is often strangely found of them who seek him not, and prevents us with the blessings of his grace, that, to his glory, it may be for ever acknowledged he hath chosen us, not we him. One word effectually wrought upon the publican's heart: he said, Follow me; and immediately he arose and followed him. Power accompanies the word of Jesus, when he calls a soul unto himself, which bears down all objections; and out of the most ensnaring engagements of this world, some are made monuments of grace, for nothing is too hard for God.

2. Having tasted the grace of Jesus himself, he is solicitous his brethren, by profession, should be acquainted with him also; and for this purpose made a feast for Jesus and his disciples, to which many publicans and sinners were invited: nor did the Lord disdain their company, but gladly sat down with them. Note, (1.) They who have truly experienced the Redeemer's grace from that moment begin to labour, that all who are near and dear to them may partake of their blessing. (2.) Where the heart is open to Christ, there all who are his disciples will be welcome for his sake.

3. The Pharisees with malignant eye marked the condescensions of Jesus, and wanted to cast a reflection upon his character, and prejudice his disciples against him. Why eateth your Master with publicans and sinners? These proud and self-righteous creatures thought it infamous to be seen in such company, and would insinuate, that our Lord was like the men with whom he had sat down to meat. Note, (1.) The self-righteous formalists are ever the most rigid censurers of others' conduct. (2.) The noblest acts of charity are liable to the basest misrepresentations.

4. Christ vindicates himself from their insinuations. He overheard their whispers: or his disciples, weak themselves, carried the question to him, that they might be furnished with an answer; for to him in all our difficulties we must have recourse; and he gives them an abundant vindication of his conduct. They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. He came into the world as the great Physician of sin-sick souls; sinners are his unhappy patients, who groan under their spiritual maladies, incurable but for his healing grace: and they who feel their miseries and fly to him, he is ever ready to relieve; but the wilfully ignorant, and the self-righteous, who know nothing of their deep corruption, guilt, and sinfulness, and conceit themselves whole: these, as they experience no want of him, and will not come to him that they may have life, are left to perish in their blindness and their pride. But go ye, saith he, and learn what that meaneth, Hos. vi. 6. I will have mercy and not sacrifice; that is, in a comparative sense, acts of kindness and charity to men's bodies or souls are much more acceptable to God, than all the formalities of ritual devotion; and therefore Christ intimates, that his conversing with sinners for their good was, according to the word of truth, far more pleasing to God than their scrupulous adherence to the traditions of the elders. For I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance; this being the very end of his mission, he was fully justified in receiving them into his company, that he might acquaint them with his salvation. Had man been righteous, he never had needed a Redeemer; and they who fancy they are such, have nothing to do with him who came only to seek and save that which is lost. The Saviour's errand is to sinners, the vilest of sinners, to invite them to return to God, with promises of pardon purchased by his blood, and to call them, in virtue thereof, to repent and turn from all their abominations. And to this a sense of his love engages them, and for this his grace enables them; whilst they who vainly conceit that they are righteous, and need no repentance, are left to perish in their own deceivings.

14. ¶ Then came to him the disciples of John, saying, [t] Why do we and the Pharisees fast oft, but thy disciples fast not? 15. And Jesus said unto them, Can [u] the children of the bride-chamber mourn as long as the bridegroom is with them? but the days will come when the bridegroom [x] shall be taken from them, and then shall they [y] fast. 16. [z] No man putteth a piece of * new cloth unto an old garment: for that which is put in to fill it up taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worse. 17. Neither do men put new wine into old bottles; else the bottles break, and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish: but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved.

t Mark 2. 18—22. Luke 5. 33—39. & 18. 12. ch. 6. 16. & 11. 19. Prov. 20. 6.

u John 3. 29. 2 Cor. 11. 2 Rev. 21. 2. & 19. 7—9.

x Ch. xvi—xxviii. Mark 16. 19. Luke 24. 51. John 14. 19. & 16. 5, 7, 28. Acts 1. 9, 10. & 3. 21.

y Acts 1. 14. & 10. 30. & 13. 1—3. & 14. 23. 1 Cor. 7. 5. Zech. 12. 10—14.

z Mark 2. 21, 22. Luke 5. 36—39. with ch. 6. 30. & 8. 26. & 14. 31. & 16. 8. Luke 24. 49. Gen. 33. 14. Isa. 40. 11. John 16. 12. 1 Cor. 3. 2. Heb. 5. 13. Ps. 103. 13, 14.

* Raw, which was never put to the fuller.—Beza.

Verses 14—17. Our Lord was ever beset by insidious foes; yet his wisdom enabled him to confute and confound all their malicious designs. We have here,

1. The question addressed to Jesus by some of John's disciples. Why do we and the disciples of the Pharisees fast oft, but thy disciples fast not? and herein they would insinuate, that they were not so strict and holy in their religious profession as they ought to be: It appears from Luke v. 33. that they were set on by the Pharisees, who joined them; for designing and wicked men study how to set good men at variance, and are happy if they can suggest any cause of discord between them. They seem to take a pride in proclaiming the frequency of their own fasts, and to look down upon the disciples of Jesus as far their inferiors in this respect; and this leaven of self-complacence effectually destroyed what otherwise might be laudable in their practice. Note, (1.) In the externals of devotion and mortification, formal professors often go farther than true converts: being under a spirit of bondage, they rest upon their austerities, which in fact are not of any value in the sight of God, but are to the satisfying of the flesh, Col. ii. 23. (2.) They who boast of their own good works, evidently show their religion is vain.

2. Christ vindicates his disciples by an appeal to themselves. Can the children of the bride-chamber mourn as long as the bridegroom is with them? On such occasions of festivity fasting would be unseasonable. Christ was this heavenly Bridegroom, as John had called him, John iii. 29. he came now openly to espouse his church, whom he had loved from eternity. His disciples were the children of the bride-chamber, who, whilst their Lord was with them, could not but rejoice; but the time would come, when the bridegroom should be taken from them, and then shall they fast: besides, at present they were but young disciples, and therefore to be inured by degrees to harder services. As improper would it be to lay upon them at present these austerities, as to put a piece of new cloth on an old garment, which would soon make a worse hole than that which it covered; or new wine, which ferments most, into old bottles, which, being made of leather or skins, would by long use grow weak, and be liable to burst; but new wine must be put into new bottles, and then both are preserved. There must be a proper consideration had of the persons, and their measure of grace: children and babes in Christ must not be set upon the services which require peculiar intenseness of mind, or the severest acts of self-denial, but gently led, as Jacob's cattle, Gen. xxxiii. 13. lest by being over-driven they should be destroyed.

18. ¶ While he spake these things unto them, behold, there came a certain ruler, * and worshipped him, saying, My daughter is even now dead: [a] but come and lay thy hand upon her, and she shall live. 19. And [b] Jesus arose, and followed him, and so did his disciples. 20. ¶ And, behold, a woman, which was diseased with an [c] issue of blood twelve years, came behind him, and [d] touched the hem of his garment: 21. For she said within herself, If I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole. 22. But Jesus turned him about; and when he saw her, he said, [e] Daughter, be of good comfort; thy faith hath made thee whole. And the woman was made whole from that hour. 23. ¶ And when Jesus came into the ruler's house, and saw [f] the minstrels and the people making a noise, 24. He said unto them, [g] Give place; for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth. And they laughed him to scorn. 25. But when the people [h] were put forth, he went in, and took her by the hand; and the maid arose. 26. And † the [i] fame hereof went abroad into all that land.

* Viz. Jairus, who was ruler of the synagogue at Nazareth. See Mark 5. 22—43. Luke 8. 41—56. & 13. 14. Acts 13. 15.

a Ch. 8. 15. John 4. 47, 49. Mark 6. 5, 6. John 11. 21, 25. & 5. 25.

b With John 4. 50. & 11. 6, 7. ch. 8. 13. & 15. 28.

c Lev. 15. 19—33. & 18. 19. & 20. 13. Num. 5. 2.

d Mark 5. 27—34. Luke 8. 43—48. Exod. 15. 26. Ps. 147. 3. Mal. 4. 2. 2 Kin. 13. 21. ch. 14. 36. John 14. 12. Acts 5. 15. & 19. 12. Rom. 4. 19, 20.

e Ver. 2. Is. 40. 1, 2. 2 Chr. 20. 20. Acts 14. 9. ver. 29. ch. 8. 13. Mark 9. 23. & 10. 52. Luke 7. 47—50. & 17. 19. & 18. 42. & 8. 48.

f 2 Chr. 35. 25. Jer. 9. 17. Acts 9. 39.

g Acts 20. 10. John 11. 4. Her death is but like a short sleep.

h Ch. 7. 6. 1 Kin. 17. 19. 2 Kin. 4. 33. Acts 9. 40.

† Or this fame.

i Ch. 4. 24. Is. 52. 13. Mark 1. 45. John 3. 30.

Verses 18—26. While Jesus was vindicating the conduct of his disciples from the cavils of those who found fault with them, an agreeable avocation calls him from this unpleasing work of disputation.

1. A ruler of the synagogue, a man of rank and importance, applies to Jesus on the behalf of his daughter, who was either now in the very agony of death, as the other evangelists say, or by this time, as he concludes, actually dead. He therefore, with deepest humility, begs him to come to his house, and lay his hand upon her, persuaded that Jesus could easily restore her, desperate as the case appeared. Though few, very few in his station respected Christ, he was one of those singularly favoured, to whom it was given to believe on his name. Note, (1.) Christ has disciples of every rank; and though, in general, to the poor the gospel is preached, yet some, though not many, mighty and noble are called. (2.) The breaches in our families should drive us to the Lord, if not to restore the dead to life, at least to sanctify the providence as a means of quickening our own souls.

2. Christ immediately complies with his request; for he is more willing to give than we to ask, and none seek him in vain: and his disciples followed him, desirous to behold a fresh instance of the divine power of their Lord.

3. In the way, he heals a poor woman afflicted with a disease of long standing, that weakened her in body, rendered her ceremonially unclean, and impoverished her in seeking a cure, without obtaining any relief from the physicians. As her disorder was of such a nature that she might be ashamed to mention it, and by the law should have kept her from mingling in society with others, she came behind our Lord and touched the hem of his garment, persuaded that there was such a plenitude of healing virtue in Jesus, that if she but touched his garment she should certainly be cured. Nor was she disappointed of her hope: she immediately felt herself perfectly well, but must not steal off unnoticed. Though others observed her not, Jesus, who had brought her thither, knew what was done, and, for his own glory and her comfort, addresses her with kind encouragement, saying, Daughter, be of good comfort, thy faith hath made thee whole. Note, (1.) The poor sinner who comes to Christ ashamed, confounded, and distressed, shall be sent from him rejoicing. (2.) They who honour Christ by believing in his name, he will honour, approving and rewarding the faith which he bestows.

4. He is pleased to raise from the dead the ruler's daughter. At his arrival he found the house filled with mourners and minstrels, as was usual on those occasions, with melancholy notes of wo, exciting greater grief and wailing; but he bade them cease their lamentations, and leave the room, since they would find the damsel not as they supposed, dead, and past hope, but as one asleep, whom he would soon awake; though they assured him she was dead, and, supposing the case desperate, treated what he said with utter contempt. But he quickly convinced them of their folly and wickedness herein; for, having ordered them to be put out of the house, or room, as unworthy to be spectators of his miracles who thus derided him, in the presence of the father and mother and three of his disciples, he went in, took her by the hand, and, at his word, she instantly arose, alive and well, as if she had indeed awaked from a refreshing sleep. Note, (1.) Death is but a longer night, and sleep its lesser mysteries. They who die in the Lord, are said to sleep in Jesus; for though dead to us, they live to him, and only wait for the resurrection morn to wake up to eternal life and day, when sleep and death shall be no more. (2.) When our dear relatives go before us to their bed of dust, though nature cannot but feel the pangs of parting, we sorrow not as those who have no hope. If they fell asleep in Christ, we shall wake up together shortly, never to part again. (3.) Many scoff at Christ's words, and, because they cannot comprehend them, brand them as foolishness, though they will be found the true sayings of God. (4.) He that by a touch, a word, raised the dead body, doth thus by his word and Spirit raise our souls from the death of sin unto the life of righteousness. We are wholly passive, nor can perform the least act of spiritual life till he hath first quickened us.

5. The fame of this amazing miracle soon spread throughout that land, the certainty of the fact being put beyond doubt by the multitude of those who had been fully convinced of the damsel's death.

27. ¶ And when Jesus departed thence, two blind men followed him, [l] crying, and saying, Thou son of David, have mercy on us. 28. And when he was come into the house, the blind men came to him: and Jesus saith unto them, [m] Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord. 29. Then touched he their eyes, saying, [n] According to your faith be it unto you. 31. [o] And their eyes were opened; and Jesus [p] straitly charged them, saying, See that no man know it. 31. But they, when they were departed, spread abroad his fame in all that country. 32. ¶ [q] As they went out, behold, they brought to him a dumb man possessed with a devil. 33. And when the devil was cast * out the dumb spake: and the multitudes marvelled, saying, [r] It was never so seen in Israel. 34. But the Pharisees said, [s] He casteth out devils through the prince of the devils.

[l] Ch. 7. 11. Rom. 8. 1 1. 15, 26. Jam. 5. 16. ch. 12. 23. & 1. 1. John 7. 31. Rom. 1. 3. & 9. 5. Rev. 22. 16.

[m] Ch. 13. 58. ver. 22, 29. John 11. 26. Mark 9. 23, 24. & 11. 23. ch. 17. 20. & 21. 22. Acts 11. 9.

[n] Ch. 8. 13. ver. 22. ch. 15. 28. Luke 7. 50.

[o] Ps. 146. 8. Is. 35. 5. & 42. 7, 18. ch. 20. 34. John 9. 7, 26.

[p] Ch. 8. 4. & 12. 16. & 17. 9. Luke 5. 14. Mark 7. 36. & 5. 43. & 1. 44.

[q] Luke 11. 14, 15. ch. 12. 22, 23.

* An example of the power which Christ has over the devil.—Beza.

[r] Exod. 4. 11. Is. 35. 6. with ch. 8. 27. & 15. 30, 31.

[s] Ch. 12. 24. Mark 3. 22. Luke 11. 15. Eccl. 4. 4.

Verses 27—34. Miracle upon miracle confirmed our Lord's divine mission, and left those inexcusable who, in the face of such evidence, rejected him.

1. We find him, immediately after raising Jairus' daughter, giving sight to two blind men.

(1.) They followed him with importunate cries, hearing of his fame, and hoping for a cure. He who gave life to the dead could surely give sight to the blind. Their address showed their persuasion that Jesus was the true Messiah, the promised Son of David, and all their prayers centred in one point, have mercy on us. All the sinner needs is comprehended in this one word, and all he can hope for or ask is free unmerited grace. Being in the same distress, they joined their mutual supplications; fellow-sufferers should be joint petitioners: and though their request was not, as usual, immediately granted, they did not desist; but with persevering earnestness followed him through the street; and then into the house. If the Lord Jesus for a while seem to disregard our prayers, it must not be interpreted a denial of our request, but as designed to quicken our importunity, and to make the mercy sought more valued by us. We shall assuredly succeed if we faint not.

(2.) In answer to the question of our Lord, they make a noble confession of their faith. Jesus asked them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? to open your eyes, and by my own divine power to cure your blindness? They said unto him, Yea, Lord, we are fully persuaded of it. Note, (1.) They who have true faith, never desist till they have obtained the blessing. (2.) In all our trials, the full and fixed persuasion of Christ's power to save us out of them, must be as an anchor to our souls amidst the storm. (3.) Christ requires open profession of our faith, that we may give him the glory due unto his name.

(3.) Hereupon he grants their request. He touched their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you. And their eyes were opened. He knew their sincerity, and he designed to express his approbation of their faith in conferring the cure. Whoever still comes to him with their wants, will find the same language from Jesus: according to our faith the blessings of the gospel become possessed by us. Whatever we want, faith may ever draw it out of his fulness; and whenever we fail of strength or comfort, we may be assured it is owing to our unbelief.

(4.) He strictly charges them to conceal the miracle he had wrought for them. Either he shunned all appearance of seeking popular applause, or he knew the more his fame spread, the more his enemies would be exasperated; or perhaps he did it to prevent the Jews or his own disciples, too much disposed to expect in their Messiah a temporal Prince, from crowding around him, or attempting by insurrections to set him on the throne of Israel.

(5.) They, notwithstanding, spread abroad his fame; so full of gratitude they could not conceal the favour; and though their disobedience was not commendable, their motive no doubt pleaded their excuse. Well meant zeal, though sometimes imprudently exerted, should not meet a harsh censure.

2. He cures a dumb man possessed of a devil. His friends brought him to Jesus as a truly pitiable object, just as the blind men who were healed went out; for Christ's door was open to all the miserable, and he was never weary in doing good. The favour is no sooner asked than granted; the devil is dispossessed, and the dumb man speaks freely as ever. Note, They who live in the neglect of prayer and praise and godly conversation, are under the possession of this spirit of dumbness; but when the grace of Jesus touches the heart, the tongue of the dumb will instantly sing, speaking his praises, and telling what great things God hath done for his soul.

3. These miracles had a very different effect on the spectators. The multitudes marvelled, and owned, to the glory of Jesus, that never had such miracles been seen before in Israel; so many, so immediate, and performed with such divine authority. But the malignant Pharisees, determined to find fault, though unable to deny the facts, imputed these miracles to a diabolical agency, as if Christ was in league with the devil. They who are bent against conviction will always have something to object; and the more they are pressed with the evidence of the truth, the more enraged, inveterate, and blasphemous is their abuse.

35. [t] And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people. 36. ¶ [u] But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they [x] fainted, and were scattered abroad, [y] as sheep having no shepherd. 37. Then saith he unto his disciples, [z] The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few: 38. [a] Pray ye therefore the [b] Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth labourers into his harvest.

t Mark 6. 6. Luke 13. 22. & 4. 43, 44. ch. 4. 23, 24. & 11. 5.
u Mark 6. 34. Luke 10. 33.
x Or were tired, and lay down. John 6. 27.
y Num. 27. 17. 1 Kin. 22. 17. Jer. 50. 6. Ezek. 34. 6. Amos 8. 12. Mark 6. 34. ch. 10. 6. Zech. 10. 2. & 11. 4.
z Luke 10. 2. John 4. 35. Zech. 10. 2. & 11. 4, 7, 11. Acts 16. 9, 10. & 18. 10. a Luke 6. 12, 13. Acts 20. 28 & 13. 2. & 10. 6, 7. & ii—xix. Jer. 3. 15. 2 Thes. 3. 1. b Ch. 10. 1. Eph. 4. 11. or Acts 13. 2. & 20. 28.

Verses 35—38. Christ did not long fix his abode at one place. We have an account,

1. Of his journeys, preaching, and cures, through all the cities and villages of Galilee. He taught publicly in the synagogues the doctrines of the gospel, and the nature, blessings, and privileges of that kingdom he came to erect; and, in confirmation of his mission, in every place performed the most miraculous cures on the bodies of all the diseased who applied to him, as his word was designed to heal the greater maladies of their souls.

2. Of the compassion he expressed towards the multitudes who followed him. It grieved him to see the darkness, ignorance, and carelessness which every where appeared; they fainted, perishing through lack of knowledge; instead of the bread of life and truth, fed with the miserable husks of Pharisaical traditions, and misled in the most essential truths of God's word, through the adulterations with which their scribes had corrupted it: and they were scattered abroad as sheep without a shepherd, exposed to the great destroyer of souls, and destitute of every faithful guide to bring them to the fold of God: they who should have directed them aright contributed to increase their errors, or by total negligence abandoned them to ruin. Our Lord therefore stirs up his disciples to pray, that since the harvest is so plenteous, and multitudes of immortal souls willing to hear the good word of God, and so few to labour for their conversion, to gather them into God's church; the great Lord of the harvest would send forth labourers qualified for their work, and bless them with success. Note, (1.) They who know the value of their own souls cannot but feel, with Jesus, the tenderest compassion for those who live in ignorance, error, and sin, and pity them the more because they appear so insensible, and to have no pity on themselves. (2.) The neglect of ministers is an awful judgment upon the people, and must be attended with aggravated guilt and ruin on their own souls. (3.) When multitudes appear attentive and willing to hear the gospel, it is a grief to see them deprived of the means, and a double obligation is laid on the few faithful to exert themselves. (4.) The grievous neglect of men's souls we see, should excite our fervent prayers to God, that he would revive his work in the midst of the years, and send forth faithful shepherds to feed and guide his flock. (5.) Christ must appoint his own servants; he is the Lord of the harvest: none can call or qualify for the office but himself, and whom he sends he will support and bless; their labour shall not be in vain in the Lord. They who see no gracious fruits of their ministry, may justly conclude the Lord of the harvest never sent them. (6.) All Christ's servants are labourers; these are no loiterers who are of his appointing. Diligence, fidelity, and zeal, mark their administrations.

CHAP. X.—anno domini, 31.

In answer to the prayers enjoined in the former chapter for faithful labourers, we have, 1. The general commission that was given them, ver. 1. 2. The names of the persons to whom this commission was given, ver. 2—4. 3. The instructions that were given them, which are very full and particular. (1.) Concerning the services they were to do, ver. 5—15. (2.) Concerning the sufferings they were to undergo, with the counsel given, and support promised to them, ver. 16—42. And these things, though primarily intended for direction to the apostles then, are of use to all Christ's ministers, with whom he is, and will be always to the end of the world.

1. And [a] when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power* against unclean spirits, to [b] cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness, and all manner of disease. 2. Now [c] the names of the twelve apostles are these; The first Simon, who is called Peter, and Andrew his brother; James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother; 3. [d] Philip, and Bartholomew; Thomas, and Matthew the publican; [e] James the son of Alpheus, and Lebbeus, whose surname was [f] Thaddeus; 4. Simon [g] the Canaanite, and [h] Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed him.

a Mark 3. 13—19. & 6. 7. Luke 6. 13—16. & 9. 1. Rev. 21. 12. with Exod. 1. 2—4. ch. 19. 28.
* Or over.
b Acts 16. 18. & 10. 38.
c Prov. 10. 7. 1 Cor. 12. 28. John 1. 40—42. ch. 4. 18—22. & 17. 1. & 26. 37. Mark 13. 3. & 10. 35. Acts 1. 13. & ii—xii. 1st and 2d Pet. 1st, 2d, and 3d John. John i—xxi. Rev. i—xxii.
d John 1. 43—51. & 6. 5—7. & 14. 5—9. & 20. 24—29. & 21. 2. ch. 9. 9, 10. & i—xxviii.
e Acts 1. 13. & 15. 13—22. & 21. 28. Gal. 1. 19. & 2. 9.
f Or Judas. Acts 1. 13. John 14. 22. Jude. Luke 6. 16. Lotes. Acts 1. 13 Luke 6. 15.
g Or Zelotes. Acts 1. 13 Luke 6. 15.
h Ch. 26. 14—16, 25, 47—50. & 27. 3—5. John 13. 26—29. Acts 1. 16—19. John 6. 71.

Verses 1—4. Those whom our Lord intended to be his ministers and ambassadors, he had before called to be his attendants, that they might learn from his divine instructions the truths they must preach to others, and imitate his bright example, which they beheld. None can possibly be fit for the ministry, or be called of God to take that office upon them, who have not first been taught of Christ, by communion with him, and acquaintance with his word, the blessed truths they are to declare to others, and been furnished with gifts, as well as graces, for that arduous employment. It is the scandal of any church, and must be the ruin of the people's souls, when such are sent forth as ministers, who are themselves ignorant, careless, and unacquainted with the glorious truths of God, and merely take up the ministry as a maintenance; and they who send them shall share their guilt.

1. Christ called them unto him in private, from the rest of the disciples, and with their commission to preach his gospel, invested them with authority over the unclean spirits, and diseases of every kind, that by their miracles they might confirm their mission. Note, (1.) A particular call is needful for the ministry, besides the general one to be Christ's disciple: and we must see this clear before we presume to run. (2.) The great design of the gospel ministry is, to oppose and destroy Satan's power over the hearts of men. Though bodily possessions may be less frequent, his empire over men's souls is still mighty, and nothing but the power of the gospel can effectually cast out the unclean spirit from the fallen heart. (3.) In the grace of Jesus, there is a cure for every sickness; none of our spiritual maladies are so inveterate, but there is in his word medicine that can heal the sickness.

2. The number and names of the apostles are recorded. They were twelve in number, according to the tribes of Israel, to whom they were sent. They are mentioned in pairs, being sent forth by two and two, as mutual helps to each other, and some of them were brethren in blood as well as apostleship; and happy it is where relations are thus, by grace, doubly united. Peter is placed first, not as invested with superior power over his fellow-labourers, but as among those who were first called, and appeared ever most zealous in the cause. Matthew, the writer of this gospel, humbly sets Thomas before himself, though the other evangelists place him after Matthew: and he adds his former occupation, the publican, as a foil to set off the distinguished grace of Jesus to him, and to keep him lowly in his own eyes, remembering from whence he was taken. Simon, another of the same name with Peter, is distinguished from him by being called the Canaanite, either from his city, Cana of Galilee, or, as the name signifies, he was of the zealots, Luke vi. 15. a sect among the Jews, who, in imitation of Phinehas, out of pretended zeal for God's glory, executed vengeance on offenders, without any process before the magistrates. Judas the traitor is the last. The purest societies will have some such among them; he is called Iscariot; concerning which there are many conjectures; the most probable seems to be, that it was given him from the place of his nativity and to distinguish him from the other Judas, or Jude, the brother of James.

5. ¶ These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, [i] Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: 6. [k] But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. 7. And as ye go, [l] preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. 8. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give. 9. [m] Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses; 10. Nor scrip for your journey; neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves: [n] for the workman is worthy of his meat. 11. And [o] into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, enquire who in it is worthy; and * there abide till ye go thence. 12. And when ye come into an house, [p] salute it. 13. [q] And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it: but if it be not worthy, let your peace return to you. 14. [r] And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet. 15. Verily I say unto you, [s] It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrha in the day of judgment than for that city.

i Acts 16. 6, 7. 2 Kin. 17. 24—41. Ezra iv, v. John 4. 20. Acts viii.

k Ch. 15. 24. & 9. 36. Acts 3. 26. & 13. 46. Rom. 9. 4, 5. Is. 53. 6. Jer. 50. 16, 17. Ezek. 34. 6, 16. 1 Pet. 2. 25. Ps. 119. 176.

l Ch. 3. 2. & 4. 17. & 11. 5. Luke 9. 2. & 10. 9. Acts 3. 6. & 8. 18, 20. & 20. 33—35.

m Mark 6. 8. Luke 9. 3, 4. & 22. 35. Trust God for your maintenance.

n Luke 10. 7. 1 Tim. 5. 18. Lev. 19. 13. Deut. 24. 14, 15. 1 Cor. 9. 4—14. 1 Tim. 5. 17, 18. Gal. 6. 6.

o Luke 10. 8. 1 Cor. 14. 33, 40. Eph. 5. 15. Lodge with persons of credit.

* That the family may have the full benefit of your instruction.—Boothroyd.

p Luke 10. 5. 1 Pet. 3. 8.

q Acts 13. 46. Ps. 35. 13. Is. 55. 11. 2 Cor. 2. 16. Pray for and preach the gospel to them.

r Luke 9. 5. & 10. 10, 11. Acts 13. 51. & 18. 6. & 20. 26. Mark 6. 11. Neh. 5. 13.

s Ezek. 16. 48, 51. Mark 6. 11. Luke 10. 12—15. ch. 11. 20—24. John 15. 22—24. Heb. 6. 4—8, 10, 26—31.

Verses 5—15. Christ having given the apostles their commission, directs them how to discharge it aright.

1. Their ministry must be confined to the lost sheep of the house of Israel alone, and therefore they are forbidden to visit any city of the Gentiles or Samaritans. The covenant of peculiarity was not yet dissolved, and for the fathers' sake the Jews were beloved. It was needful therefore that to them the gospel should first be preached, that the elect of God among them might be gathered in, and the rest left inexcusable in their infidelity.

2. The subject of their preaching must be the same that John at first, and Jesus himself had inculcated, that the kingdom of heaven was at hand, and therefore urging all men to repent and turn to God, as became the true members of the Messiah's kingdom. Note, (1.) Truth is uniform. Novel doctrines carry their own confutation along with them. (2.) The nearness of Christ's coming in his kingdom should quicken our diligence to prepare to meet him.

3. They are directed to work miracles in confirmation of their mission, and to engage the readier attention to their doctrine; in the name of Jesus they shall be enabled to heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise even the dead, and cast out devils from the possessed: evidences these of divine power, which none who were not wilfully obstinate could withstand; and for these acts of benevolence to men's bodies or souls, they must neither desire nor receive the least reward, showing their disinterested zeal and charity, and giving as freely as they had received. Note, Nothing more evidently characterizes the faithful ministers of Christ, than their disinterested labours, not seeking gain for themselves, but the good of mankind.

4. They need not be at all solicitous about a provision in their journey; nor should they take either money in their purse, or meat in their scrip, or change of garments, or any other than the clothes they had on, the sandals on their feet, and the staff in their hands: he who employed them in their work, will take care they shall not want. Though they may not desire to enrich themselves by their labours, they justly deserved their maintenance. Note, Though ministers must not seek filthy lucre, they have a right to a subsistence; and they who preach the gospel shall live by the gospel.

5. As they were going into places where they were utterly unknown, their first inquiry must be who was worthy in the place, not of the gospel or of the grace of God, but who was most noted for hospitality, and the entertainment of strangers, and abide in their house during their stay, if they found a welcome. In which case, entering with kindest wishes of every temporal, spiritual, and eternal blessing, they should salute the master and his household; and if they received a courteous and hearty entertainment, then all the blessings they wished for:

should descend upon that house; but if their salute was returned with coldness or incivility, then their good wishes should not be lost; but, instead of descending upon that family, should return with blessings on their own souls. But wo to that house or city that should by their unkind behaviour compel them to depart! They are commanded to shake off the dust of their feet against them; either as testifying their abhorrence of their wickedness in thrusting the gospel from them, or as a testimony against them in the day of judgment; at which awful season, even Sodom and Gomorrah would not meet with so heavy a doom, as those who rejected the counsel of God against their own souls. Note, (1.) Though in the sight of God all are upon a level, and can plead no desert before him, yet respecting men, some have more worthy characters, and are of a more generous spirit than others. (2.) Religion is never a plea for rudeness or morosity: to be courteous is a gospel duty. (3.) No good wishes are ever lost; the prayers offered for the evil and unthankful will bring a blessing to us, if they procure none for them. (4.) Nothing is lost by being employed in God's service, and the support of the gospel: no money laid out in any way will bring richer returns than this. (5.) They who reject God's ministers, reject him whose ambassadors they are; so he will interpret it, and avenge their quarrel. (6.) When any place or people slight the gospel, justly doth God take it from them. (7.) There is a day of judgment at hand, when among the various degrees of punishment which will be inflicted on sinners, none will endure so heavy vengeance as those against whom the dust of a slighted and rejected gospel shall rise up for a testimony.

16. ¶ [t] Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and * harmless as doves. 17. [u] But beware of men: for they will deliver you up to the councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues; 18. And ye shall be brought before governors and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them and the Gentiles. 19. [x] But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak; for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak: 20. For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you. 21. [y] And the brother shall deliver up the brother to death, and the father the child: and the children shall rise up against their parents, and cause them to be put to death. 22. [z] And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: [a] but he that endureth to the end shall be saved. 23. [b] But when they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another: for verily I say unto you, Ye shall not † have gone over the cities of Israel, till the Son of man [c] be come. 24. [d] The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his lord. 25. It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord: [e] if they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household? 26. [f] Fear them not therefore: [g] for there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known. 27. What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light: and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the house-tops. 28. [h] And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. 29. [i] Are not two sparrows sold for a * farthing? and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father. 30. [k] But the very hairs of your head are all numbered. 31. [l] Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows. 32. [m] Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. 33. [n] But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven. 34. [o] Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. 35. [p] For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. 36. And a man's foes shall be they of his own household. 37. [q] He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me: and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me. 38. [r] And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me. 39. He that findeth his life shall lose it; and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it. 40. ¶ [s] He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me. 41. [t] He that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet shall receive a prophet's reward; and he that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man shall receive a righteous man's reward. 42. [u] And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these † little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward.

t Luke 10. 3. ver. 23. Luke 12. 4—12. & 21. 16—19. Rom. 16 19. Col. 4. 5. Eph. 5. 15, 16. Ezek. 2. 6. Jer. 1. 18. Phil. 2. 15. 1 Cor. 14. 20. Acts 20. 28, 29. ch. 23. 34. & 24. 9.

* Or simple.

u John 2. 24. Acts 2. 40. ch. 24. 9. Mark 13. 9—11. Luke 12. 11. & 21. 12, 13. Acts iv—viii, xii, xvi—xxvi. & 25. 23. 1 Tim. 4. 16, 17. Ps. 2. 1—6. Phil. 1. 28.

x Mark 13. 11. Luke 12. 11, 12, & 21. 14, 15. Acts iv, v, vii, xvi, xxii—xxvi. Ps. 45. 1—5. Exod. 4. 12, 15. 2 Sam. 23. 2. Jer. 1. 7. 2 Tim. 4. 17.

y Ver. 34, 35. Luke 21. 16. & 12. 51. Mic. 7. 5, 6. with Deut. 13. 6—10. Zech. 13. 3.

z Luke 21. 17. John 15. 18. Rom. 8. 7, 8. Jer. 17. 9.

a Mark 13. 13. ch. 24. 13. Dan 12. 12, 13. Gal. 6. 9. Rev. 2. 7, 10, 17. & 3. 21.

Ch. 2. 13. & 4. 12. & 12. 15. Luke 4. 30. Acts 8. 1. & 9. 25. & 14. 6 & 17. 1, 10.

† Or end, or finish.

c Ch. 16. 28. Acts ii. & 3. 26. In the powerful descent of the Holy Ghost.

d Luke 6. 40. John 13. 16. & 15. 20. 2 Sam. 11. 11.

e Ch. 9. 34. & 12. 24. Mark 3. 22. Luke 11. 15. John 7. 20. & 8. 48, 52. & 10. 20. & 15. 20.

f Prov. 29. 25. Jer. 1. 8, 17. Dan. 3. 16, Acts 4. 19. 1 Pet. 3. 14.

g Mark 4. 22. Luke 8. 17. & 12. 2. Mark 16. 15. ch. 28. 19, 20. & 24. 14. & 26. 13. Acts 1. 8. & ii—xix. Rom. 10. 18. & 16. 26. Col. 1. 6. 23—28. Eph. 3. 8. with Job 12. 22. Is. 52. 15.

h Luke 12. 4. Is. 8. 12, 13. & 51. 7, 8, 12. Jer. 1. 8, 17. Ezek. 3. 9. Ps. 2. 11. Prov. 28. 14. 1 Pet. 3. 14.

i Ch. 6. 26. Heb. 1. 3. Ps. 14, 7, 9

* Or three farthings.

k 1 Sam. 14. 45. 2 Sam. 14. 11. 1 Kin. 1. 52. Acts 27. 34. Luke 21. 18. 1 Pet. 5. 7. Phil. 4. 6.

l Ch. 6. 26. 1 Cor. 9. 9. Ps. 8. 5. Is. 43. 1—3. & 41. 10—16.

m Luke. 12. 8. Rom. 10. 9, 10. Ps. 119. 46. Acts 4. 19. Rev. 3. 5. 1 Sam. 2. 30.

n Mark 3. 38. Luke 9. 26. & 12. 9. 1 John 2. 23. 2 Tim. 2. 12.

o Luke 12. 49—53. John 7. 40, 41. Acts 13. 44, 45. & 23. 24.

p See ver. 21. Mic. 7. 5, 6. Jer. 9. 4. Luke 12. 53. Ps. 41. 9. & 55. 13, 15. John 13. 18. & 16. 33. & 15. 18—25. Acts. 14. 22. & 20. 23. 2 Tim. 3. 12.

q Luke 14. 26. John 21. 15. ch. 19. 29. Ps. 73. 25. Phil. 3. 7—9. Deut. 33. 9.

r Ch. 16. 24, 25. Mark 8. 34, 35. Luke 9. 23, 24. & 17. 33. John 12. 25. Mark 10. 29, 30. Luke 18. 29. 30. ch. 19. 29. Acts 20, 23, 24. & 21. 13.

s Ch. 18. 5. Luke 10. 16. 2 Cor. 5. 20. John 13. 20. & 5. 23. & 12. 49. & 14. 21. 24, 1 Thes. 5. 13.

t Gen. 20. 7. 1 Kin. 17. 15, 23. & 18. 4. 2 Kin. 4. 8, 16, 17, 37. Jam. 5. 16.

u Mark 9. 41. 2 Cor. 9. 6. ch. 18. 5, 6. & 25. 34—40. Heb. 6. 10. Is. 21. 14.

† Not small in stature, but young in the knowledge of the gospel. Such are called 'babes,' ch. 11. 25. 1 Cor. 3. 1.—Bishop Pearce.

Verses 16—42. As they were now beginning the work of their ministry, our Lord informs them of the troubles and persecutions to which they will be hereafter exposed in the exercise of their office, that when they came, they might not think some strange thing had happened unto them, as they might otherwise do if their heads were filled with the hopes of a temporal kingdom. And, that they may not be at a loss in these seasons of trial, they have here gracious encouragements to support them, and directions for their conduct in such emergencies.

1. They must expect to meet with many difficulties and much suffering. They were harmless and defenceless as sheep, and were going forth into a world where they would be worried by wicked men, fierce and savage as wolves: for Christ's name sake, and for their fidelity to him, they would be hated; the natural heart being full of enmity against God and his image, and this being at the root of all persecution, with whatever specious pretences the wicked seek to cloak their animosity, they would be arrested as criminals, and brought to the bar; the arm of justice, which should be stretched forth to protect the innocent, having in all ages, through false misrepresentations, and partial judges, been made the instrument of the most cruel oppressions of God's people. They would be exposed to suffer in their persons, even unto death, so far will the inveterate malice of their enemies go; not content with scourging them, and putting them to shame, ver. 17. they will persecute some even unto blood, and, with all the ignominy of a public execution, take away their lives. To give a pretext for such cruelties, they will be branded with every opprobrious name, ver. 25. and their characters be blackened, as if they were the very fiends of hell. This being the art of persecutors in every age, to misrepresent the people of God, and dress them up in the most odious colours, the more easily to destroy them. So far, therefore, from that outward peace and prosperity which the Jews fancied would attend the Messiah's kingdom, they must look for the sword of persecution, and a state of constant variance and warfare with the world which lieth in wickedness, ver. 34, 35. The gospel of peace which in itself breathes such charity and good-will to men, through the perverseness of the natural heart would give occasion to the most implacable feuds; difference of religion being the ground of the most cruel persecutions. Now these things they are warned of, that they may count the cost, and, knowing the consequences, their choice may be deliberate and fixed. These trials also would be the more severe, considering the persons from whom they would come, from men, ver. 17. even those of their own nation; from the very persons to whom they preached, and for whose souls they laboured. From all men, men of all ranks and degrees, and from the world in general which lieth in wickedness; few of whom would receive their testimony, and the rest would be not only hardened, but exasperated against them. From the great men, the kings and governors of the earth, who would employ their power in oppressing and opposing them, for the gospel seldom meets with friends among the great. Yea, from those who made a show of religion, even in the synagogues they would find the most inveterate foes, ver 17. who would even count God honoured in the punishment they inflicted on them, and place the bitterest malice to the score of zeal for his glory; and such persecutors on principle are the worst of persecutors. And finally, what would be of all others the most irksome to be borne, from their nearest and dearest relations the most unnatural enmity may be expected. The nearest ties of blood shall be dissolved; even brothers shall lose all fraternal affection; yea, parents turn unnatural to their own offspring, and children forget all duty and regard, ver. 21. even daughters shall rise up against their mothers, and the daughter-in-law, who before lived peaceably with her mother-in-law, will now entertain the deadliest animosity; inflamed with blind zeal and bigotry, as if from the moment their dearest relatives embraced the gospel of Jesus, no affection or respect was henceforward due to them, no measure to be kept with them, but that with implacable enmity they must be persecuted, accused, or murdered: so that a man's bitterest foes shall be those of his own household, and this has been grievously verified by the experience of past ages; and more or less, as our good conversation in Christ exhibits the stronger contrast to the ways of a world which lieth in wickedness, will be the case to the end of time.

2. Christ gives them counsel and encouragement how to bear up under these heavy trials. His counsel is,

(1.) Be wise as serpents. When we have crafty enemies to deal with, we are bound to use every prudential means for our own preservation, and as far as may be to counteract their mischievous designs, nor unnecessarily expose ourselves to danger.

(2.) Be harmless as doves; give no needless provocation; show no rancour or ill will in return for any injuries; manifest that genuine simplicity and harmlessness of conduct which may cut off occasion from those who desire occasion; and then the subtlety of the serpent is laudable, when thus joined with the innocence of the dove.

(3.) Beware of men. Be cautious whom you trust, and with whom you are connected. In this false and wicked world we must not hastily believe every word, or be open to every plausible professor: prudent reserve often keeps us from fruitless repentance.

(4.) When they persecute you in one city flee into another. In cases where life is in danger, or virulent opposition prevents all opportunity of exercising our ministry, then to flee is duty, provided no unlawful means are used to escape; and that we follow the leadings of providence, not deserting our post through fear, but maintaining our zeal and integrity unshaken.

(5.) Fear not them who can kill the body but are not able to kill the soul, this mortal life is the utmost to which their rage can extend; but rather fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. The soul is the valuable part of man, the body is but dust; and however great the terrors of persecutors may be, the terrors of the Lord are greater: the everlasting burnings of hell, the wrath of the eternal God, and the sufferings both of soul and body in torment, without measure and without end, must be remembered as an antidote against the fear of man, when he comes armed with every instrument of torture, racks, gibbets, fire, or sword. How much better is it bravely to endure a momentary pang, and in an instant be gone beyond all the malice of persecutors, than by base compliance provoke God, from whose hands none can deliver us, and whose wrath will be for ever wrath to come!

(6.) What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light. Let nothing intimidate you from a bold and open profession and ministration of the gospel; and what ye hear in the ear, of my secrets communicated to you as your Friend or Master, this being the custom of the Jewish doctors to whisper in their disciples' ears, that preach ye upon the house tops, which being low and flat roofed a person might be heard in the streets from them distinctly; and this intimates, that in the most public places of concourse they must deliver their message without fear or shame. Christ's gospel seeks no covert, nor must his ministers conceal any thing from their hearers of the whole counsel of God.

The encouragement proposed to them boldly to endure hardness, as good soldiers of Jesus Christ, is great as the dangers they had to grapple with were intimidating.

1. Verily I say unto you, ye shall not have gone over, or finished the cities of Israel, till the Son of man be come. Before they could have finished their testimony they would see the kingdom of heaven, which they preached, come with power; when, after the resurrection and ascension of Jesus, and the effusions of the Holy Ghost upon them, they should be endued with greater powers, and see the most wonderful effects of their ministry, the prospect of which should quicken them in their present labours.

2. They need not be under any concern about what they should say when brought before their superiors, and accused by their enemies, for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak; being under a divine guidance, they should never be at a loss, but should be enabled to vindicate the truth with the most powerful arguments, and to deliver themselves with the greatest propriety, to the astonishment of their adversaries; endued with wisdom and power more than human, which the most subtle of their foes shall not be able either to gainsay or resist, for it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father, which speaketh in or by you; and when on emergencies we are suddenly called forth to speak of Christ, if his glory be our single aim, we shall still find the same teaching and strength, and may comfortably trust him for assistance.

3. Their very sufferings should tend to propagate the gospel they preached, and be for a testimony against Jews and Gentiles, before whose tribunal, when brought as criminals, they would have a more public opportunity of bearing witness to the glorious truths of God; and if they sealed them with their blood as martyrs, this would be a stronger confirmation of the truth of their mission, and leave those who rejected their testimony inexcusable.

4. He that endureth to the end shall be saved. These light afflictions are but for a moment, their end is near, death at the worst shall put a period to them, a little patience and perseverance will make them more than conquerors, and the far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory will infinitely overpay all the sufferings of this present time.

5. They could never be treated worse than their Master had been before them. Whatever persecution or reproach they might endure, he who was so greatly their superior, had suffered the same. They had called him Beelzebub, a devil, the prince of the devils, and treated him with every imaginable ignominy; and this contradiction of sinners he patiently endured. Having therefore so glorious an example before them, they might well be content to bear his reproach, and count it their honour to be made like their Lord and Master. Who of us should start at shame, insult, or suffering, when we look to Jesus and see what he endured?

6. There is nothing covered that shall not be revealed, nor hid that shall not be known. However their enemies might seek to suppress the word of truth, it should blaze forth in spite of all opposition; and their characters, though blackened by the most malignant calumnies, should quickly be vindicated, their innocence proved, their integrity vindicated either in this world, or, at farthest, at that great day when every man's work shall be tried of what sort it is, and they be declared faithful, and exalted to glory in the sight of men and angels. Little need we then regard the revilings of men, when our judgment is with our God, and he shall soon bring forth our righteousness as the light.

7. They shall be under the peculiar care of Providence, and therefore might comfortably and confidently trust, and not be afraid. If a sparrow falls not to the ground, poor and worthless as it is, without the cognizance, and only according to the will of the eternal God, whose providence extends to the very least and lowest creatures he hath made, and who hath left nothing to chance or contingency, but hath enrolled in his eternal decrees every event, the most minute as well as the most important, which cannot but come to pass according to the counsel of his will: nay, if the very hairs of their head are numbered, and not one of them can fall unknown or unnoticed, how little need they fear death or danger; their enemies, however inveterate, can have no power over them except it be given them from above; and they may be assured the least evil cannot reach them without the divine permission. They are of more value than many sparrows, and therefore not only as men, but as disciples dear to Jesus, may expect his peculiar care and protection. Note, True faith in God's providence will silence all our fears, and show them as fruitless as they are sinful, since the counsel of the Lord that shall stand.

8. According as they are faithful they will be owned or rejected by Jesus at the great day of his appearing and glory. Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father who is in heaven. Whatever reproach or danger a bold and open profession of Jesus may expose us to, it will redound to our distinguished honour in the day of Christ, when the great Judge and Lord of all shall testify his approbation of our conduct before men and angels, and present us before the throne of God, as proved and found faithful, and who shall therefore be advanced to glory, honour, and immortality. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father who is in heaven; whoever, through coward fear, or shame, starts back in the day of trial, and hides or denies his profession before men, he shall be disowned by me in the great day, rejected with abhorrence, and exposed to everlasting shame and contempt for such base apostasy. Every motive therefore, of fear or hope, urges us to be faithful.

Whatever their losses may be for Christ, they shall be abundantly gainers in the end. It is true they may be called upon to part with every thing near and dear to them, and must love the Lord Jesus and his service above all besides, ready to sacrifice every thing for him when it stands in competition with his glory. Neither father, mother, son, nor daughter must rival him in our hearts; nay, our very lives must not be dear unto us, when for his sake called to lay them down. Whatever cross the Lord Jesus calls us to endure, whatever commands he is pleased to lay upon us, we are not worthy of a name among his disciples unless we cheerfully take it up and obediently follow him; and indeed in so doing we most effectually consult our own advantage and safety. For he that findeth his life, preserving it at the expense of some base compliance, or unfaithful conduct, shall lose it, all the comforts of it shall be embittered to him here, and he shall perish eternally; so that in the issue he shall see his folly great as his sin: whilst he that loseth his life for my sake, ready to lay it down when called for, rather than take one step out of the path of duty, he shall find it at the resurrection of the just, with most ample compensation for all his losses, in the eternal blessedness of body and soul with God in glory.

Lastly, though they would find many enemies, they would meet also with faithful friends, whom, for their kindness to his disciples, he would abundantly reward. He would regard every instance of respect and affection shown to them as done to himself, and God the father will assuredly repay it. Whoever therefore received their word, or the word of those who should succeed them, and showed kindness to their persons as the ministers and prophets of the Lord, he shall receive a prophet's reward, blessed by his labours, and sharing with him in the promise of eternal happiness. And in like manner, he that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man, loving and kind to him, not for any worldly, personal, or private considerations, but purely on account of him whose image he bears, he shall receive a righteous man's reward, partaking with him that life and glory which is the gift of God in Jesus Christ, the reward not of debt but of grace. Nay, the very least, and most inconsiderable favours shown to the very meanest disciple, if but a cup of cold water, shall be remembered and recompensed at the resurrection of the just. Considerations these admirably suited to comfort them under all their trials and afflictions, and embolden them with fidelity to persevere. And we are alike interested in these things, and should be comforted and encouraged under all our troubles for the gospel's sake with the same reviving expectations.

CHAP. XI.—ANNO DOMINI, 31.

In this chapter we have, 1. The unwearied diligence of our Lord in preaching the gospel, ver. 1. 2. His discourse with the disciples of John concerning his being the Messiah, ver. 2—6. 3. The honourable testimony that Christ bore to John Baptist, ver.

7—15. 4. The sad account he gives of that generation in general, and especially of some particular places; with reference to the success both of John's ministry and of his own, ver. 16—24. 5. His thanksgiving to his Father for the wise and gracious methods he had taken in revealing the great mysteries of the gospel, ver. 25, 26. 6. His gracious call and invitation to poor sinners to come to him, and to be ruled and taught, and saved by him, ver. 27—30.

1. AND it came to pass, when Jesus had made an end of commanding his twelve disciples, [a] he departed thence to teach and to preach in their cities. 2. ¶ [b] Now, when John had heard in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples, 3. And said unto him, Art [c] thou he that should come, or do we look for another? 4. Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and shew John again [d] those things which ye do hear and see: 5. The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them. 6. [e] And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.

a Is. 63. 1, 7. John 8. 29. Acts 10. 38. Is. 48. 17. & 54. 13. & 61. 1—3. & 42. 1—4. b Luke 7. 18—30. & 3. 19. ch. 14. 3. & 4. 12. John 3. 23—36. & 1. 26—36. c Gen. 3. 15. & 22. 17. & 49. 10. Deut. 18. 15—18. Is. 35. 4. Dan. 9. 24—26. Mal. 3. 1—3. d Is. 35. 5, 6. & 29. 18. & 42. 7. & 61. 1—3. Ps. 146. 8. with ch. 10. 8. John 2. 23. & 5. 36. & 10. 25, 37, 38. & 14. 11. Is. 66. 2. Zeph. 3. 12. Zech. 11. 7. Jam. 2. 5. e Is. 8. 14, 15. Rom. 9. 32, 33. 1 Pet. 2. 7, 8. 1 Cor. 1. 23. & 2. 14. Luke 2. 34. John 6. 60, 66. ch. 13. 57. & 21. 44. & 24. 10. & 26. 31.

Verses 1—6. Having finished his instructions to his disciples whom he sent forth, he did not devolve the work to them and sit down idle himself, but departed thence to teach and preach in their cities; and in this blessed work the disciples sent from John found him employed. We are told,

1. Where John was; in prison for his fidelity in reproving Herod the king. Such reward may the zealous ministers of God sometimes expect to meet. But the fame of Jesus reached him even there: and now, no doubt, with joy he heard of his labours and success. If we are disabled, it is still a most reviving cordial to hear that the work of God prospers.

2. The question he put to Jesus, by the disciples whom he sent; Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another? art thou the promised Messiah, or not? Some have supposed John was himself in doubt, and either discouraged by his long confinement, or like the rest of his countrymen, prepossessed with the notions of a temporal Messiah; though it seems much more reasonable, from the testimony John had borne to him, to suppose, that not for his own sake he sent this message, but for the sake of his disciples, who though they had cleaved to John hitherto, yet, he being shortly to leave them and to be cut off, he introduces them to Jesus, that they might receive from him the fullest conviction of his character, and henceforward commence his disciples. Note, (1.) God will not leave his people destitute: if one able minister is removed, another is raised up. (2.) It is the duty of faithful ministers to lead their hearers off from all attachment to men, even themselves, and to direct them simply to Jesus. (3.) Where the matters of our eternal salvation are concerned, it becomes us to be inquisitive, and to see that our faith be built on sure grounds.

3. The answer Christ returned to their inquiries. He refers them to the facts which they beheld, as the most satisfactory proof of his being that Messiah who should come into the world: The blind receive their sight, the lame walk, &c. full evidences these of a divine mission, and a clear fulfilment of the prophecies which went before concerning him, Isa. xxxv. 6. lxi. 1. and the poor have the gospel preached unto them; those whom the Scribes and Pharisees despised, he received kindly, and acquainted them with the glad tidings of his grace, which many of them willingly received: or the poor preach the gospel; mean and illiterate men are endued with great gifts and abilities to propagate the doctrines of the gospel: and blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended in me; not prejudiced against him because of his poverty, the meanness of his station, and the despicable followers which attended him; but, looking above all these things, beholds in his works and words his divine character, and gives him the glory due unto his name. Note, (1.) Many treat the poor with contempt; but Christ hath taught us a different lesson; of such his church is chiefly composed, and this adds abundant honour to them. (2.) There are many things in Christ's character and gospel which minister occasion of offence to the proud and self-righteous; but faith admires the condescensions of Jesus, and adores him for that at which others stumble and fall.

7. ¶ And as they departed, Jesus began to say unto the multitudes concerning John, What went ye [f] out into the wilderness to see? A reed shaken with the * wind? 8. But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they that wear soft clothing are in kings' houses. 9. But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? yea, I say unto you, and more than a prophet. 10. For this is he, of whom it is written, [g] Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee. 11. Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a [h] greater than John the Baptist: notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is [i] greater than he. 12. And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven [k] suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. 13. For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John. 14. And if ye will receive it, this is [l] Elias, which was for to come. 15. [m] He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

f Luke 3. 7. & 7. 24—26. ch. 3. 5. & 14. 5. & 21. 26. Luke 1. 76. John 5. 35. with Eph. 4. 14.
* A reed shaken with the wind: which was usually to be seen in the wilderness.—Grotius.
g Mal. 3. 1. & 4. 5. Is. 40. 3. ch. 3. 3. Mark 1. 2. Luke 7. 27.
h Ch. 3. 11. & 13. 17. Luke 1. 15. & 3. 16. John 1. 15, 27. & 5. 35.
i Eph. 3. 8. & 1. 9. Col. 1. 26, 27. Rom. 16. 25, 26. 2 Tim. 1. 10. 1 Pet. 1. 10, 12. Heb. 11. 40.
k Or is gotten by force, and they that thrust men. Ch. 3. 3, 5. Luke 1. 16, 17, 76. & 7. 29. & 16. 16. Mal. 4. 4, 5.
l Mal. 4. 5. Luke 1. 17. John 1. 23. ch. 17. 10—13. m Ch. 13. 9, 43. Mark 4. 9, 23. & 7. 16. Rev. 2. 7, 11, 17, 29. & 3. 6, 13, 22.

Verses 7—15. When John's disciples were gone, Jesus took this opportunity of paying a high encomium on his character and ministry. He would not say it in their hearing, lest it should seem flattery; nor would have it reported to John, for he well knew how ill the best can bear even deserved praise.

1. He addresses a question to the multitude around him, many of whom had been John's hearers: What went ye out into the wilderness to see? A reed shaken with the wind? Was it mere curiosity; or did you suppose him a man unsteady and wavering? It was John's honour, that he was uniform and steady in his preaching and labours: and an intimation is contained in this question, that they who had gone so far to hear him should well consider what he had said, and inquire what profit they had got by their attendance. Note, Many go a great way to hear ministers from curiosity, who soon forget all they hear, as a dream. But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? No. His garb bespoke his deadness to the world. He neither spoke nor dressed like a courtier. His reproofs were plain and rough as his appearance: the case of those to whom he addressed himself required it. Behold, they that wear soft clothing, and live delicately, are in kings' houses; and he was utterly unlike those: his manners austere, his conduct steady. Note, (1.) In the work of the ministry, unshaken resolution is needful, which is alike unmoved by frowns or smiles. (2.) They who have heard and seen God's ministers, should often inquire what they have gained thereby, or what end they purposed by their attendance. (3.) Our dress should be according to our station. It is no evil in those who are in kings' courts to put on soft clothing; though it would be sinful in others to imitate them in expensive finery which they can neither afford, and which is unbecoming their situation or character in life.

2. He tells them plainly the distinguished honour of this eminent teacher. But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? yea, I say unto you, and more than a prophet. In general all held John for a prophet; and yet they understood not that peculiar distinction he enjoyed above all who went before him.

(1.) He was the person foretold, Mal. iii. 1. as the forerunner of the Messiah, who should more immediately prepare his way, and usher him into the world. The other prophets saw him at a distance, and only spoke of him as to appear in the fulness of time. John beheld him face to face, and pointed him out as present: Behold the Lamb of God!

(2.) Among them that are born of women, there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist. Not only his miraculous birth, his being filled with the Holy Ghost from his mother's womb, his exemplary life, rendered him singular: but, above all, the clear revelation he had of the Messiah, his baptizing him in Jordan, seeing the heavens opened and the Holy Ghost descending upon him, and the testimony he bore to him on that occasion; these made John far superior to all his predecessors. Nevertheless, he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he; the least of the ministers and apostles of Christ, or the meanest believer on him, would, in clearness of gospel light, and knowledge of Jesus, be able to see farther and to speak more distinctly of his obedience, righteousness, sufferings, death, of his grace and glory, of the spiritual nature of his kingdom, than even the most eminent saints and prophets of old. Note, (1.) True greatness is not to be measured by outward splendour, but by the gifts and graces of God's Spirit, and the manifestations which Jesus makes of himself to the soul. (2.) If we enjoy greater advantages than others, our condemnation will be the greater if we do not profit under them.

(3.) By John the gospel of the kingdom began to be preached, and God owned his ministry with eminent success; for from the days of John the Baptist until now, a space of little more than two years, the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force; the publicans and harlots, who by the Scribes and Pharisees would be reckoned intruders, convinced now of their guilt, and turned to the Lord, eagerly pressed for a place in the Messiah's kingdom: and multitudes of others, awakened to a discovery of their sin and danger, eagerly embraced the declarations of grace, and with a holy violence strove to enter in at the strait gate. Note, (1.) Wherever divine grace hath quickened the soul, there salvation will be made the great concern, and eager diligence used to make our calling and election sure. (2.) It is a distinguished honour conferred on any minister of the gospel, when God is pleased to make him eminently instrumental in calling sinners to flee from the wrath to come. (3.) Sluggish and negligent triflers in religion may never hope for admission into the kingdom of God.

(4.) In the ministry of John, the Old Testament dispensation closed and the New began. For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John; in types and predictions they pointed to the future Messiah; all the ritual service of the temple being designed to direct the worshippers to him; and viewed in this light, it appears truly glorious; but now he was come, in whom all these were to be fulfilled. And if ye will receive it, and can credit my assertion, this is Elias which was for to come; not Elijah personally; but he who was spoken of, Mal. iv. 5. and who came in the spirit and power of Elijah, like him in dress and manners, and imitating his zeal. He that hath ears to hear let him hear; which intimates that these were things that deserved attentively to be weighed, and, though dark and difficult to be believed, were truths of great importance. Note, (1.) The word of God must be examined with serious concern: it is not a slight and cursory perusal which will be sufficient to let us into the meaning; deep meditation, fervent prayer, and comparing spiritual things with spiritual, being necessary to a right understanding of the mysteries of grace. (2.) It is not hearing, but receiving the truth in the light and love of it, which can make us wise unto salvation.

16. ¶ [n] But whereunto shall I liken this generation? It is like unto children sitting in the markets, and calling unto their fellows, 17. And saying, We have piped * unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned unto you, and ye have not lamented. 18. [o] For John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say, He hath a devil. 19. [p] The son of man came eating and drinking, and they say, Behold a man gluttonous, and a wine-bibber, a friend of publicans and sinners. [q] But wisdom is justified of her children. 20. ¶ [r] Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not: 21. Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! [s] for if the mighty works, which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, [t] they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes. 22. But I say unto you, [u] It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment than for you. 23. And thou, Capernaum, [x] which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works which have been done in thee had been done in [y] Sodom, it would have remained until this day. 24. But I say unto you, [z] That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment than for thee.

[n] Luke 7. 30—35. Rev. 3. 15—17. Is. 28. 9—13. Jer. 5. 1—5. 1 Cor. 12. 6, 7.

* We have piped—We have mourned: The Jews had their pipes for two uses, for joy and for lamentation: to this double use of pipes, which children imitated, our Lord refers in this expression. —Dr Whitby.

[o] Ch. 3. 4. Luke 1. 15. 1 Cor. 9. 27. 1 Pet. 5. 2. with John 10. 20. ch. 10. 25.

[p] Ch. 9. 11. Luke 7. 36. & 15. 1, 2. 1 Cor. 9. 19. Rom. 15. 2.

[q] Phil. 2. 15, 16. & 3. 7—14. 1 Pet. 2. 7. Rom. 1. 26. 1 Cor. 1. 23, 24.

[r] Luke 10. 13—15. Is. 1. 2. Ps 81. 11. Hos. 11. 2, 7. Ezek. 3. 17.

[s] Ezek. 3. 6, 7. with Is. xxiii. Ezek. xxvi—xxviii. Jon. 3. 7, 8.

[t] 1 Kin. 21. 29. Jon. 3. 10.

[u] Luke 12. 47, 48. & 10. 12—14. Heb. 6. 4—8. & 10. 26—31. ch. 10. 15. ver. 24. Lam. 4. 6.

[x] Gen. 11. 4. Deut. 1. 28. Is. 14. 13. Jer. 51. 53. Ezek. 16. 20. & 32. 18, 23. Lam. 4. 6. Luke 10. 15

[y] Gen. 13. 13. & xix. Exek. 16. 46, 47.

[z] See ver. 22.

Verses 16—24. Having spoken of the excellence of John's ministry, he cannot but reflect upon the inexcusable perverseness and stubbornness of that generation, which had for the most part continued in their impenitence, notwithstanding John's preaching, and in opposition to all the miracles and means of grace which they had enjoyed under his own ministry and that of his apostles. For which an awful reckoning remained.

1. He is at a loss for a similitude, whereunto he shall liken the men of that generation, they acted so contradictorily and absurdly; like sullen and froward children, that, when their playfellows use every little art to engage them, mimicking a wedding or a funeral, and inviting them to dance with them, or in mournful responses to answer them, morose and ill-natured, they will join in neither. Such was the temper of the Scribes and Pharisees, with their disciples, respecting the ministry of Christ and his forerunner. They used different means, but neither could prevail. John called to mourning, preaching, repentance, and humiliation, and in his own abstemious and self-denying conduct set them an example of mortification; and, so far from being affected thereby, they treated him as melancholy, and possessed of a devil. The Son of man, with the sweetest music of gospel-grace, sought to engage their minds, and by every kind word and deed endeavoured to insinuate himself into their affections; free and open in his manners, affable to all, joining with them in partaking the innocent refreshments of nature, and ready to converse with the chief of sinners for their good; and immediately they brand him as a glutton, a wine-bibber, a friend of publicans and sinners, an encourager and a partaker with them in their immoralities. But wisdom is justified of her children. They who are by grace made acquainted with the truth, will approve all the means and methods which God is pleased to use, though others reject and despise them: or Christ, the wisdom of God, will be acquitted of all these malicious accusations of wicked men, by all who truly become the children of God, and are enlightened to know his true character. They will admire and adore him for what others revile and malign him. Note, (1.) There is nothing so absurd or contradictory that the enemies of the gospel will not say, and do, in order to vent their malice against the ministers and truths of God. (2.) God uses every means with sinners, declaring the terrors of his law and the comforts of his gospel, sending them by turns mercies, and judgments, and all to work on their obdurate hearts, or to leave them inexcusable in their impenitence. (3.) Different ministers have different manners of address, and are more particularly suited to the dispositions and tempers of some than of others: some are struck with a Boanerges, some melted under a Barnabas, a son of consolation; some are affected with the more austere manners of a John, others engaged by the sweetness and affability of Jesus. Every one hath his gift, and all for the edification of the body of Christ. (4.) The most powerful and engaging ministrations are not always crowned with success; but, when we have discharged our souls, and men refuse to hear the voice of truth, of reason, of conscience, neither drawn by the bonds of love, nor driven to God by all the terrors of wrath to come, then their blood is on their own heads; we are free. (5.) The greatest, the best of men, yea, He that was more than man, have been reviled as mad or libertines, as preaching doctrines of despair or licentiousness. Let it not seem strange if the same things be said of us, and if what is our highest honour in God's sight, be made matter of severest reproach. He is near who will justify us. (6.) Though the gospel and the ministers of it in general, be slighted and reviled of men, to some their word will be a savour of life, and they will justify God in all his ways, being themselves living instances of the efficacy of the methods he hath taken to bring poor sinners to himself.

2. As he reproached the obstinacy of that generation in general, he particularly upbraids the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not; for to lead them thereunto was the great end of all his miracles and preaching; but it had been in vain: and how shall they escape who neglect so great salvation? they must needs perish who reject the only remedy that can cure them: and such wilful obstinacy must bring down greater damnation. Note, God is pleased to dispense the means of grace, as well as the gifts of providence, sovereignly. Why one place should enjoy them whilst another less guilty is abandoned to darkness and ignorance, can only be resolved into the divine pleasure: Even so, Father, for it seemed good in thy sight.

Two instances are particularly brought of cities which had enjoyed the greatest means and mercies, and yet were more hardened than even the vilest of the heathen.

1. Wo unto thee, Chorazin, wo unto thee Bethsaida, places in Galilee peculiarly favoured with Christ's miracles and teaching, and yet the generality of the inhabitants persisted in their impenitence; though had the like mighty works been done, even in Tyre and Sidon, abandoned to wickedness as they were, it is to human appearance highly probable that, like Nineveh of old, they would have repented in sackcloth and ashes, and humbled themselves to prevent the impending ruin. Therefore, at the judgment day their doom shall be more tolerable than that of those cities, which, by rejecting the gospel, fall under the most aggravated guilt. Note, An awful day is near, when the eternal state of all must be determined; when all the means of grace and mercies we have enjoyed must be accounted for; and none will receive so great damnation as those who have abused them, and, in opposition to the clearest light of the gospel, have persisted in the darkness of error and sin.

2. Capernaum with peculiar emphasis is threatened; Thou, most dignified by the residence of Jesus, and distinguished with singular advantages above all other cities, which art exalted to heaven, in outward privileges, shalt be brought down to hell; falling the deeper into eternal misery from the heights of abused mercy. Even Sodom's doom will be more tolerable than hers; for if the like miracles, and long continued ministry of Jesus had been vouchsafed to that city, it seems highly probable, ten righteous at least, would have been found, and the threatened ruin averted; but if Sodom was not spared, with less guilt, Capernaum, with greater, must needs sink under more aggravated ruin. Note, Many of this day seldom think of the inestimable talent committed to them in the oracles of God and the gospel of his Son; but for these things a solemn account must soon be given, and wo to the sinner whose profiting at that day shall not appear.

25. ¶ [a] At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. 26. Even so, Father: [b] for so it seemed good in thy sight. 27. [c] All things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father: [d] neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him. 28. ¶ [e] Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. 29. [f] Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; [g] for I am meek and lowly in heart: [h] and ye shall find rest unto your souls. 30. [i] For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

a Luke 10. 21. Ps. 8. 2, 4. Deut. 10. 14. 1 Cor. 1. 21, 26, 27. John 9. 40, 41. ch. 16. 17. & 13. 11. Ps. 25. 8, 9. Is. 29. 14, 18 & 44. 18. & 32. 4. & 54. 13. & 61. 1. Jam. 2. 5. 2 Cor. 2. 16. & 4. 3—6.

b Eph. 1. 4, 11. 2 Tim. 1. 9. Rom. 5. 21.

c Ch. 28. 18. Ps. 8. 7. John 3. 35. & 13. 3. & 17. 2. 1 Cor. 15. 25, 27. Eph. 1. 21, 23. Heb. 1. 4. & 2. 8. Phil. 2. 9. Is. 52. 13. & 53. 12.

d John 1. 18. & 6. 44, 46. & 10. 15. & 14. 9, 10.

e Is. 28. 12. & 40. 29. & 55. 1—7. Jer. 3. 11, 22. & 6. 16. John 6. 35, 37. Luke 15. 17. & 18. 13. Rom. 7. 24. Jer. 31. 18—20.

f Col. 2. 6. Gal. 6. 2. 1 Pet. 2. 21. Eph. 5. 2.

g Rom. 8. 29. ch. 12. 19. & 21. 5. Luke 9. 54—56. John 8. 29, 49. 1 Pet. 2. 22, 23. Heb. 5. 7, 8. Zech. 9. 9. Phil. 2. 7, 8.

h Jer. 6. 16. Heb. 4. 3. 1 Prov. 3. 17. Acts 15. 10. Gal. 5. 1. 1 John 5. 3.

Verses 25—30. Though in general the perverseness of the many afforded the most melancholy prospect of their destruction, yet did not the gospel word return in vain. There was still a remnant, according to the election of grace, who heard and believed.

1. Our blessed Lord here offers up his thanks to God the Father for the children he had given him, though few, and in the eyes of men despicable, poor, and illiterate, yet precious to Jesus and the travail of his soul.

[1.] He addresses God as his Father, in whose love he had the most assured interest, and as the Lord of heaven and earth, the Sovereign Disposer of all things, able to do whatever he pleased, according to the counsels of his own will. Note, Prayer is then a pleasing service when we can call God, Father; approach him with confidence, and, persuaded of his all-sufficiency to supply our wants, can quietly cast our care upon him.

[2.] He adores his sovereignty in being pleased to hide the glorious truths of gospel grace from the wise and prudent, and revealing them to such as, comparatively speaking, respecting natural abilities, learning, and human accomplishments, were vastly their inferiors; but if God is pleased to choose these babes, Jesus acquiesces in his Father's holy will, approves of, and delights in it. Note, (1.) It is a mortifying truth, and of hardest digestion to the proud heart of man, that those whom the world admires as great, learned, and wise, the deepest scholars, the most profound statesmen, the most reverend doctors, and acute metaphysicians, are not merely on a level with the meanest clown, respecting the knowledge that maketh wise unto salvation, but for the most part farther removed from it; and, according to God's all-wise decrees, externally excluded, given up to learned ignorance, and left to the spiritual blindness of their fallen hearts. (2.) Those whom God chooses for his people are usually such as man despises, poor in every sense, in station, abilities, human literature, and all that a foolish world admires. Some few indeed are found of the wise, mighty, and noble, but not many; enough to show what God could do if he pleased; while we are humbly to acquiesce in what he hath done. Yet this will ever be, as it was from the beginning, a stone of stumbling and rock of offence. Have any of the rulers and Pharisees believed? (3.) Whatever difference is made between one and another, is purely owing to God's sovereign will and pleasure, and not to any thing foreseen in them, or done, or to be done by them; and therefore, in all God's dispensations of providence or grace, if a curious inquirer, or disputer of this world, inquires into the reasons why and wherefore God thus acts, we have but one to give, Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight. They who are dissatisfied with this reason, must close their Bibles, and expatiate in the boundless regions of scepticism and infidelity in search of a better.

2. Christ invites those babes, whom the Father hath given him, to come unto him, with kindest assurances both of his power and willingness to help and save them.

(1.) He declares the plenitude of power with which he is invested for the comfort of all who should apply to him for refuge. All things are delivered unto me of my Father. As Mediator he hath received a delegated authority, distinct from that which he essentially possesses as God over all, blessed for ever. The work of reconciliation, and all the blessings of grace and glory, are lodged in his hands. And no man knoweth the Son but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him. It is not the effort of man's skill and labour, but a divine revelation, which alone can make known to us the true character of God, his triune existence and perfections, together with the designs of his grace, according to the tenor of the everlasting covenant. And as there is a mutual consciousness between the Divine Persons in the undivided Godhead, He, who from eternity lay in the bosom of the Father, is alone able to make him known, and to communicate his eternal counsels to us, being invested with his mediatorial character for this very purpose. Note, (1.) There is no true knowledge of God, or intercourse to be maintained with him, but in and by Jesus Christ. (2.) To those whom Christ takes for his disciples he manifests himself as he doth not unto the world, John xiv. 22.

(2.) He declares his readiness to receive every poor sinner who comes to him weary and heavy laden, and invites them to lay down their burdens of sin and sorrow at his feet, that they may find rest unto their souls. The persons invited are all that labour and are heavy laden; those who are convinced of their guilt and danger, feel the insupportable burden of sin, and are weary, not merely of the burdensome rites of the ceremonial law, but of the bondage of corruption. And all without distinction of nation, or difference in the measure of their guilt and sinfulness, are invited. Jesus rejects none because of the depth of their miseries, who do not themselves reject his mercies.

(3.) The invitation is, Come to me, willing to receive and able to relieve, all the wants of the miserable and the desperate, who by faith cast their care upon me, renouncing every other hope and dependence, placing their trust on me alone as their Saviour to the uttermost, and taking me henceforward for their Lord and Master. (1.) The promise made to such is, I will give you rest, pardon and peace of conscience to silence the accusations of guilt, power against sin to deliver you from the wearisome bondage of corruption, setting the soul at liberty from all terrifying fears, and enabling you, on sure foundations, to expect a part in the eternal rest which remaineth for the people of God. (2.) The dutiful returns for such mercies are here prescribed: Take my yoke upon you. We must receive Christ in all his offices; as the King to rule in and over us, as well as the Prophet to teach, and the Priest to atone for us. Obedience to his gospel must follow faith in his promises; and he asks nothing from us but that we should copy his example and be like him, that we may be meet for the enjoyment of him: Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly of heart; tempers which must ever characterize the disciples of Jesus, in opposition to that pride, perverseness, passion, and self-will, which are natural to the fallen mind. He was meek under every provocation, patient towards the dulness of his scholars; lowly in heart, condescending to the meanest, and submitting for our sakes to every abasement; and when we learn to be like him, we shall find rest to our souls; such divine dispositions will bring a present heaven to the soul, and enable us to enter into rest here below, happy in communion with Jesus, and stamped with his image. Nor may we think his yoke implies any thing grievous. No: His yoke is easy, and his burden light: his service is perfect freedom. Even the afflictions, temptations, and difficulties we may meet, are to be counted all joy; since so powerful will be the assistance of his grace, so abundant his consolations, and so blessed the issue, that we have reason continually to go on our way rejoicing, and to own, to his eternal praise, and for the encouragement of others, that his ways are ways of pleasantness, and all his paths are peace.

CHAP. XII.—ANNO DOMINI, 31.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's clearing of the law of the fourth commandment, concerning the sabbath-day, and vindicating it from some superstitious notions advanced by the Jewish teachers; showing that works of necessity and mercy are to be done in that day, ver. 1—13. 2. The prudence, humility, and self-denial of our Lord Jesus in working his miracles, ver. 14—22. 3. Christ's answer to the blasphemous cavils and calumnies of the Scribes and Pharisees, who imputed his casting out devils to a compact with the devil, ver. 22—37. 4. Christ's reply to a tempting demand of the Scribes and Pharisees, challenging him to show them a sign from heaven, ver. 38—45. 5. Christ's judgment about his kindred and relations, ver. 46. ad finem.

1. AT that time Jesus went on the sabbath-day through the corn; and his disciples were an hungered, and * began to pluck the ears of corn, and to eat. 2. But when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto him, [a] Behold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do upon the sabbath-day. 3. But he said unto them, Have ye not read [b] what David did when he was an hungered, and they that were with him; 4. How he entered into the house * of God, and did eat the shew-bread, which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them which were with him, [c] but only for the priests? 5. Or have ye not read in the law, [d] how that on the sabbath-days the priests in the temple † profane the sabbath, and are blameless? 6. But I say unto you, That [e] in this place is one greater than the temple. 7. But if ye had known what this meaneth, [f] I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless. 8. For the [g] Son of man is Lord even of the sabbath-day. 9. ¶ [h] And when he was departed thence, he went into their synagogue: 10. And, behold, there was a man which had his hand withered. And they asked him, saying, [i] Is it lawful to ‡ heal on the sabbath-days? that they might accuse him. 11. And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you, that shall have one sheep, and if it [k] fall into a pit on the sabbath-day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out? 12. How much then is ‖ a man better than a sheep; wherefore it is lawful to do well on the sabbath days. 13. Then saith he to the man, [l] Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it forth; and it was restored whole, like as the other.

* According to the permission of the law. Deut. 23. 25. Mark 2. 23—28. Luke 6. 1—5.

a Ver. 10. Luke 13. 14. John 5. 10, 16. with Exod. 20. 9. & 23. 12. & 31. 15. & 35. 2. Num. 15. 32—36.

b 1 Sam. 21. 3—6. Mark 2. 25, 26. Luke 6 3, 4.

* Viz. the tabernacle; the temple not having been then built.—Dr Campbell.

c Exod. 25. 30. & 29. 32, 33. Lev. 8. 31. & 24. 6, 9.

d Num. 28. 9, 10.

† In killing, flaying, washing, and burning the sacrifices, &c. as well as on another day.

e Mal. 3. 1. Hag. 2. 7. 2 Chr. 6. 18. ch. 23. 18.

f Hos. 6. 6. ch. 9. 13. 1 Sam. 15. 22. Eccl. 5. 1. Is. 1. 11—15. Mic. 6. 6—8.

g Dan. 7. 13. ch. 16. 13. Mark 2. 27.

h Mark 3. 1—5. Luke 6. 6—10.

‡ The Pharisaical tradition forbade the use of artificial and natural physic upon the sabbath, unless in cases of extreme necessity; and not content with this, they would apply the same to miraculous cures—Diodati.

i Luke 13. 14. & 14. 3. John 5. 10—16. & 9. 16. ch. 22. 17.

k Exod. 23. 4, 5. Deut. 22. 4.

‖ The man might have to work for his own and family's subsistence.

l 1 Kin. 13. 6. Luke 13. 13. Acts 3. 6, 7. Mark 3. 5.

Verses 1—13. Those who are most corrupt in their morals, sometimes think to atone for the defect by their rigid zeal for the rituals of religion; as was the case of the Pharisees, who, whilst they lowered the other commands to mere letter, stretched the strict observation of the sabbatical rest to an extreme that was never designed. Which false explication our Lord confutes, and shows that works of mercy and charity may be practised, consistent with the most religious observance of the sabbath-day.

1. The occasion given for this discourse arose from the invidious reflections of the Pharisees on the disciples of Jesus, for rubbing the ears of corn in their hands on the sabbath-day, as they passed through the fields, and eating them, being hungry. This the Pharisees observed, and mentioned to Jesus as a thing unlawful to be done on the sabbath-day. The law had allowed the gathering of such ears of corn, Deut. xxiii. 25. but they regarded the bodily labour of rubbing them in their hands as a transgression of the rest enjoined, according to the traditions of the elders. Note, (1.) Christ's disciples were inured to want and coarse fare: we must not count it hard, if God in his providence at any time brings us into the like straits, and causes us to know what it is to be hungry. (2.) The most innocent actions are liable to the most perverse interpretations from those who wait for an opportunity to find fault.

2. Christ vindicates the practice of his disciples, by allowed precedents or unanswerable arguments.

[1.] By allowed precedents.

(1.) In the case of David and his men; who, being pressed with hunger, was, with the high priest's consent, permitted to eat the shew-bread, which none ordinarily might do but the priests alone. And if it was adjudged lawful to dispense with a positive institution of God to satisfy David's hunger, it surely could not be thought sinful, in like circumstances, to dispense merely with the traditions of the elders. Note, Where life itself is in danger through hunger, necessity, if it does not justify, should at least be admitted as the excuse for deviating from the ordinary rule of justice. See Prov. vi. 30.

(2.) In the case of the priests, who were obliged to do much servile work on the sabbath-day, such as slaying, skinning, and cutting up the beasts for sacrifice, and yet none could conceive that a transgression of the commandment; and how much less the merely rubbing out a few ears of corn in their hands for necessary food. But it might be objected they were not priests, and that the temple service had a particular dispensation; therefore,

[2.] He adds arguments to the examples he produced.

(1.) I say unto you, that in this place is one greater than the temple. And if the priests were blameless in their service, much more were the disciples of Jesus allowed to satisfy their hunger when attending on their Master, who was the Lord of the temple, in dignity and holiness infinitely greater, having all the fulness of the Godhead bodily, and from him alone that fabric derived all the sanctity it possessed.

(2.) If ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy and not sacrifice, Hos. vi. 6. ye would not have condemned the guiltless. They were ignorant of those Scriptures they pretended to urge; for if they had understood them, they would have observed, that the great commandment of charity was vastly superior to mere ritual observances, and therefore would never have condemned the disciples for thus satisfying the cravings of hunger on the sabbath-day. Note, Ignorance of God's word is generally the cause of rash censures on our brethren, and this is especially culpable in those who pretend to teach others.

(3.) The Son of man is Lord even of the sabbath-day. He who enjoined the rest, and prescribed the rule on Mount Sinai, must needs know what obedience himself required, and best interpret his own mind, and be fully authorized to make any alteration he should think fit. Thus now, though the commandment of observing a seventh day still is in force, he hath transferred it from the last day to the first day of the week, called from him the Lord's day.

3. By the cure of a paralytic man in the synagogue on a sabbath-day, some time after, he took occasion farther to vindicate works of mercy and charity as most lawful and acceptable to God on that day.

[1.] The person on whom the cure was wrought had a withered arm, so that he was disabled from labour; yet, though unable to work, whilst he could walk he failed not to be at the place of worship. And in the way of duty we may hope for a blessing.

[2.] The Pharisees, ever on the watch, suspecting Jesus would cure him, questioned him concerning his thoughts of the lawfulness of healing on the sabbath-day, which their doctors, except in cases of extremity, had forbidden; and their design herein was to accuse him, either to the Sanhedrim, if he acted contrary to their determinations, as a sabbath-breaker, or to the people, if he declared it unlawful, and contradicted his own vindication of his disciples.

[3.] Christ answers them by an appeal to their own conduct: if one of their sheep fell into a pit, none scrupled to draw it out on the sabbath-day: how much then was a man better than a sheep, and his distresses rather to be relieved! No doubt there fore could be made but that it was lawful to do good on the sabbath-day.

[4.] Without delay, and for ought that appears, without waiting for a request from the poor patient, who might, seeing the temper of these men, be discouraged from making application, Jesus bids him stretch out his hand, and power accompanied the command: he stretched it forth, and, to the astonishment of the beholders, it was restored whole as the other. Note, Like this withered arm are our souls, impotent of themselves to every thing that is good, and yet the calls to believe and obey, notwithstanding our inability for both, are neither absurd nor unreasonable, since Christ hath promised to accompany his word with the efficacy of his Spirit, and enabled his chosen for that which he commands.

14. ¶ Then the Pharisees went out, and [n] held a counsel against him, how they might destroy him. 15. But when [o] Jesus knew it, he withdrew himself from thence: and [p] great multitudes followed him, and he healed them all; 16. [q] And charged them that they should not make him known: 17. That [r] it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, 18. [s] Behold my servant whom I have chosen; my beloved in whom my soul is well pleased: [t] I will put my Spirit upon him, and he shall [u] shew judgment to the Gentiles. 19. [x] He shall not strive, nor cry; neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets. 20. [y] A bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench, till he send forth judgment unto victory. 21. [z] And in his name shall the Gentiles trust.

n Or took counsel. Mark 3. 6, 7. Luke 6. 11. John 10. 39. & 11. 53. with ch. 10. 23.
o John 2. 25. Ps. 139. 2. Heb. 4. 13.
p Ch. 4. 24, 25. & 19. 2. Is. 35. 3—6.
q Ch. 8. 3. & 9. 30. & 17. 9. Mark 7. 36. & 5. 43. Luke 5. 14.
r Is. 44. 46. Num. 23. 19. Tit. 1. 2. Acts 10. 43.
s Is. 42. 1—4. ch. 3. 17. & 17. 5. Col. 1. 13. John 1. 18.
t Is. 61. 1. John 3. 34.
u Gen. 49. 10. Is. 11. 10. & 54. 3. & 49. 6.
x Ch. 11. 29. Zech. 9. 9.
y Is. 40. 11. & 61. 1. Ps. 147. 3. Job 36. 7, 10. Lam. 3. 31—33. Ezek. 34. 16. Amos 8. 7.
z Is. 11. 10. Ps. 9. 10. Rom. 15. 9—12. ver. 18.

Verses 14—21. Exasperated, instead of convinced by his preaching and miracles, we are told here,

1. The malicious designs of the Pharisees. They met in consultation, determined some way or other to put an end to his obnoxious discourses and his life together; for which this last pretended breach of the sabbath might afford them a handle; cloaking with zeal for religion the blackest crimes of hell.

2. Christ hereupon chose to retire, and avoid the danger he foresaw, his hour not being yet come: but still he was attended, even in his retirement, by multitudes, to whom he continued his accustomed mercies, healing all their infirmities; but charged them that they should not make him known; not desiring fame from his miracles, and now particularly willing to be concealed from the malice of his persecutors. Note, God's approbation, not man's applause, is what we should covet.

3. The fulfilment of the Scripture herein is observed, Isa. xlii. 1—4. Behold, with wonder and astonishment, my servant: so low he humbled himself, who counted it not robbery to be equal with God: whom I have chosen; designed for the office of Mediator, and now qualified for the work of redemption; my beloved, in whom I am well pleased; from eternity the object of his complacence; and in his person, office, and character as the Messiah, God the Father delighted, and by repeated declarations from heaven, expressed his approbation of his Son. I will put my Spirit upon him, anointing him with the oil of gladness above his fellows, bestowing such a plenitude of gifts and graces upon him as may enable him gloriously to discharge and accomplish his arduous undertaking: and he shall show judgment to the Gentiles, preaching to them that gospel wherein God's righteousness is revealed, and his eternal determinations concerning sinful men is made known; he shall not strive, with noise and ostentation setting up his kingdom; neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets, contentious or clamorous against his opposers; a bruised reed shall he not break; the broken-hearted, weak, and trembling sinner he will bind up and strengthen; and smoking flax shall he not quench; those who have but the beginnings of spiritual life, in whom the graces are feeble, and much darkness and infirmity remains, he will quicken, and blow the smoking flax into a flame; till he sends forth judgment unto victory; by the power of his gospel dispelling the darkness of error, delivering the soul from the bondage of corruption, and causing his grace to reign through righteousness unto eternal life, perfecting in the hearts of his people the salvation he hath begun. And in his name shall the Gentiles trust; the heathen nations shall become obedient to the faith, be incorporated with his chosen people, and place all their hopes of salvation on the blood and righteousness alone of this divine Redeemer.

22. ¶ [a] Then was brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind and dumb; and he [b] healed him, insomuch that the [c] blind and dumb both spake and saw. 23. And all the people were amazed, and said, [d] Is not this the son of David? 24. ¶ [e] But when the Pharisees heard it, they said, This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub the prince of the devils. 25. And [f] Jesus knew their thoughts, and said unto them, [g] Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand: 26. And if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself; how shall then his kingdom stand? 27. And if I [h] by Beelzebub cast out devils, [i] by whom do your children cast them out? [k] therefore they shall be your judges. 28. But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then [l] the kingdom of God is come unto you. 29. [m] Or else how can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man? and then he will spoil his house. 30. [n] He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad. 31. Wherefore I say unto you, [o] All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. 32. And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, [p] it shall not be forgiven him, a Luke 11. 14. ch. 9. 32.

b Mark 7. 35—37. & 9. 17—26. c Ps. 51. 15. Isa. 29. 18. & 32. 3, 4. & 35. 5, 6. Acts 26. 18.
d Ch. 9. 33. John 3. 3. & 7. 31. ch. 1. 1. & 15. 22. Luke 1. 32. Rom. 1. 3. & 9. 5.
e Ch. 9. 34. Mark 3. 22—30. Luke 11. 15—23. ch. 10. 25. f Ver. 15. ch. 9. 4. John 2. 25. & 21. 17. Heb. 4. 13. Rev. 2. 23.
g Gal. 5. 15. Is. 9. 21. & 19. 2, 3. Mark 3. 23—26. Luke 11. 17, 18. Rev. 16. 19. & 17. 16, 17.
h Or Beelzebul. And so ver. 24.
i Mark 9. 38, 39. Luke 9. 49, 50. Acts 19. 13. k Luke 19. 22. 1 John 3. 20. to condemn you.
l Luke 9. 60. Mark 1. 14, 15. Dan. 2. 44. & 7. 14. Luke 1. 33. Heb. 12. 28. Is. 9. 6, 7. the gospel-dispensation.
m Is. 49. 24, 25. John 16. 11. Luke 11. 21, 22. Mark 3. 27.
n Luke 11. 23. & 9. 50. Mark 9. 40. o Mark 3. 28. Luke 12. 10. Heb. 6. 6. & 10. 26—29. 1 John 5. 16. with 1 Tim. 1. 13, 15, 16. Heb. 7. 25. 1 John 1. 9. & 2. 1, 2. Ezek. 33. 11. Is. 1. 18. & 55. 7. & 44. 22. p Mark 3. 29. Heb. 6. 4—8. & 10. 26—31. 1 Sam. 2. 25. 2 Thes. 1. 9. Is. 22. 14.

neither in this world, neither in the world to come. 33. [o] Either make the tree good, and his fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit [*] corrupt: for the tree is known by his fruit. 34. O [p] generation of vipers, how can ye, being evil, speak good things? for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. 35. A [q] good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things: and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things. 36. But I say unto you, [r] That every [†] idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment. 37. For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned.

[o] Ch. 7. 17. Luke 6. 43—45. John 15. 5.

[*] Grotius understands this as if our Lord had said "As a tree is to be judged by its fruit, so is a man by his actions: but now you allow my miracles to be good, and yet attribute them to the devil!"

[p] Ch. 3. 7. & 23. 33. Luke 6. 45. Job 32. 18—20.

[q] Ch. 13. 52. Prov. 10. 20, 21. 1 Sam. 24. 13. Is. 32. 6. Jer. 6. 7. Luke 6. 45.

[r] Jude 15. Eccl. 12. 14. Rom. 14. 12. Exod. 20. 7. Lev. 19. 12. Eph. 5. 4. 6. Prov. 18. 1.

[†] Discourse tending to innocent mirth, to exhilarate the spirits is not idle discourse; as the time spent in necessary recreations is not idle time.—Doddridge.

Verses 22—37. Christ had before shown his power over Satan's kingdom dispossessing him from the bodies as well as souls of many. We have here,

1. Another instance of his curing one possessed by a devil; a man blind and dumb through the power of this wicked spirit. The emblem of the sinner, whose eyes the god of this world hath blinded, and whose lips are sealed up from prayer and praise, and all conversation to the use of edifying. One word of Jesus restored his lost senses; his sight and speech were perfectly recovered.

2. The people admired the astonishing efficacy of the word of Jesus, and reasonably concluded, Is not this the son of David? the promised Messiah? but the Pharisees, when they heard it, stung with envy, and obstinately hardened against conviction, with blasphemous cavil and abusive insult replied, This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub, the prince of the devils. The fact they could not deny; but imputed the miracle to a compact with the devil. To such miserable shifts are they driven who, determined in infidelity, refuse to submit to the evidence of truth.

3. Christ refutes so base an accusation. He knew their malicious designs, and heard their words of blasphemy, and therefore he at large vindicates himself. Their assertion was absurd, and self-contradictory. It is an allowed maxim, that every kingdom, city, or family, divided against itself, must hasten its own dissolution: impossible therefore would it be for Satan to think of supporting his dominion by those means which naturally must subvert it; the miracles of Christ being wrought in confirmation of those doctrines of truth and holiness, which directly tend to destroy the works of the devil, ver. 25, 26. Add to this, that among themselves they admitted some exorcists did cast out devils by the power of God, Acts xix. 13. Mark ix. 38. Why then should they not by parity of reason admit that his miracles evidenced a divine power? Therefore these men should rise up in judgment and condemn them for this partiality and blasphemy. It being then incontestably apparent that Christ's miracles were effected by the Spirit of God, he urges this as a proof that the kingdom of God, of the Messiah promised to bruise the serpents head, was actually now come unto them: for if this had not been the case, how could it be possible that he should thus dispossess the devil from the bodies and souls of men? This wicked spirit, as a strong man armed, will keep fast hold of his prey, and guard his house. Nothing but a superior power can bind his arms, and rescue his prisoners from him; which Jesus had done, and therefore proved that he received no assistance from him, but was his superior and conqueror. Besides, the very nature of their kingdoms being directly opposite, there can be no fellowship; yea, there is implacable enmity between them; and all who league with the one are regarded as rebels against the other; so that they who gather not to Christ as their Shepherd, and list under his banners as their King, are scattered exposed to his wrath, and devoted to destruction. So far, therefore, from a confederacy between Christ and Satan, there is open war between them, and not even a neutrality permitted. Note, (1.) Divisions are the surest way to destruction in church and state. (2.) The devil hath a potent kingdom erected in the world, and he will do his utmost to support it: but Christ is come to destroy his dominion, and will finally prevail. (3.) They who are under the influence of prejudice, will blame that very conduct in those they dislike which they approve in those they love. (4.) The destruction of Satan's power in the soul, is the work of the Spirit of God; and whenever that is evidently seen, there the kingdom of God is assuredly come. (5.) Coldness and indifference in the cause of Christ, will be regarded as enmity against him: we must be hearty in his service, or we shall be dealt with as traitors.

4. From what hath been observed, he takes occasion to caution his hearers against that unpardonable crime, blasphemy against the Holy Ghost. All other sins, however deep, multiplied, or aggravated, may be forgiven, Christ's blood being a sufficient atonement for them; and whosoever pleads it in faith, will find pardon, even those who reviled or crucified him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven, neither in this world, nor in the world to come. And this blasphemy is not any denial of his divine Person, or opposition to his work through ignorance, nor any resistance against the ministry of his word, nor wilful sin committed against his light and warnings: but "a wilful and despiteful rejection of the Spirit of grace; the "imputing his miraculous operations and illuminations to diabo-"lical agency; the contradicting and denying the doctrines he "reveals; and this through obstinate malice, in opposition to a "man's own light and conscience." This is a direct sin against our remedy, and must needs be attended with inevitable perdition.

5. Christ addresses the Pharisees, convicting them of the wickedness of their hearts by the malice which appeared in their lips. It was as absurd for them, who committed such blasphemies, to pretend to sanctity, as to expect good fruit from an evil tree. For as a man's heart is to be discerned by his words and actions, it plainly appeared by what they spoke out of the abundance of their hearts, that they were a generation of vipers thrusting out their envenomed tongues against Christ and blaspheming him, the natural effect of the evil which dwelt within them. A good man, out of the good treasure of his heart replenished with divine grace, bringing forth good things, such as are for the use of edifying and for the glory of God. But an evil man, whose spirit is unrenewed, out of the evil treasure of corruption, which is natural to him, bringeth forth evil, in the corrupt communication which proceeds out of his mouth, and the polluted streams in his life and conversation, which break forth from the inexhausted source within. And if not an idle word passes without the divine notice, but we must answer for it in a judgment-day, how much more terrible must be the blasphemer's guilt? With what circumspection then should we keep the door of our lips, when our eternal state is to be determined thereby, and our words must all be produced at the bar of God as evidences of our justification or condemnation, and sentence proceed accordingly! We may learn hence, (1.) That unless the heart be renewed by the power of God's Spirit, nothing but evil, and that continually, can proceed out of it. (2.) Our words are the index of our minds, and by our general course of communication, our state God-ward may be easily discovered. (3.) The solemn account that we must one day make for every word that is in our tongue, should be ever on our mind, to restrain all idle, vain, impertinent discourse, as well as what is more immediately noxious. How much hath every man to lament on this behalf!

38. ¶ [s] Then certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, saying, Master, we would see a sign from thee. 39. But he answered and said unto them, [t] An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas: 40. [u] For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. 41. [x] The men of Nineve shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a [y] greater than Jonas is here. 42. [z] The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here. 43. [a] When the unclean spirit is gone out of [b] a man, he [c] walketh through * dry places, seeking rest and findeth none. 44. Then he saith, I will return into my house from whence I came out: and when he is come, he findeth it [d] empty, swept, and garnished. 45. [e] Then goeth he, and taketh with himself seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there: and the last state of that man is worse than the first. Even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation.

[s] Ch. 16. 1—4. Luke 11. 16, 29—32. 1 Cor. 1. 22. Mark 8. 12, 13.

[t] Ch. 16. 4. & 23. 33. Is. 57. 3. Mark 8. 38. John 4. 48. & 2. 18. James 4. 4. 1 John 2. 15.

[u] Jon. 1. 17. & 2. 2. ch. 16. 21. & 20. 19. John 2. 19.

[x] Jon. 3. 5—10. Luke 11. 32. Jer. 3. 11. Ezek. 16. 51. Rom. 2. 27.

[y] Is. 9. 6. John 1. 14. & 10. 30. & 3. 31. Rom. 9. 5. Tit. 2. 13. Phil. 2. 6, 7.

[z] 1 Kin. 10. 1. 2 Chr. 9. 1. Luke 11. 31.

[a] Ch. 3. 17. & 17. 5. ch. 12. 5. Col. 2. 3, 9. John 1. 18.

[b] Luke 11. 24. Acts 8. 13.

[c] Job 1. 7. & 2. 2. 1 Pet. 5. 8. ch. 8. 29.

* Dry places: receptacles of evil spirits, who are driven out of heaven, and are not yet shut up in the infernal abyss, see Is. 13. 21. & 34. 19. Rev. 18. 2; and wandering in this lower part of the world, to tempt, seduce, and hurt; taking no delight nor rest, but in doing evil. 1 Pet. 5. 8.—Diodati.

[d] Ps. 81. 11, 12. Gal. 5. 19—21. Tit. 3. 3.

[e] Ps. 81. 12. Is. 66. 3, 4. Heb. 6. 4—8 & 10. 26. 2 Pet. 2. 20—22. ch. 21. 36—41. & 15. 13. & 23. 34—38. John 15. 22, 24. 1 Thes. 2. 15, 16.

Verses 38—45. Though what our Lord had said was sufficient to convince every impartial hearer, certain Scribes and Pharisees pretended they were not yet satisfied of his divine mission; and though they address him with respect, calling him Master, it seems to be done hypocritically; for they demand a sign from heaven; perhaps such as appeared of old on mount Sinai; intimating that notwithstanding his other miracles, without this they should not acknowledge him as the Messiah: a demand unreasonable and insolent, and which our Lord justly denies. They who are dissatisfied with the evidences of truth he hath been pleased to give, notwithstanding what they may pretend, would never be convinced by any other.

1. He brands them as an evil and adulterous generation, degenerate from the piety of their forefathers, and chargeable with the most criminal apostasy from God, literally and spiritually committing adultery against him.

2. He rejects their demand. No sign shall be given them, such as they required from heaven; but one should be given them from the earth, in his resurrection, which had been prefigured by Jonas the prophet, who, after being three days and three nights in the whale's belly, was cast alive on thy land; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth; that is, part of three natural days, as the Jews computed their time; for so long he lay in the grave, reckoning Friday, before sunsetting, as one; Saturday, two; and Sunday, after sunset, when the third day commenced, as three; our Lord then arising from the dead; and if this did not convince them, nothing would. Note, The resurrection of Jesus is the great hinge on which our everlasting salvation turns, and the grand sign, confirming all the rest; and they who refuse the evidence with which this is attested, and ask for more, we may be fully sure desire no sign to confirm their faith, but a plea for their infidelity.

3. He warns them of the consequences which would attend the wilfulness and wickedness of the men of that generation. The men of Nineveh shall rise up as witnesses to condemn them; for they, though heathens, repented at the preaching of Jonas for one day only: but Christ had wrought manifold miracles, had long and earnestly preached the gospel of the kingdom, and shortly was to rise from the dead; in all which he was far superior to Jonas. If therefore they rejected him, far greater would be their condemnation than that which was threatened against the men of Nineveh, and their speedy repentance shall rise up to condemn the unbelief and impenitence of the men of that generation.

In like manner shall the queen of the south, who came from far on the report of Solomon's wisdom, condemn these despisers of Christ and his gospel. She, though a gentile, no sooner heard the wise king than she owned the truth of the report concerning him: but, when a greater than Solomon was there, even Jesus, in whom dwelt all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, the men of that generation refuse to receive his word or believe in him; and therefore how aggravated will be their condemnation! They who have enjoyed and abused the greatest means and mercies, shall sink under heavier guilt, and receive greater damnation.

4. He describes their character, as willing slaves of Satan. They were like one possessed of the devil, who goeth for a while out, to return with double violence. He is called an unclean spirit: having lost all purity, he ceases not to tempt men to all manner of uncleanness. He walketh in dry places, like a melancholy person seeking rest and findeth none, being miserable when he is no longer in mischief: and therefore, taking seven other spirits worse than himself, he returns to his former abode, and finds the sinner's heart ready to entertain them, as a house swept and garnished to receive its guests, and there they fix their stay, so that the last state of that man is worse than the first, more wicked than before: even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation. The devil, who by Christ's preaching and miracles for a while retired from Judea into the Gentile world; afterwards, when the gospel spread among the heathen, return with sevenfold power to the Jews, who readily received him, and with all malice and wickedness persecuted the ministers of Christ, which brought upon that devoted people final destruction.

46. ¶ While he yet talked to the people, [f] behold, his mother and his brethren stood without, desiring to speak with him. 47. Then one said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee. 48. But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? 49. And he stretched forth his hand toward [g] his disciples, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren! 50. [h] For whosoever shall [f] Mark 3. 31—35. & 6. 3. Luke 8. 19—21. ch. 13. 55. John 2. 11. & 7. 3. Acts 1. 14. 1 Cor. 9. 5. Gal. 1. 19.

[g] Ch. 10. 2—4. Luke 6. 13—16. Acts 1. 13. John 17. 12.

[h] Gal. 5. 6. & 6. 15. Col. 3. 11. ch. 7. 21. Ps. xv. & 24. 3—5. John 13. 17. & 15. 14. Rom. 2. 13. James 1. 22. 1 Pet. 1. 15, 16. 2 Pet. 1. 4—10. Luke 11. 27, 28.

do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother.

Verses 46—50. Whilst Christ continued his discourses, which bore so hard upon the Pharisees, we are told,

1. That his mother and brethren stood without: apprehensive perhaps of the danger to which he would be exposed thereby, they desired to speak to him, and warn him against giving such offensive and plain rebukes. Whether these were his brethren by the same mother Mary, or by a former wife of Joseph's, or his cousin-germans as many suppose, is not a matter at all material. Hereupon one of his auditors immediately informed him of their request. Note, (1.) Near relations, by their fears for us, often lay hindrances in our way. (2.) Danger must not deter us from fidelity in the way of our duty.

2. Christ replies in answer to the message, Who is my mother, and who are my brethren? not as contemning paternal authority, or disregarding the ties of blood; but intimating that the address was unseasonable, and, when God's glory was concerned, no natural or civil respects were to be allowed to interfere. We are bound to love them much, but to love God more: yea, and the union which divine grace makes betwixt kindred souls is in many respects stronger than the bonds of blood. He stretched forth his hand to his disciples, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren; so affectionately did he regard them: for whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, attentive to the gospel, and obedient to the faith, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother, so near and dear to him. Note, (1.) The mark of discipleship to Jesus, is obedience to the revealed word and will of God. (2.) However despised we may be, or rejected of men, it is sufficient honour to be esteemed the brethren of Jesus. (3.) They who resemble Christ in spirit, temper, and disposition, and have the blessed image of that one Father, even God, stamped upon them, will be acknowledged by the Lord of life and glory in the day of his appearing, and admitted, as heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ, to share with him the eternal inheritance.

CHAP. XIII.—anno domini, 31.

In this chapter we have, 1. The parable of the sower, with its explication, and the reason why Christ chose this method of teaching, ver. 1—23. 2. Of the tares, ver. 24—30. 3. Of the grain of mustard-seed, ver. 31, 32. 4. Of the leaven, ver. 33. 5. The parable of the tares explained, with a further reason for Christ's using parables, ver. 34—43. 6. The parable of the hid treasure, the pearl of great price, and of the net, ver. 44—50. 7. The application to his disciples, under the parable of the good householder, ver. 51, 52. 8. The contempt put upon Christ by his countrymen, ver. 53—58.

1. THE [a] same day went Jesus out of the house, [b] and sat by the sea-side. 2. And great multitudes were gathered together unto him, so that he went into a ship, and sat; and the whole multitude stood * on the shore. 3. And he spake many things unto them [c] in parables, saying, Behold, [d] a sower went forth to sow: 4. And when he sowed, some seeds fell by the way-side, and the fowls came and devoured them up: 5. Some fell upon [e] stony places, where they had not much earth; and forthwith they sprung up, because they had no deepness of earth: 6. And when the sun was up, they were scorched: and because they had no [f] root, they withered away. 7. And some fell among [g] thorns; and the thorns sprung up, and choked them. 8. But other fell into [h] good ground, and brought forth fruit, some an hundred fold, some sixty fold, some thirty fold. 9. [i] Who hath ears to hear, let him hear. 10. ¶ And the disciples came, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables? 11. He answered and said unto them, [k] Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given. 12. [l] For whosoever * hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath † not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath. 13. [m] Therefore speak I to them in parables: because they seeing, see not; and hearing, they hear not; neither do they understand. 14. And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, [n] By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive: 15. For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them. 16. [o] But blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear. 17. For verily I say unto you, [p] That many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them. 18. ¶ Hear ye [q] therefore the parable of the sower. 19. When any one heareth [r] the word of the kingdom, and [s] understandeth it not, then cometh [t] the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was [u] sown in his heart. [x] This is he which received seed by the way-side. 20. But he that received the seed into stony places, the same is he that heareth the word, and anon [y] with joy receiveth it; 21. Yet hath he not [z] root in himself, but dureth for a while: [a] for when tribulation or a Acts 10. 38. Is. 63. 1. Gal. 6. 9.

b Mark 4. 1—13. Luke 5. 3. & 8. 4—10. Gen. 49. 10. ch. 4. 25. & 8. 2. & 14. 13. & 15. 30. & 19. 2.
* In the Jewish schools and synagogues the master sat to teach, and the scholars or audience stood around.—Dr Lightfoot.
c Ps. 49. 3, 4. & 78. 2. Mark iv. Luke viii, xv, xvi, &c. d Ver. 37, 18—23. Mark 4. 3—20. Luke 8. 4—15.
e Ezek. 11. 19. & 36. 26. Zech. 7. 12. Luke. 14. 28.
f Eph. 3. 17. Col. 2. 7. & 1. 23.
g Jer. 4. 3. Hos. 6. 4. Luke 21. 34.
h John 15. 4, 5. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Rom. 7. 4. with Gen. 26. 12.
i Deut. 29. 4. ch. 11. 15. Rev. 2. 7, 11, 17, 29. & 3. 6, 13, 22.
k 1 Cor. 4. 7. ch. 11. 25. & 16. 17. Ps. 25. 8, 9, 14. Is. 29. 14. 1 Cor. 2. 7—16. Eph. 3. 9. Col. 1. 26. 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11. 2 Cor. 4. 3. 1 John 2. 27 l Ch. 25. 29. Mark 4. 25. Luke 8. 18. & 19. 26. John 15. 2—5. Rev. 22. 11.
* Hath, that is, hath much.—Bishop Pearce.
† Hath not, that is, hath little.—Bishop Pearce.
m 2 Thes. 2. 10, 11. Is. 42. 19, 20. Deut. 29. 2—4. 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4.
n Is. 6. 9, 10. & 44. 18. Jer. 5. 21. Mark 4. 12, 13. Luke 8. 10. John 12. 40. Acts 28. 26. Rom. 11. 8. Deut. 29. 4. 2 Cor. 3. 14, 15. & 4. 3, 4. & 2. 16. 1 Cor. 2. 14. Ezek. 12. 2. Eph. 4. 18. Heb. 5. 11. o Ch. 16. 17. Luke 10. 23. with ch. 5. 3—11. Luke 2. 30. John 1. 14. & 20. 29.
p Luke 10. 24. Heb. 11. 13. 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11. Rom. 16. 26, 27. Eph. 3. 5, 6. Col. 1. 26.
q Ver. 11, 12. Is. 54. 13. ch. 11. 25. 1 John 2. 20, 27. Mark 4. 14—20. Luke 8. 11—15.
r Ch. 4. 23. Eph. 3. 8. 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. 2 Pet. 2. 4. Is. 53. 1. & 52. 7. s 2 Cor. 2. 16. & 3. 14, 15. 1 Cor. 2. 14. Is. 42. 19, 20. t Joh 1. 6. & 2. 1. 1 Pet. 5. 8. 2 Cor. 2. 11. Is. 53. 1. u Rom. 10. 8. 2 Thes. 2. 10.
x Ver. 4, 5.
y Is. 58. 2. Mark 4. 16, 17. & 6. 20. John 5. 35. Ezek. 33. 31, 32. Acts 8. 13. z Ver. 6. Col. 2. 7. Eph. 3. 17. John 15. 2—5. 2 Cor. 9. 17. Gal. 6. 15. & 5. 6. a Job 27. 10. 2 Tim. 4. 10. & 1. 15. Gal. 5. 7. & 6. 12. ch. 11. 6. Song i. 5, 6. Hos. 6. 4.

persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended. 22. [b] He also that received seed among the thorns is he that heareth the word; and the care of this world, and the [c] deceitfulness of riches choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful. 23. [d] But he that received seed into the good ground is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it; which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, some an hundred fold, some sixty, some thirty.

[b] Ver. 7. ch. 19. 28. Luke. 21. 34. Prov. 23. 5. 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10, 17.

[c] Prov. 11. 28. Luke 18. 24. 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10, 17. 2 Tim. 2. 4. & 4. 10.

[d] Ver. 8. Ps. 1. 2, 3. & 92. 13, 14. John 15. 4, 5. Gal. 5. 22, 23. Col. 1. 6—11. & 2. 2. Phil. 1. 11. & 2. 15. 2 Pet. 1. 4—9.

Verses 1—23. With indefatigable diligence did the great prophet of his people labour to inculcate the doctrines of his gospel. The same day went Jesus out of the house, and sat by the seaside, his auditory being too great for a house to contain them; and here ascending a ship for his pulpit, whilst the attentive multitude crowded the shore, he spoke many things unto them in parables, more, probably, than are here recorded: and he chose this method for reasons, given, ver. 13, 15. Note, (1.) In preaching the gospel we are called to be instant in season and out of season: no time nor place is unsuitable to speak a word for Christ and for immortal souls. (2.) Where Christ is preached, there should we with delight attend: his presence and blessing on the seashore, are better than all the magnificence of Solomon's temple without him.

1. The parable with which Christ opens his discourse, is that of a sower sowing his seed, with the various soils on which it fell, and the consequences thereof. By familiar and well known objects, Christ would thus convey more pleasingly his divine instructions, and teach them to spiritualize their daily labours, and to draw from them profitable meditation. The explication of the parable Christ is pleased himself to give, and we cannot err when following an infallible interpreter. The seed is the word of the kingdom, the gospel; the sower is the Lord Jesus, with all his divinely appointed ministers; and he also by his Spirit quickens the seed sown, that it may bring forth fruit in the hearts of his people. The field is the world in general; and the several sorts of ground here mentioned, on which the seed falls, represent the different tempers of those to whom the gospel is preached, and the effects thereby produced upon them; and we may observe, but one sort in four brought forth any lasting fruit: for though the same word of truth is preached to multitudes, it becomes an incorruptible seed but to a few. An awful warning to all, to take heed how they hear: for many are called but few chosen.

(1.) Some are like the wayside; where the seed, falling on the hard ground not broken up, is exposed to the birds and devoured. This represents the case of those who are careless, negligent, and inattentive hearers, on whom the word of God makes no impression: they understand it not, being under the darkness of their fallen mind, and their hearts hardened. The wicked one, the devil, ever watchful to prevent all good from entering, no sooner observes such a one in the way of the gospel, than he seeks to divert him from it, and catches away the word from his heart as it falls, distracting his attention by some objects around him, or suggesting some idle, vain, worldly, or trifling thoughts, so that the word of God is immediately effaced from the memory, and becomes utterly unprofitable.

(2.) Others are like the stony ground, on which whatever is sown springs up quickly, the earth being shallow, but, unable to bear the scorching sun, for want of root it withers away. Such are they who attend the ministry of the word, and, struck at first greatly with what they hear, give an immediate assent to its truth, and instantly commence professors, but the root of the matter is not in them; they are not brought to a deep and humbling sense of the sinfulness of their nature; they do not see the utter impotence of their hearts to all good; they are not humbled to a universal renunciation of themselves; nor led to Christ alone, for pardon, righteousness, grace and glory: but, whilst some lively impression, or sudden flash of joy succeeds their hearing, they are ready to conclude the work is done, when it is not even yet begun; their hearts continue unhumbled and unholy; they are not partakers of the grace of God in truth, nor influenced by the divine principle of faith, which worketh by love; they have never truly counted the cost; and, therefore, when they are called to painful self-denial for Christ's sake; to endure reproach, the loss of friends or fortune, or the severer sufferings which envenomed persecutors may inflict; then they shrink from the cross, dishonour their profession, comply with the world, are offended, and walk no more with Jesus. May we never be numbered among such apostates from the truth!

(3.) Another sort of hearers are compared to the seed sown among thorns. These go farther than the former: they take up and continue a fair profession, are attendants on the word and ordinances, and in appearance Christians altogether; but insensibly the cares of the world, a too great anxiety about a provision for themselves or families, an inordinate love of money, and too eager a pursuit after it: these, under many a specious cloak of prudent care and becoming industry, seduce the affections from God; and insensibly, like the thorns, eat out the life and spirit of that godliness they once seemed to possess; the heart grows cold; eternal things lose their importance; the vanities of time appear more significant; and though the profession of religion and the form of duties may still be carried on, it is mere husk; no substantial fruit of grace is produced; the word is choked, and the soul drowned in perdition and destruction. How many thus have fallen! May we be warned of the imminent danger, and fear for ourselves, lest this evil world steal away our hearts from God!

(4.) Though others were unfruitful, one sort of hearers are mentioned who, like the good ground, repaid the husbandman's toils. Their hearts by divine grace were opened to receive the seed of the gospel, and, watered by the dews of heavenly influence, it grew, and brought forth fruit abundantly. They are described not merely as hearing the word, but understanding it, the eyes of their mind being enlightened; and they receive the truth not only in the light, but in the love of it; in their heart the seed takes root, and brings forth the genuine fruits of righteousness and true holiness; and this variously, according to the measure of the gift of Christ: for though the quality of the fruit be the same in all, wrought by that one and the self same Spirit, yet in some these fruits are more eminent and abundant than in others. May Jesus give us then the hearing ear and understanding heart, that our profiting may appear! and may we seek to abide and abound in every fruit of grace, which by Jesus Christ are to the praise and glory of God!

2. Christ resolves the question addressed to him by his disciples, ver. 10. why he spoke to the people by parables. In general such was the good pleasure of his will. With regard to those who were his disciples, he intended to stir up their inquiries after the explication of what they heard; and it was their peculiar mercy, that to them it was given to know the mysteries of the kingdom, he being ready to lead them into the knowledge of all truth; but to others it was not given. God is sovereign in the dispensations of his grace, and is pleased to withhold from some what he bestows on others; and where none have any claim upon him, he may no doubt, do what he will with his own, ver. 11. Where he hath been pleased to give a spiritual understanding, and the influences of his Spirit, there he will continue to work, and perfect that which he begins, increasing his gifts of wisdom and grace; but where there is no spiritual knowledge of Christ, no experience of his grace, no desire to profit by his word, there he will take away the external gifts, the means of grace, or ministry of the gospel, which such persons before enjoyed, and leave them to the blindness they have chosen, ver. 12. And this he assigns as the reason why he spoke to them in parables, without expounding them to the multitude as he did to his own disciples. He designed to leave those who wilfully had rejected the light of his miracles and doctrines to the hardness and impenitence of their own hearts. They did not choose to see or understand, and therefore he decrees in just judgment that they shall not, ver. 13. And herein the prophecy of Isaiah, chap. vi. ver. 9, 10. was fulfilled. The Jews were now given up to that judicial blindness he had foretold. In the midst of the glorious light of the gospel, and in the face of the astonishing miracles wherewith Jesus, as the Messiah, had confirmed his mission, they obstinately stopped their ears, and closed their eyes, as if they were afraid the force of conviction, and the strong evidence of truth should overpower them, and necessitate them to submit to the Saviour's doctrine, and yield up their hearts and ways to his government: which they being resolved not to do, his Spirit will no longer strive with them, and they are left to the ignorance and impenitence of their hearts, ver. 14, 15. But towards those whom he had chosen for disciples, God had the most gracious designs: he had given them the seeing eye and the hearing ear, and blessed them with the understanding of those mysteries of his grace which were hid from others, ver. 16. yea, they enjoyed transcendent favours beyond all the prophets and righteous men which had gone before them; for earnestly as they longed for the appearing of the Messiah, and to behold him incarnate, they saw his day but at a distance, and chiefly beheld the great things of his kingdom wrapped up in types and figures; whilst his present disciples beheld him face to face, saw his miracles, and from his own mouth more distinctly were informed of those truths, which the others saw only through a glass darkly, ver. 16. Note, (1.) Why God is pleased to give the knowledge of his truth to one, and withhold it from another, can only be resolved into the good pleasure of his own will. (2.) All our wisdom in divine things is the gift of God: till he opens the eyes of our minds, the wisest of men are in gross darkness. (3.) Many enjoy the means of grace whose hearts only grow more hard and insensible under them. They hate the light, and therefore are justly abandoned to the darkness they have chosen. (4.) The greatest of all blessings is the knowledge of Jesus; for him to know is everlasting life. (5.) If we are distinguished by peculiar circumstances of the divine regard, the stronger obligation is laid upon us to be thankful, and to walk in the light as children of the light.

24. ¶ Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, [e] The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed [f] good seed in his field: 25. But while men [g] slept, his [h] enemy came and sowed [i] tares among the wheat, and went his way. 26. But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the * tares also. 27. So the [k] servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares? 28. He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, [l] Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up? 29. But he said, Nay; lest, while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them. 30. Let both [m] grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn. 31. ¶ Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, [n] The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of † mustard seed, which a man took and sowed in his field; 32. Which indeed is the least of all seeds; but, when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof. 33. ¶ [o] Another parable spake he unto them; The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took and hid in three ‡ measures of meal, till the whole was leavened. 34. [p] All these things spake Jesus unto the multitude in parables; and without a parable spake he not unto them: 35. That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, [q] I will open my mouth in parables; I will utter things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world. 36. ¶ Then Jesus sent the multitude away, and went into the house: and his disciples came unto him, saying, [r] Declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field. 37. He answered and said unto them, [s] He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man; 38. [t] The field is the world; [u] the good seed are the children of the kingdom, [x] but the tares are the children of the wicked one; 39. [y] The enemy that sowed them is the devil; [z] the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels. 40. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of this world. 41. [a] The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all ‖ things that offend, and them which do iniquity; 42. [b] And shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. 43. [c] Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. [d] Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

e Ver. 31, 33, 45, 52. ch. 3. 2 & 4. 17. i. e. the gospel church.
f Ch. 4. 23. 1 Pet. 1. 23. ver. 4, 19. 2 Tim. 3. 15—17. Col. 1. 6. Phil. 1. 6. 1 Cor. 2. 7.
g Acts 20. 29. Luke 21. 34.
h Ver. 36. 1 Pet. 5. 8.
i Ver. 39. Phil. 3. 18, 19. Acts 8. 13.
* Tares: a hurtful plant which spoiled the corn in Palestine; it grew in branches, ver. 30. It is now unknown. —Diodati.
k 1 Cor. 12. 28. Eph. 4. 11.
l Luke 9. 34. with 1 Thes. 5. 14. Heb. 1. 14.
m With ch. 3. 12. & 25. 32.
n Mark 4. 30—32. Luke 13. 18, 19. 1 Cor. 1. 26, 27. Job 8. 7. Ps. 80. 8—11. Ezek. 47. 1, 12. Dan. 2. 44. Is. 2. 2—4. Mic. 4. 1—3. Zech. 8. 20—23. Prov. 4. 18. Job 17. 9. 2 Pet. 3. 18.
† The mustard seed, which with us produces only a small plant, grows in the East to such a height, and to so considerable a size, that it affords a shade.—Beausobre.
o Luke 13. 20. Rom. 1. 14, 16. 1 Cor. 9. 22, 23. Ps. 72. 16. & 119. 11. with 1 Cor. 5. 7. Gal. 5. 9.
‡ Sotan, or seah, held a little more than a peck.
p Mark 1. 33, 34. ver. 13.
q Ps. 49. 3, 4. & 78. 2. Rom. 16. 25, 26. 1 Cor. 2. 7. Eph. 3. 9. Col. 1. 25, 26. 2 Tim. 1. 10. Heb. 1. 1. r Ver. 11. Prov. 2. 1—7. Acts 8. 30, 31. Ezek. 36. 37. James 1. 5. Mat. 7. 7. s Is. 61. 1, 2. Heb 2. 3. & 1. 1. Acts 3. 22. Is. 48. 17.
t Ch. 28. 19. Mark 16. 15. Rom. 15. 18, 21. & 16. 26. Col. 1. 6. Luke 24. 47. Rom. 10. 18. & 11. 11, 12. u Ps. 22. 30. Is. 53. 10—12. & 54. 13. Heb. 3. 1. 1 John 3. 8. John 3. 3, 5. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Gal. 6. 15. x Gen. 3. 15. John 8. 44. Acts 13. 10. Tit. 1. 16. Phil. 3. 18, 19. 2 Tim. 3. 2—5. 1 John 3. 8.
y Gen. iii. 2 Cor. 11. 3. 1 Pet. 5. 3. Rev. 20. 1, 2.
z Joel 3. 13. Rev. 14. 15.
a Ch. 24. 31. & 25. 32. & 5. 29, 30. & 18. 7, 9. 1 Cor. 11. 19. with 1 Pet. 2. 1.
‖ Or scandals.
b Ch. 3. 12. & 8. 12. & 22. 13. Rev. 14. 10, 11. & 20. 15. & 21. 8, 27. & 22. 15. & 19. 20. c Dan. 12. 3. 1 Cor. 15. 41—54. ch. 25. 34. Phil. 3. 21. Rev. 7. 9—17. & xxi. Is. 60. 19, 20.
d See ver. 9. ch. 11. 15.

Verses 23—43. Our Lord further continues his discourse to the people in parables, choosing in this manner to wrap up the doctrines he inculcated, according to the prophecy, Psal. lxxviii. 2. and whilst he thus opened the door for inquiry to his disciples, to whom he afterwards explained the meaning of the figures he used, and informed them of the secrets of wisdom couched under these parables, he left the multitude, who showed no solicitude to be informed of their meaning, to their ignorance, ver. 34, 35. Three parables are here delivered, one of which is afterwards particularly explained by our Lord in private to his disciples, who desired to be informed of its design, ver. 36. We have,

1. The parable of the tares, which is the representation of the visible church in particular, as the former related to the world in general.

(1.) The Sower of the good seed is the Son of man, who by himself, and the ministers he hath appointed, sows the seed of eternal life in the hearts of his people, and causes it to take root, and bring forth fruit; all that is good in man entirely proceeds from him.

(2.) The field is the world, through which the gospel is spread, and particularly the visible church, where the word is preached; and Christ's servants, under him the great husbandman, continually labour to break up the fallow ground, and cast in the living seed.

(3.) The good seed are the children of the kingdom; those who by faith embrace the doctrines of the gospel, and in all holy conversation and godliness adorn it.

(4.) The tares are the children of the wicked one; all hypocrites and careless professors, who, though they have a name to live in the visible church, are really dead in trespasses and sins; under the influence of the devil, resembling him in their spirit and tempers, and a trouble and vexation to the children of God among whom they associate.

(5.) The enemy that sowed them is the devil; that spirit of wickedness whose unwearied labours are employed to corrupt and destroy the souls of men, and who watches day and night to take advantage against the church of Christ: and whilst we are off our guard, or lulled by outward prosperity into a state of security, he insinuates his pernicious errors in doctrine and practice, seducing unstable souls: for a while the mischief is not discovered, so artful are his wiles; like the villain who sowed tares and slipped away unnoticed under the covert of the night. But though at first the secret wickedness, which lurked under the cloak of plausible profession, is not perceived, in a little while the difference between the wheat and tares becomes very visible. The exercise of grace in the one appears evident, in the spirituality of their tempers, the simplicity of their hearts, and the purity of their manners; whilst observation and experience discover the unfaithfulness of the tares, and a day of trial shows their real character. With grief and surprise the faithful ministers and servants of Jesus behold the errors and immoralities among the professors of godliness, and carry their sorrowful inquiries to their Lord, ver. 27. for they who have a zeal for him, cannot but be affected with every thing in his church which reflects dishonour upon his holy religion, ver. 27. He informs them whence these tares sprung. He marked his enemy in all his ways; but for his own more abundant glory, permitted his malicious attempts, ver. 28. He does not reflect upon his servants, as if negligence were to be charged on them; nor will he grant their request, of immediately eradicating these pernicious inmates. There would be danger if it was left to us, lest our undistinguishing eye might class among the hypocrites some who were sincere; or, too rigid or hasty in our judgments, should count those tares whom the Lord knew to be the true seed; for his all-seeing eye alone can discern the true characters of men. They are therefore permitted to grow together; the day of separation will come, when the distinction between tares and wheat will be evident. And from hence we should learn, (1.) That as long as Christ has a church, the devil will still be seeking to disturb the peace, or corrupt the purity of the professing members of it, notwithstanding the care of the most vigilant pastors, and the administration of the strictest discipline. (2.) We should be very cautious of pronouncing rash and hasty censures on the characters of others: God only knoweth the heart; and it is better that many criminals should escape, than one righteous person be condemned.

(6.) The harvest is the end of the world; the reapers are the angels; they shall go forth and make the awful separation. All that offend and do iniquity, whose pernicious doctrines, or immoral conduct, have been a scandal to the religion they professed, shall be gathered out, and, like tares, bound in bundles for the burning. The distinction between the righteous and the wicked shall then be too evident to admit of a mistake; and the separation between them shall be perfect and everlasting. For,

(7.) They shall cast them, the tares, into a furnace of fire; the fire prepared for the devil and his angels, the place of torment appointed for all the ungodly, where they shall burn, and none shall quench them; their pangs intolerable and eternal, under the wrath of God, which is for ever wrath to come; where every expression of acutest anguish and black despair shall prove, how fearful a thing it is to fall into the hands of the living God! Lord, gather not my soul with these sinners!

(8.) The wheat shall be gathered into God's barn. The righteous being proved and found faithful, shall be collected in one glorious company, and shine forth as the sun, arrayed in robes of spotless purity, and clothed with honour and immortality; admitted into their Father's kingdom, and sitting down on the throne of their Lord, to reign with him for ever and ever. The prospect of such a glorious state before us, should deeply engage our attention; he, therefore, that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

2. The parable of the grain of mustard seed, which from one of the smallest seeds grows, in the eastern countries, into the greatest of herbs; so that, like a spreading tree, the birds find shelter in its branches. And such is,

(1.) The work of God in a redeemed soul. The beginnings are often small, and scarce perceptible; but watered with divine influences, the seed of eternal life springs up, and amidst all the stormy blasts of temptation, corruption, persecution, affliction, to which it is exposed, increaseth with the increase of God.

(2.) Such also was the Messiah's kingdom at the first. Christ and his disciples seemed little, mean, and despicable; but their word took deep root; abundant converts were made; the gospel spread on every side, and filled the face of the world with fruit: and, like the enlarging circle in the water, the church of Christ shall go on increasing, till the kingdoms of the world become the kingdom of the Lord, and all the fowls of the air, both Jews and Gentiles, be converted, and flock together into it. Hasten, O Lord, this happy day!

(3.) The parable of the leaven. As a little of this diffuses itself gradually through the whole mass of meal with which it is mingled; so doth the gospel word when quickened by divine grace, powerfully diffuse its energy through all the faculties of the soul, and over all the members of the body; sanctifying the whole, communicating throughout a sweet savour of Christ, and working a blessed and universal change into his image and likeness; and spreading far and wide among all nations, the word of truth shall continue its mighty operations till all nations shall be brought to the obedience of the faith. Note, (1.) Divine grace works often imperceptibly, but irresistibly. (2.) Where the leaven of truth is hid in the heart, there its influence will infallibly appear; there will be a sweet savour of Christ in all we speak or do.

44. ¶ [e] Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field; the which when a man hath found, he hideth, [e] Prov. 2. 1—4. & 3. 13—16. 1 Cor. 2. 9. Col. 2. 3. & 3. 3. John 3. 35. Phil. 3. 7—9. Is. 55. 1. Rev. 3. 18.

and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field. 45. ¶ [f] Again the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant-man, seeking goodly pearls: 46. Who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had and bought it. 47. ¶ Again, [g] the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind: 48. [h] Which, when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but * cast the bad away. 49. So shall it be at the end of the world: the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just, 50. And shall cast them into the furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. 51. Jesus saith unto them, [i] Have ye understood all † these things? They say unto him, Yea, Lord. 52. Then said he unto them, [k] Therefore every scribe which is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old.

f Prov. 2. 4. & 3. 13—16. and 8. 10, 11. ch. 16. 26. see ver. 44.

g Ch. 4. 19. Luke 5. 10. Mark 16. 15. ch. 28. 19. & 22. 9, 10. Luke 14. 21, 23. Eph. 3. 8. Tit. 3. 3—7.

h Rev. 10. 7. & 1. 7. & 20. 12—15. ch. 24. 31 & 25. 32, 41—46. & xxv. 2 Thes. 1. 7—10. ver. 42.

* There are many in the church which are not of the church, and therefore at last shall be cast out; but the full and perfect separation of them is reserved for the last day. —Beza.

i Acts 8. 20, 31. ch. 16. 11. 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. 1 Cor. 2. 10—16. John 13. 17.

† They ought to be diligent, who have not only to be wise for themselves, but to teach the wisdom of God to others.—Beza.

k Neh. 8. 3. ch. 23. 34. 1 Cor. 12. 28. Eph. 4. 11—13. Song 7. 13.

Verses 44—52. Four other parables conclude our blessed Lord's discourse:

1. The treasure hid in the field; which is Christ himself, and the great and precious promises that are in him. The field the Scripture, wherein He is revealed to us, in whom are hid in the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, and from whom the most inestimable riches to a sinner, of pardon, peace, righteousness, and grace are to be derived. These are hid from us: though we have the Scriptures before us, we cannot look farther than the surface of them, till God imparts the spiritual understanding, and enables us to dig deep in the precious mine When we have found the treasure, we must hide it in our hearts; and nothing can equal the joy with which a poor sinner discovers the riches of the grace revealed in Jesus Christ: for the sake o this we shall be ready to part with all besides, and count an interest in his love and favour the most invaluable treasure.

2. The parable of the pearl of great price is much of the same import with the foregoing. The merchant is the convinced sinner seeking after Christ and his salvation; the pearl of great price, an object indeed deserving our most eager pursuit. Shall merchants compass sea and land for one poor jewel, and shall we not be more assiduous in securing an interest in Jesus, and the possession of all the jewels of grace and glory? He finds it, as all who truly seek the Saviour assuredly will, and then with cheerfulness sells all to become possessor of it; content to quit the world, with all its riches, honours, pleasures; his sins, with all their allurements: yea, and to part with his own righteousness too, that he may be found in Christ, a partaker of his redemption: and that, stripped of all beside, Christ may be to him all and in all.

3. The parable of the net cast into the sea, with the explication annexed. The net is the gospel preached to every creature; the ministers of Christ are the fishermen, who cast it into the sea, the world: by it a multitude of souls are inclosed, and brought into the visible church. When it is full, in the latter days, and all, both Jews and Gentiles, are gathered into it, then cometh the end, when the net shall be drawn to shore in the great day of final separation, and the contents of it be examined. The good fish, the just, who in Christ Jesus are justified from all things, and found faithful, shall be gathered into the vessels of glory prepared for their reception; whilst the angels, the ministers employed in this service, shall separate the bad, the wicked, from among them, and cast them away, as vile and reprobate, into everlasting burnings. Note, (1.) Many who have had a place in the gospel church will at the last day be rejected by the great Head of the church as hypocrites and unfaithful. (2.) They who live in wickedness have nothing to expect but an eternity of wo. (3.) The consideration of the dreadful end of those who perish, should awaken our greater solicitude to make our calling and election sure.

4. The parable of the householder aptly finishes as the practical improvement of the whole. Our Lord, ver. 51. had interrogated them on their proficiency, whether they had understood the meaning of the parables he had uttered; and as they had replied in the affirmative, he directs them to the proper use of the knowledge which they possessed. They were to be evangelical scribes, to preach the everlasting gospel, as the scribes in their days expounded the law; and herein they were to resemble a householder, who, having made a liberal provision for the family under his care, brings forth out of his storehouse things new and old, as each is best suited to their wants. The family under our care is the church of Christ, that particular part of it to which we are ordained to minister. Our treasure is the word of truth, and Christ especially therein revealed, with an experimental knowledge of him in all his offices, of the riches of his salvation, and the obligations to love and serve him thence arising. These we must set before the people, drawn from the sacred storehouses of the Old and New Testament; inculcating anew ancient truths; adding to old experiences new observations; and providing thus a supply of spiritual food, suited to every state, condition, and circumstance of the people whom we serve. And this wisdom, this ability to minister, no attainments of science, no researches of philosophy, no force of genius can bestow: it is the gift of the great Master of the family, the Lord Jesus: and they who would savingly teach others the doctrines of the kingdom, must be themselves first taught of him.

53. ¶ And it came to pass, that, when Jesus had finished these parables, he departed thence. 54. [l] And when he was come into his own country, he taught them in their synagogue, insomuch that they were astonished, and said, Whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works? 55. [m] Is not this the carpenter's son? is not his mother called Mary? and his * brethren, James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas? 56. And his sisters, are they not all with us? Whence then hath this man all these things? 57. And they were [n] offended in him. But Jesus said unto them, [o] A prophet is not without honour, save in his own country, and in his own house. 58. [p] And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief.

cir. 32.

l Mark 6. 1—5. Luke 4. 16. Deut. 18. 15—19. Is. 50. 4. Ps. 22. 22. & 40. 9, 10.

m John 6. 42. Luke 4. 22. Mark 6. 3. ch. 12. 46. Is. 49. 7. & 53. 2, 3.

* St Jerome, comparing together John 19. 25. Matt. 27. 56. Mark 15. 40. infers that these were the sons of his mother's sister, the wife of Cleophas; it being consistent with the language of the Jews to call cousins by the name of brethren.—Dr Whitby.

n Ch. 11. 6. & 69. 31. Is. 53. 2, 3. Ps. 22. 6. & 26. 8, 19, 20.

o Mark 6. 4. Luke 4. 24. John 4. 44.

p Mark 6. 5, 6. Heb. 4. 2. & 3. 19.

Verses 53—58. When Jesus had finished this discourse, he returned to his own city, Nazareth, where he had before been so contumeliously treated, and where he again met the like contempt.

1. Though they could not help being astonished at the wisdom and authority with which he spoke in their synagogue, and the mighty works he performed, yet the questions show the prejudices they entertained against him. They knew his parentage and education: he had not been brought up under their admired doctors; and his father was of no higher rank than a carpenter: his mother Mary, a woman of no account; and his brethren and sisters mean, low, and illiterate people: and at this they stumbled, despised his person, and slighted his ministry.

2. Christ gently rebukes their unreasonable prejudices, and punishes them for their low thoughts of him. They acted according to vulgar prepossessions, which lead us to pay little reverence and respect to those with whom we have been familiar, and, if they rise to superior excellence, and above their former station, to envy them. Therefore, since they despised and rejected him, refused to believe his doctrine, and submit to the evidence of his miracles, he did not many mighty works there; not for want of power, but in just judgment; leaving them to their unbelief and hardness of heart. Note, (1.) Prejudices entertained against ministers is a great obstruction to our profiting by their labours. (2.) We owe it to our unbelief, that we see and experience no more of the mighty works of Jesus.

CHAP. XIV.—ANNO DOMINI, 32.

John Baptist had said concerning Christ, He must increase: but I must decrease, John iii. 30. The morning star is here disappearing, and the Sun of Righteousness rising to his meridian lustre. Here is, 1. The martyrdom of John; his imprisonment for his faithfulness to Herod, ver. 1—5. and the beheading of him, to please Herodias, ver. 6—12. 2. The miracles of Christ. (1.) His feeding five thousand men, that came to him to be taught, with five loaves and two fishes, ver. 13—22. (2.) Christ's walking on the water to his disciples in a storm, ver. 22—33. (3.) His healing the sick with the touch of his garment, ver. 34—36.

1. AT that time * Herod the tetrarch heard of the fame of Jesus, 2. And said unto his servants, This is John the Baptist; he is risen from the dead; and therefore mighty works † do shew forth themselves in him. 3. ¶ [a] For Herod had laid hold on John, and bound him, and put him in prison for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife. 4. For John said unto him, [b] It is not lawful for thee to have her. 5. And when he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, [c] because they counted him as a prophet. 6. But ‡ when [d] Herod's birth-day was kept, the daughter of Herodias danced before them, and pleased Herod. 7. Whereupon [e] he promised with an oath to give her whatsoever she would ask. 8. And she, being before instructed of her mother, said, [f] Give me here John Baptist's head in a charger. 9. And the king was [g] sorry: [h] nevertheless for the oath's sake, and them which sat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her. 10. And he sent, and [i] beheaded John in the prison. 11. And his head was brought in a charger, and given to the damsel: and she brought it to her mother. 12. [k] And his disciples came, and took up the body, and buried it, and went and told Jesus.

* This was Herod Antipas, one of the sons of Herod the Great, and the same to whom Pilate sent Jesus; he is called tetrarch, because he had a fourth part of the dominions of his father, viz. Galilee. Mark 6. 14—30. Luke 9. 7—9. Is. 52. 15.

† Or are wrought by him.

a Luke 3. 19, 20. Mark 6. 17, 18, &c. ch. 4. 12.

b Lev. 18. 6, 16. & 20. 21. 2 Sam. 12. 7. Dan. 5. 22, 23.

c Ch. 21. 26. Luke 20. 6.

‡ When John had lain about a year and a half in prison.

d Gen. 40. 20. Acts 12. 21. Esth. 1. 3. & 2. 18.

e Esth. 5. 3, 6. & 7. 3. ch. 4. 9.

f Prov. 10. 12, 13. & 1 16. & 4. 16.

g Ver. 5. Mark 6. 20. Luke 13. 32.

h Rom. 1. 32. Tit. 1. 16. Jam. 1. 14.

i 2 Chr. 36. 16. ch. 10. 21. & 21. 35, 36. & 22. 6.

k 1 Kin. 13. 29. ch. 27. 58—61. Acts 8. 19. ch. 10. 16, 17.

Verses 1—12. John, the harbinger of Jesus, had lately finished his glorious race, and won the crown of martyrdom. We have in these verses an account of that bloody scene, and the occasion of its being here introduced is intimated, ver. 2. The fame of Jesus and his miracles began to be noised; and no sooner did they reach Herod's ears, than his guilty conscience betrayed his fears, and instantly suggested that this was John whom he had beheaded, but now raised from the dead, and endued with more extraordinary powers to vindicate his injured character, and perhaps avenge himself on his persecutors. Note, (1.) On this side hell, the greatest torment is a guilty conscience. (2.) Persecutors will find they in vain seek to be rid of their troublers; though one be slain or removed, God will raise up fresh witnesses to the truth. (3.) Many under the horrors of conscience, like the devils, tremble, yet continue impenitent. Convictions are not conversion.

In the story of John's sufferings, we are told,

1. The occasion of them: and this was his fidelity and zeal in reproving Herod for his flagitious enormities, and especially for his adultery and incest with Herodias, his brother Philip's wife, whom he had inveigled away from her own husband; and though he was alive and had children by her, yet had Herod publicly married her, and continued to cohabit with her. This atrocious crime John plainly and faithfully charged upon his conscience as utterly unlawful, and sure to bring down the wrath of God upon him. Though a king, John feared not to discharge his commission. As the greatest monarchs have no prerogative to break God's laws, his ministers must boldly vindicate his honour, and without respect of persons, declare his wrath against the mightiest transgressors.

2. For this John was imprisoned. Instigated by Herodias, who meditated revenge, as well as to gratify his own resentments, Herod had seized, bound, and cast him into prison. They who will be zealous against sin, must prepare to suffer. Faithful rebukes, however kindly meant, will be often resented as affronts, and expose us to the vengeance of an enraged persecutor; but when we have a good cause and a good conscience, we need not fear bonds or imprisonments.

3. Herod would have despatched him out of hand, and rid himself of this troubler; but his fears prevailed over his resentment, and, for a while, restrained him from the bloody deed. John's character as a prophet had procured him such general veneration, that to murder him outright might provoke some popular insurrection, and endanger his own person and government. Note, (1.) None are greater slaves to fear, than they who affect to tyrannize with despotic sway. (2.) The fear of man often restrains those who have cast off all fear of God.

4. At last the barbarous deed is contrived and executed; and, after a tedious confinement, the faithful martyr is by death released, and goes where the wicked cease from troubling. It appears probable that the whole plot was concerted by Herodias, whose unrelenting malice could not rest whilst John was yet alive; and that Herod was privy to the design; the circumstances being contrived merely to blind the populace. However, whether he knew it, or rashly involved himself by his oath, Herod is without excuse. The time chosen for the execution of the design was Herod's birth-day; and the instrument was Salome, the daughter of Herodias. To grace the festival, she condescended to appear before the august assembly, and danced so exquisitely, that Herod, in a transport of delight, swore to gratify her in whatever request she should make. At her mother's instigation she demands the head of John the Baptist, who thought hereby at once to get rid of his reproofs, and glut her revenge. Struck with this bloody request, at least appearing to be so, Herod expressed great sorrow and reluctance to comply with it. The injustice, cruelty, and infamy of such an action cried aloud. Nevertheless, pretending conscience, as if a rash oath could oblige him to commit so wicked a deed, and out of respect to those around him, who being witnesses to the oath, approved the performance of it, and probably were glad to get rid of so troublesome a reprover, he gives orders for John's execution in the prison, and instantly, without form or process, sends one of his savage instruments to bring the head of the holy Baptist in a charger. The bloody dish is delivered to Salome, and she presents it to her mother, a feast for her cruel revenge, whilst with malicious delight she beholds that tongue for ever silent that had so deeply wounded her repose. Note, (1.) Seasons of carnal mirth and jollity are usually attended with much mischief. Feasting and dancing are pleasing to the flesh; but they are pernicious to the spirit, and often productive of fatal consequences. (2.) Rash oaths involve the conscience in dreadful dilemmas, where guilt is sure to fasten on either side; yet, when we have sworn to do evil, that oath is more safely broken than kept. Our obligation to keep God's laws cannot be superseded by any other we choose to lay ourselves under. (3.) The bosom that should be the seat of tenderness, when fired with lust and revenge, becomes the most barbarous and savage. (4.) The bad examples of parents are fatally pernicious. We quickly learn the evil to which the bias of corrupt nature leans so strongly. (5.) Many are made sorry by their sins, who never have godly sorrow for them. Though scourged by their consciences, their love of evil bears down their convictions. (6.) The triumphing of the wicked is short; God will soon require at their hands the innocent blood they have shed.

5. The disciples of John, hearing the sad catastrophe, came to pay their last kind offices to their master's corpse, and testify their affection and respect by attending it to the grave; and then went and informed Jesus of the event, on whose ministry, probably, they had attended since John's imprisonment; and if they were drawn nearer to him by their former master's removal, they were in the issue gainers by their loss. Note, (1.) As the dust of his saints is precious to the Lord, so should their very corpses be to us, for the sake of their spirit which dwelt in them. (2.) We must carry all our griefs to Jesus, and be confident he will alleviate the sorrows we pour into his compassionate bosom. (3.) Whatever human helps, friends, or ministers, we may be deprived of, we may not despond; our Master in heaven ever lives; and if we are driven nearer to him, he can more than compensate our losses.

13. ¶ [m] When Jesus heard of it, he departed thence by ship into a desert place apart: and when the people had heard thereof, they followed him on *foot out of the cities. 14. [n] And Jesus went forth, and saw a great multitude, and was moved with compassion toward them, and he healed their sick. 15. [o] And when it was evening, his disciples came to him, saying, This is a desert place, and the time is now past; send the multitude away, that they may go into the villages, and buy themselves victuals. 16. But Jesus said unto them, [p] They need not depart; give ye them to eat. 17. And they say unto him, We have here but five loaves, and two fishes. 18. He said, Bring them hither to me. 19. And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the grass, and took the five loaves, and the two fishes, and, looking up to heaven, he *blessed, and brake, and gave the loaves to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude. 20. And they [r] did all eat, and were filled: and they took up of the fragments that remained twelve baskets full. 21. And they that had eaten were about five thousand men, beside women and children.

m Mark 6. 32, 33. Luke 9. 10, 11. John 6. 2. ch. 12. 15. James 1. 19. ch. 10. 16, 17.

* On foot. Rather, "by land." The word in the original means "on foot," when contrasted with "on horseback," and "by land," when opposed to "by sea."—Dr Campbell.

n Mark 6. 34. ch. 9. 36. & 15. 32. Heb. 4. 15. & 5. 2. & 2. 17.

o Mark 6. 35—46. John 6. 5—21. Luke 9. 12—16.

p 2 Kin. 4. 42, 43. ch. 6. 33. Luke 9. 13. John 6. 5—10.

* He blessed, &c. The form of giving thanks to God, among the Jews, was by using words which began thus, 'blessed be God,' &c. Hence the whole thanksgiving was called 'the blessing,' from the first word used. — Boothroyd. This was to bless the provision; for Christ never wrought his miracles by means of prayer. Ch. 15. 36. & 26. 26. 1 Sam. 9. 15. Deut. 8. 10. 1 Tim. 4. 4. 5. Luke 9. 16, 17. Mark 6. 41—44. John 6. 11—14. ch. 16. 9.

r Prov. 13. 25. & 6. 6. Ps. 145. 18. & 23. 1.

Verses 13—21. To shelter himself from the jealousy of a cruel tyrant, as well as to give some rest to his disciples, returned from their travels, and preaching, our Lord withdrew into a desert place. His hour was not yet come; nor was he called to expose himself to Herod's enmity; and therefore he took this prudential step, teaching us by his example, though always to be prepared for suffering in the way of duty, not rashly or needlessly to court persecution. Hereupon we are told,

1. That the multitude, who had heard of his departure, immediately followed him on foot; so eager were they to attend his ministry. Though there might be danger in cleaving to a Man so obnoxious, and they must go many a weary step to attend him, nothing discouraged them. They who have a relish for the gospel, will follow it in all its removes, and stick at no pains to enjoy the sincere milk of the word: nor will persecution abate their ardour, but increase it.

2. The sight of so many poor souls awakened the compassions of Jesus, and though he came thither for retirement, he gladly chose to forego his own ease to do them good. He would not suffer them to come so far in vain, and therefore went forth, pitying their sad case, destitute of food for their bodies, many sick and weak, and, worst of all, their souls perishing for lack of knowledge: and therefore he undertakes the relief of all their necessities; healing their sick; instructing them in the doctrines of his kingdom; and designing, ere they parted, to spread a table for them in the wilderness. With like compassion should we regard the souls and bodies of men, and then shall we readily lay out ourselves, and cheerfully spend and be spent in their service.

3. The disciples, ignorant of the intentions of their Master, and foreseeing the inconveniences which must arise from detaining so vast a multitude there, where no refreshment could be procured, desired their Lord to dismiss the congregation, the day beginning to decline. But he, who knew his own intentions, to try their faith, bids them communicate their little stock of provisions to the people. The disciples reasonably object the insufficiency of their slender store, amounting to no more than five loaves and two fishes, which though they were ready to part with, would not be tasted among such a multitude. Yet Jesus bade them bring them to him, and trust his power. Note, (1.) In following Christ, we may be reduced to the greatest straits; but, in the way of duty, we must trust and not be afraid. (2.) They who have Christ, have all, and abound; his presence and love can abundantly compensate every loss, and enable us to be content even to be hungry, and in need of daily food. (3.) Christ and his disciples lived on coarse and scanty fare, to teach us abstinence and the mortification of our sensual appetites. (4.) Though we have but little, we should be ready, when duty calls, to give of that little.

4. Our Lord distributes the provision. Having commanded the multitude to sit down, where the grass was their carpet, he craved a blessing on the meal; and breaking the bread, gave it to his disciples, who waited on the multitude, as they sat in ranks opposite each other, and with astonishment beheld the meat grow under their hands, and increase as it descended. Note, (1.) Christ himself is the living bread, which faith daily feeds upon; in him there is enough for all and to spare. (2.) We should never sit down to eat our meals without asking God's blessing. It is among the surest marks of an irreligious family, or an irreligious heart, wherever this is neglected. We, who are fed by his bounty, are surely bound at least to acknowledge the favour. (3.) When we charitably break our bread to the hungry, we shall find no diminution of our store.

5. There was enough and more than enough for all. They did all eat, and were filled; five thousand men, besides women and children: and, instead of suffering any loss, the disciples, on collecting the fragments, find that they far exceeded the original food, amounting to twelve baskets full. Note, (1.) The blessing of God can multiply a little into abundance; and none are paid with so good interest, as those who in charity lend unto the Lord. (2.) Though we have plenty, it must not therefore tempt us to waste. Since we cannot make one bit of bread, and multitudes of God's poor may want it, every crumb should be carefully collected. The truly liberal will be the best economists.

22. ¶ [s] And straightway Jesus constrained his disciples to get into a ship, and to go before him unto the other side, while he sent the multitudes away. 23. And when he had sent the multitudes away, he went up [t] into a mountain apart to pray: and when the evening was come, he was there alone. 24. But the ship was now in the midst of the sea, tossed with waves; for the wind was contrary. 25. And in [u] the fourth watch of the night Jesus went unto them, * walking on the sea. 26. And when the disciples saw him walking on the sea, they [x] were troubled, saying, It is a † spirit; and they cried out for fear. 27. But straightway Jesus spake unto them, saying, [y] Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid. 28. And Peter answered him, and said, Lord, if it be thou, [z] bid me come unto thee on the water. 29. And he said, Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ship, he walked on the water, to go to Jesus. 30. But [a] when he saw the wind ‡ boisterous, he was afraid; and, beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me! 31. And [b] immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him, and said unto him, [c] O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt? 32. And [d] when they were come into the ship, the wind ceased. 33. [e] Then they that were in the ship came and worshipped him, saying, Of a truth thou art the Son of God.

s Mark 6. 45—52. John 6. 15—21.

t John 6. 15. Mark 6. 46. & 3. 7, 13. Luke 6. 12. Acts 1. 24. & 6. 4. & 13. 3.

u Gen. 22. 14. Job 9. 8. Ps. 93. 3, 4. & 29. 10.

* Walking on the sea. The Egyptian hieroglyphic, to denote an impossibility, was two feet walking on water. This action was (obviously) miraculous.—Boothroyd and Doddridge.

x Job 4. 14, 15. Ps. 38. 15.

† That the Jews had then an opinion of hurtful spirits walking in the night, is evident from the LXX. who render from the pestilence walking in darkness (Ps. 91. 6.), from the fear of the devils, that walk in the night.—Whitby.

y Is. 41. 10. & 43. 1, 2. Ps. 46. 1—5. Rom. 8. 31. Gen. 22. 11—14. Mark 5. 36.

z Luke 5. 5. ch. 12. 20. Rom. 12. 3.

a 2 Kin. 6. 15. Rom. 4. 19. Ps. 38. 17.

‡ Or strong.

b Gen. 22. 14. Ps. 46. 1—5. Deut. 32. 36.

c Ch. 6. 30. & 8. 26. James 1. 6. Is. 7. 9. with Rom. 4. 19, 20.

d Ps. 107. 29, 30. ch. 8. 26, 27.

e Ch. 8. 27. & 16. 14, 16. & 27. 54. & 26. 63, 65. Ps. 2. 7. John 1. 50.

Verses 22—33. Miracle succeeds to miracle: he had just preserved the multitude from being famished, and now he saves his disciples from foundering in the storm. The Lord is ever a very present help in trouble. We are told,

1. The constraint he put upon his disciples, ordering them to embark whilst he dismissed the multitude. There appeared in the people present a deep conviction of his being the Messiah; and, according to their prejudices, they now thought of proclaiming him king, which opportunity his disciples were ready eagerly to embrace; but they mistook the nature of his kingdom, and for a while entertained the false notions of their countrymen. Note, The disciples of Christ are ever too apt to look for a temporal instead of a spiritual kingdom.

2. When he had sent away his disciples, though reluctant, and dismissed the people, he retired for prayer and communion with God and in that pleasing work continued till night drew on. Note, They who are much in public ministrations, need also be much in prayer and converse with God. They will be most fervent in their discourses who come from their knees into their pulpits.

3. His disciples, who had embarked at his command, were now in imminent danger. All was smooth when they set sail; but now when they were far from land, the storm arose, and the wind blew directly against them. Thus in the way of duty we may meet with sore temptations, and be sometimes at our wit's end. All things may seem to be against us, and the dispensations of providence and grace dark and gloomy as this tempestuous night; and yet even then are all things working together for our good. If we steadily hold on our course, and walk by faith, not by sight, we shall arrive safe at the shore of eternal rest.

4. In the time of need Jesus approaches them, at the morning watch, walking on the stormy waves: and thereby showing them his power to save them, and his attention to them in the hour of danger. But they, not knowing him, and observing something moving on the waters, concluded it an apparition, or some evil spirit; and, supposing it foreboded some mischief to them, cried out for fear: but Jesus immediately undeceived them, and, with his well known voice endeavours to quiet their apprehensions of danger: Be of good cheer; be undismayed; it is I, your Master and Lord; be not afraid, whilst I am so nigh, and able to save you. Note, (1.) Christ is nearer to us when we are in trouble than we are aware of: and when we seem abandoned by him, his right hand is under us to keep us from sinking. (2.) When the soul is in distress, we are ready to interpret even the appearances in our favour as ominous, and to start from our approaching mercies. (3.) If Christ speaks comfort to our hearts, we need not then be afraid of any danger or distress, for he through all can make us more than conquerors.

5. Their fears being somewhat quieted, Peter, impatient to be at his Master's feet, and ever the foremost to express his fidelity and zeal, begs leave, if it was the Lord indeed, his doubts not being entirely removed, that he would command him to come down, and enable him to go to him on the waters. Though eager to go, he dares not without a warrant; but if Jesus bids him, neither winds nor waves dismay him. The Lord grants his request; and, at once to convince him of his weakness, and confirm his faith, permits him to come. Note, (1.) They who love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, will, at his bidding, go through fire or water. (2.) Though no dangers must deter us in the way of duty, we may not wilfully run into them without a divine call. (3.) Christ knows our hearts; and though he sees much infirmity mingled with our warmest professions, he knows how to pity and pardon the one, whilst he kindly accepts the other.

6. Peter no sooner receives permission, than immediately he boldly casts himself into the deep, and, by faith upheld, walks on the foaming billows. But when he felt the stormy wind, and observed the boisterous waves, his faith staggered, his fears prevailed, and he began to sink. Ready to perish, he instantly and eagerly cries, Lord, save me; and, in the last extremity, stretches the arms of faith and prayer towards the Almighty Saviour. Note, (1.) Whilst we walk by faith, not by sight, we shall stand firm amidst the storms of this tumultuous world. (2.) The strongest believers are sometimes shaken; and, to humble and beat down all self-confidence, the Saviour is pleased to withhold his grace, and then they instantly feel how weak they are. (3.) We may never expect perfect deliverance from our fears till we are perfected in love, and that is reserved for the happiness of a better world. (4.) We cannot but stagger the moment we take our eye off from Christ and his promises, to look at the difficulties and dangers before us, and our own inability to surmount them. (5.) Though Christ permits true believers sometimes to begin to sink, he will not suffer them to be drowned, but means only to magnify his power and grace towards them, and to excite their gratitude and love in the more abundant experience of his salvation. (6.) Times of danger should be times of prayer; and Jesus never yet failed the poor sinner, who, sensible of his inevitable ruin without him, thus ardently cried, Lord, save me.

7. The prayer is scarce sooner uttered than answered; the almighty hand of Jesus stretched out, snatched him from the jaws of death; and raising him up, he rebukes his weak and wavering faith, that, after experiencing so much of his Lord's power, could yet distrust him. Note, (1.) Many a time may every faithful soul remember the occasion, when he was ready to give up all for lost, and seemed sinking into eternal death, and then did Jesus snatch us, as brands from the burning. (2.) All our disquieting fears arise from our unbelief, and should drive us more to our knees, that the cause of them may be removed by the increase of our faith. (3.) Little faith, though it may leave us in a fright, will never leave us finally to fall. None can sink who have ever taken hold on Christ. (4.) When we dishonour our Lord by distrusting his power and love, we deserve to be upbraided for it.

8. On the coming of Jesus into the ship with Peter, the storm instantly ceased, the waves subsided, and struck with astonishment, all who were in the ship fell at his feet, acknowledging his divine power and Godhead in the wonders they had seen, and adoring him for the mercies they had received. Note, (1.) When Christ comes to visit the troubled soul, then the winds of distress and temptation are hushed, and the tempest of doubts and fears is calmed. (2.) Experience of the Redeemer's grace and power should confirm our faith, and excite our adoration; and this is the blessed end for which he permits his people to be exercised, that he may more abundantly display his own glory in their salvation.

34. ¶ [f] And when they were gone over, they came into the land of * Gennesaret. 35. And when the men of that place had knowledge of him, [g] they sent out into all that country round about, and brought unto him all that were diseased; 36. And besought him that they might [h] only touch the hem of his garment: and as many as touched were made perfectly whole.

f Mark 6. 53—56.

* Viz. that part of Galilee which bordered the lake of Gennesaret on the west. This tract of country is described by Josephus, as exceedingly salubrious and fertile.—Dr Wells.

g John 4. 26. ch. 4. 24, 25.

h Ch. 9. 20, 21. Mark 3. 10. Luke 6. 19. Acts 19. 12.

Verses 34—36. The storm being over, and their ship arrived safe in port, they disembarked on the fruitful land of Gennesaret: and thus shall the saints of God at last, when all the tempests of life are blown over, reach that land where there is undisturbed repose and pleasures for evermore.

No sooner is it known that Jesus is there, than we are told the eagerness with which the people of that country crowded around him, spreading the glad tidings through the neighbourhood, and bringing all their diseased to Jesus, the great and general Physician. And such was their faith in his sufficiency to heal all their maladies, that they besought him, if but to touch the hem of his garment, persuaded such virtue resided in him that nothing more was needful to their cure: nor were they disappointed in their confidence or application. He granted their request, and as many as touched him immediately were made perfectly whole. Note, (1.) Christ's visits are precious; we should improve them with diligence. (2.) If we have found him a Saviour unto us, it becomes us to spread the glad tidings, and invite others to come an share our blessings. (3.) There is no disease of our souls but Jesus hath healing for it. If we perish, it is because we will not come to him that we may have life. (4.) They who in faith and humility approach the Saviour, are sure never to go disappointed away.

CHAP. XV.—ANNO DOMINI, 32.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's discourse with the Scribes and Pharisees about human traditions and injunctions, ver. 1—9. 2. His discourse with the multitude, and with his disciples, concerning the things that defile a man, ver. 10—20. 3. His casting the devil out of the woman of Canaan's daughter, ver. 21—28. 4. His healing of all that were brought to him, ver. 29—31. 5. His feeding four thousand men with seven loaves and a few littles fishes, ver. 32—39.

1. THEN [a] came to Jesus scribes and Pharisees, which were of Jerusalem, saying, 2. [b] Why do thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders? for they wash * not their hands when they eat bread. 3. But he answered and said unto them, Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your tradition? 4. For God commanded, saying, [c] Honour thy father and mother: and, He that curseth father or mother, let him die the death. 5. But ye say, [d] Whosoever shall say to his father or his mother, It is a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me, 6. And honour not his father or his mother, he shall be free. [e] Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition. 7. Ye [f] hypocrites, well did Esaias prophesy of you, saying, 8. [g] This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me. 9. [h] But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

a Mark 7. 1—9.

b Mark 7. 2. Gal. 1. 14. Col. 2. 8, 18—22. ch. 7. 3—5.

* The custom of washing their hands before meals was so strictly commanded among the Jews at this time, that to neglect it, was to be held guilty of a heavy and capital crime, "He that taketh meat with unwashen hands," says one of their Rabbies, "is worthy of death."—Dr Hammond.

c Exod. 20. 12. & 21. 17. Lev. 19. 3, 32. & 20. 9. Deut. 5. 16. & 21. 18. & 27. 16. Prov. 20. 20. & 23. 22. & 30. 17. Eph. 6. 2.

d Mark 7. 11, 12. Lev. xxvii. Prov. 11. 25. Hos. 8. 12. It is all dedicated to God. Prov. 20. 25.

e Prov. 1. 25.

f Ch. 23. 13—15, 23, 25, 27, 29. Tit. 1. 16. 2 Tim. 3. 5.

g Is. 29. 13. Ez. k. 33. 31. Mark 7. 6.

h Is. 1. 13, 15. Tit. 1. 14. 1 Tim. 1. 6, 7. Col. 2. 18—22.

Verses 1—9. Since the purity of the Redeemer's conduct was such that his most inveterate enemies could not convict him of sin, the Scribes and Pharisees endeavoured, if they could not prove him guilty of a breach of God's law, to accuse him at least as a breaker of the canons of their church.

1. The accusation laid against him is for permitting his disciples "to transgress the tradition of the elders, and eat bread "with unwashen hands:" which to them appeared highly criminal, who, having lost the spirit and power of godliness, were wholly engrossed with the form, and spent their zeal in practising and enforcing the vain superstitions of their own invention as the most essential parts of religion. And similar hereunto, we still too frequently see the most rigid and superstitious observers of the forms of godliness the greatest enemies to the power of it, and the most inveterate persecutors of the spiritually minded.

2. Christ answers their accusation, vindicates his disciples, and rebukes their hypocrisy.

[1.] He vindicates his disciples, by showing the folly and wickedness of the traditions on which they grounded their charge, and recriminates by a juster accusation of their conduct, who made void the commandments of God by their traditions. In proof of which he produces the fifth commandment, where the duty of children towards their parents is enjoined; and in the honour we must pay to them, there is included the relief of their wants, in case of need: and to this law God hath annexed the most awful sanction: the transgressor who curses, or but speaks contemptibly of his father or mother, is doomed to death, Exod. xxi. 17. But their false casuistry had provided an evasion, to avoid ministering to the necessities of their parents; and their tradition asserted, that however urgent these might be, if they vowed to employ in sacred uses what should have been given to relieve their parent's wants: or rather, as Dr Gill interprets the passage, vowed that what they had, should be as Corban, as if dedicated to the sanctuary, and should not be given to their parents' use; they were then supposed to be bound by their vow, and though the things were not employed in sacred uses, they thought themselves authorized under this pretence, to withhold from their father or mother the relief they ought to have afforded them: a tradition as absurd as impious, and utterly overturning the law of God. Note, (1.) Many who are flaming in zeal for trifling human ceremonies, disregard and violate the most essential precepts of charity, and the most evident commands of God's law. (2.) Tradition has been ever a treacherous guide; therefore neither antiquity nor authority must weigh a rush with us against the revealed truths of God's word.

[2.] He rebukes their hypocrisy. He knew their hearts, and therefore there was no rashness nor uncharitableness in the charge laid against them: and he brings his reproof from Isaiah; for what the prophet spoke as the character of the men of his day, had also a further view to the generation then present, who exactly answered the description; and they are indeed equally applicable to the state of all hypocrites and formal professors to the end of time. They made an outward show of religion, and, so far as lip-service and external worship went, pretended to honour God; but their hearts, without which he is pleased with no services, were far estranged from him: and whilst they appeared to pay the highest respect to God, they set up their traditions and human inventions, many of them in direct opposition to God's law; and this rendered all their worship and apparent devotion vain, useless, and rejected. Note, (1.) Hypocrisy is among the most common and fatal sins: and though men may not discover it in us, from God it cannot be hid. (2.) God's first requirement of us is our heart; if this be alienated from him, nothing we can offer him beside will meet with any acceptance.

10. ¶ [i] And he called the multitude, and said unto them, Hear, and understand: 11. [k] Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man; but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man. 12. Then came his disciples, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the Pharisees [l] were offended, after they heard this saying? 13. But he answered and said, [m] Every plant, which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up. 14. [n] Let them alone: they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch. 15. [o] Then answered Peter and said unto him, Declare unto us this parable. 16. And Jesus said, [p] Are ye also yet without understanding? 17. Do not ye yet understand, [q] that whatsoever entereth in at the mouth goeth into the belly, and is cast out into the draught? 18. [r] But those things which proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart; and they defile the man. 19. [s] For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies: 20. These are the things which defile a man: but to eat with unwashen hands defileth not a man.

i Mark 7. 14 Prov. 2. 1—6. & 4. 1—7. Is. 55. 3.

k Acts 10. 14, 15. Rom. 14. 14, 17. 1 Cor. 8. 1, 4. & 10. 25. 1 Tim. 4. 4. Tit. 1. 15.

l Ch. 9. 34. & 12. 24. & 11. 6. Gal. 2. 5. James 3. 17.

m Ps. 92. 13. Isa. 60. 21. John 15. 2. 1 Cor. 3. 9. 12—15. ch. 3. 12. & 8. 12. & 13. 40, 41.

n Hos. 4. 14, 17. Luke 6. 39. ch. 23. 16. Is. 9. 16. & 42. 19. Jer. 6. 15. Hos. 4. 9. Jer. 5. 31. & 20. 6. Rev. 22. 15

o Mark 7. 17. ch. 13. 36. Acts 8. 30, 31. Prov. 2. 1—6. & 4. 1—7.

p Mark 7. 18. ch. 16. 9. Heb. 5. 12. Deut. 29. 29. Is. 28. 9, 10.

q Luke 6. 45. 1 Cor. 6. 13. Col. 2. 21, 22. James 3. 6.

r Jam. 3. 6. ch. 12. 34. 1 Tim. 1. 15, 16. Ps. 56. [illegible] Prov. 6. 12—19, 22. & 15. 2, 28. Luke 19. 22.

s Gen. 6. 5. & 8. 21. Prov. [illegible] 11. Jer. 1. 9. & 6. 7. Mark 7. 21—23. Gal. 5. 19—21. 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. Tit. 3. 2, 3. Rom. 13. 13. & 3. 10—18.

Verses 10—20. Having vindicated his disciples, and rebuked the hypocrisy of the Pharisees, he endeavours to set the multitude in general right in a matter of such importance, which had been so grievously mistaken. And for this purpose he calls them unto him, as they probably had withdrawn whilst the Pharisees had talked with him, and bids them hear and understand; for it requires much attention and careful examination before we can emancipate ourselves from the fetters of long rooted error, and the prejudices of education.

1. He lays down this grand axiom, that all defilement comes from within. It was a superstitious tradition which the Pharisees inculcated, that the meat eaten with unwashen hands communicated pollution to the soul; whereas nothing can defile the soul but sin, which, taking its rise in the heart, issues forth at the mouth. And herein he levelled a tacit rebuke against these cavillers, who, whilst they contended for cleanness and purity, betrayed the venom and malignity of their own hearts. The severest censurers of others are usually thus found most culpable themselves. Whilst they pretend to pluck the mote from their brother's eye, they discover not the beam which is in their own.

2. When they were retired into a house, the disciples, aware of the great offence this declaration gave to the Pharisees, expressed their concern about it, as if the observation had been better suppressed, and might prejudice and exasperate them against him. Note, (1.) Truth, however offensive, must be spoken, and the wo lies not against those who give the offence, but against those who take it. (2.) We are too apt to fear for others, and to fear, lest some of the audience should be disgusted with plain dealing. But they who would convert men's souls, must often be content to offend nice ears.

3. In answer to their suggestion, Jesus vindicates what he had spoken, as proper and necessary. As these men and their traditions were not those heavenly plants which God the Father had planted, they are thus by the piercing word of truth, discovered, detected, and rooted up. If they are offended, the disciples need not regard it; for high as their character was among the people, they were in fact no better than blind leaders of the blind, ignorant themselves of saving truth, and misleading those who blindly and implicitly obeyed their dictates. And the necessary consequence of this was, that they must perish together, and fall into the pit of eternal misery. Note, (1.) However plausible men's professions may be, and however admired their characters, if they are not the planting of God, and experimentally partakers of the quickening influences of his Spirit, their ruin is as sure as that of impenitent publicans and harlots. (2.) Pride and blindness of heart are inseparable companions; and none are so far from the light of truth as those who, filled with the conceit of their own wisdom and abilities, vainly boast how clear they see. (3.) The deceived and the deceiver will perish together; and they who choose their own delusions, have themselves only to blame for the ruin which ensues.

4. Peter, in the name of the disciples, not understanding the meaning of the parable, or still biassed by the prejudices of education, desires his Master to explain himself more distinctly on this point; and, though their backwardness to understand was culpable, their desire to be informed was commendable. It is always good to be inquisitive about the great concerns of our souls; and Christ is willing to teach those who desire to learn, whilst the wilfully ignorant, the self-sufficient, and the proud, are justly left to their darkness and ruin.

5. Christ rebukes the dulness of their capacity, yet graciously condescends to give a farther explication of what he had advanced. Are ye also yet without understanding? They had enjoyed many and long opportunities for profiting under him, and it was a shame, in a matter so plain, they should be yet so ignorant. Christ justly expects our means and mercies should produce a proportionate advancement in grace and knowledge. Nothing could be more evident, than that the meat, of whatever sort it was, which entered at the mouth and passed merely through the body, could communicate no moral defilement to the soul. But the heart being the source and fountain of all spiritual impurity, what flowed from thence, alone communicated in God's sight defilement to the man: and the corrupt and impure streams which flow from thence he enumerates; a dreadful catalogue, but the natural produce of every fallen spirit. (1.) Evil thoughts; such as lewd desires, infidel reasonings, covetous wishes, malicious purposes, fraudulent designs, which never appeared in words or actions, but were naked and open before God, and brought guilt upon the soul. (2.) Murders; not only the effusion of human blood, but every word of anger, every act of violence, every expression of malice, hatred, or revenge. (3.) Adulteries, fornications, with all the various steps and contrivances which have a tendency to lead men to these horrid deeds. (4.) Thefts, whether committed by force or fraud. (5.) False witness in perjuries, lies, deceit, and misrepresentation. (6.) Blasphemies, against God or man. These are the great violations of God's law, the things which involve the conscience in guilt, and make us loathsome in the eyes of divine purity; whilst to eat with unwashen hands communicates no defilement to the soul, nor in the least renders any man a sinner before God.

21. ¶ [t] Then Jesus went thence, and departed into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon. 22. [u] And, behold, a woman of Canaan came out of the same coasts, and cried unto him, saying, [x] Have mercy on me, O LORD, [y] thou son of David; my daughter is [z] grievously vexed with a devil. 23. But [a] he answered her not a word. And his disciples came and besought him, saying, Send her away; for she crieth after us. 24. But he answered and said, [b] I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel. 25. [c] Then came she and worshipped him, saying, Lord, help me. 26. But he answered and said, [d] It is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it to dogs. 27. And she said, [e] Truth, Lord: [f] yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their master's table. 28. Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, [g] great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt. [h] And her daughter was made whole from that very hour.

t Mark 7. 24—30. The confines of the Jews' territory. Ver. 24. ch. 10. 5, 6. Rom. 15. 8.
u Gen. 49. 10. Is. 11. 10.
x Luke 18. 13. Tit. 3. 5.
y Is. 11. 1. ch. 1. 1. & 9. 27. & 20. 30, 31. & 22. 42—45 John 6. 14. t. e. O Messiah.
z Ch. 4. 24. Mark 9. 18, 20, 22, 26. ch. 17. 15. a Ps. 22. 1, 2. Lam. 3. 8. Jer. 14. 9.
b Ch. 10. 5 6. & 9. 36. Acts 13. 46. Rom. 9. 4, 5. & 15. 8. Is. 53. 6. 1 Pet. 2. 25. Jer. 50. 6, 17. Ezek. 34. 5, 6, 14, 16, 23. Zech. 11. 7, 11. Luke 1. 54, 55. John 1. 11. c Luke 11. 8. & 18. 1. Eph. 6. 18. 1 Thes. 5. 17. Gen. 32. 26.
d Ch. 7. 6. & 10. 5, 6. Rom. 9. 4. with Eph. 2. 12.
e Ps. 73. 22. Prov. 30. 2. Gen. 32. 10
f Ch. 5. 45. Is. 49. 6. & 42. 6, 7. & 45. 22. & 11. 10.
g Ch. 8. 10, 13. Mark 9. 23. 1 Cor. 10. 13. Eph. 3. 20. Is. 57. 16.
h Ch. 8. 13. John 5. 50—53. Acts 19. 12.

Verses 21—28. Departing from the country of Gennesaret, our Lord visited the coasts of Tyre and Sidon. He had a peculiar object in his view, and by one act of favour to the poor Gentiles, would intimate the mercy he had in store for them. We have,

1. The application made to him by a poor woman of that country, a Canaanite; perhaps a descendant of that accursed race, but selected as a monument of mercy. Having heard the fame of Jesus, she seized the present moment to prefer her request. Her case was very afflictive, her daughter was grievously vexed with a devil, possessed and tormented by him, and therefore she earnestly cries, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David. She professes her faith in him as the true Messiah, expresses her confidence of his power to help her, and conscious of her own unworthiness to receive any favour from him, casts herself entirely on his mercy. Note, (1.) To see a child under the power of disease, is deeply felt by every tender parent: but to behold them under the power of sin and Satan, is far more grievous. (2.) When we can do no more for our unhappy offspring, we must continue in prayer to present their miserable state to Jesus, if so be he may interpose to heal them. (3.) The mercies shown to our children are favours done to ourselves, and should be so acknowledged. (4.) All that a sinner hath to ask of the Saviour is mere mercy; we have no claim upon him, and can only cast ourselves at his feet, to do with us and by us according to the riches of his grace.

2. Her application appears at first to be utterly disregarded, and Jesus condescended to make no reply; not that he meant to deny her request, but to exercise her faith, and quicken her importunity. His disciples, who had never before seen their Master deaf to the entreaties of the miserable, interested themselves in her behalf: and not merely to be rid of her cries, but probably afflicted with her deep distress, wished her request granted, and that she were dismissed in peace; but his answer, ver. 24. seemed to carry a still more unfavourable aspect, as it his ministry and miracles were to be confined to Israel alone. Nay, when the poor petitioner, notwithstanding all discouragement, approaching nearer, fell down at his feet, importunately reiterating her request, she apparently meets with a still rougher reception; seems to be spurned away as a dog, and excluded from the participation of mercies which were confined to God's covenant people, as if all out of the pale of peculiarity deserved to be treated as impure animals, and rejected by the faithful. Note, (1.) We must not conclude our requests are refused, because they are not immediately granted: nor, that though the Saviour seems to frown, he forbids further entreaty; it is to exercise our faith, and quicken our prayers. (2.) Gracious souls are ever ready advocates and intercessors for the miserable. (3.) If the Lord write bitter things against us, it is to humble our souls before him, and make us see how vile and unworthy we are of any favour at his hands.

3. Not dismayed by this repulse, nor driven to quit her hold, her faith cleaves to him, and her soul bows down before him. Far from being offended at being treated as a dog, or sinking into despair at Christ's reply, her answer expressed the deep humility and unshaken dependence of her heart upon him: "Truth Lord," she replied; "I own the charge; more vile "and worthless than I am, no dog can be: a sinner, a Gentile, "undeserving of any favour: yet, as a dog regard me," (so gracefully and powerfully doth she improve that for her plea, which seemed to convey the greatest discouragement,) "they are "permitted, under their master's table, to pick up the crumbs "that fall; I ask no more. Whilst happier Israelites enjoy the "abundance of thy miracles, let one crumb fall on me, a poor "Canaanite; no less to them than to me a mercy so unspeakable." Note, (1.) Nothing must ever drive us from Christ; the more we are distressed, the more should we cleave to him. If we perish, we perish; let it be at least at the feet of Jesus, and there none ever yet were finally cast away. (2.) We can never have too lowly thoughts of ourselves; the worst we can say of ourselves, or others can say of us, is nothing so bad as God sees in us. (3.) Active faith lays hold even on the hand that seems stretched out to destroy: "though thou slay me, yet will I trust in thee." And this is indeed the triumph of faith.

4. As if amazed and overcome by faith so distinguished, Jesus grants her request, and dismisses her with the highest marks of his approbation. To her utmost wishes he extends the favour, and instantly her daughter was made whole. Note, (1.) Nothing is so pleasing and honourable to Jesus, as great faith in his power and love. (2.) There is no mercy that we can ask, believing, which Jesus will ever refuse us; whether it be pardon, grace, or glory, it shall assuredly be given us.

29. ¶ [i] And Jesus departed from thence, and came nigh unto the sea [k] of Galilee; and went up into a mountain, and sat down there. 30. [l] And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, * maimed, and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet, and he healed them: 31. Insomuch that the multitude wondered, when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to see: and [m] they glorified the God of Israel. 32. ¶ [n] Then Jesus called his disciples unto him, and said, I have compassion on the multitude, because they continue with me now three days, and have nothing to eat: and I will not send them away fasting, lest they faint in the way. 33. And his disciples say unto him, [o] Whence should we have so much bread in the wilderness, as to fill so great a multitude? 34. And Jesus saith unto them, [p] How many loaves have ye? and they said, Seven, and a few little fishes. 35. And he commanded the multitude [q] to sit down on the ground. 36. And he took the seven loaves and the fishes, and [r] gave thanks, and brake them, and gave to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude. 37. [s] And they did all eat, and were filled: and they took up of the broken meat that was left seven baskets full. 38. And they that did eat were four thousand men, besides women and children. 39. And he sent away the [t] multitude, and took ship, * and came into the coasts of [t] Magdala.

i Mark 7. 31. ch. 5. 1.

k Or of Tiberias. John 6. 1, 23. & 21. 1.

l Gen. 49. 10. Deut. 18. 15—18. Ps. 22. 27—31. Is. 2. 2—5. & 45. 23. & 35. 5, 6. & 40. 29. & 42. 18. ch. 4. 23, 24. & 8. 16. & 9. 35. & 11. 5. & 14. 36. & 21. 14. Luke 7. 22.

* It is reasonable to suppose, that among the many 'maimed,' who were brought on these occasions, there were some whose limbs had been cut off; and I think hardly any of the miracles of our Lord were more illustrious and amazing than the recovery of such.—Doddridge.

m Ch. 9. 33. Mark 7. 37. Luke 17. 18. Ps. 115. 1. & xcvi—c. & cxiv—cl. Is. 24. 14—16.

n Mark 8. 1—10. ch. 9. 36. & 14. 14. Ps. 103. 13. & 145. 8, 9, 16. Heb. 2. 17. & 4. 15. John 4. 34.

o Mark 8. 4. 2 Kin. 4. 42, 43. Num. 11. 21, 22. Mark 6. 52. John 6. 7—9.

p Num. 11. 22. ch. 14. 15.

q Luke 9. 14, 15. ch. 14. 19.

r Ch. 14. 19. & 26. 26. Deut. 8. 10. 1 Tim. 4. 4, 5. Rom 14. 6.

s Mark 8. 8, 9. ch. 16. 10. Prov. 13. 25.

* Some small vessel which was coasting, and in which probably he and his disciples had come thither.—Scott.

t A city or territory on the east of the sea of Tiberias, and near Dalmanutha. Mark 8. 10.

Verses 29—39. Having finished the work he went thither to do, Jesus returned again to the coasts of Galilee; and, seating himself on a rising ground, as the great and universal physician, appeared ready to receive and relieve every miserable patient, whatever his disease might be, without money and without price. We have an account,

1. Of the multitudes who came to him, bringing the afflicted with various maladies, and casting them down at his feet. And his compassions were so great, his power so effectual, that he healed them all. Note, (1.) The diseases of our bodies drive us instantly to the physician, though his art is uncertain: shall not the more dangerous diseases of our souls drive us to Jesus, whose medicines of grace are infallible? (2.) The world is full of sickness and pain, because full of sin; if the cause be once removed through the blood, the righteousness, the Spirit of Jesus, the effects will quickly for ever cease, and the inhabitant above shall never more say, I am sick.

2. These wonders of power and grace deeply affected the beholders. Amazed to hear the dumb speak, to see the lame walk, the blind restored to sight, and every malady removed with a word, they glorified the God of Israel for sending the promised Messiah, for such these words bespoke him whom they now beheld. Note, Every mercy demands a tribute of praise; and if the removal of bodily complaints excited such wonder and thankfulness, how much more should we admire the riches of the gift, and adore the God of our salvation, if our souls have experienced the power of his healing grace; if our once blind eyes see the light of truth; if our ears, once deaf, are open to the gospel's joyful sound: if our once lame feet are strengthened to run in the way of his commandments! For these unutterable blessings, praise the Lord, O my soul!

3. A singular miracle is wrought, wherein all partook, similar to what he had done before, chap. xiv. with this little variation, that here four thousand, besides women and children, were fed with seven loaves and a few little fishes: there, five thousand men, besides women and children, were fed with five loaves.

[1.] The circumstances of the people here assembled moved the compassion of Jesus. So eager were they to attend on his ministry, and to behold his miracles, that for three days successively they continued with him; and if they brought any little provision with them, it was ere this consumed, so that they had now nothing to eat; and as many of them came from afar, and could not soon get a supply of food, to send them away thus fasting might expose them to faint by the way through weakness, and to perish with hunger. Calling his disciples, therefore, he acquainted them with his gracious design of feeding them there; but they, forgetting what they had so lately seen, chap. xiv. 21. objected to the possibility of providing meat for such a multitude in that wilderness; and especially when by his question he seemed to intend supplying the table out of their scanty store, which appeared so insufficient, being no more than seven loaves and a few small fishes. Note, (1.) They who know the sweetness of the gospel word, will undergo weariness and hunger rather than be deprived of it. (2.) It is through our forgetfulness of the past interpositions we have experienced, that under new difficulties we fall into fresh perplexity.

[2.] Having commanded them to sit down, he took the loaves and fishes as before; and thanking God for the provision, he divided the bread and fishes among the disciples, that they should distribute them to the multitude; and, far from any lack, when all had eaten and were filled, seven baskets full of fragments still remained. The provision indeed was somewhat more, the company fewer, and the fragments less than in the former instance; but the miracle was the same in one case as the other; and the wondrous enlargement of the food, evidenced the same divine creative power. Note, We stand astonished at this relation; but is not every corn that is cast into the earth as marvellously increased at the harvest? yet who thinks of the wonder-working hand of him, by whose daily bread we are constantly fed!

[3.] Having liberally satisfied his guests, he dismisses them to their own homes. Thither duty called them; we cannot always be in attendance on the sanctuary; it is not proper we should be. As for himself and his disciples, they took ship and came into the coasts of Magdala. His work was to be going about doing good, and in every place he left behind him abundant marks of his transcendent power, grace, and love.

CHAP. XVI.—ANNO DOMINI, 32.

None of Christ's miracles are recorded in this chapter; but four of his discourses. Here is, 1. A conference with the Pharisees, who challenged him to show them a sign from heaven, ver. 1—4. 2. Another with his disciples about the leaven of the Pharisees, ver. 5—12. 3. Another with them concerning himself, as the Christ, and concerning his church, built upon him, ver. 13—20. 4. Another concerning his sufferings for them, and theirs for him, ver. 21—28. And all these are written for our learning.

1. THE [a] Pharisees also with the Sadducees came, and [b] tempting, desired him that he would shew them a * sign from heaven. 2. He answered and said unto them, When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather; for the sky is red. 3. And in the morning, it will be foul weather to-day; for the sky is red and lowring. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the [c] signs of the times? 4. [d] A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given unto it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas. [e] And he left them, and departed.

a Ch. 22. 23, 34. Acts 5. 17, 34. & 23. 6—8. John 7. 48.

b Mark 8. 11—21. Luke 12. 54—57. & 11. 16, 53, 54. ch. 12. 38. & 19. 3. & 22. 18. John 4. 48. 1 Cor. 1. 22. Exod. xix, xx. Deut. 4. 5.

* As at the giving of the law.

c The evidences that the Messiah is come. Gen. 49. 10. Deut. 18. 15. Is. 7. 14. & xi, xxxv, liii. Mic. v. Dan. 9. 24, 25. Hag 2. 7. Mal. iii, iv. with ch. 11. 5. & 4. 23.

d Ch. 12. 39, 40. Jon. 1. 17. 1 Cor. 15. 4.

e Ps. 81. 12. Hos. 4. 17. Gen. 6. 7. & 15. 16.

Verses 1—4. However opposite in their tenets the Pharisees and Sadducees were, in their enmity against Christ and his gospel they perfectly agreed.

1. They came in concert, with a view to tempt and entangle him, and pretending dissatisfaction with the miracles he wrought, desired a proof of the divine mission he assumed, by some sign from heaven, such as appeared when the law was given on Sinai. Not indeed that they wished to be convinced; but merely sought some refuge for their infidelity. Note, They who, after all the miracles Jesus hath wrought, desire further evidence of his character, evidently show they determine not to receive him; and if never so many signs or wonders were granted them, yet would they not believe in him.

2. Christ justly refuses to gratify their vain curiosity, and unreasonable request. There was evidence sufficient before them if they chose to see; and they did not want natural sagacity to judge of it. From observing the appearances of the sky, they determined what weather would follow. If the sky was red at evening, they presumed, by observation and experience, the following day would be fair; but if in the morning the sky appeared red and lowering, then it would be wet or windy: and from great probability drew these conclusions. But how glaringly did they play the hypocrite when, pretending the highest veneration for Moses and the prophets, though they could judge of the weather by the appearances of the sky, they could not discern the signs of the times, so clearly and distinctly revealed in the sacred writings: could neither see the present exact fulfilment of all the prophecies concerning the Messiah, nor the ruin coming upon themselves for rejecting him: and therefore, since they were a wicked and adulterous generation, wilfully blind to the evidence of truth, no other sign shall be given them than the miracles they had already rejected, except his resurrection from the dead after three days, prefigured by the abode of the prophet Jonas in the whale's belly. And with this he left them, as incorrigible sinners, with whom it was in vain to remonstrate, and crossed the lake to another part of the country. Note, (1.) Many are wise enough in human concerns, yea deeply skilled in the mysteries of science, who yet are stark blind with regard to their souls. (2.) They who by their obstinacy and infidelity provoke Christ to depart from them, are justly given up to perdition.

5. ¶ And [f] when his disciples were come to the other side, they had forgotten to take bread. 6. Then Jesus said unto them, [g] Take heed and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees. 7. And they reasoned among themselves, saying, [h] It is because we have taken no bread. 8. Which when Jesus [i] perceived, he said unto them, [k] O ye of little faith, why reason ye among yourselves, because ye have brought no bread? 9. [l] Do ye not yet understand, neither remember the five loaves of the five thousand, and how many baskets ye took up? 10. [m] Neither the seven loaves of the four thousand, and how many baskets ye took up? 11. [n] How is it that ye do not understand that I spake it not to you concerning bread that ye should beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees? 12. Then understood they how that he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the [o] doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees.

f Ch. 15. 39. Mark 8. 14.

g Mark 8. 15—21. Luke 12. 1. 1 Cor. 5. 7. Gal. 5. 9. 2 Tim. 2. 16, 17.

h Ps. 94. 8, 11. Luke 24. 25. ch. 15. 16—18. Acts 10. 14.

i Ch. 9. 4. & 12. 15, 25. Mark 8. 16, 17. Jer. 17. 10. John 2. 24, 25. Heb. 4. 12, 13. Rev. 2. 23.

k Ch. 6. 30. & 8. 26. & 17. 17. & 14. 31. Jam. 1. 6. Am not I as able and ready to supply you as ever?

l Ch. 14. 17—21. Mark 6. 34—44. Luke 9. 12—17. John 6. 2—13.

m Ch. 15. 34—38. Mark 6. 1—9, 17—21.

n Heb. 5. 12. 1 Cor. 3. 2. Ps. 94. 8. Luke 24. 25. Mark 4. 40. & 8. 21. John 8. 43.

o 1 Cor. 5. 6, 7. Gal. 5. 9. with ch. 15. 6, 9. & xxiii. & 22. 23. Acts 23. 8.

Verses 5—12. Departing in haste, the disciples had forgotten to take with them provisions as usual: and thereupon, from temporal things, he takes occasion to introduce spiritual instructions.

1. He cautions them to beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees; of their principles and doctrines, which would spread their pernicious influences through the whole man.

2. They mistook his meaning, and, taking his words literally, they concluded privately among themselves, that it was intended as a rebuke for their carelessness, or a caution not to make use of the bread of the Pharisees and Sadducees, nor so much as to eat with them.

3. He reproves them for the sinful distrust of their hearts, and the dulness of their apprehensions. It was a proof of the weakness of their faith, after the miracles they had so lately seen, to harbour a moment's distrust about a provision which their Master could so easily supply: and it showed their stupidity, not to understand, after what had passed, that it could not be of bread literally that he spoke, but of something spiritual and figurative, of much greater moment than bread merely. Note, (1.) Christ is displeased with his people when they harbour worldly fears, and are disturbed about the meat that perisheth. It is a proof of little faith indeed, to suppose that those who have a promise of heaven for their home, should want bread by the way. (2.) If we remembered better the past experience of God's care, it would administer an argument to silence our present distrusts and perplexities.

4. At last they comprehend his meaning, that he spoke not of the bread, but of the doctrines of these sects, cautioning them against the false traditions, pride, and self-righteousness of the Pharisees, and against the infidelity and licentious principles of the Sadducees; both fatally dangerous: against which we have alike need to be on our guard. Take heed and beware of them.

† A city in the north-east of Canaan.

p Mark 8. 27. Luke 9. 18—22. Ps. 8. 4, 5. Dan. 7. 13, 14. Is. 7. 14. & 9. 6. & 11. 1. Jer. 23. 5, 6. & 33. 15, 16. Mic. 5. 2. John 1. 14. Rom. 1. 3, 4. & 9. 5. & 8. 3. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Gal. 4. 4. Heb. 2. 14, 16—18.

q Luke 9 7—9. ch. 14. 2. Mark 6. 14. Mal. 4. 5.

r Ch. 13. 11. Luke 12. 48.

s John 6. 69. & 11. 27. Acts 8. 37. & 9. 20. 1 John 4. 15. & 5. 5. ch. 26. 63. John 1. 41, 49. Ps. 2. 7. Heb. 1. 5.

t Ch. 13. 16, 17. & 5. 3—11. Eph. 1. 3.

u Matt. Ps. 56. 4. Is. 10. 5, 6. ch. 21. 22. Rom. 3. 20.

x Ch. 11. 25, 27. John 1. 18. 1 Cor. 2. 10—16. Gal. 1. 15, 16. Eph. 1. 17, 18. & 3. 18, 19.

y John 1. 42.

z 1 Cor. 3. 11. & 10. 4. Is. 28. 16. Eph. 2. 19—22. Luke 22. 31, 32. Rev. 21. 14, 19. Heb. 12. 28. Ps. 125. 1, 2 Is. 2. 2, 3. & 54. 17.

a John 20. 23. ch. 18. 18. Is. 22. 22. 1 Cor. 4. 12. Mark 16. 15, 16. Rom. 1. 16. Luke 11. 22. Lev. 13. 13, 15.

b Ch. 17. 9. Luke 9. 21, 22. Mark 8. 30. 1 Cor. 2. 8. see ch. 8. 4.

13. ¶ When Jesus came into the coasts of † Cesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, [p] Whom do men say that I the Son of man am? 14. And they said, [q] Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets. 15. He saith unto them, [r] But whom say ye that I am? 16. And Simon Peter answered and said, [s] Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. 17. And Jesus answered and said unto him, [t] Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona; for [u] flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, [x] but my Father which is in heaven. 18. And I say also unto thee, That [y] thou art Peter, and [z] upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. 19. [a] And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven. 20. [b] Then charged he his disciples that they should tell no man that he was Jesus the Christ.

Verses 13—20. Being now in the remotest part of the country, our Lord took occasion, in private conference, to inquire into the opinions entertained concerning himself by the people in general, and by his disciples in particular. Not that he was ignorant of either; but he meant to lead them to an open confession of their faith in him.

1. He asks concerning the general opinion which the people formed of him, who appeared under the name of the Son of man; the humble title he assumed when he emptied himself, and was made in the likeness of sinful flesh. Or it may be read, Whom do men say that I am? the son of man? Do they acknowledge my character and mission as the Messiah? or what do they think of me?

2. The disciples, who had heard the different sentiments of the multitude, informed him that there was a variety of conjectures formed concerning him: some supposing him John the Baptist risen from the dead: others, Elias, prophesied of by Malachi: others Jeremias, or one of the ancient prophets, sent to reform the guilty age: opinions which showed the honourable sentiments the common people entertained of him, yet far short of the truth. The meanness of his birth, relations, dress, and followers, seems to have quite excluded the notion of his true character, as the Messiah, whom their prejudices had always represented as to come with all the pomp of majesty, and the glory of a conquering hero.

3. He questions them concerning their own sentiments of him. They had been better taught, and therefore should have higher notions of his true character; and, being shortly to become teachers of others, they were peculiarly called upon to entertain right apprehensions of this important truth themselves. Note, We must know Jesus ourselves, his Person and offices, or it is impossible we should truly be his ministers to others.

4. Peter, according to his usual zeal and forwardness, in the name of the rest, and as their spokesman, nobly replies, Thou art the Christ, the son of the living God. They understood his real character; they truly believed in him as the divine Messiah; the anointed Prophet, Priest, and King of his people: and were ready to confess him not merely as Son of man, but as the coequal Son of God.

5. Christ expresses his high commendation of this truly apostolic confession. It was a distinguished blessing which Peter possessed, thus to know the Lord Christ, and what neither sprung from his birth, education, or his own reasoning, but from divine revelation. So noble and open a profession of his faith showed him to be what his name imported, a rock; and hereupon Christ adds, Upon this rock will I build my church: which some apply personally to Peter, and may in a sound sense be admitted, as one of those apostles on whom as the foundation, the church is said to be built, being raised chiefly by their ministry, Eph. ii. 20. Rev. xxi. 14. Nor can this at all countenance the absurd pretensions of the bishops of Rome, who are neither his successors in office nor doctrine. Indeed nothing can more evidence the weakness of their claims than such perverted Scriptures, wrested and pressed into the service. But by the rock more probably is meant Christ himself, who in speaking pointed to his own Person, and being evidently the Rock on which Peter himself built, the true Foundation, other than which can no man lay, 1 Cor. iii. 11. Hereon he is pleased to raise the glorious superstructure of his church: the work and the glory of it are all his own; and on his power, love, and faithfulness its stability rests: nor shall the gates of hell ever prevail against it; neither the power nor policy of Satan or his instruments shall be able to destroy the church, nor shall death or the grave finally detain one member of it: but they shall be triumphant at last, and see every foe made their footstool. Note, (1.) Nothing is so acceptable to Jesus as a bold profession of our confidence in him. (2.) They are truly blest who savingly know the Son of God. (3.) All we know of God and his Christ is from his own revelation: and unless he himself is pleased to teach us, we know nothing as we ought to know. (4.) The church of Christ is his own planting and building, and every member of it is fixed on that Rock of ages against which ne foe can prevail; the crafts and assaults of Satan, the malice of men, the open attacks of persecutors, and the secret machinations of heretics and hypocrites, are alike impotent against those who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation.

6. Having engaged to erect his church, Christ provides for the government of it, and commits to Peter and the other apostles the keys, the ensigns of authority, empowering him and them, in his name, see John xx. 23. to declare what was lawful and unlawful; to charge sin upon men's consciences, and absolve them on their humiliation: to pronounce spiritual censures, or loose men from them; and what they did upon earth in his name, and according to his will and word, he engages to ratify in heaven. And this is particularly addressed to Peter here, as being ordained to be the first preacher of the gospel both to the Jews and Gentiles, and as the honour conferred upon him for the glorious confession he had made.

7. He strictly charges his disciples at present to conceal what they knew of his divine person and character: and this for many reasons; because his hour was not yet come, and such declarations would exasperate the Pharisees to destroy him, alarm the government, and occasion an insurrection among the people, big with the hopes of a temporal Messiah; besides that they were to be better furnished, after his resurrection, with greater abilities for their work, and fuller evidence of the truth in their own souls, and for the conviction of others.

21. ¶ From that time forth began Jesus [c] to shew unto his disciples how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and [d] chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day. 22. Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, saying, [e] Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee. 23. But he turned, and said unto Peter, [f] Get thee behind me, Satan; thou art an offence unto me: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men.

c Ch. 17. 22, 23. & 20. 17, 18. & 26. 2. Mark 9. 30. Luke 9. 22, 44. & 18. 31. & 24. 7, 26. John 16. 16. 1 Cor. 15. 4.

d Ch. 26. 47. & 27. 12. 1 Chr. 24. 1—19 Neh. 12. 7.

e Gr. Pity thyself. 2 Sam. 23. 17. 1 Chr. 11. 19.

f John 6. 70. & 8. 44. Acts 15. 10. Rev. 2. 10. Jam. 3. 15. Rom. 8. 7, 8. 1 Cor. 2. 14. 2 Cor. 2. 16.

Verses 21—23. To check the aspiring hopes which his own disciples foolishly entertained concerning the nature of his kingdom, he begins to inform them of the sufferings he must undergo; and from that time, when their faith appeared established in him, inculcated this mortifying lesson, as they were able to bear it. Christ's method is to let us into the knowledge of his truth by degrees: it would utterly have staggered us, if we had known at first all the discouragement we should afterwards meet with.

1. He foretells his sufferings and death, (strange tidings to their ears!) the scene of which would be in Jerusalem, the holy city, and the instruments the most admired characters, the elders, chief priests, and scribes, who, by their office and profession, should have been the first to receive and honour him as the Messiah: but withal he informs them to support their hopes, that the third day he should rise again. And all this must be. So God had decreed in his eternal counsels: and no other way could the salvation of his people be secured.

2. Peter still the foremost to speak, though now as faulty as he had been before commendable, could not bear to hear of his death and sufferings, and therefore had the boldness to take him aside and expostulate with him, expressing his displeasure at what he had heard, his abhorrence of the thought of it, and his presumption that it was impossible the Messiah should thus suffer, and the Son of the living God be put to death. Note, (1.) Our hearts ill bear commendation: like Peter, we are too apt to presume upon it. (2.) How intricate soever God's ways may appear, and his dispensations however painful to us, it is not for us to question the rectitude of his procedure, or pretend to be wiser than he: submission and silence are our bounden duty. (3.) Our corrupt nature ever shrinks from the cross with abhorrence. Had Christ thus started back from it, what had become of us?

3. With a sharp rebuke the Lord testifies his displeasure against Peter. He turned, with sternness in his look, and said unto Peter, in the hearing of the twelve, Get thee behind me Satan; begone; thou speakest under his influence: and this pretended kindness implies real enmity. Thou art an offence or hinderance to me, opposing the great end for which I came into the world: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, dost not relish the contrivance of infinite Wisdom, for the manifestation of his own glory, and the redemption of sinners, by my sufferings, but those that be of men, expecting in the Messiah a temporal monarch, and influenced by the hopes of worldly wealth, power, and honour. Note, (1.) Left but for a moment to ourselves, however high our attainments have been, we must instantly sink under the power of Satan. (2.) We may find often as dangerous snares in the false kindness of our friends, as in the avowed enmity of our foes. (3.) Whoever, on any pretence, would dissuade us from the path of duty, we must reject the advice with abhorrence, and rebuke them with severity. (4.) Maxims of carnal policy, and desire of earthly ease and honour, are strangely apt to insinuate themselves even into good men, and disincline them from taking up that cross which God hath appointed them. We have need of constant jealousy over our hearts, lest, imitating Peter's conduct, we should meet with his rebuke.

24. ¶ [g] Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. 25. [h] For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it. 26. [i] For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? 27. [k] For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; [l] and then he shall reward every man according to his works. 28. Verily I say unto you, [m] There be some standing here which shall not taste of death till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom.

g Luke 14. 27. & 9. 23—27. & 17. 33. ch. 10. 38. Mark 8. 31—38. Gal. 4. 24. & 6. 14. 2 Tim. 3. 12. Acts 14. 22. Col. 1. 24. Esth. 4. 16. 1 Cor. 3. 18. Phil. 3. 7, 8. Heb. 11. 24.

h Ch. 10. 39. Luke 17. 33. John 12. 25. Gal. 6. 12. Rev. 12. 11. Heb. 11. 35.

i Job 2. 4. Mark 8. 36. Luke 9. 25. & 12. 19, 20. Ps. 49. 7, 8. 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19.

k Ch. 24. 30. & 25. 31. & 26. 64. Zech. 14. 5. Jude 14 Job 19. 25.

l Job 34. 11. Ps. 62. 12. & 96. 13. & 98. 9. Prov. 24. 12. Is. 3. 10, 11. Jer. 17. 10. & 32. 19. Ezek. 7. 27. Rom. 2. 6. 1 Cor. 3 8. 2 Cor. 5. 10. Gal. 6. 5. Eph. 6. 8. Col. 3. 25. 1 Pet. 1. 17. Rev. 2. 23. & 22. 12. 18. ch. 26. 64. Heb. 2. 9. & 12. 28.

m Mark 9. 1. Luke 9. 27. & 22. 18.

Verses 24—28. As he had foretold them of the sufferings himself must endure, he forewarns them also to expect the like treatment, and advertises them, that only thus bearing his cross they could be truly his disciples.

1. He plainly sets before them the terms of discipleship; very different from what their national prejudices suggested. If any man will come after me, a volunteer in my service, and choosing it with all the trials which for my sake he may be exposed to endure, let him deny himself, his own will and wisdom, his pride and self-righteousness, his carnal lusts and appetites, his worldly honour, ease, and advantage, and whatever else would tend to clog, retard, or turn him back from my service; and let him take up his cross, cheerfully submitting to every providential affliction, and ready to expose himself, in the way of duty, to persecutions, losses, reproaches, sufferings, yea, even to death itself, if need be, for my sake, and the open and avowed profession of my name: and let him follow me in all humility, patience, faith, perseverance, steadfast and unmoveable in the work of the Lord, whether to do or suffer according to his holy will. Hard terms for flesh and blood! Indeed we must have more than human ability, or they would be impracticable. Note, (1.) Self-denial is the first lesson of Christ's school. (2.) There never yet was a Christian without his cross. Far therefore from being discouraged by what we suffer, we should rather conclude our real discipleship from this conformity to our Lord. (3.) It becomes us, however, to take care the cross we bear is the cross of Christ, and not what our own wilfulness or sins have brought upon us.

2. Christ suggests the most powerful arguments to engage us with steadiness and cheerfulness to embrace his proposal.

[1.] An eternity of happiness or misery depends on our present choice and conduct. Whoever, by base and sinful compliances with a world that lieth in wickedness, would screen himself from sufferings and death, takes the direct method to destroy for ever the life he thus seeks to preserve. Whilst he who with unshaken fidelity, for the sake of Christ and his gospel, is ready to endure the loss of all things, and even of life itself, rather than dishonour his profession, or betray the cause in which he is engaged, this man shall in eternity be unspeakably a gainer, and effectually secure the life he thus bravely dares to part with. We must therefore weigh time against eternity, and under the influence of a realizing faith, not hesitate a moment, whether we shall suffer with Christ that we may reign with him, or prolonging a momentary existence by our cowardice, perish everlastingly.

[2.] Our immortal souls are at stake, infinitely more valuable than ten thousand worlds. Admit that we should, by complying with the world, gain all that it hath to bestow, wallow in its wealth, riot in its pleasures, or rise to the pinnacle of earthly grandeur, yet, if this be purchased by the loss of our souls for ever, driven from the presence of God, and consigned to everlasting torment, how inconceivably foolish will this bargain appear shortly, and how irreparable the damage? since had a man millions of gold and silver, yea worlds unnumbered, to bestow, they would in God's account be lighter on the balances than vanity itself, yea, would be less than nothing, if proffered in exchange to redeem but one soul from eternal death. Note, (1.) The value of the soul, and the vanity of the world, should be the subject of our frequent meditation. (2.) How many thousands are daily bartering their souls for the most miserable pittance of this world's honours, gain, and pleasures! and yet so hath the god of this world blinded them, that they will not see the folly, the madness of their pursuits. (3.) A soul lost is lost for ever; there is no redemption in the grave. (4.) There is but one sufficient price to redeem the soul from death, and that is the blood of Christ: and all other things in God's account are as dung and dross.

[3.] The rewards of eternal glory will infinitely compensate all the sufferings of this present time. This is a perishing world; the end of all things is at hand: the Judge is at the door; the Son of man shall come in all the glory of divinity with his angelic guards around his throne of judgment, and then will he dispense his rewards according to men's works: when the faithful shall receive the eternal glory, honour, and immortality he hath promised; and the wicked, the worldling, and the apostate, the wages of their iniquity in eternal torment. Note, To live under the constant expectation of this great day, is the best means of strengthening us against every trial we may be called to encounter.

[4.] As an especial argument to secure their fidelity, Christ assures them, that some there present, before their death, should see the glory of the Messiah's kingdom begun, in his resurrection from the dead, the out-pouring of his Spirit on the day of Pentecost, the spreading of his gospel, and the destruction of the Jewish state and nation, their bitterest persecutors, which would be an emblem of the final perdition of all ungodly men in the judgment-day.

CHAP. XVII.—ANNO DOMINI, 32.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ in his pomp and glory transfigured, ver. 1—13. 2. Christ in his power and grace casting the devil out of a child, ver. 14—21. And, 3. Christ in his poverty and great humiliation: (1.) Foretelling his own sufferings, ver. 22, 23. (2.) Paying tribute, ver. 24—27.

1. AND [a] after six days Jesus taketh [b] Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart,* 2. [c] And was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light. 3. [d] And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him. 4. Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias. 5. [e] While he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them: and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is [f] my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; [g] hear ye him. 6. And when the disciples heard it, [h] they fell on their face, and were sore afraid. 7. And Jesus came and [i] touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid. 8. And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only. 9. And as they came down from the mountain, Jesus [k] charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen again from the dead. 10. ¶ And his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes that [l] Elias must first come? 11. And Jesus answered and said unto them, [m] Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things: 12. But I say unto you, That Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed: [n] likewise shall also the Son of man suffer of them. 13. Then the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist.

[a] Mark 9. 2—10. Luke 9. 28—36.

[b] Mark 5. 37. & 14. 33. ch. 26. 37.

* Tradition reports that this was Tabor, a high mountain in the north of Galilee.

[c] Exod. 34. 29, 35. Is. 33. 17. ch. 28. 3. John 1. 14. 2 Pet. 1. 16, 17.

[d] Ch. 13. 11. Acts 10. 43. Rom. 3. 21. Luke 24. 27, 44.

[e] 2 Pet. 1. 17. Exod. 40. 34. 1 Kin. 8. 10. Ps. 18. 10, 11. Luke 9. 34. Acts 1. 9. Rev. 1. 7.

[f] Is. 42. 1, 21. Ps. 2. 7. John 1. 14. & 3. 16. & 1. 34. ch. 3. 17. & 16. 16. Col. 1. 13.

[g] Exod. 23. 21. Deut. 18. 15—18. Acts 3, 22, 23. Heb. 2. 3. & 12. 25, 26. i. e. instead of all the prophets.

[h] Num. 14. 5. & 16. 22. Judg. 13. 20, 22. Dan. 8. 18. & 10. 9, 15.

[i] Dan. 8. 18 & 9. 21. & 10. 10, 18. Rev. 1. 17. Is. 41. 10.

[k] Luke 9. 21, 22. Mark 8. 30. & 9. 9. ch. 16. 20. & 9. 30. & 12. 16. Is. 42. 2. John 5. 41. & 7. 18. & 8. 50.

[l] Ch. 11. 14. Mark 9. 11. Mal. 4. 5. & 3. 1. Is. 40. 3.

[m] Ch. iii. & 11. 2—13. & 14. 3—12. & 21. 24, 25. Mark 1. 2—9 & 6. 16—29. Luke i, iii. John 1. 6—36. & 3. 23—36. & 5. 33—35. Luke 16. 16, 17.

[n] Ch. 16. 21. Luke 9. 21, 22, 44. & 18. 31. Is. 50. 6. & 52. 14. & liii. Ps. xxii, lxix.

Verses 1—13. As Christ had so lately spoken of the Son of man's coming in his kingdom, he here gives them a glimpse of his glory on the mount of transfiguration. We are told,

1. When and where this happened, and who were the spectators. It was six days after the former discourse above recorded: or, according to St Luke, about eight, he taking in the day the discourse passed, and that on which the transfiguration happened, and the other evangelists only mentioning the intervening space of time. The place was the top of a mountain apart, whither he had retired for prayer with three of his disciples, Peter, James, and John, whom he was pleased to favour with the glorious vision, the lively impression of which dwelt long after on their minds, see 2 Pet. i. 16, 17.

2. The manner of his transfiguration. As he was praying, Luke ix. 29. the glory of the divinity burst forth, and he who bore the form of a servant suddenly appeared in the form of a God, Phil. ii. 6. His face, as the sun shining in its strength, dazzled the beholders with his transcendent lustre, and such bright beams darted from his glorified body, that, surrounded with irradiation, his very raiment glittered and became white as the light. An awful, pleasing sight! Happy the favoured souls who then beheld him! and yet far happier they who shall with open face behold him in the mount of God, and be changed into the same image, fashioned like to his glorious body!

3. The attendants who waited on him, Moses and Elias. They too appeared in glory. Known probably to the disciples by immediate revelation, or by the conversation they heard, which we are told, Luke xx. 31. respected Christ's sufferings and death at Jerusalem.

4. Overwhelmed with wonder and delight, Peter, the ready spokesman for his brethren, expresses the exulting rapture of his heart, and wishes for the continuance of the glorious vision. Fain would he for ever there fix his abode, and, with a mixture of commendable piety and inconsiderate weakness, proposes to make three booths, where Christ with his celestial visitants might dwell, scarce knowing what he said through the transport of his mind. Note, (1.) They who have ever known experimentally the sweetness of communion with Jesus, and have by faith beheld some of his glory, long to maintain the delightful intercourse: for it is good to be with him. (2.) The place to enjoy Christ's visits is not in the busy world, or gay circle, but in retirement, meditation, and prayer: in this mount of the Lord he may still be seen. (3.) Though in some happy moments we seem for a while upon the glorious hill, we have now no abiding tabernacle there, and quickly the bright vision is removed. Blessed be God however, we look for a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, and there we shall be ever with the Lord.

5. A bright cloud, at the instant Peter spoke, overshadowed them, the emblem of the Divine Presence, and from the excellent glory issued forth the voice of God the Father, proclaiming the dignity, excellence, and acceptableness of his dear Son, Jesus, and enjoining on them solemn attention to all his words: This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, hear ye him. Where we may observe, (1.) That this was a repetition of what had been declared at Christ's baptism, containing the grand truth on which our everlasting hopes depend, that God is well pleased with the undertaking of Jesus, and is in him reconciling sinners to himself, satisfied with his substitution on their behalf, and therefore not imputing their trespasses unto them. (2.) There never hath appeared but one Person under the sun concerning whom God could say, In whom I am well pleased; and that was his own Son. Him therefore we must hear, since only by and through him can God be well pleased with us: his blood, his righteousness must be alone our trust; his word of gospel grace, our constant rule; his will, our duty and delight. Lord, speak thou to my heart that I may thus hear thee!

6. Terrified with the appearance of the Divine Majesty, and trembling at the voice of God, the disciples prostrated themselves on the earth in silent adoration, conscious of their own vileness, and afraid to lift up their eyes before the holy Lord God. But Jesus kindly approached and quieted their fears, encouraged them to arise, and bid them not be afraid; the voice they had heard was not that of an angry God, but of the Father of mercies; not speaking out of the thick darkness, as on Mount Sinai, the demands of a perfect law; but out of the bright cloud of gospel light and love publishing salvation, and pointing them to a Redeemer. Note, (1.) Consciousness of guilt must ever make us dread to appear before a jealous God. It is in Christ's righteousness alone we can with boldness approach his throne. (2.) Jesus is the comforter of his afflicted people: and when we are dismayed under what we feel or fear, and ready to sink down in despair, his words of consolation revive our drooping hearts, and embolden us to look up.

7. Rising at the command of Jesus, when they looked around, the vision had disappeared, and Moses and Elias were gone: Jesus however still remained with them, in his usual form as before his transfiguration. Note, If Christ remain with us, we can easily rest content with the loss of any thing besides.

8. He charged them, as they came down from the mount, to take no notice of the vision they had seen, but reserve it till his resurrection from the dead, when that would add credibility to their report, which now, considering the state of suffering which was before him, might be disbelieved and rejected.

9. A difficulty arose in the disciples' minds; revolving what had passed; the short stay Elias made; and the injunctions of secrecy laid upon them; why it should be so often inculcated by the scribes that Elias must first come, publicly ushering in the appearance of the Messiah; and this question they begged their Master to resolve: which he doth to their full satisfaction. He tells them it was true, that Elias must be the forerunner of the Messiah, as was prophesied, Mal. iv. 5, 6. and by his preaching restore all things, preach the doctrines of repentance, and direct the people to him who comes to make all things new. But this had already been fulfilled: there had appeared one in the spirit and power of Elias, whom they knew not, as the person meant by the prophecy, and him the scribes and Pharisees in general had rejected, and treated with contempt, and Herod had murdered him. And as they had persecuted to death the messenger, so would they deal by the Master, that Son of man, whose way he was sent to prepare, who would suffer the like indignities, cruelty, and death itself by their hands. Note, (1.) When we do not thoroughly understand any passage of Scripture, we must go to Christ on our knees, and shall find prayer the best means of arriving at the truth. (2.) If we are treated with insult and cruelty by the world, let it not be thought strange we are compassed with a great cloud of witnesses who have trod the way before us.

Lastly: The disciples now understood clearly what he meant, and that John the Baptist was the person to whom he pointed; and from the fulfilment of the prophecy in him, they received a fresh confirmation of their faith in Jesus, as the Christ.

14. ¶ [o] And when they were come to the multitude, there came to him a certain man, kneeling down to him, and saying, 15. [p] Lord, have mercy on my son; for he is lunatick, * and sore vexed: for oft times he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water. 16. And [q] I brought him to thy disciples, and they could not cure him. 17. Then Jesus answered and said, [r] O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him hither to me. 18. [s] And Jesus rebuked the devil, and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour. 19. [t] Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said, Why could not we cast him out? 20. And Jesus said unto them, [u] Because of your unbelief: for o Mark 9. 14—30. Luke 9. 37—45. Ps. 50. 15. Hos. 5, 15.

p Ch. 15. 22. Luke 18. 13. Ps. 6. 2—4. Mark 9. 18.

* One who was affected with his disorder at the change and full of the moon.

q Mark 9. 14—16. Luke 9. 40.

r Ch. 6. 30. & 8. 26. & 14. 31. & 16. 8. & 13. 58. Heb. 3. 12, 19. & 4. 2.

s Ch. 4. 24. & 9. 33. & 12. 22. Acts 10. 38. Mark 9. 20—27. Luke 9. 42.

t Mark 9. 28. ch. 13. 10, 36. & 15. 15.

u Ch. 13. 58. & 6. 30. see ver. 17

verily I say unto you, [x] If ye have faith as a grain of mustard-seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove: and [y] nothing shall be impossible unto you.

21. Howbeit, this kind goeth not out but by [z] prayer and fasting.

x Luke 17. 6. ch. 21. 21. Mark 11. 23. 1 Cor. 13. 2.

y Ch. 21. 22. Mark 9. 23.

z Eph. 6. 18. 2 Cor. 12. 7, 8. 1 Kin. 17. 20, 21. 2 Kin. 11. 4, 33, 34.

Verses 14—21. The next day, when Jesus with the three disciples returned from the mountain to the rest of their company, and the people who waited for him, he found his presence greatly needed, and opportunely arrived to give a fresh display of his power and mercy.

1. An afflicted father addresses him on his knees in behalf of his only son, possessed with a devil, a lunatic, and frequently seized with epileptic fits, in which he fell into the fire, or water, whichever he chanced to be near, to the great hazard of his life. In the absence of Christ he had applied in vain to the disciples, who were unable to cast him out, so that unless he could help, the case was desperate. Note, (1.) Tender parents suffer in every pang which their children feel. (2.) Under all their diseases of body or soul, we must carry our children's miseries to Jesus, and at least commend them in prayer to him when every other means and method fail.

(2.) Christ compassionates the case, and bids the patient be brought to him: but directs a sharp rebuke to that perverse and faithless generation, the Scribes and Pharisees, and people, who probably insulted the disciples on their failing in attempting the cure, and imagined this was a case which would baffle their Master's skill. Justly he upbraids them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, after all the miracles he had wrought before them; and well might he refuse any longer to bear with their perverseness. Yet his patience waits, and he will give them fresh instances of his power, that at least they may be inexcusable in their rejecting him. Note, (1.) Nothing is so provoking to the Redeemer, as the perverseness and unbelief of those to whom he hath long vouchsafed the means of grace. (2.) Men's wickedness will not prevent the exercise of Christ's goodness: and if this leads them not to repentance, it will heap up wrath upon them against the day of wrath.

3. Jesus with a word, dispossessed the devil, and the child immediately received a perfect cure. Before his authoritative command, Satan fell a vanquished foe; and by the word of Jesus, the sword of the Spirit, and the shield of faith, shall we still triumph over the powers of darkness, and see the arch-enemy of our souls bruised under our feet.

4. The disciples took the first opportunity, when alone, to inquire of their Master why they had failed in attempting the cure, and dispossessing the evil spirit; being concerned perhaps for their reputation among the people, or fearful lest they had provoked the Lord to withdraw that miraculous power he had once bestowed on them. Note, When we see ourselves baffled in contending with the powers of evil, it becomes us seriously to inquire how we came to fail, and by what means the fault may be amended.

5. Christ gives them a full answer; it was their unbelief which prevented the cure. Whilst the multitude in general were utterly faithless they were culpable in a lesser measure; for, though they were not utterly destitute of faith, they had at this time failed in the exercise of it. For else, the least measure of this miraculous faith, possessed and exerted, was sufficient to remove the mountain now before them, and to do whatever else, however to human view impossible, should be needful to confirm the truth of their mission, to promote the glory of God and the good of mankind: but this faith must be the fruit of earnest prayer and fasting, the means appointed of God for the obtaining it. Some refer the words this kind, not to faith, but to the devils, supposing some more difficult to be dispossessed than others, and considering this as another reason why they could not succeed: but the former sense appears preferable. Note, (1.) Whenever we fail in duty, and are foiled in temptation, to this we must ever ascribe it, It is because of our unbelief. (2.) Though we may not be classed with unbelievers, yet have we daily cause to lament the weakness of our faith. (3.) The faith of miracles is ceased; we cannot now say to this mountain, Remove; but it is as great an instance of divine power, and requires as real an exercise of divine faith, to remove the mountains of guilt and corruption. And, blessed be the Lord! this faith remaineth in all the elect people of God.

22. ¶ [a] And while they abode in Galilee, Jesus said unto them, The Son of man shall be betrayed into the hands of men: 23. And they shall kill him, and the third day he shall be raised again, And [b] they were exceeding sorry.

a Ch. 20. 17, 18. & 16. 21. Mark 9. 31. & 8. 31. & 10. 33. Luke 9. 22, 44. & 18. 31. & 24. 26. John 2. 19. & 10. 18. & 19. 11. Acts 2. 23. 1 Cor. 15. 4. Is. liii.

b Ch. 26. 22. John 16. 6, 20.

Verses 22, 23. While they were journeying through Galilee, in their return to Capernaum, we are told,

1. That Jesus again took occasion to remind his disciples of the sufferings to which, according to the eternal counsels of God, he must be delivered up, through the treachery and malice of wicked men, who thirsting for his blood, would murder him by the most cruel and ignominious death, see Luke xxiv. 7. But for their comfort he added, on the third day he should rise again.

2. His disciples appeared exceeding sorry, and deeply affected, with what he told them. They did not understand what his rising again meant, and then all the rest appeared dark and dismal, and utterly contradictory to those opinions of the Messiah which they had entertained. Note, Through the darkness of our minds we suffer, needlessly, many a gloomy hour under afflictive providences. We do not look to their end, or understand how all these things are working together for our good: if we did, we should be always rejoicing.

24. ¶ And when they were come to Capernaum, they that received [c] tribute money came to Peter, and said, Doth not your master pay tribute? 25. He saith, Yes. And when he was come into the house, Jesus prevented him, saying, What thinkest thou, Simon? of whom do the kings of the earth take custom or tribute? of their own children, or of strangers? 26. Peter saith unto him, Of strangers. Jesus saith unto him, Then are the children free. 27. Notwithstanding, lest we should [d] offend them, go thou to the sea, and cast an hook, and take up the fish that first cometh up; and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt find † a piece of money: that take, and give unto them for me and thee.

c Gr. Didrachma, in value fifteen pence. Exod. 30. 13. & 38. 26. This was now demanded by the authority of the high priest and great council. Beza, however, is of opinion that this was the poll tax levied by the Romans after Judea was reduced to a province of the empire, and which Agrippa, in the reign of Claudius, remitted to the Jews.

d 1 John 2. 10. 1 Cor. 10. 32. Rom. 14. 13. & 13. 7.

† Or a stater: It is half an ounce of silver, in value about 2s. 6d.

Verses 24—27. The tribute mentioned here was the half shekel, about fifteen pence in value, which every Jew, above twenty years of age, paid annually to the temple for the maintenance of the service.

1. The collectors of this tax applied to Peter, at whose house, probably, Jesus abode when at Capernaum, chap. viii. 14. to know if his Master did not pay the usual tribute. And Peter, not doubting his Master's readiness to comply with the established law, answered in the affirmative.

2. Jesus prevented him, as he came to speak to him on the matter, with a question, which showed his omniscience as acquainted with the purpose of his coming, and the right he had to exemption, had he chosen to plead his privilege. Of whom do the kings of the earth take custom or tribute? of their own children, or of strangers? their subjects, or foreigners who trade in their country? The answer was obvious, and Peter instantly replied, Such taxes could be exacted from none but strangers, since to tax their own children would be absurd and useless. Then, said Jesus, are the children free; and, consequently I, who am the Son of God, for the service of whose temple this is levied, am excused from the payment of it. Nevertheless he waves his right, though so poor as to be unable, without a miracle, to furnish the pittance demanded: and, to avoid the appearance of offence to those who, not knowing his character, might be led to esteem him, if he had refused to pay, a despiser of the temple, and thereby might be prejudiced against his doctrine, he orders Peter to go to the sea, and baiting his hook, to take up the first fish that came to it; in the mouth of which he would find a stater, a piece of money of the value of a Jewish shekel, which would just suffice to pay for both, and remove all occasion of offence. We may learn hence, (1.) The divine perfections which shone forth in Jesus during his humiliation. All creatures are under his control, and subservient to his pleasure: he appears acquainted with all that passes in the heart of man, and in the depths of the sea: thus, even when in the form of a man, showing still his divine power and Godhead. (2.) If Christ paid tribute, and submitted to the powers in church and state, who can plead a right to exemption? (3.) In many cases it is a Christian's duty to wave his title to what may be strictly his due, and even to suffer in his secular interests, rather than give offence, or prejudice any against the gospel. We shall in the end be no losers by such self-denial. (4.) When Christ would work a miracle, Peter must use the appointed means: for it is in the way of diligence in duty, not in sloth, that we may expect a divine interposition in our behalf. (5.) When Christ could have furnished all his wants for ever, he chose just a sufficiency for the present emergence, and depended for a subsistence afterwards in the ordinary way; to teach us, if we have enough for to-day, to trust God for the morrow.

CHAP. XVIII.—ANNO DOMINI, 32.

We have here, 1. Instructions concerning humility, ver. 1—6. 2. Concerning offences in general, ver. 7. particularly offences given, [1.] By us to ourselves, ver. 8, 9. [2.] By us to others, ver. 10—14. [3.] By others to us; which are of two sorts, (1.) Scandalous sins that are to be reproved, ver. 15—20. (2.) Personal wrongs that are to be forgiven, ver. 21—35. See how practical Christ's preaching was: he could have revealed mysteries; but he pressed plain duties, especially those that are most displeasing to flesh and blood.

a Mark 9. 33—37. Luke 9. 46—48. ch. 20. 21—24. Mark 10. 42. Luke 22. 24—27.
b Ch. 19. 14. Ps. 34. 11. & 45. 10. Prov. 8. 17. & 23. 26. c Ch. 19. 14. Luke 18. 17. 1 Cor. 14. 20. 1 Pet. 2. 1, 2. John 3. 3, 5. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Gal. 6. 15. Ezek. 11. 19. & 36. 26. Ps. 131. 2. & 138. 6. ch. 20. 26. & 23. 11. Is. 57. 15. & 66. 2. Luke 9. 48. & 14. 11.

1. AT [a] the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? 2. And Jesus called [b] a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them, 3. And said, Verily I say unto you, [c] Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. 4. [d] Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven. 5. And [e] whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me. 6 But [f] whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea.*

e Ch. 10. 40. & 25. 40, 45.
f Mark 9. 42. Luke 17. 1, 2. ch. 25. 41—46. 2 Thess. 1. 6—9. Zech. 2. 8. Ezek. xxv, xxxv.
* Drowning with a weight about the criminal's neck was a customary mode of inflicting the punishment of death, and became proverbial among the Jews for inevitable ruin.

Verses 1—6. The disciples, deeply tinctured with Jewish prejudices, entertained very false conceptions of the Messiah's kingdom, and had, in the way to Capernaum, been disputing which of them should have the precedence in it. Jesus, who knew what had been the subject of their contention, now asked them concerning it. And, after some silence and shame at being discovered, see Mark ix. 33, 34. they,

1. Propose to him the question in dispute, which of them should be promoted to the first post of honour in his kingdom; for each had formed some pretence to this distinguished place. And so ready are we all to be partial in our own favour, instead of being humbly content, in the views of our real deserts, to sit down with the least and the lowest.

2. By an apposite emblem Christ seeks to rebuke their vanity, and teach them what spirit they should put on. He took a little child and set him in the midst of them, that they might look and learn whilst he commented on the case, assuring them that such was the nature of his kingdom, that none could enter therein, or partake of its honours and privileges, unless their hearts were converted and turned from the affection of earthly grandeur and greatness, and like little children, they became dead to the contentions of ambition, and the vain desires of outward wealth and eminence. Whilst the way to secure the most honourable place among his members upon earth, and the highest throne next his own in glory, was by sinking lowest in their own apprehensions of themselves, and instead of affecting magisterial dominion over others, becoming humble, teachable, and ready to sit down at the feet of the meanest. Hard lessons these for human pride! Note, (1.) Besides our first general conversion from a state of nature to a state of grace, we need conversion daily from the errors and evils that still would be cleaving to us, and therefore must continually pray, Turn thou us, and so shall we be turned. (2.) The way to honour is humility. The lowliest souls are dearest to the Lord: they most resemble him; whilst pride made angels devils, defaced God's image from the human soul, drove man from paradise, and bars the gate against his return.

3. Christ expresses his high regard and tender concern for those who in this childlike spirit are his disciples indeed. Whosoever shall show them the least kindness for the sake of their relation to him, he will regard it as if the favour had been shown to his own person. Whilst to offend one of these, to persecute or oppress them, to take advantage of their simplicity or meekness to trample on them, or of their weakness to endeavour to deceive or discourage them, the most dreadful of judgments will be the punishment of such an offender; and better were it for him to have come to the most fearful death by the hands of the public executioner, even to be thrown into the sea with a millstone about his neck, than with such guilt to fall into the hands of an avenging God under whose wrath he must perish, both body and soul, in hell. Note, (1.) Christ has the tenderest care for his poor people; and a cup of cold water given to the meanest, in his name, shall not lose its reward. (2.) It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of a jealous God. They who now oppress and oppose the meek disciples of Jesus, little think against whom they offend, and the vengeance which awaits them.

Luke 17. 1. 1 Cor. 11. 19. 2 Thes. 2. 11, 12. with ver. 8, 9. ch. 5. 29, 30. & 26. 24.

See ch. 5. 29, 30. Mark 9. 43—48. Deut. 13. 6. i. e. if what is very useful or dear to thee cause thee to sin, renounce, avoid, or mortify it.

7. ¶ [g] Woe unto the world because of offences! for it must needs be that offences come; but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh! 8. [h] Wherefore, if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire. 9. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire. 10. ¶ [i] Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, That in heaven [k] their angels do always behold the [l] face of my Father which is in heaven. 11. [m] For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost. 12. [n] How think ye? if a man have an hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray? 13. And if so be that he find it, verily I say unto you, he [o] rejoiceth more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray. 14. Even [p] so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven that one of these little ones should perish.

i Ver. 6. Ps. 15. 4. & 16. 3. & 119. 63. Luke 10. 16. Prov. 11. 12. & 14. 21. 1 Thes. 4. 8.

k Gen. 32. 1, 2. 2 Kin. 6. 16, 17. Ps. 34. 7. & 91. 11. Heb. 1. 14.

l Ps. 16. 11. & 17. 15. Exod. 33. 18, 20. 1 Cor. 13. 12. Luke 1. 19.

m Luke 19. 10. & 9. 56. ch. 10 6. & 15. 24. John 3. 16, 17. & 12. 47. 1 Tim. 1. 15.

n Luke 15. 4—7. Jer. 50. 6. Ezek. 34. 6, 8, 16, 23. Is. 53. 6, 10—12. John 10. 11. 1 Pet. 2. 25. Ps. 119. 176. Is. 63. 1. & 45. 22, 24. 1 Tim. 1. 13, 15. 16.

o Luke 15. 7. & 19. 9. & 7. 36—50. & 18. 33—43. John iv, viii. 1 Tim. 1. 13—16.

p Eph. 1. 5. Rom. 9. 18. John 10. 28.

Verses 7—14. We have here the wo denounced against the world because of offences. Under which are comprehended whatever hath a tendency to seduce or affright the soul from the good ways of the Lord, or to discourage and grieve the hearts of the righteous.

1. That there will be offences is certain. Considering the craft, malice, and vigilance of Satan, the perverseness of ungodly men, and their rooted enmity to the gospel, and above all, the deep and desperate native wickedness of every human heart, it is morally impossible offences should not come; and God, for wise ends, hath decreed to permit them; but this will in no wise extenuate the guilt of those by whom the offence cometh, nor abate the severity of their judgment. Note, (1.) We are travelling a dangerous road; this world is full of evil, of snares and stumblingblocks; the multitude lieth in wickedness, and many who pretend to know the path of safety, only lie in wait to deceive. We need be jealous of our going, cleave to God's word alone, and neither be offended with the enmity of those that are without, nor the hypocrisy and falls of those that are professors within, remembering the foundation of God standeth sure. He knoweth those that are his, and will keep them that nothing shall offend them, Psal. cxix. 165. (2.) Though the deceived and the deceiver perish together, yet will they lie down under aggravated guilt who have been Satan's instruments to lead others into error or sin. Their blood will be upon the heads of their seducers.

2. Whatever may be the occasion of offence, to ourselves or others, however near and dear to us it may be, we must part with it. The body of sin must be crucified. And though it may be as painful to mortify particular corruptions, as to suffer the amputation of a hand or a foot, unrelenting severity is needful, where our own souls or others' are in danger. And, however acute the pain, or however sensibly felt the loss may be, it is better, infinitely better to endure the momentary pang of present self-denial, that we may escape eternal misery, and secure a life of never-ending glory, than, for a transitory indulgence of appetite, and the sensual enjoyments of an hour, to be cast into devouring fire, and dwell in everlasting burnings. Note, (1.) In this state of corruption, not only the grosser pollutions that are in the world through lust must be abhorred, but every word, every action be avoided, which may tend, in the remotest way, to inflame our own passions, or insnare others. (2.) It is of absolute necessity, that we should often, in temptation, look into the burnings of hell, and gain from thence, arguments to start from the most pleasurable sins. (3.) They only who have begun the life of grace, know experimentally what is meant by these severe operations of self-denial.

3. A particular caution is given to beware of despising the least of Christ's little ones, the weakest of his disciples. We may not be indifferent about our carriage towards them, careless of what may offend them; must not treat them with contempt, as if regardless of their welfare, or slighting their weakness or infirmities: nor do ought to distress, discourage, insnare, or lead them into sin; but we should show our tenderness towards them, and our jealousy for them, by every expression of kindness in word or deed, and by a careful avoiding of whatever may grieve or hurt them.

4. He enforces his discourse by several cogent arguments:

[1.] Because the meanest heir of salvation is attended by angelic ministers. And if those glorious spirits, who in heaven behold the face of God, and stand around his throne, the ready servants of his will, do not disdain to wait upon these little ones, much less should we think them beneath our regard; and may justly dread, if we should treat them ill, these guardian spirits would be our accusers, and be employed as executioners of the divine displeasure against us.

[2.] Because it is the very purpose of Christ's coming, to seek and save lost souls. And if, on this transcendently gracious design, he condescended to stoop so low, the least of those for whom he became incarnate, have hereby an unutterable dignity and value conferred upon them, and therefore should neither be despised nor offended; for this he must highly resent. Note, (1.) Our souls are lost, eternally lost, without Christ Jesus. (2.) Salvation is purely of grace. When we were without help or hope, he died for the ungodly. (3.) They who are purchased by the blood of Christ should be precious in our eyes. If he did so much to save them, surely we should be peculiarly careful to do nothing to offend them.

[3.] Because it is God's will and pleasure that not one of these little ones perish. And we are bound to correspond with him herein, and, according to our ability, to help forward the purposes of his grace, and put no stumblingblocks in their way. Our Lord illustrates this by a parable, and appeals to them as judges of the case. Suppose a man possessed of a hundred sheep, and one be strayed from the flock; his solicitude is greater in searching after it, and his joy more sensible on finding it, than he feels about all the rest which went not astray. And such concern hath God for the wandering children of his grace, recovering them, and rejoicing over them: and, as he hath in his eternal councils determined their salvation, he cannot but be highly displeased with all who attempt to obstruct it, or are careless about advancing it: and regards such conduct as an avowed opposition, or criminal disregard of his holy will and pleasure. Note, (1.) God's people are his flock; and though sometimes they wander from him in the wilderness of sin, he will not suffer them to perish, but graciously is pleased to pursue them with mercy, and bring them back to the fold again. (2.) Though none can frustrate the purposes of God's love towards his redeemed, yet every obstruction laid in their way he will highly resent. (3.) Since all true believers, of whatever state or condition, have one common Father, they should love as brethren, honour and esteem each other as members of the same family, avoid every occasion of grieving one another, and study every means of advancing their mutual good.

15. ¶ Moreover, [q] if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother: 16. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in [r] the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. 17. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it [s] unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church [t] let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican. 18. Verily I say unto you, [u] Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven. 19. Again I say unto you, [x] That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven 20. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, [y] there am I in the midst of them.

q Lev. 19. 17. Luke 17. 3, 4. Jam. 5. 19, 20. Prov. 25. 8, 9. & 28. 23. & 9. 8, 9. Ps. 141. 5. Gal. 6. 1.

r Num. 35. 30. Deut. 17. 6. & 19. 15. 1 Kin. 21. 10. John 8. 17. 2 Cor. 13. 1. Heb. 10. 28.

s Num. 16. 33. Acts 8. 1. 1 Tim. 5. 20.

t Rom. 16. 17. 1 Cor. 5. 5, 9, 11, 13. 2 Cor. 2. 6. 2 Thes. 3. 6, 14. 1 Tim. 1. 20. Tit. 3. 10. John 2. 10.

u John 20. 23. 1 Cor. 5. 4. ch. 16. 19.

x 1 John 3. 24. & 5. 14. John 16. 23. & 14. 13. & 15. 7, 16. ch. 7. 7, 11. & 21. 22. Mark 11. 24. Luke 11. 9. Jam. 1. 5. & 5. 16.

y Ch. 28. 20. Rev. 1. 13. & 2. 1. 1 Cor. 5. 4, 5. Exod. 20. 24. Ezek. 48. 35. Zech. 2. 5. Rev. 21. 3.

Verses 15—20. As we must be careful not to give offence: as careful should we be to show all Christian tenderness and charity when we are justly offended. Since in this frail and corrupted state even good men are but men, and liable to fall, transgressing the precepts of prudence, justice, or charity; we are therefore here directed in such cases how to behave towards them.

1, If a brother, a professing member of our most holy faith, act unsuitable thereunto, and do us an injury, or give us cause of complaint against him, we must first give him a private and kind admonition of his fault, and mildly argue the case, desiring to bring him to repentance and amendment; more solicitous for his good than the redress of our own wrongs. We may not in this case, through fear of offending on the one hand, be silent and suffer sin upon our brother without rebuke; nor, on the other, give way to rash anger, or revenge, and by a public reproof expose him to others, which however true the charge, would serve not to recover but exasperate him the more. In this way of mild and secret admonition we may hope for success; and if he express his sorrow, and desire reconciliation, then the rebuke will be esteemed a kindness, the friendship more strongly cemented, our brother recovered, and the offence forgiven and forgotten.

2. If this method of reproof prove abortive, and he is obstinate against conviction, and displeased instead of humbling himself, then take two or three faithful, impartial Christian brethren, and in their presence let the matter be discussed that they may hear and judge, and add their weight to bring the party offending to due submission and reparation of the injury. Or, if their sentiments be disregarded also, they will be evidences before the church of the steps which have been taken, and ready to confirm the truth of the just accusation of the injured person.

3. If every other method prove ineffectual, then the matter should be laid before the church, the society of faithful people among whom such a one associates, that he may have a public admonition for his offence, and be called upon to repent and amend of the evil he hath done.

4. If he still remains incorrigible, and persists in his iniquity, then he is to be excluded from the communion of the faithful, and no more connection and familiarity is to be maintained with him; for the charity which teaches us to forgive our enemies, forbids us not to be on our guard against those who have used us ill and refuse to repair the injury. From the whole we may learn, (1.) Under every injury received, to guard our own hearts against passion or revenge; this wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God. (2.) Never to speak of another's faults behind his back, till we have in love and the spirit of meekness first admonished him to his face. (3.) To be ready under every provocation to forgive and forget, the moment real repentance appears in our brother. (4.) Not to endeavour to form a party in our favour; but, in cases of offence, real or supposed, where the sentiments of brethren may differ about the facts, to let some common impartial friends hear and judge, before the matter be mentioned in public or but whispered to others.

5. Christ delegates authority to his church thus to censure offenders, and ratifies the sentence that shall be pronounced in correspondence with this his revealed word; so that those who for their notorious evils are excluded from the society of the faithful now, shall be written among the reprobate, and for ever banished from the presence of God, unless they repent of their transgressions, and then they are again to be received into the bosom of the church, and all that is past to be entirely forgiven. The absolution pronounced on them by the ministers of God on earth, shall be ratified in heaven, and, the correction having become effectual, the broken-hearted penitent is to be comforted, and restored to his former place both in the church of God, and in our brotherly affection and regard.

6. For their encouragement in every religious concern, and especially with regard to the recovery of those who are fallen into sin, that they may be restored, our Lord declares the mighty efficacy of united prayer. Whatever, according to the divine will, two or three faithful souls shall meet together with joint supplications to beg at God's hands, he will assuredly hear and grant their requests. For wherever the smallest number of real believers assemble in Christ's name, depending on his promises, and desiring above all things the advancement of his glory, there will he ever be, quickening their prayers, strengthening their faith, enlivening their hopes, and comforting their hearts; and when he is one of the company, their supplications must be effectual; for him the Father heareth always; and what an encouragement is this to social prayer!

21. ¶ Then came Peter to him, and said Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? [z] till seven times? 22. Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times: but, [a] Until seventy times seven.* 23. Therefore is [b] the kingdom of heaven likened unto a [c] certain king which would take account of his servants. 24. And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him which owed him [d] ten thousand † talents. 25. But, forasmuch as he had not to pay, [e] his lord commanded him to be sold, and his wife and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made. 26. The servant therefore z Luke 17. 4. ver. 15.

a i. e. many hundred times. Rom. 12. 19, 20. Eph. 4. 32. Col. 3. 13. 1 Cor. 4. 12. ch. 6. 12, 14. & 5. 44. Mark 11. 25.

* A definite is here put for an indefinite number. The duty of forgiving injuries has no limit.

b Gospel church. Ch. 3. 2. & 4. 17. & xiii. John 3. 3, 5.

c Ps. 2. 6. Is. 9. 6, 7. John 1. 49. & 18. 36. ch. 25. 34.

d Gen. 13. 13. 1 Tim. 1. 13, 15, 16.

† A talent of silver is £342: 3s. 9d.

e Lev. 25. 39. Neh. 5. 2, 5, 8. 2 Kin. 4. 1.

fell down, and * worshipped him, saying, Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all. 27. Then the lord of that servant [f] was moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt. 28. But the same servant went out, and found one of his fellow-servants which owed him an hundred [g] pence: and he laid hands on him, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest. 29. And his fellow-servant fell down at his feet, and besought him, saying, Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all. 30. And he would not; but went and cast him into prison till he should pay the debt. 31. So, when his fellow-servants saw what was done, [h] they were very sorry, and came and told unto their lord all that was done. 32. Then his lord, after that he had called him, said unto him, O thou wicked servant, I forgave thee all that debt, because thou desiredst me: 33. [i] Shouldest not thou also have had compassion on thy fellow-servant, even as I had pity on thee? 34. And his lord was wroth, and delivered him to the [k] tormentors † till he should pay all that was due unto him. 35. [l] So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses.

* Or besought him. The form of lowly submission, from the servant to his master, which is here described, is still practised in the east among the Arabs, where inferiors in paying respectful deference to their superiors, fall down before them, and kiss their feet, knees, and garments.

f Ps. 103. 13. & 145. 7, 8. & 130. 4, 7. Eph. 2. 4—8. Tit. 3. 5. Hos. 11. 8. Judg. 10. 16.

g The Roman penny is the eighth part of an ounce, in value sevenpence three farthings. The daily hire of a labourer in those days. Ch. 20. 2. & 22. 19. Rev. 6. 6.

h Rom. 12. 15. 2 Cor. 11. 29. Heb. 13. 3. They were offended and grieved at such unnatural cruelty and revenge.

i Eph. 4. 32. & 5. 2. Col. 3. 13. ch. 5. 44, 45. Luke 6. 36.

k 2 Cor. 12. 7. 1 Pet. 5. 8. ch. 5. 25. 2 Thes. 1. 8, 9. Rev. 14. 10, 11.

† Because of his cruelty, not because of the debt.

l Prov. 21. 13. ch. 6. 12, 14, 15. Mark 11. 26. Eph. 4. 32. Col. 3. 13. 1 Cor. 4. 12. ch. 7. 2. Jam. 2. 13.

Verses 21—35. As our Lord had just given directions concerning the charitable conduct to be observed towards offenders, Peter, desirous to know how far this forgiveness of personal injuries extended, proposed to his Master the question, Whether, if the offence was repeated seven times, the forgiveness must be as often granted on the repentance of the offender? He concluded this a great stretch of charity; but our Lord's answer showed him how limited were his apprehensions: I say not unto thee, Until seven times; but, Until seventy times seven: intimating, that we must make no limitation to our forgiveness, but be always, and in all cases, ready to grant it, whenever the offender repents; imitating the divine compassions, which know no bounds, nor end. And to enforce and elucidate this, he introduces a parable wherein this godlike charity appears most eminent, and the guilt and danger of the opposite conduct is drawn in striking colours.

The parable represents,

1. The noble clemency of a great lord, who, looking into his affairs, and revising his own accounts (which it were well if every great man did) found, among other debtors, one who owed him an immense sum, the least part of which he was unable to discharge. In consequence whereof, in course of law, he gave orders that himself and family should be sold for slaves, and all he had disposed of for his use. But, terrified at the sentence, though just, the poor debtor entreats a respite, with many fair promises of payment; when, moved with his distress, the compassionate master generously and freely forgave him all, and delivered him at once from his terrors and his debt. And this may be applied to the case between God and the sinner. (1.) We are deeply in arrear to him: every sin is a debt, and we are overwhelmed with it! we possess a sinful nature; and our thoughts, words, and deeds have been so perverse before God, so often and so greatly have we offended, that no computation can reach the number of our transgressions, nor can we conceive the greatness of our guilt or provocations. (2.) The misery of our case; and what renders it most deplorable, yea, desperate, is, that we have nothing to pay. Could we render by a perfect obedience, the present debt of duty, this would make no compensation for past iniquity; but indeed, our nature being corrupt, we are so far from paying for the past offences, that we are daily, hourly increasing the immense arrears. (3.) God keeps an account of all: not a word is in our tongue, nor a thought in our hearts, but he knoweth it altogether; so that we can no more conceal our transgressions from him, than we can cancel them. (4.) If the divine law takes its course, the consequence must be, that we should be sold to suffer for our iniquities, and, in the place of torment, in body and soul continue satisfying the justice of God to eternity. (5.) The discovery of this dreadful situation made to the sinner's soul, by the preaching of the word to his conscience, or some awakening providence, fills him with terror, and sets him a crying for mercy. But usually at first the cries of the awakened conscience are for a respite, with many promises of amendment, which the sinner foolishly thinks will be accepted in payment. And he does not see his own utter insolvency, but thinks, through the ignorance and self-righteousness of his heart, that he can make God some payment; till by and by the trial convinces him his best is bad, and self-despair strips him naked at the foot of the cross of Christ. (6.) God's infinite compassions extend through the Redeemer to the most guilty and desperate. He freely and fully forgives all that is past: not that he doeth it without a satisfaction made to his justice; this the Son of his love, incarnate, and dying under the guilt of our sins, hath paid; but the mercy of pardon, reconciliation, and deliverance from the bondage of guilt and corruption, is to us freely given, to the praise of the glory of his grace, without money and without price.

2. We are told the unsuitable conduct this much obliged servant showed respecting a fellow-servant of his, who owed him a trifling debt. He no sooner obtained his own pardon and liberty, than he went out seized and throttled him, till he was almost choked, and with menaces and insolence demanded instant payment, or threatened him with a prison. In vain his poor brother begged a respite, and in the very words himself had used, desired only time, and the debt should be paid; he was deaf to entreaty, and thrust him into a jail: a piece of cruelty and oppression, that the other servants beheld with grief and indignation, and failed not to acquaint their lord with this inhuman behaviour. Note, (1.) Many professors who presume upon God's forgiveness, show, by their covetousness and rigorous censures of others, the hypocrisy of their hearts, and the vanity of their hopes. (2.) Offences done to us, compared with those we have committed against God, are so trivial, that we should be ashamed to show rigour in exacting reparation. (3.) Pride and passion render men unmerciful: though they know a prison pays no debts, they take delight in thus gratifying their insolence or revenge. (4.) The debtor may not complain, though he be dealt with rigorously; humble entreaty becomes his condition, especially when he suffers only the fruits of his folly or extravagance. (5.) A compassionate heart feels for the distresses of others, and, if it can afford no other relief to them, carries the case of the oppressor and the oppressed to God in prayer, and his ears are open thereunto; he will answer in mercy and judgment. (6.) It is especially grievous to a gracious soul, to see in professors of religion, a spirit of bitterness and unmercifulness, and he laments it before the Lord.

3. Just resentment fired the master's heart on hearing these tidings; and instantly citing this hardened wretch before him, he charges him with his wickedness, and upbraids him with his cruelty and ingratitude for all the mercies he had so lately received; expostulating with him on the case, and leaving him without excuse. In wrath he bids him therefore instantly be seized, and delivered to the tormentors; to be confined in prison, and suffer the most rigorous punishment, till all the former debt should be paid.

Some have urged this circumstance as an argument, that God really pardons sin, and leaves us on our good behaviour for the future; but if we transgress, then he revives the past. But as God's gifts and callings are without repentance, and we are assured that he remembers no more the iniquities he once forgave, (Heb. viii. 12.) we must understand the forgiveness here, (if we suppose the parable is in every particular to be applied to the sinner's case,) to be the presumption the person entertained on the view of the gospel offers that he was pardoned, when in fact he was not. Or if we suppose it a real act of forgiveness to a child of God, his being delivered to the tormentors for his after sins and ingratitude, may well refer to the temporal calamities that God is often pleased to inflict on his people for their offences, visiting their iniquities with the rod, and their sin with scourges, though his loving-kindness he doth not take from them, nor suffer his truth to fail. But, after all, I am much more inclined to think that the scope of the parable is principally to be attended to, without a strict application of it in every particular to God's dealings with sinners, and then we shall see nothing can be more suited to enforce mutual forgiveness, since without it we may not hope ourselves to be forgiven of God. And thus,

4. The general design of the parable is explained, ver. 35. God will deal with us, as we deal with our brethren: and if we show an implacable and unforgiving spirit: whatever hopes of pardon we may entertain, they are delusive; his wrath hangs over us, and in the great day of account we shall be delivered to the tormentors. Most bounden are we therefore to forgive every injury, nor ever harbour the least wish or desire of revenge; for we expect greater mercy and forgiveness from God, than ever man can from us, and therefore a sense of his pardoning love should kindle ours.

CHAP. XIX.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ changing his quarters, leaving Galilee, and coming into the coasts of Judea, ver. 1, 2. 2. His dispute with the Pharisees about divorce, and his discourse with his disciples upon occasion of it, ver. 3—12. 3. The kind entertainment he gave to some little children which were brought to him, ver. 13—15. 4. An account of what passed between Christ and a hopeful young gentleman that applied himself to him, ver. 16—22. 5. His discourse with his disciples upon that occasion, concerning the difficulty of the salvation of those who have much in the world, and the certain recompense of those that leave all for Christ, ver. 23—30.

33.

1. AND it came to pass, [a] that when Jesus had finished these sayings, he departed from Galilee, and came into the coasts of Judea beyond Jordan; * 2. [b] And great multitudes followed him; and he healed them there. 3. ¶ [c] The Pharisees also came unto him, tempting him, and saying unto him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause? 4. And he answered and said unto them, Have ye not read, [d] that he which made them at the beginning made them male and female. † 5. And said, [e] For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife; and [f] they twain shall be one flesh? 6. Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together [g] let not man put asunder. 7. They say unto him, [h] Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away? 8. He saith unto them, Moses, because of [i] the hardness of your hearts, ‡ suffered you to put away your wives: [k] but from the beginning it was not so. 9. [l] And I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery; and whoso marrieth her which is put away doth commit adultery. 10. His disciples say unto him, If the case of the man be so with his wife, [m] it is not good to marry. 11. But he said unto them, [n] All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. 12. For there are some [o] eunuchs which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs which have made themselves eunuchs ‖ for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it.

a Mark 10. 1. John 10. 40. & 3. 22.

* The country eastward of Jordan.

b Ch. 4. 23—25. & 8. 1, 18. & 9. 35, 36. & 12. 15. & 13. 1. & 14. 35. & 15. 30. & 17. 14.

c Ch. 16. 1. & 22. 15. Luke 11. 53, 54. Mark 10. 3—12.

d Gen. 1. 27. & 5. 2. Mal. 2. 15, 16.

† Made them one male, the other female, and joined them together as man and wife.

e Gen. 2. 24. Eph. 5. 31. Ps. 45. 10.

f 1 Cor. 6. 16. & 7. 2. Gen. 2. 24.

g Except for adultery, fornication, or wilful desertion. Ver. 9. Mal. 2. 14—16. 1 Cor. 7. 10—13.

h Deut. 24. 1. ch. 5. 31.

i Deut. 9. 6. & 31. 27. Acts 7. 51. & 13. 18. & 14. 16. i. e. their cruelty to their wives. Mal. 2. 13—16.

‡ But not commanded nor approved. The law in Deut. 24. 1, 2. was a permission only in certain cases to put away their wives.

k Gen. 2. 24. Jer. 6. 16. 1 Cor. 11. 23. ch. 28. 20

l Ch. 5. 32. Mark 10. 11. Luke 16. 18. 1 Cor. 7. 11, 12. Mal. 2. 14—16. Rom. 7. 1—3. Jer. 3. 18.

m Prov. 21. 9, 19. & 19. 13. & 9. 13.

n 1 Cor. 7. 2, 9, 17.

o Is. 56. 3—5. 1 Cor. 7, 7, 17, 32—35. & 9. 5. Mark 10. 12.

‖ The word is here evidently used to denote the chastity of a single life.

Verses 1—12. Having finished his ministry in Galilee, Christ departed to return no more, till after his resurrection, unless for one passing visit, Luke xvii. 11. When God's ministers have done their work in a place, Providence directs their removal: and till they have, none of their enemies on earth or hell can displace them. Christ was now advancing towards Jerusalem, the scene of his sufferings, and in his way took that part of Judea where John had chiefly exercised his ministry, beyond, or, as it may be rendered, on this side Jordan; and, as was usual in every place through which he passed, great multitudes resorted to him, and, according to his wonted compassions, he healed them of all their diseases, in confirmation of the doctrines which he taught.

His ever inveterate enemies the Pharisees failed not to attend him here also, using all their wiles to draw him into a snare, that they might prejudice the people against him. For which end we have here,

1. The insidious question they proposed to him concerning divorces. Whether it was lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause? a question much debated in their schools; and through the abuse of the permission granted in the law of Moses, they had done it on the most frivolous pretences. The Pharisees hoped therefore either to have matter of accusation against him, if he condemned divorces, as an opposer of the law of Moses; or, if he allowed them thus generally, they would have treated him as licentious, the more serious Jews condemning those divorces which were made on trifling provocations.

2. In answer, Christ refers them to the original institution of marriage, as the best solution of the difficulty they proposed Let them consider that, and they might resolve their own question. It would appear from thence, that such arbitrary divorces were directly repugnant to the nature of the matrimonial bond. In the very creation of the first man and woman, the indissoluble union between them might be collected. Adam had none but Eve, nor could divorce her for another, when no other woman then existed. This being of all relations the nearest, God ordained, that even a father or mother must be left for the sake of a wife: not that marriage vacates the obligation lying upon us to help and relieve them: No; but if all admit that the reciprocal relation between parent and child may not be broken, much less can the nearer connection of man and wife be dissolved. They are one flesh, near to each other as the members of the same body, which no one ever thought of parting with, but cherishes with tenderest care. Those therefore whom God hath thus indissolubly joined, it would be highly criminal and presumptuous in man to separate.

3. The Pharisees start an objection to this interpretation of Scripture, and flatter themselves they have Moses on their side, ver. 7. Why then did Moses, &c. very ready to seize the shadow of a plea, and by representing Christ as an enemy to the institutions of Moses, to render him suspected, and prejudice the people against him. Thus do wicked men endeavour to pervert the blessed Scriptures, and make them militate against themselves.

4. Christ answers their objection, and in a way that did not a little reflect on their ill tempers and conduct. What they suppose a command, our Lord says was merely a toleration, and permitted as a judicial and political law, to prevent the greater evils which must ensue; such being their hardness of heart, that, rather than their helpless wives should be cruelly treated, perhaps murdered to be rid of them, such being their malignity and obduracy, God was pleased for their sakes to dispense with his positive law, though from the beginning it was not so. Nor in the gospel state should this be any longer suffered, Christ being come to restore this ordinance to its primitive institution, and to take away the hardness of men's hearts; therefore henceforward no divorces would be allowed of, save in the case of unfaithfulness to the marriage-bed; and whosoever on any other cause should divorce his wife, and marry another, would be guilty of adultery, as he would be also who married her thus divorced.

5. The disciples, on hearing this determination of their Master, could not help, when they were alone, suggesting their apprehensions of the unhappiness of the married state, if divorces were so strictly prohibited, and that the experiment would be so dangerous, that it amounted to an injunction of celibacy. So apt are men to seek liberty for the indulgence of appetite, and to argue against the best institutions, because of some inconveniences which may arise from them. If we possess the spirit of Christianity, of meekness, patience, and love, we shall learn to bear each other's burdens, compassionate each other's infirmities, and be thankful for the comforts we enjoy, which far exceed the inconveniences divorce can be supposed to remedy.

6. Christ replies to their suggestion, that their reasoning in one view was right, and that a single state is preferable for those who have the gift of continence; especially in days of persecution and distress, and where the cares of a family, and the incumbrances thereto annexed, would make it more difficult for the first preachers of the gospel to be travelling from place to place, or take up too much of their time and thoughts, instead of better things. But their are few, very few comparatively, who are possessed of this gift; and therefore marriage with all its crosses, is far the most profitable, and to be chosen as a matter of duty; and when entered upon in the fear and love of God, the comforts of that relation will be found to overpay us for all the crosses. But some there are from the birth by natural constitution formed for celibacy, strangers to the desire of women; some by the wickedness of men are incapacitated for the marriage state; and some, seeing powerful reasons to determine their choice, for the sake of greater usefulness in the service of Jesus Christ, have such particular supplies of divine grace given them, as to be able to forego the delights of wedlock, and may laudably purpose to live a single life, though not under any vows, if afterwards they should see cause to change their sentiments; nor as any thing meritorious, as the Papists suggest; but purely, that being disengaged from the cares of life, they may be enabled to employ themselves more entirely in the work of God, than otherwise they could. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it.

13. ¶ [p] Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them, and pray: and the disciples rebuked them. 14. But Jesus said, [q] Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of heaven. 15. And [r] he laid his hands on them, and departed thence.

[p] Mark 19. 13—16. Luke 18. 15, 16. Gen. 48. 14, 15. 1 Sam. 1. 24. Jer. 49. 11.
[q] Ch. 18. 3. Mark 10. 14. Luke 18. 16. 1 Cor. 14. 20. 1 Pet. 2. 1, 2. Prov. 8. 17. & 23. 26. Ps. 34. 11. & 45. 10, 11.
[r] Gen. 48. 14. Mark 6. 5. & 16. 18. Luke 4. 40. & 13. 13. Num. 8. 20. Acts 8. 16, &c.

Verses 13—15. We have seen multitudes of others making their application to Christ; here we behold some pious parents bringing their children to crave his divine benediction.

1. They brought their infants, that Jesus might lay his hands upon them, and pray for them, in faith expecting that he could impart to them spiritual blessings, and that his prayers would be attended with gracious effects. Note, They who have tasted the grace of Jesus themselves, cannot but earnestly desire, that all theirs may share with them the inestimable mercy, and therefore fail not to present their little ones to him for his blessing.

2. The disciples, apprehensive lest such a precedent would induce others to bring their children, and thereby occasion their Master much trouble, or supposing it beneath him to take notice of infants, or useless to bring them to him; rebuked those who brought the children, and wanted to prevent their application. But,

3. Christ expressed his displeasure against his disciples for obstructing so charitable a work, and bids them suffer these babes to be brought, seeing of such is the kingdom of heaven. Not only like these, in their spirit and temper, should the members of his church be, but also that they, as well as grown persons, are capable of becoming subjects of the gospel kingdom, and of having interest in its spiritual blessings and privileges; and if so, then there seems no reason why they may not by baptism be admitted into the visible communion of the faithful. And he laid his hands on them, and blessed them, Mark x. 16. Though they cannot stretch out their infant hands to him in faith and prayer, he can confer on them his gifts of grace, and prepare them for his eternal kingdom. Thus having confirmed the privileges of the lambs of his flock, he departed thence.

16. ¶ And, behold, one [s] came and said unto him, Good Master, [t] what good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life? 17. And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? [u] there is none good but one, that is, God; [x] but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. 18. He saith unto him, Which? Jesus said, [y] Thou shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou

[s] He was a young man, ver. 20; a ruler, Luke 18. 18, and he came running to him, Mark 10. 17.
[t] Rom. 10. 2, 3. & 9. 31, 32. John 6. 28.
[u] 1 Sam. 2. 2. Ps. 119. 68. Jam. 1. 17.
[x] Lev. 18. 5. Rom. 10. 5. Gal. 3. 10, 12. Is. 1. 19. & 3. 10.
[y] Exod. 20. 12—17. Deut. 50. 16—21. Mark 10. 19. Luke 18. 20. Rom. 13. 8, 9. Gal. 5. 14. Jam. 2 8. Eph. 6. 2. Lev. 19. 18. ch. 22. 39.

z Tit. 1. 16. Is. 58. 2. Ezek. 33. 31. Luke 18. 11, 12.
a Ch. 6. 19, 20. & 5. 48. Luke 12. 33. & 16. 9. 1 Tim. 6. 18, 19. Acts 2. 44. & 4. 32, 34.
* He probably flattered himself that he really lacked nothing; that his obedience to the moral law rendered him perfect, qualified him to become a disciple of Christ here, and gave him a claim to a superior degree of felicity hereafter.—Porteous b Ch. 13. 22. Judg. 18. 23, 24. Ps. 17. 14. Phil. 3. 19.

shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, 19. Honour thy father and thy mother: and, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. 20. The young man saith unto him, [z] All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?* 21. Jesus said unto him, [a] If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come and follow me. 22. But when the young man heard that saying, [b] he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions.

Verses 16—22. We have here a conference between a promising young man, who came with a question of the last importance, and our blessed Lord, whose answer is designed for his conviction and humiliation, in order to lead him to a better righteousness than his own, for the obtaining that eternal life which he inquired after.

1. His address was most respectful, and his inquiry of the last consequence. Though Christ appeared outwardly mean and despicable, and he himself was a person of distinction, yet he humbly knelt before him, and with a title of uncommon veneration addressed him, desiring to be informed by him, as a prophet sent from God, by what works of righteousness he might assuredly obtain that eternal life he seemed above all things solicitous to secure. Note, (1.) Eternal life is the grand object, and most deserving our first concern. (2.) Youth and riches are dangerous snares, that too frequently divert the mind from the consideration of another world: but the more rare the more commendable it is, when we see any person possessed of both, seeking in the first place the kingdom of God. (3.) They who would learn the way to eternal life, must be daily coming to Christ on their knees.

2. Our Lord replies both to his address and question. As the young ruler regarded him as a mere man, the title of Good, in that emphatical sense, was misapplied, since no creature is absolutely and perfectly good, but God alone. As to the question, according to the views wherewith he came, expecting to obtain life by obedience to the law as a covenant of works, there was but one way: If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments, perfectly, universally, perpetually. Nothing short of this can secure a title to eternal life, under the law, where every defect, failure, or omission, immediately incurs the penalty of the curse denounced, Deut. vi. 25. In which answer Christ appears designing to lead him to a view of the impossibility of obtaining righteousness and life eternal by any doings and duties of his own, and, by unhinging him from an opinion of his own goodness and abilities, to show him the necessity of a better righteousness than his own for his title to life and glory. Note, (1.) There is no absolute goodness in man; all we have at best is imperfect. (2.) There was once a way to life by personal perfect obedience; but since the first man's sin none ever went that way, he only excepted, who was more than man.

3. Willing to know what these commandments were, and conceiving his abilities and inclinations equal to the task, the young ruler begs a distinct enumeration of them; and Jesus to convince him how mistaken an idea he had formed of himself, instances only in the duties of the second table, which he had probably learned by heart, and which if rightly understood would minister to him abundant matter for humiliation, and show him the impossibility of obtaining eternal life by his own obedience.

4. Ignorant of the spirituality of the law, and judging according to the wretched literal comments of the scribes, he thought he might safely vouch for his obedience. From his youth up he had escaped from the grosser pollutions that are in the world, and made conscience of his ways. He was no adulterer, thief, murderer, or perjured person; and having kept all these commandments, as he supposed, desired, with some show of self-complacence, to know what farther was required, as if he only wanted to be informed, and was ready to obey. Note, (1.) Pride on our duties is as damnable as the indulgence of our sins. (2.) It may appear a strange, but it is a true assertion, that the fairest characters in the eyes of the world, are usually the farthest from the kingdom of God. (3.) We may be fully assured, we know neither God's law, nor our own hearts, when we presume to say of the least of his commandments, All these have I kept from my youth. (4.) An humbling sight of our sins, not a vain conceit of ourselves, is the first step to the kingdom of God.

5. To convince him how mistaken his apprehensions were of his own goodness, Christ puts him upon giving a proof of obedience to that leading precept of the law, and only true principle of duty, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself; and he would presently see how much he lacked of the attainments he boasted. He wished to be perfect; if he would be so, as one step towards it, let him sell all his possessions, distribute them to the poor, have his affections taken off from earthly things, commence a constant attendant on Jesus, take up his cross, and follow his footsteps; and then he would secure the treasures of eternity, and be in the way to that eternal life he sought. Note, (1.) A holy deadness to the world is at all times the duty of Christ's disciples; and there may be occasions still, where literally we must be ready to part with all for his sake. (2.) Covetousness and inordinate love of the world, are often seen in the fairest professors, and are among the saddest symptoms of the insincerity and hypocrisy of their hearts. (3.) They who leave all for Christ will be no losers in the end; the treasures of eternity will prove an ample recompense.

6. Unable to bear these hard sayings, and not at all inclined to part from his great possessions, though eternal life was at stake, the young man thought the way too narrow; yet grieved to find he had not reached the perfection he fancied in himself, and loath to quit Christ and eternal life, he went away sorrowful, unwilling to lose the hopes of heaven, and yet resolved not to part with his great possessions on earth. Note, (1.) Riches are the rock on which innumerable souls are shipwrecked, and drowned thereby in perdition and destruction. (2.) The more we have of this world, in general the closer our affections cleave to it; and increasing wealth brings usually an increase of snares. (3.) Many are sorry to part with Christ, and submit with reluctance to the yoke of sin and the world, who yet perish under the bondage of corruption.

23. ¶ Then said Jesus unto his disciples, Verily I say unto you, [c] That a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven. 24. And again I say unto you, [d] It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. 25. When his disciples heard it, [e] they were exceedingly amazed, saying, Who then can be saved? 26. But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, [e] With men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible. 27. ¶ [f] Then answered Peter, and said unto him, Bec Ch. 13. 22. Job 31. 24. Ps. 62. 11. Prov. 11. 28. 1 Cor. 1. 26. Jam. 4. 4. & 5 1—3. 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10. Jam. 2. 5. Mark 10. 23—26. Luke 18. 24—27.

d Jer. 13. 23. Luke 18. 25. John 5. 44. 1 Cor. 1. 26. e Job 10. 13. & 42. 2. Jer. 32. 17. Zech. 8. 6. Gen. 18. 14. Luke 1. 37. & 18. 27. Phil. 4. 13. Heb. 7. 25. Is. 63. 1—4. Mark 10. 27. f Mark 10. 28—31. Luke 18. 28—30. ch. 4. 20, 22. Luke 5. 11. Phil. 3. 7—9. Deut. 33. 9.

hold, we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore? 28. And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me [g] in the regeneration, when the Son of man [h] shall sit in the throne of his glory, [i] ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. 29. [k] And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundred fold, and shall inherit everlasting life. 30. [l] But many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first.

[g] Is. 65. 17. & 66. 22. John 3. 3, 5. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Gal. 6. 15 Heb. 9. 10. 2 Pet. 3. 13. Acts 3. 21.

[h] Ps. 110. 1. Heb. 1. 3. or ch. 25. 31. Rev. 20. 4, 11. 1 Thes. 4. 17.

[i] 1 Cor. 12. 28. Eph. 4. 11. Luke 22. 28—30. 1 Cor. 6. 2, 3. Rev. 2. 26. & 3. 21. 2 Tim. 4. 8. & 2. 12.

[k] Mark 10. 29, 30. Luke 18. 29, 30. ch. 8. 11, 12. & 21. 31, 32.

[l] Ch. 20. 16. & 8. 11, 12. & 21. 31, 32. Mark 10. 31. Luke 13. 30. & 7. 29, 30. Rom. ix—xi.

Verses 23—30. On occasion of so promising a youth's departure from him through inordinate attachment to worldly wealth, our Lord, directing his discourse to his disciples,

1. Observes the vast obstructions which riches lay in the way of men's salvation. A rich man whose heart is engaged with the care and love of his substance, can hardly ever become a subject of Christ's kingdom upon earth, or an inheritor of his kingdom in heaven. Things in their nature the most impracticable may be expected to happen, even according to the proverbial expression, for a camel to go through a needle's eye, sooner than for a man whose heart is attached to his wealth, and seeks his happiness therein, to become a real disciple of Jesus, and an inheritor of glory. Note, (1.) The immense difficulties riches put in our way to heaven, should make us thankful in a low condition, that God hath not exposed us to this temptation; should suppress every rising of envy against our wealthy neighbours, and quench every inordinate desire of abundance. (2.) They who are rich have more duties to discharge; more sins to beset them; more temptations to struggle with; more self-denial to exercise; and a larger account of talents to settle, than others; and therefore great grace is needful to sanctify great possessions.

2. The disciples express their astonishment at their Master's assertion; and if the case stood thus, according to their mistaken ideas of the Messiah's kingdom, they do not conceive it possible to be supported, if all the rich and great are excluded, who usually sway the world; or if they understood him of the heavenly kingdom, they are ready to conclude, that few, or any, would ever attain thereunto, as many are possessed of wealth, and almost all desire it. Note, The wonder is, considering the difficulties in the way of salvation, not that so few are saved, but that any obtain it. The more the hinderances are, the greater diligence we need use to surmount them.

3. Christ, with concern, observing their surprise and consternation, replied, that indeed, with men, considering their native corruption and worldly mindedness, salvation was utterly out of their reach; they being unable to effect the needful change in their own hearts, or in each other's, more than human sufficiency was requisite. This is the work of God; impossibilities with us are possible with him; almighty grace can subdue the most inveterate corruptions, spiritualize the affections of the most worldly minded, and enable the rich, as well as the poor, to overcome the temptations of their perilous state, and show themselves rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom. None therefore are to be despaired of; when God will work, who can let it?——Some refer this to the Messiah's kingdom upon earth, as if the answer implied, that though it appeared so impracticable to them to set up this kingdom in opposition to all the wealth and greatness of the world, yet such supports should be ministered to them, poor and inconsiderable as they were, as should enable them to withstand all their enemies, and make their labours successful.

4. Peter, in the name of his brethren, thought this no unfavourable season to inquire what they should get, since they had left all and followed him. It is true their all was not much; but such as it was, it was equally dear to them as if they had possessed greater wealth. Note, (1.) If our spirit be right, though our loss for Christ exceed not the widow's mite, he will accept it as if we had left greater possessions. (2.) Though it is not the mere motive of advantage that influences the faithful, we may notwithstanding with comfort look to the great recompense of reward.

5. Christ engages that they who forsake all for him, shall be no losers in the issue. They who have followed him in the regeneration, shall be honoured with the most eminent seats in his kingdom, and sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

In the regeneration, refers either to the present state of the disciples who had followed Christ, and may spiritually describe the change which had passed on their souls by the renewing power of divine grace. Or this may signify their attendance upon him, and devoting themselves to his service in setting up that kingdom which was designed to effect a glorious reformation in the world. This phrase may likewise be connected with the latter part of the clause, when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, in the regeneration; and then it hath respect to the future state of the Redeemer's exaltation, when, after his ascension from the dead, they shall be endued with power from on high, the former Mosaical dispensation should be abolished, and they commissioned to preach the gospel, and erect the Christian church, in which old things, the Jewish ceremonials, would pass away, and all things become new; new ordinances be administered, and new hearts and minds be given to the converts.

Their sitting on thrones, &c. may imply either the dignity of the apostleship to which they should be advanced, to charge the Jews with their crimes, especially the rejection of the Messiah, and to denounce the vengeance ready to be executed upon them, which, in consequence of their predictions, they should see accomplished. Or this refers to their distinguished place of honour, when in the great day of the Redeemer's appearing and glory, they should be admitted to sit down as assessors with him on thrones around his own, approving and applauding his judgment, dispensed according to the word they preached, and afterwards shall, in the eternal world, reign with Christ in glory everlasting.

And whilst he thus promised the twelve this distinguished honour, he added also, for the encouragement of all who should tread in their steps to the end of time, that the like rewards should be the portion of the faithful. It is supposed, that for Christ's sake, all his true disciples would be called upon to make very painful sacrifices, and often be forced to lose the affection of nearest and dearest relations, be separated from the greatest comforts of life, and deprived of all they possessed: but he engages to indemnify them for their losses; sometimes in kind, by his providence so ordering events as that they shall in present advantages receive a hundred fold, or at least always in comfort shall have an abundant recompense, enjoying clearer and brighter manifestations of God's love and favour; and for temporal losses finding their souls enriched by spiritual graces; besides the glorious hope of eternal life in the world to come, secured by the faithfulness of the true Witness, and the unchangeable promises of God, which must needs infinitely overpay us for all the crosses and losses of this transitory world. We may learn from the whole of this discourse, (1.) To expect, if we are Christ's disciples, many a cross, and to be ready to part with whatever stands in competition with his honour and interest. (2.) To be thankful if we are not called to those severer exercises of discipleship which others before us have endured. (3.) To keep the promises in our eye when the day of trial comes, and then we shall think nothing too hard to suffer, or too dear to lose. A sense of the Redeemer's present love, and a prospect of the glory which shall be revealed, will make every present affliction light, and cause us to rejoice in the midst of our sorrows. (4.) The time we must suffer for Christ is momentary, but our reign with him shall be eternal.

6. He adds, by way of obviating any mistake which might arise, as if eternal life was the reward of merit, not of grace, or as if priority of calling gave precedence in his kingdom, that many who were first shall be last, and the last first. Many of the Jews, who were first called, refusing the invitation, and many Gentiles through grace, though last invited, eagerly embracing the gospel; and also of those, both of the Jews and Gentiles, many who were truly and effectually called and converted at first, would be outstripped in attainments, and excelled in spirituality, zeal, and fidelity, by those who in order of time should afterwards come in, and be exalted to higher honours in his kingdom, which he elucidates by a parable in the succeeding chapter. Note, If we are called late, we must work the faster, and give the greater diligence to redeem the time.

CHAP. XX.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

We have four things in this chapter: 1. The parable of the labourers in the vineyard, ver. 1—16. 2. A prediction of Christ's approaching sufferings, ver. 17—19. 3. The petition of two of the disciples, by their mother, reproved, ver. 20—28. 4. The petition of the two blind men granted, and their eyes opened, ver. 29—34.

1. FOR [a] the kingdom of heaven is like unto [b] a man that is an householder, which went out [c] early in the morning to hire [d] labourers into his vineyard. 2. And when [e] he had agreed with the labourers for a [f] penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard. 3. And he went out about the third hour,* and saw others standing idle in the market place; 4. And said unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard, and [g] whatsoever is right I will give you. And they went their way. 5. Again he went out about the sixth and ninth hour, and did likewise. 6. And about the [h] eleventh hour he went out, and found others standing idle, and saith unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle? 7. They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right that shall ye receive. 8. So when [i] even was come, the lord of the vineyard saith unto his steward, Call the labourers, and give them their hire, beginning from the last unto the first. 9. And when they came that were hired about the eleventh hour, they received every man a penny. 10. But when the first came, they supposed that they should have received more; and they likewise received every man a [k] penny. 11. And when they had received it, they [l] murmured against the good man of the house, 12. Saying, These † last have wrought but one hour, and thou hast made them equal unto us, [l] which have borne the burden and heat of the day. 13. But he answered one of them, and said, [m] Friend, I do thee no wrong; didst not thou agree with me for a penny? 14. Take that thine is, and go thy way: I will give unto this last even as unto thee. 15. [n] Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? is thine eye evil, ‡ because I am good? 16. [o] So the last shall be first, and the first last: for many be called, but few chosen.

a Ch. 3. 2. & 4. 17. & 13. 3—52.
b Is. 5. 1, 2. Ps. 80. 8—11. Jer. 2. 21. ch. 21. 33—43. Song 8. 11. c 1 Kin. 18. 12. 2 Tim. 3. 15. Prov. 8. 17.
d Phil. 2. 12. 2 Pet. 1. 5—10. 1 Cor. 15. 58.
e Exod. 19. 5, 6. Deut. iv—xxii. Is. 1. 16—20.
f The Roman penny is sevenpence three farthings. Ch. 18. 28. & 22. 19. Rev. 6. 6.
* Answering, at the equinox to nine o'clock in the forenoon. Thus the others were hired respectively at twelve noon, three in the afternoon, and last of all, five in the afternoon.
g Phil. 1 7. Col. 4. 1. 1 Pet. 1. 13. Heb 6. 10.
n Time of calling the Gentiles. Rom. 16 26. Eph. 1. 10. & 3. 5. 6. Col. 1. 26. Heb. 1. 1.
i Job 19. 25. Acts 17. 31. ch. 13. 39, 40. & 24. 44. & 25. 6, 19, 31, 32. Heb. 9. 28. Rev. 20. 11, 12. 1 Thes. 4. 16, 17. k Luke 15. 28, 29. Acts 11. 1, 2. & 22. 21, 22. 1 Thes. 2. 16. Rom. 11. 28.
† Or have continued one hour only.
l 1 Cor. 4. 11. 2 Cor. 11. 23, 24. Luke 15. 29. with Ruth 2. 19.
m Or fellow. 1 Cor. 3. 9. with Rom. 9. 14.
n Ch. 11. 25. Rom. 9. 15—21. Eph. 1. 3—11. & 2. 4—9.
‡ That is, unkind grudging, uncharitable. Deut. 15. 9. Prov. 23. 6. ch. 6. 23. Jon. 4. 1—4. Mark 7. 22.
o Ch. 19. 30. Mark 10. 31. Luke 13. 30. & 7. 29. & 12. 32. ch. 22. 14. & 7. 13. Acts 13. 48.

Verses 1—16. This parable is a comment on the text which concluded the foregoing chapter, and represents to us the gospel dispensation, and this with particular application to the Jews and Gentiles; the former of whom were ever for excluding the latter from all the blessings of the Messiah's kingdom, and could never endure the thoughts of the heathen being admitted to equal privileges with themselves. But so God had ordained; and though, for their fathers' sakes, the first offers of the gospel were to be made to them, yet the Gentiles were shortly to be admitted fellow-heirs, and of the same body. More generally the parable may also represent to us the sovereignty of God in the dispensation of his gifts of grace and glory. As he is debtor to none, he may do what he will with his own; may bestow his blessings in time, measure, manner, as he pleases; and reward according to the good pleasure of his will.

1. We have an account in this parable of the agreement made with the labourers by the master of the vineyard. The vineyard may represent the church; the master, the Lord Jesus; the labourers, as many as the Lord our God shall call; the market-place, the world that lieth in wickedness; where, till he comes to hire us, we are idle, unemployed, or worse, employed in mischief; serving divers lusts and pleasures, and doing no work God is pleased with or that can bring any revenue of glory to him. Our work for which we are engaged is, caring for the soul, and in this service our own benefit as well as God's glory, is consulted: for indeed, If we be righteous, what do we unto him? yet God is pleased to hire us to labour for ourselves, and as the reward of grace, to promise us the wages of spiritual and eternal blessings, signified by the Roman penny, about seven pence half-penny in value, the usual hire of a day labourer. The day of life is our working season, a short moment, in which we have much to do, and therefore called to do it with our might, before the night cometh, when no man can work. And if the burden be heavy, or the heat intense, the time is short, the shadows of the evening are hasting on, and the night of death will dismiss us to our eternal rest. The different hours may represent, (1.) The calling of Jews and Gentiles: the early morning call may point to the ministry of Christ: the third hour, to that of the apostles sent to the lost sheep of the house of Israel; the sixth and ninth hours may refer to their preaching still to those of Judea only, and to the dispersed among the Gentiles for a time; till at the eleventh hour the call was enlarged to the heathen world, to those who had never heard the glad tidings of salvation before, and then readily accepted the invitation of entering into the vineyard of Jesus. (2.) The different ages of those who are effectually called of the Lord. Some are brought home to him in childhood, as Timothy. From early youth, like good Josiah, their heart is tender, and grace begins its blessed work, engaging them to give themselves up to the service of their Redeemer. Others at different periods are called to Jesus, severed by grace, in the very prime of life, from their gay pursuits; or as they are first entering on the world, brought out of it to follow Christ. Some are stopped, after a long career in evil, and in their declining years mercifully constrained to bow to the Redeemer, and a few, even at the eleventh hour, bending to the grave under decrepit age, are made single monuments of divine mercy and sovereignty, and proofs of his ability to save to the uttermost. No bonds of custom in sin, no fetters of worldly connections, no length of time, or depth of corruption, prevent the efficacy of God's grace towards his chosen. It is happy for those who begin soonest; but it is never too late. Whilst the day lasts, the call still is, Whosoever will, let him come; but we may not trifle with the moment of opportunity: eternity is at stake; and therefore to-day, whilst it is called to-day, we must embrace the gracious invitation.

2. The evening came, the labourers were called, their wages paid, and each received a penny. The evening is the end of time, when the great account will be settled, and all, both Jews and Gentiles, will appear at the judgment-seat of Christ, the great steward, to receive according to the things they have done in the body. He is represented beginning with the last, and giving to each the same reward; for, as the wages are not of debt, but of grace, in heaven (as some conceive) all shall enjoy the same perfect measure of glory; at least every vessel, if there be a diversity of capacities, shall be full.

3. They who had entered the vineyard first, seeing the rest thus recompensed, supposed their labours entitled them to more than their agreement, and therefore were disappointed when they received no more than a penny, and began to murmur and complain, as if an injustice had been done them in making those their equals in the wages who had so much later in the day entered upon the work. And this represents the case of the Jews, who, because they were the ancient people of God, were first called, and had enjoyed peculiar privileges beyond any other nation, would fain have monopolized the advantages of the Messiah's kingdom, or at least, have possessed its chief honours, and could not endure the thought that the Gentiles should be made their equals, and share the same grace and glory with them.

4. The master of the vineyard silences the murmurers, addressing himself to one of them, saying, Friend, I do thee no wrong, &c. There could be no injustice done to him, if he had the full sum agreed for; and therefore he ought to be content. He had a right to dispose of his own money as he pleased; and if he chose to give unto the last a penny, as well as to the first, it were wicked and envious to repine against the gracious giver. And all this is true, not only with regard to the Jews and Gentiles, but, with regard to all mankind in general. (1.) God, who is justice itself, neither can nor will do wrong to any. (2.) His gifts of providence and grace are his own; and as none have a title to either, though they on whom he is pleased to bestow them have reason to be thankful, they from whom he withholds them have no just cause to complain. (3.) If we can claim any thing from God as our own, it is only in virtue of his gracious promise, not on account of our desert. (4.) We are too apt to be making comparisons between ourselves and others; and, partial in our own favour, are ready to think that kindness shown to others, are acts of injustice done to ourselves. (5.) Envy makes us self-tormentors, and is at once our sin and our curse.

5. The text of the discourse concludes it, being the point which was to be proved; so the first, shall be last, and the last first. Many Gentiles should far outshine the Jewish converts who were first admitted into the church; and many rising disciples would be found, who in knowledge, grace, and holiness, would overtake and exceed those who were in Christ before them: For, not those who are foremost in profession, are always first in the race, but contrariwise: many who are called into the outward communion of the church are never effectually converted and turned to God; and it will be found at last, that there are but few, comparatively speaking, chosen to eternal life and glory: an assertion most alarming, and which should awaken all our solicitude to make our calling and election sure, that we may be of that few.

17. ¶ [q] And Jesus, going up to Jerusalem, [r] took the twelve disciples apart in the way, and said unto them, 18. Behold, [s] we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be betrayed unto the chief priests and unto the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death, 19. And shall deliver him to the Gentiles to mock, and to scourge, and to crucify him: and the third day he shall rise again.

[q] Mark 10. 32—34. Luke 18. 31—34.
[r] Ch. 5. 2. & 13. 11, 36. & 16. 13. Acts 10. 41. Deut. 6. 7. Gen. 18. 19.
[s] Ch. 16. 21. & 17. 9, 22, 23. & 26. 2 John 2. 19. Is. 53. 1—12. Ps. 2 1—3. & 22. 1—21. & 69. 1—20. ch. xxvi—xxviii. Mark xiv—xvi. Luke xxii—xxiv. John xviii—xx. Acts 4. 27, 28. & 2. 23.

Verses 17—19. To prepare them for that scene of distress and sufferings on which he was about to enter, he once more took his disciples apart, as they went up together to Jerusalem, and repeated what he said before, chap. xvi. 21. xvii. 22, 23. informing them now more particularly concerning the manner of his sufferings and death, which he had foretold: That he should not only be betrayed into his enemies' hands, but persecuted with unrelenting malice, and by a most unrighteous sentence condemned to die: That he should be delivered to the Gentiles, the Romans, who alone had then the power of life and death in Judea; and, after enduring the most shocking and barbarous indignities, should suffer death upon a cross. Tidings that no doubt filled them with horror and dismay; but he adds, for their comfort and support, that on the third day he should rise again. Note, In all the troubles we feel or fear, it is a comfort to look forward to a resurrection-day, when they will all be for ever at an end.

20. ¶ [t] Then came to him the [u]mother of Zebedee's children with her sons, worshipping him, and desiring a certain thing of him. 21. And he said unto her, What wilt thou? She saith unto him, Grant that these my two sons may sit [x] the one on thy right hand, and the other on the left, [y] in thy kingdom. 22. But Jesus answered and said, [z] Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink [a] of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? they say unto him, [b] We are able. 23. And he saith unto them, [c] Ye shall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with: but to sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them [d] for whom it is prepared of my Father. 24. [e] And when the ten heard it, they were moved

[t] Ch. 4. 21. Mark 10. 35—45. Jer. 45. 5.
[u] Salome. Mark 15. 40. ch. 27. 56.
[x] 1 Kin. 2. 19. & 22. 19. Ps. 45. 9. & 110. 1. i. e. be thy chief ministers of state.
[y] Ch. 19. 28. & 16. 27, 28. Heb. 2. 8, 9. & 12. 2.
[z] Rom. 8. 26. Jam. 4. 3.
[a] Ps. 75. 8. ch. 26. 39, 42. Mark 14. 36. Luke 12. 50. & 22. 42. John 18. 11. Is. 51. 17, 22. Ps. 60. 3. Jer. 25. 15.
[b] Ch. 26. 56. John 16. 32.
[c] John 16. 33. ch. 10. 17—34. & 24. 9. Col. 1. 24. Acts iv—xii. Rev. 1. 9.
[d] Ch. 25. 34. Rom. 8. 17. 1 Cor. 2. 9. Heb. 11. 16. John 17. 2. Rev. 2. 7, 10, 17. & 3. 5, 12, 21. 2 Cor. 1. 7. Eph. 1. 3—14.
[e] Luke 22. 24, 25. Mark 10. 41, 42. Prov. 13. 10. Jam. 4. 1.

with indignation against the two brethren. 25. But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them. 26. [f] But it shall not be so among you: but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; 27. And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant: 28. [g] Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

[f] Luke 14. 11. & 18. 14. ch. 18. 3, 4. & 23. 8—12. John 13. 12—17. ch. 11. 29. Heb. 5. 8. Phil. 2. 5—8. Rom. 15. 2. 1 Cor. 7. 19—21.

[g] Is. 53. 10, 11. Dan. 9. 24, 26. ch 26. 28. Luke 22. 27. John 11. 51, 52. & 10. 11, 15. Rom. 5. 15—19. Phil. 2. 7, 8. 1 Tim. 2. 6. Tit. 2. 14. Heb. 9. 28. 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. & 2. 24. & 3. 18. 2 Cor. 5. 21. Gal. 3. 13. & 4. 4. Rom. 8. 3, 4. & 3. 24—26. Eph. 1. 7. & 5. 2.

Verses 20—28. Far from being cured of their national prejudices by all the sufferings our Lord had foretold them he should endure, they concluded these would be only the prelude to the more glorious manifestations of his power at his rising again. And therefore,

1. Two of the disciples, James and John, the sons of Zebedee, with their mother Salome, who is supposed to have been nearly related to Joseph, and might therefore hope to have a strong interest in Jesus, came to their Master, and through her preferring their request, with deep respect she besought him to grant her a favour; and being ordered to name it, she desired him to confer on her two sons the first honours of that kingdom which they shortly expected would appear.

2. Pitying their ignorance and weakness, instead of upbraiding their pride and folly, our Lord turned to the two disciples, and gently admonishes them, saying, Ye know not what ye ask: your notions of the nature of my kingdom are utterly mistaken: it is not an earthly throne to which I shall be exalted; and as mistaken are you in the means of attaining the honours you seek. You are not aware of the sufferings and trials that must be endured by all those who would come to reign with me. Through much tribulation lies the entrance into heaven; and can you, think ye, drink of my bitter cup, or bear to be baptized in blood, as I must shortly be? Such sufferings as these they were not prepared for: their ambition looked so high, that they saw not the dangers which were before them, nor knew what manner of spirit they were of. Note, (1.) They who would reign with Christ, must first suffer with him; and every Christian should well count the cost, before he begins to take up his cross. (2.) In all our sufferings it should sweeten our cup, to think that Christ hath drank of it before us, and all the bitterness of sin he hath taken away.

3. Their self-confidence is a natural consequence of their pride, and therefore they without hesitation boldly engage for their own ability and fidelity; though, alas! they were sad strangers to themselves, and knew not what they said. Note, Young converts are often very forward, till sad experience hath taught them their own weakness.

4. Christ replies, and assures them they shall suffer for him, and in a manner they probably at that time little apprehended: but though they did so, still he left their request in suspense. The honour they sought was to be disposed of according to God's eternal counsels, and not to be given, save to them for whom it is prepared of my Father. In the distribution of spiritual, temporal, and eternal blessings, all are dispensed according to the plan laid down in the eternal mind, and concerted in the everlasting covenant of grace; nothing can be added thereto, or diminished therefrom.

5. The same ambitious spirit which spoke in the request of John and James, equally appeared in the indignation of the other ten against them, who each thought himself as much entitled to the superiority which they desired. They did not grieve for the sin of their brethren, but were angry at what they conceived an affront to them; and whilst they violently condemned their ambition, like many others, were blind to the same spirit in themselves. Note, Desire of pre-eminence is among the most fruitful sources of disputes among brethren. Instead of being in his own eyes the last and the least, each is for assuming a superiority, which the proud heart of his fellow is very unwilling to admit.

6. To silence the dispute and strike at the root of the evil, Jesus with the greatest tenderness called them to him; and, to beat down that spirit of ambition, so evil in itself, and so peculiarly unbecoming their holy and humble profession, he endeavours to undeceive them respecting the nature of his kingdom, which was purely spiritual. The kings and princes of the Gentiles indeed thirsted after dominion and despotic sway, and the more potent exercised unbounded authority over their weaker vassals and subjects; but utterly unlike them must their conduct be. Their greatness must consist not in lording it over God's heritage, but in their abounding labours: not in aspiring desires to rule, but in humble endeavours to promote the salvation of men's souls. The only laudable ambition Jesus can approve, is the holy strife who shall be most condescending, and the first in every work and labour of love to serve the meanest who bear the Christian name. Nor did he, their Master, recommend ought to them, of which himself had not set them an eminent example, who came not to take state upon himself, and be served with earthly pomp and grandeur, but humbled himself to the lowest offices in the service of men's souls and bodies: and, after living the life of a servant, was about to die the death of a slave, that by the sacrifice of himself he might give a ransom for many, even for all those whom the Father had given him, in whose stead he was about to suffer, in order to redeem them from the guilt and power of their sins, and from the wrath of God which they had provoked; and having him therefore for such a pattern of humility, they were peculiarly obliged to copy after it. Note, (1.) The affectation of earthly pomp and splendour is utterly unbecoming those who pretend to be the ministers of the meek and humble Jesus. (2.) The church of Christ hath never suffered greater injuries than from the tyranny and oppression of those, who, professing to be the successors of the apostles, seem to have inherited nothing from them, but that lordly, ambitious, and domineering spirit for which Jesus so justly reprimanded them. (3.) The only allowable ambition among the ministers of Christ is, who shall be most humble and serviceable to their brethren, and herein most conformed to their blessed Master's image. (4.) The life which the Lord Jesus laid down, was the price of our redemption; and being accepted of God as complete and full, the redemption obtained by it was eternal: those therefore for whom he died can never more suffer under the sins for which he paid a ransom.

29. ¶ [h] And as they departed from Jericho, a great multitude followed him. 30. And, behold, [i] two blind men sitting by the way-side, when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out, saying, Have mercy on us, [k] O Lord, thou Son of David. 31. [l] And the multitude rebuked them, because they should hold their peace: but they cried the more, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou Son of David. 32. And Jesus stood still, and called them, and said, What [m] will ye that I shall do unto you? 33. They say

[h] Mark 10. 46—52. Luke 18. 35—43.

[i] Ch. 9. 27. & 12. 22. & 11. 5. Is. 35. 5, 6. & 42. 18. & 59. 10.

[k] Is. 11. 1. Jer. 23. 5, 6. ch. 1. 1. & 9. 27. & 12. 23. & 15. 22. Rom. 1. 3, 4. Rev. 22. 16.

[l] Ch. 19. 13. & 15. 23. with ch. 18. 19. Luke 18. 1. & 11. 8. ch. 7. 7. Phil. 4. 6. Ps. 50. 15.

[m] Ch. 7. 7. Ezek. 36. 37. Ps. 50. 15. & 91. 15.

unto him, Lord, that our eyes may be opened. 34. So [n] Jesus had compassion on them, [o] and touched their eyes: and immediately their eyes received sight, and they followed him.

n Heb. 4. 15. & 2. 17. Ps. 145. 8. ch. 9. 36. & 14. 14. & 15. 32. Hos. 11. 8. Is. 63. 7, 9, 15.

o Ch. 9. 29. & 12. 22. & 11. 5. Is. 35. 5. Luke 1. 79.

Verses 29—34. Advancing still towards Jerusalem, Jesus and his disciples passed through Jericho, attended as usual by a vast multitude, whom curiosity to hear or see his miracles, desire to learn, or want of his healing influence, had drawn together; when, behold, a wondrous instance of his power and compassion appears.

1. Two blind men, beggars, sat by the way-side, and hearing from some of the multitude, that the famed prophet of Nazareth, who had wrought so many miracles, was passing by, they immediately concluded it a most providential circumstance, and with united and loud supplications cried out incessantly, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou Son of David. Note, (1.) In these blind beggars we may behold a lively emblem of our souls. Our understanding is darkness and we utterly destitute of all good, perishing inevitably in want and wretchedness, unless the divine mercy respect our misery and relieve us. (2.) They who feel their real state, will cry after Jesus, the only hope of the miserable and the destitute. (3.) Providential opportunities should be improved; if we neglect them now, they never may return.

2. They made so loud a noise and cried so vehemently, that the multitude rebuked them as troublesome, and bade them be silent. But this only made them redouble their prayers, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou Son of David: Thou, who art so able to help us, whose tender mercies have been so often extended to others, let our pitiable case engage thy notice, and move thy wonted compassions. And herein they have set us a noble example, (1.) Of fervent prayer. Their wants were great; they felt them with deep sensibility; therefore they cried so loud, so persevering: so should we do. We may meet with many discouragements in seeking Christ; but these, instead of silencing our prayer, should quicken our importunity. (2.) Of confident faith. They were fully persuaded, that what they asked, he was willing and able to grant them. His power as the Lord, his office as the Son of David, emboldened their trust in his mercy. It is by faith we must thus in every distress honour Jesus by casting our care upon him, pleading his name as the ground of our confidence. (3.) Of deep humility. They ask for mercy alone, referring themselves entirely to him for the manner in which he pleases to dispense it to them. We have no merit; can claim nothing at God's hands; deserve nothing but wrath and hell: all our hope is in his boundless grace, to supply all our poverty and wretchedness, to pardon our guilt, and bestow the gifts of his Spirit to deliver us from the power of our sin. This mercy grant, O Son of David!

3. Christ, who had heard their cries, and knew what rebukes they had met with, stood and called them to him; for he delights to revive the spirit of the contrite, and to relieve the wants of the miserable. He bids them therefore prefer their request, intimating his readiness to grant the mercy they had so importunately sought. Note, The promises of Christ give an unlimited scope to our prayers: we can ask nothing really good for us, which Jesus is not willing to bestow.

4. The poor blind men have a ready answer; Lord, that our eyes may be opened. They ask not for silver or gold, but for a boon far more difficult to be granted, which yet they are assured he can easily bestow. We have need to prefer the same prayer every day; and would to God we were more deeply affected with our spiritual blindness, that our applications might be more frequent and fervent.

5. Their cure is immediate. The compassions of Jesus left them not in suspense: he touched their eyes; a flood of day instantly broke upon them: and joining the company, they joyfully followed him, testifying their gratitude, love, and praise. Note, They who are enlightened by the Redeemer's grace, will from that moment cleave to him in his holy ways, and gratefully labour to advance his glory.

CHAP. XXI.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

The death and resurrection of Jesus Christ are the two grand hinges upon which our salvation turns; and therefore the history of his sufferings, even unto death, and his rising again, is more particularly recorded by all the evangelists than any other part of his story. We have here, 1. The public entry which he made into Jerusalem, upon the first day of the passion-week, ver. 1—11. 2. The authority he exercised there, in cleansing the temple, and driving out of it the buyers and sellers, ver. 12—16. 3. The emblem he gave of the state of the Jewish church, in cursing the barren fig-tree, and his discourse with his disciples thereupon, ver. 17—22. 4. His justifying his own authority, by appealing to the baptism of John, ver. 23—27. 5. His shaming the infidelity and obstinacy of the chief priests and elders, with the repentance of the publicans, illustrated by the parable of the two sons, ver. 29—32. 6. His reading the doom of the Jewish church for its unfruitfulness, in the parable of the vineyard let out to unthankful husbandmen, ver. 33—46.

1. AND [a] when they drew nigh unto Jerusalem, and were come to Bethphage, unto the mount of Olives, then sent Jesus two disciples, 2. Saying unto them, Go into the village over against you, and straightway ye shall find an ass tied, and a colt with her: loose them, and bring them unto me. 3. And if any man say ought unto you, ye shall say, [b] The Lord hath [c] need of them; and straightway he will send them. 4. All this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, 5. [d] Tell ye the daughter of Sion, Behold, thy King cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting upon an ass, and a colt the foal of an ass.* 6. [e] And the disciples went, and did as Jesus commanded them; 7. And brought the ass, and the colt, [f] and put on them their clothes, and they set him thereon. 8. And a very great multitude spread their garments in the way; others cut down branches from the trees, and strawed them in the way. 9. And the multitudes that went before, and that followed, [g] cried, saying, Hosanna to the Son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest. 10. [h] And when he was come into Jerusalem, all the city was moved, saying, Who is this? 11. And the multitude said, This is [i] Jesus the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee.

a Mark 11. 1—15. Luke 19. 29—44. John 12. 12—16.

b Ps. 24. 1. & 50. 10, 11. Acts 10. 36. Heb. 1. 2. John 3. 35. & 22. & 17. 2.

c 2 Cor. 8. 9. Zech. 9. 9. to mark his debasement, and that he was the true king of Israel. Deut. 17. 16. 1 Kin. 1. 33.

d Is. 62. 11. Zech. 9. 9. John 12. 15. ch. 11. 29. & 12. 19. 20. Ps. 45. 4. 2 Cor. 12. 7, 8. Song 3. 11.

* From the other Evangelists, it would appear that our Lord rode only on the colt; from this passage we should be apt to think that both had been used. But it is not unusual with the sacred authors, when the nature of the thing spoken of is sufficient, for precluding mistakes, to employ the plural number for the singular. — Campbell.

e Mark 11. 4—6. Luke 19. 32—34.

f 2 Kin. 9. 13. Lev. 23. 40. John 1. 14. & 12. 12—14.

g Ps. 118. 24—26. ch. 23. 39. ver. 15. Ps. 24. 7—10.

h Is. 63. 1. & 9. 6. & 49. 9—11. & 62. 11. Zech. 9. 5.

i Deut. 18. 15—18. Acts 3. 22. 23. ch. 2. 23. & 16. 14. Luke 4. 16—29. & 24. 29. John 1. 45. & 7. 41. & 6. 14. & 9. 17.

12. ¶ And Jesus went into the temple * of God, and [k] cast out all them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and the seats of them that sold doves, 13. And said unto them, [l] It is written, My house shall be called the house of prayer; [m] but ye have made it a den of thieves. 14. [n] And the blind and the lame came to him in the temple; and he healed them. 15. ¶ [o] And when the chief priests and scribes saw the wonderful things that he did, and the children crying in the temple, and saying, † Hosanna to the [p] Son of David; they were sore displeased, 16. And said unto him, Hearest thou what these say? And Jesus saith unto them, Yea; have ye never read, [q] Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise? 17. ¶ [r] And he left them, and went out of the city into Bethany; and he lodged there.

* That is, the outermost court of the temple, where this sort of traffic was exercised.

[k] John 2. 13—16. Deut. 14. 25, 26. Mark 11. 15. Luke 19. 45.

[l] Is. 56. 7. & 60. 7. Ps. 93. 5.

[m] Jer. 7. 11. Mark 11. 17. Luke 19. 46. Hos. 12. 7.

[n] Gen. 49. 10. Is. 35. 5. Hag. 2. 7. Mal. 3. 1. ch. 4. 23, 24. & 8. 16. & 9. 35. & 11. 5. & 12. 15. & 14. 35, 36. & 15. 31.

[o] Is. 26. 11. Acts 4. 2. & 13. 45. Job 5. 2. Eccl. 4. 4. ch. 27. 18.

† i. e. Save now.

[p] The Messiah. Is. 11. 1. Jer. 23. 5, 6. & 33. 15, 16.

[q] Ps. 8. 2. 1 Cor. 1. 26—28.

[r] Mark 11. 11—22. John 11. 1, 18. & 12. 1.

Verses 1—11. Being about to offer himself as the true paschal Lamb for the sins of his people, our blessed Lord determined to make his triumphant entry first into Jerusalem, as a prelude to those more exalted honours, to which on his resurrection from the dead he should be advanced. We are told on his approaching the suburbs, where he halted,

1. The preparations he ordered to be made. We find no heralds sent to clear the way; no guards surround his glittering car; no music fills the air with harmony; no officers of state with gorgeous robes attend their mighty sovereign. The lowly Jesus despised this pageantry; it fitted not his state of humiliation: and therefore, though he could in an instant have commanded down cherubic legions to attend his steps, and made the clouds his chariots, he chose his poor disciples to be with him, and seated on an ass' colt, nor even that his own, determines thus to make his public entry. Yet even here he takes occasion to display his divine omniscience and influence over the spirits of men; sending his disciples to the village over against them, directing them where to find the ass tied with her foal: assuring them, that if any man offered to question them for loosing the ass, it would be sufficient to say their Master wanted them, and he would immediately let them go.

2. The fulfilment of the Scripture herein is particularly remarked. Long before had the prophets Isaiah and Zechariah predicted this event; Tell ye the daughter of Zion glad tidings of great joy: Behold, admire and adore him, thy king, the long expected Messiah, cometh unto thee, bringing salvation; meek as a lamb, to bear every indignity for Zion's sake, and gentle to rule with a sceptre of love in the hearts of his people; sitting upon an ass, and a colt the foal of an ass; like one of the ancient judges of Israel, and in such humility as was best suited to that character he bore. Note, Christ is Zion's king: his happy subjects may well rejoice in his power and love; but let his enemies tremble; though he comes now like a lamb, he will shortly roar against them as a lion.

3. The disciples having obeyed their Master's orders, and brought the ass with her colt, they spread their garments on them and seated him thereon, and with every expression of exultation and joy, which this poor, and, to human view, despicable multitude could show, they ushered him into the city, spreading their garments instead of carpets on the ground, or hanging them by the way side; cutting down boughs of trees, and strewing them by the road; carrying palm branches in their hands, (John xii. 13.) as in the feast of tabernacles, and uttering, with loud Hosannahs, their triumphant songs of praise, welcoming their adored Messiah, the Son of David, who came with divine authority from on high; wishing him all prosperity, honour, happiness, and glory; praying for the appearing of his kingdom, and that his throne might be exalted over all; and calling on the heavenly hosts to join their blessings, praise, and adoration. Note, (1.) The coming of Jesus into the sinner's heart is still matter of greater exultation, and deserves louder shouts of praise. (2.) They who have tasted the preciousness of a Redeemer's grace in their own souls, cannot but long to see his kingdom established in the hearts of others, and fervently pray for its more abundant manifestation in the world.

4. Such an uncommon scene excited great emotion in the inhabitants of Jerusalem, according as they were differently affected with wonder, envy, contempt, or exultation; and the general inquiry was, Who is this? that comes with such a train, and such exclamations. To which the multitude replied, This is Jesus, the prophet of Nazareth, of Galilee, whose doctrines and miracles have rendered him so famed, and confirmed his divine mission. Note, (1.) Christ is often little known, where the greatest profession of his religion is made. (2.) The poor despised multitude judge righter concerning Jesus, his character, and gospel, than the wise and noble, who often affect to despise them.

Verses 12—17. The Son of God, the King in Zion, regards his temple as his palace, and thitherward directs his steps.

1. He purges it of intruders, the buyers and sellers, who in the courts carried on their traffic: exchanging bills to purchase sheep and doves for sacrifice, or money to pay the annual half shekel; and under pretence that this was in order to further the temple service, the priests, through avarice, connived at it, enriching themselves by the extortion practised on these occasions. But the Lord overthrew their stalls, and drove them out before him, confounded and unable to bear his frowns, or resist his arm; vindicating his conduct, and condemning their wickedness by a quotation from Isa. lvi. 7. and Jer. vii. 11. saying, It is written, My house shall be called a house of prayer, to which men should resort, and where God had promised to hear their supplications; but ye have made it a den of thieves, perverting it to the vilest purposes, dishonouring God, and plundering the people. Note, (1.) The vilest corruptions have been introduced into the church by those who, making advantage the end of their profession, counterfeit godliness in order to make gain. (2.) The eyes of his peculiar jealousy are upon his church, and nothing can more offend the blessed head of it, than to behold an avaricious spirit in those who, by their very calling, profess themselves crucified to the world.

2. When he had ejected the intruders, he sat as a King upon his throne to dispense his royal favours; healing the blind and lame who came to him in the temple, and thither the spiritually blind and lame are invited still to come to him, and by his word and Spirit he continues to manifest there his healing power and grace.

3. He rebukes the envy of the chief priests and scribes. They could not bear to see such incontestable miracles wrought by him; and when the very children, struck with the works of Jesus, joined their feeble voices to the acclamations of the multitude, and cried, Hosannah to the son of David, they were stung with malignant envy, and intimated to Jesus, that to hear without silencing such silly little creatures, proved him weakly vain and ostentatious. But Jesus vindicates these infant praises he heard; he approved their lispings; and had these cavillers known the Scriptures, they might have herein observed their fulfilment, where it was written, Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast ordained strength, Psal. viii. 2. God's strength was now made perfect in their weakness, and the Messiah's praise advanced by these feeble instruments, to the confusion and condemnation of those who rejected and denied him. Note, (1.) Greatness and goodness are ever the objects of envy, and the proud cannot bear to hear the tribute of commendation paid to superior excellence. (2.) It is happy when children learn betimes to lisp the Redeemer's praise. Though education cannot bestow grace, yet example and instruction in the way of godliness, are means we may humbly hope God will effectually bless. (3.) The prayers and services of little children are pleasing to the dear Saviour, and he will graciously accept their feeble efforts to express their gratitude.

4. Leaving them to reflect on what had passed, he departed to Bethany where he lodged, about two miles from Jerusalem; thus for a while withdrawing himself from their malice and fury, and depriving them of the blessing of his presence, which they had so justly forfeited.

s Mark 11. 12, 13. Luke 13. 6—9. Phil. 3. 18, 19. 2 Tim. 3. 5. Tit. 1. 16. Heb. 6. 4—8. & 10. 26—31. 2 Pet. 2. 20—22. ch. 12. 43—45. ver. 40—44 Luke 19. 42—44.

18. Now in the morning, as he returned into the city, he hungered. 19. [s] And when he saw a fig-tree in the way, he came to it, and found nothing thereon, but [t] leaves only, and said unto it, Let no fruit grow on thee henceforward for ever. And presently the fig-tree withered away. 20. And when the disciples saw it, they marvelled, saying, [u] How soon is the fig-tree withered away! 21. Jesus answered and said unto them, Verily I say unto you, [x] If ye have faith, and doubt not, ye shall not only do this which is done to the fig-tree; but also, if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; it shall be done. 22. [y] And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.

t 2 Tim. 3. 5. Tit. 1. 16. Rev. 3. 1.

u Mark 11. 20, 21. ch. 24. 42, 44, 50. & 25. 6, 13. Job xviii, xx. 1. 30. 13, 14.

x Ch. 17. 20. Luke 17. 6 Jam. 1. 6. Rom. 4. 19, 20. 1 Cor. 13. 2.

y Ch. 7. 7, 11. & 18. 19. Mark 11. 24. Luke 11. 8, 9. John 14. 13. & 15. 7. & 16. 24. Jam. 5. 16. 1 John 3. 22. & 5. 14.

Verses 18—22. In the morning early Jesus returned to Jerusalem, and having probably come out fasting, he was hungry; being, as man, subject to all our sinless infirmities. And seeing a fig-tree remarkably flourishing, he made up to it, expecting to have found fruit, but found nothing but leaves; on which denouncing a curse upon it for its barrenness, the tree immediately began to wither. And herein Christ seems to have particularly in his view the Jewish people, of which this fig-tree was a lively emblem. They were, in their profession of religion, zealous and plausible, but barren of all true fruits of righteousness; and therefore were now given up to the curse, to be destroyed without remedy. Note, (1.) Christ requires of his disciples not merely leaves of profession, but the fruit of grace; though too many deceive his expectations, and rest in the form, whilst they continue strangers to the power of godliness. (2.) The curse will light upon the barren trees; often in this world the hypocrite's hope perisheth; they discover their insincerity, and wither in the eyes of man; but at farthest, the day of recompense will blast their confidences.

The disciples the next morning passing with their master the same way, Mark xi. 20. observed with wonder how soon the fig-tree was withered away which Jesus had cursed the preceding day: and so terrible are his comminations, and sure to light down upon the devoted sinner's head. In answer to which observation, Jesus replied, that this was little, compared with the power they should be endued with, if they exercised unshaken and unwavering faith in God; not hesitating or reasoning how the miracle could be performed, but trusting God's power and promises; in which case they would be enabled, not merely to dry up a fig-tree with a word, but to say to this mountain, on which they now stood, be thou removed and cast into the sea, and it shall be done. Such astonishing miracles should they be enabled to work; and whatever other thing they should find needful in the execution of their ministry, for the honour of God and the furtherance of his gospel, they need only ask it in prayer, nothing doubting, and it should assuredly be granted them. Note, The prayer of faith is sure to prevail; to this God denies nothing. If ever we want, are unhappy, or in distress, to this source it may be traced, to the distrust of his promises, his power, or his love.

z Mark 14. 27—33. Luke 20. 1—8.

23. ¶ [z] And when he was come into the temple, [a] the chief priests and the elders of the people came unto him as he was teaching, and said, [b] By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority? 24. [c] And Jesus answered and said unto them, I also will ask you one thing, which if ye tell me, I in like-wise will tell you by what authority I do these things. 25. [d] The baptism of John, whence was it? from heaven, or of men? And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say unto us, Why did ye not then believe him? 26. But if we shall say, Of men; we fear the people: [e] for all hold John as a prophet. 27. And they answered Jesus, and said, [f] We cannot tell. And he said unto them, [g] Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

a 1 Chron. xxiv. Exod. 19. 7. Num. 11. 16. Ruth 4. 4. 1 Sam. 15. 30.

b Exod. 2. 14. Acts 7. 27. & 4. 7. ch. 7. 29.

c Ch. 10. 16, 17. Eph. 5. 15. Job 5. 13.

d Ch. iii. Luke i, iii. Mark i. 1—11. John 1. 6—36. & 3. 22—36. & 5. 32—35. Luke 7. 29, 30. ch. 17. 12. Mark 9. 13.

e Ch. 14. 5. Mark 6. 20. Luke 20. 6. John 5. 35.

f Rom. 1. 18, 21, 22, 28. 2 Cor. 2. 15. & 4. 3, 4. 2 Thes. 2. 9, 10.

g Prov. 26. 4. Job 5. 13.

Verses 23—27. We have here,

1. The insolent demand made upon our Lord, and the interruption given him in his blessed work, by the chief priests and elders, the rulers in church and state; who, unable any longer to contain, and filled with indignation at what they had seen and heard the preceding day, insisted upon his producing authority for what he did, and showing the commission under which he acted, presuming that his answer would infallibly lay him open to some accusation, which they had so long wished to find against him. Note, When we are faithfully labouring for Christ, we need not wonder if Satan and his instruments labour to interrupt us.

2. Christ answers their demand by another. He knew how to confound them, whilst they thought to silence him, and is ready out of their own mouths to condemn them. The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men? Was he commissioned from heaven, or went forth at his own will, or under merely human authority? The question was short, but the dilemma to which it reduced them was inextricable. They plainly saw, if they should say, John acted under a divine commission, then Christ would have an immediate proof of his own, and they would be inexcusable for not receiving him as the Messiah, to whom John bore witness. On the other hand, their own honour, lives, and safety, were at stake; the people being fully persuaded of John's prophetic character, which should they deny, they justly apprehended lest they should be stoned like blasphemers; and therefore, contrary to their own convictions, they chose to confess ignorance, and tell a lie, rather than own the divine mission of the messenger, which would, in its consequence, involve the divine authority of Jesus. But if they thus wilfully chose to appear ignorant in one case, our Lord was fully vindicated in refusing to give them farther satisfaction about himself, seeing it was in vain to talk with those who had first resolved not to be convinced. Note, (1.) Worldly minds are unspeakably more influenced by the fear of men, than by the fear of God. (2.) Many are more afraid of shame than sin, and therefore hesitate not at a lie concerning their thoughts and apprehensions, their affections and intentions, their remembering or forgetting things, &c. because they flatter themselves nobody can disprove them: but there is a searcher of hearts, from whom no secrets are hid. (3.) If men wilfully shut their eyes against the truth, it is in vain to reason with them any farther.

28. ¶ But what think ye? [h] A certain man had two sons; and he came to the first, and said, Son, go work to-day in my vineyard. 29. [i] He answered and said, I will not: [k] but afterward he repented, and went. 30. And [l] he came to the second, and said likewise. And he answered and said, I go, sir: and went not. 31. Whether of them twain did the will of his father? [m] They say unto him, The first. Jesus saith unto them, Verily I say unto you, [n] That the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you. 32. For [o] John came unto you in the way of righteousness, and ye believed him not; but the publicans and the harlots believed him: and [p] ye, when ye had seen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe him.

h Luke 15. 11—32. ch. 20. 7. Gen. ix.

i Rom. 1. 18—32. Eph. 2. 2, 3, 11, 12. & 4. 17—19.

k Luke 15. 17, 18. Acts 17. 30. Eph. 2. 1—3, 12, 19.

l Ps. 147. 19, 20. ch. 23. 3. Luke 18. 11, 12. Exod. 19. 8. Deut. 5. 27.

m 2 Sam. 12. 5—7. Job 15. 6. Luke 19. 22.

n Ch. 9. 9. Luke 7. 29, 30.

o Ch. 3. 8. Luke 3. 12, 13. & 7. 29—50. ch. 11. 18. Luke 18. 13. & 19. 1—10.

p Ps. 10. 4. John 5. 40. Zech. 7. 11, 12. Ps. 81. 11, 12.

Verses 28—32. Having silenced their cavils, he makes an attack upon their conscience, in a parable, with an application to them.

1. We have the parable itself. A certain man had two sons, whom he sent into his vineyard to work: the one appeared at first refractory, undutiful, and refused to obey his father's commands; but afterwards, reflecting on his ill conduct, he was sorry, repented, and went to his work; the other no sooner was bid to go, than with profound respect he promised immediate obedience, but never went. The question, Which did his father's will? was too evident to admit of hesitation, and they allow the penitent to be the dutiful son. Note, (1.) God is our Father; he commands his children to serve and glorify him; by our relation to him obedience is our duty, and should be our delight. The day of life is the day of labour, and should therefore diligently be improved by us. But, (2.) Such is our vile nature, that we are rebellious children, refuse to hearken, yea, dare to say, We will not serve him, but our own lusts and pleasures, and insolently turn from him, every one in his own way. (3.) Whenever by divine grace we are led to repent and return, God in Christ is graciously pleased to receive us, to forgive our wickedness and insolence; again he permits us to be employed in his service, and restores us to his regard. (4.) Whilst some prove better than they promise, others prove the very contrary; make fair professions of love to Christ and his service, but never go farther; Christians in word and in tongue, but not in deed and in truth.

2. Christ applies the parable to those who were before him: the primary scope of which is to show, that publicans and harlots, repenting, would enter the kingdom sooner than they; and probably he hath an eye here unto the Gentiles, who would repent and be converted by the gospel, when the Jewish nation, for their impenitence and unbelief, would be rejected. And this had evidently appeared in the effects of John's ministry, who came in the way of righteousness; his life remarkably exemplary, his doctrine directly tending to lead men to repentance, and faith in the Messiah; whereby he proved his mission from God: but, notwithstanding, ye believed him not: though you pretend such respect for God, as the second son did for his father, you did not receive John's testimony, nor believe the doctrines he preached: but the publicans and harlots believed him, were convinced of their guilt and danger, received his testimony concerning Jesus, repented and were baptized: and, notwithstanding these remarkable fruits of his ministry, which served to evidence the divine power and authority which accompanied his word, ye, when ye had seen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe him, but continued obstinately hardened against every method of conviction. Note, (1.) The success of our ministry is one of the best testimonials of our mission from God. (2.) Formal professors are much more difficultly wrought upon, and seldomer converted, than careless sinners. Strictness in the ceremonials of religion, and the pride of duties trusted upon for righteousness, are among the strongest holds of Satan in the human heart. (3.) Wherever the gospel comes in power, converting publicans and harlots, there will it leave those inexcusable who, beholding its efficacy on others, still contradict, and blaspheme, and reject the counsel of God against their own souls.

33. ¶ Hear another parable: There was a certain householder, [q] which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a wine press in it, and built [r] a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country: 34. And when the time of the fruit drew near, he sent his servants to the husbandmen, [s] that they might receive the fruits of it. 35. [t] And the husbandmen took his servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another. 36. Again he sent other servants more than the first: and they did unto them likewise. 37. But last of all he [u] sent unto them his son, saying, They will reverence my son. 38. [x] But when the husbandmen saw the son, they said among themselves, This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his inheritance. 39. And they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him. 40. When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen? 41. They say unto him, [y] He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and [z] will let out his vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render him the fruits in their seasons. 42. Jesus saith unto them, [a] Did ye never q Ps. 80. 8—15. Song 8. 11, 12. Is. 5. 1—4. Jer. 2. 21. Mark 12. 1—12. Luke 20. 9—18.

r Num. iii, iv, viii. Deut. 1. 15. & 16. 18. & 17. 9—15.

s Ps. 1. 3. Song 8. 11, 12.

t 1 Kin. 22. 24. 2 Chr. 16. 10. & 23. 19, 21. & 36. 15, 16. Neh. 9. 26. Jer. xx, xxvi, xxxvi, xxxvii, xxxviii. ch. 23. 34, 37. Acts 7. 52, 59. 1 Thes. 2. 15. Heb. 11. 36.

u Rom. 8. 3. Gal. 4. 4. Luke i, ii, iv, &c. ch. i, iv. John ii, &c.

x Heb. 1. 2. ch. 26. 3, 4. & 27. 1. John 11. 53. ch. xxvi, xxvii. Mark xiv, xv. Luke xxii, xxiii. John v, vii, viii, x, xviii, xix. Acts 3. 14, 15. 1 Cor. 2. 8. Heb. 13. 12.

y Luke 19. 27, 42—44. & 20. 15, 16. Mark 12. 9. Deut. 4. 26, 27. & 28. 15—68. & 29. 18—28. & 31. 17, 18. & 32. 15—35. Lev. 26. 14—39. ch. 8. 11, 12. & 3. 12. & 12. 43—45. & 23. 35—38. & 22. 7. & 24. 2—34. Luke 17. 22—37. & 21. 6—33. Prov. 1. 21—32. John 9. 39—41. Acts 28. 23—28.

z Ch. 8. 11. Acts 13. 46, 47. & 18. 6. Rom. 11. 11—19. P. 47. 9.

Dan. 2. 44. ver. 43. a Ps. 118. 22. Acts 4. 11. Luke 20. 17. Rom. 9. 33. 1 Pet. 2. 7. Is. 28. 16. Eph. 2. 14—22. ch. 16. 18. Zech. 3. 9.

read in the scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord's doing, and it is [b] marvellous in our eyes?

b Rom. 16. 26, 27. Col. 1. 25—27. Eph. 3. 3—9.

c See on ver. 41.

43. Therefore say I unto you, [c] The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof. 44. [d] And whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder. 45. And when the chief priests and Pharisees had heard his parables, [e] they perceived that he spake of them. 46. But when they sought to lay hands on him, they [f] feared the multitude, because they [g] took him for a prophet.

d Is. 8. 14, 15. Rom. 9. 33. 1 Pet. 2. 7. Luke 20. 18. Is. 60. 12. Zech. 12. 3. Ps. 2. 9. 1 Thes. 2. 16. see ver. 41. 2 Cor. 3. 14. & 4. 3, 4. Dan. 2. 43, 44. Ps. 110. 5, 6.

e Luke 11. 45. 2 Tim. 4. 3.

f Ver. 26. ch. 14. 5. Luke 20. 6. Mark 12. 12.

g Luke 7. 16. John 7. 40. see ver. 11.

Verses 33—46. Another parable, nearly of the same import as the former, is here delivered. We have,

1. The privileges which the Jewish church had long enjoyed, represented by a vineyard let out to husbandmen. They had been planted in a pleasant land, fenced round by God's peculiar care, blessed with the means of grace; in the midst of them he had set up his altar, manifested his presence, deposited his lively oracles, instituted divine ordinances, appointed a holy ministry: nothing that could conduce to their fruitfulness or defence was lacking: and therefore, having settled their constitution at Sinai, or at the dedication of the temple, retiring between the cherubim, he committed to the chief priests and elders the care of his church, for the edification of which they were required, as husbandmen in a vineyard, to labour. Note, (1.) Christ's church is his vineyard, and under his especial care, whilst the world in general lieth in wickedness. (2.) Ministers in the church, must labour in the word and doctrine; a life of ease, indolence, and self-gratification, is inconsistent with this sacred employment.

2. Enjoying such means and mercies, God justly expected their profiting should appear, and sent accordingly his prophets to remind them of their obligations, and stir them up and direct them to the discharge of them, that they might, in the fruits of grace and righteousness, render that tribute to God which was so much his due.

3. The baseness and cruelty of the husbandmen to these divine messengers was astonishing. They abused, insulted, and persecuted the prophets, and even went so far as to imbrue their hands in their blood, Jer. xx. 2. Neh. ix. 26. 2 Chron. xxiv. 21. and when the Lord, in his patience and pity, sent others in succession, to see if at last some change might be wrought, the rising generation repeated all the wickedness of their forefathers. Note, (1.) It hath been the lot of all God's faithful ministers from the beginning to suffer persecution; and none have been deeper in this transgression than those who by office and profession filled the most distinguished places in his church. (2.) God's patience with sinners is astonishing. Though provoked and insulted in the person of his ambassadors, he still sends them with proffers of peace and pardon.

4. When, in infinite condescension and love, God sent to them his Son, to whom they might well be expected to pay reverence and attention, and from whose ministry and miracles at least, if they rejected others, some blessed change might have been hoped for, so far were they from receiving, and submitting to him, that, to fill up the measure of their iniquities, they immediately began to plot against him, and what these husbandmen had done, they were now about to repeat, to cast him out and slay him; as if, when they had crucified him without the walls of Jerusalem, they might then lord it without control in the church, and by the murder of the heir, seize the inheritance without opposition.

5. Christ appeals to them for what they thought must be the consequence when the Lord of the vineyard came; for come he surely will, to reckon with the persecutors of his prophets, and the murderers of his Son. And they, not yet understanding the meaning couched under these parabolical expressions, readily replied, no doubt the case of these wicked husbandmen will be terrible; they have nothing to expect but condign punishment for their crimes, and that the vineyard should be committed to more trusty servants. Thus unwittingly pronouncing their own doom, and justifying God's procedure in rejecting them, and calling the Gentiles into his church, who would render him more abundant honour, love, and service. Note, (1.) Even those who perish shall be made to confess God's righteousness, and shall out of their own mouths be condemned. (2.) The end of all the ungodly, and of the persecutors of Christ and his people is, to be miserably destroyed under the consuming wrath of an offended God.

6. When, on our Lord's intimating their concern in this parable, they had testified their abhorrence of the thought he suggested of murdering God's Son, Luke xx. 16—19. he assures them this would infallibly be the case: and they had, no doubt, often read the scripture which foretold it, Ps. cxviii. 22. The stone was himself, the Rock on which his church should be built up; the builders were the chief priests and elders, who rejected him, and refused to own him as the Messiah: yet, notwithstanding their malice and infidelity, he must become the headstone of the corner, exalted to be the head of all principalities and powers, and of his church in particular, both of Jews and Gentiles united in one glorious body. And this is the Lord's doing, who, in his predeterminate counsel and foreknowledge, permitted and overruled their wickedness for good, and would, at his resurrection and ascension, thus advance his Son Jesus, and give him a name above every name; and it is marvellous in our eyes; the obduracy of the Jews, the calling of the Gentiles, the rejection of the Messiah, and his exaltation, are all marvellously ordered to advance the Divine glory, to pour confusion on the enemies of the Redeemer, and effectually to secure the salvation of his peculiar people.

7. Christ particularly addressing himself to the chief priests, elders, and people before him, makes a direct application of all he had spoken to their case. The gospel they had rejected should shortly be taken from them, and they abandoned of God, because of their infidelity and impenitence; whilst this word of salvation should be sent to the Gentiles, who would thankfully embrace it, be admitted into the Messiah's kingdom, and approve themselves faithful subjects of it in all holy conversation and godliness. Whosoever therefore among them, offended at the humiliation of Jesus, through ignorance or prejudice rejected him as the Messiah, shall be broken, as a man that stumbles against a stone: but whosoever, in his state of exaltation, obstinately persist in their malice against him, shall be crushed in pieces by him as under the fall of a mighty rock. Note, They who will not bow to the sceptre of a Redeemer's grace, must miserably perish under the iron rod of his judgments.

Lastly, The chief priests and Pharisees could not mistake his meaning; they plainly perceived the drift of his parables and discourse, and saw it expressly levelled against them, out of their own mouths drawing their condemnation, and confirming the sentence of wrath and reprobacy against them; but so hardened were they, that, instead of instantly humbling their souls that they might avert the threatened vengeance, they were so enraged that they would instantly have laid violent hands upon him, and probably have murdered him on the spot: but the fear of the people restrained them, who, taking Jesus for a prophet, would at present have interposed for his rescue; they were therefore constrained to defer their revenge to a more convenient season.

Note, (1.) The word of God is powerful and penetrating, and conscience will make the application, Thou art the man. (2.) They who are not corrected by reproof, must be exasperated thereby. (3.) It is a mercy that God hath many ways of restraining men's wickedness, though they have cast off his fear: he can bind them with human fetters, when they refuse to be governed by his divine law.

CHAP. XXII.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

This chapter is a continuation of Christ's discourses in the temple, two or three days before he died: his discourses then are largely recorded, as being of special weight and consequence. In this chapter we have, 1. Instructions given, by the parable of the marriage-supper concerning the rejection of the Jews and calling of the Gentiles, ver. 1—10. and, by the doom of the guest that had not the wedding-garment, the danger of hypocrisy in the profession of Christianity, ver. 11—14. 2. Disputes with the Pharisees, Sadducees, and Scribes, who opposed Christ. (1.) Concerning paying tribute to Cæsar, ver. 15—22. (2.) Concerning the resurrection of the dead and the future state, ver. 23—33. (3.) Concerning the great commandment of the law, ver. 34—40. (4.) Concerning the relation of the Messiah to David, ver. 41—46.

1. AND Jesus answered [a] and spake unto them again by parables, and said, 2. [b] The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son, 3. And sent forth [c] his servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding: and they would not come. 4. Again, he sent forth [d] other servants, saying, Tell them who are bidden, Behold, I have prepared my dinner: my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready: come unto the marriage. 5. [e] But they made light of it, and went their ways, one to his farm, another to his merchandise: 6. [f] And the remnant took his servants, and entreated them spitefully, and slew them. 7. [g] But when the king heard thereof, he was wroth: and he sent forth his armies, and destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city. 8. Then saith he to his servants, The wedding is ready, but [h] they which were bidden were not worthy. 9. [i] Go ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage. 10. [k] So those servants went out into the highways, and gathered together all as many as they found, both bad and good: and the wedding was furnished with guests. 11. And when the king [l] came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on [m] a wedding garment: 12. And he saith unto him, Friend, [n] how camest thou in hither not having a wedding garment? And he [o] was speechless. 13. Then said the king [p] to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness; there shall be weeping [q] and gnashing of teeth. 14. [q] For many are called, but few are chosen.

a Ch. 9. 15—17. & 12. 43—45. & xiii. & 20. 1—14. & 21. 28—44. Luke xiii—xix. ch. 24. 43—51. & 25. 1—29.
b Ch. 3. 2. & 4. 17. & xiii. & 20. 1. & 21. 34, 43. with Luke 14. 16—24. Rev. 19. 7, 9. Song i—viii. Ps. xiv.
c Ch. iii, x. Mark i, iii. Luke i, iii, vi, x. Prov. 9. 2—5. & 1. 20—25. Hos. 11. 2, 7.
d Luke 24. 47. Acts i—ix. Prov. 9. 1—5. & 1. 20—23. Is. 25. 6. ch. xxvi—xxviii. Mark xiv—xvi. Luke xxii.—xxiv. John xviii—xx. & 6. 27—57.
e Gen. 19. 14. Acts 2. 13. Prov. 1. 24, 25. Ps. 81. 11. Heb. 2. 3. ch. 13. 22. 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10.
f 2 Chr. 36. 16. ch. 21. 35. & 23. 34, 37. Acts iv—viii. & xii. & 13. 45. & 14. 4, 5, 19. & 17. 5, 13. & 18. 12. & 20. 3. & 21. 30. & xxii—xxv. 1 Thes. 2. 14, 15.
g Ch. 23. 34—39. & 24. 2—34. Luke 17. 22—37. & 19. 41—44. & 21. 6—33. Heb. 6. 4—8. & 10. 26—31. 1 Thes. 2. 16. 1 Pet. 4. 17, 18. Dan. 9. 26, 27. Luke 13. 14. see ch. 21. 41.
h Acts 3. 26. & 13. 46. ch. 10. 11, 13. Ps. 81. 11.
i Prov. 1. 20—22. & 8. 1—4. ch. 8. 11. & 13. 47. & 21. 41, 43. & 28. 18—20. Mark 16. 15, 16. Luke 24. 47. Acts 1. 7, 8. & 13. 46, 47. Rom. 10. 18. Eph. 3. 8. Rev. 22. 17. Is. 42. 6, 7. & 45. 22. & 55. 1. k Acts x—xix. Rom. 10. 18. & 15. 19. Col. 1. 6, 23. Rev. 7. 9. & 5. 9. ch. 13. 38, 47.
l Luke 19 15. Rev. 2. 23.
m Rom. 13. 14. Rev. 19. 8. & 3. 4, 18. & 16. 15. Is. 61. 10. Luke 15. 22. ch. 6. 33. 1 Cor. 5. 21. Rom. 5. 18. & 2. 22. Ps. 45. 13, 14. Eph. 4. 24. Col. 3. 10, 12. n John 3. 3, 5. ch. 5. 20. Phil. 3. 3, 8, 9.
o Rom. 3. 19. Tit. 3. 11.
p Ch. 3. 12. & 8. 12. & 12. 45. & 21. 41. ver. 7. & 24. 51. & 13. 42. & 25. 30. 2 Pet. 2. 17. Jude 6, 13. 2 Thes. 1. 9.
q Ch. 20. 16. & 19. 30. Mark 10. 31. Luke 7. 29. & 12. 32. & 13. 24—30. ch. 7. 13, 14. & 8. 11, 12.

Verses 1—14. This parable is in import much the same as the foregoing, showing the rejection of the Jewish people for their obstinate infidelity, and the calling of the Gentiles consequent thereupon.

The gospel dispensation is compared to a magnificent entertainment made by a king on the marriage of his son, which represents the rich provision made for poor sinners, and the gracious invitation sent to them by the great Bridegroom of his church, Christ Jesus, the Son of the eternal King. We have,

1. The rich provision made on this occasion. The oxen and fatlings are killed, with all that vast abundance which became the royal table; signifying those spiritual blessings which a poor and perishing sinner needs, such as the pardon of sin, acceptance with God as righteous, a sense of his love, the comforts and graces of the Holy Ghost, spiritual supports to carry him through the journey of time, and the glorious hope of the enjoyment of God in eternity. And these afford the richest feast for a sinful soul.

2. The repeated calls sent to those who had been invited, urging their attendance. Thus in particular the Lord sent out the seventy disciples to call the Jewish people: and, when they refused to hearken, he again, after his resurrection, sent forth his apostles and evangelists, with greater vehemence to urge their coming, having now perfected the redemption of his people by the one oblation of himself, and fully obtained for them all spiritual blessings in heavenly things. He invited them therefore once more to join themselves to the Lord, and take him as their Covenant head and glorious Bridegroom. And thus in general, by his ministers to the end of time, doth the Lord send forth his gracious invitations to miserable sinners, entreating them to come and secure their own happiness, be reconciled to God, and partake of the gospel feast, where all things are ready which they can wish or need: where Jesus is ready to receive them, the Father to pardon and bless them, the Spirit to comfort and strengthen them. Well therefore may we with earnestness beseech men, as they value all that is dear to them, Come unto the marriage.

3. The folly and wickedness of those who were invited appear in striking colours; at first in a careless and insolent refusal of the favour done them; and afterwards, when expostulated with, and again entreated to comply, by a contemptuous treatment of the message, and a more cruel treatment of the messengers: some slighted and despised the offer, preferring their worldly avocations, and pretending more necessary engagements: whilst others, provoked with the importunity of the servants, not only insulted and reviled them, but even in a rage imbrued their hands in their blood. Thus it happened to the first preachers of the gospel: the Jewish people slighted their admonitions, and, instead of hearkening to the word of salvation, were the bitter persecutors and murderers of those who preached it. Nor were they singular herein. The same invitation hath ever since, to this very day, met with very much of the like treatment. Many continue to make light of Christ: negligent about the concerns of their immortal souls: their pleasures, their gains, their worldly engagements, occupy all their hearts, and they have neither leisure nor inclination to mind the concerns of religion. They are engrossed with the cares of life, and anxious about so many other things, that they pretend they cannot attend to the one thing needful. Thus thousands turn their backs on Christ; their farm and their merchandise occupy them wholly, and the calls of the gospel find no entrance into their deaf ears. Whilst others, exasperated at being disturbed in their sinful pursuits by the zealous ministers of God, hate and revile them, and would, but for human restraints, renew the former persecutions. They who preach the gospel must expect to suffer for it.

4. The offended monarch, in righteous wrath, to vindicate his honour and avenge his servants' wrongs, sent forth his armies, destroyed these murderers, and burnt up their city. The Roman armies, at God's command, thus destroyed the Jewish nation, and burnt up Jerusalem, as the punishment due to them for rejecting and murdering their Messiah and his ministers. And the like vengeance awaits all that obey not the gospel, and persecute the preachers of it: wrath will shortly come upon them to the uttermost.

5. The calling of the Gentiles was a consequence of the rejection of the Jews. God's feast shall not be prepared in vain. When they who were first bidden, therefore, by their refusal were judged unworthy a place in his kingdom, he sent forth his servants into the heathen world, with a general invitation to preach the gospel to every creature. Which commission they readily executed, inviting all of every rank and station, and sinners of every degree, to come to Jesus Christ, with assurances of a ready welcome from him. And thus the Christian church was filled with an innumerable multitude of converts; some really and truly turned to God, others but false-hearted and hypocritical professors. Note, (1.) Christ will have a church and people in the world, however many reject his gospel. (2.) The invitation is general. God indeed knoweth those that are his: we do not; therefore must preach the gospel to every creature. (3.) Under the dispensation of grace by Jesus Christ, all petty distinctions between one sinner and another are in a manner abolished: as the least sinner must eternally perish without it; the greatest have a full and free redemption offered in him. No man perishes through the greatness of his sins, but through his unbelief and neglect of the gospel. (4.) The visible church is a mixed multitude, and will continue so till the great day of separation; we may expect to find in it bad, as well as good.

6. The discovery, conviction, and condemnation of hypocrites in the church, is represented by the king's visit to his guests; where observing one without a wedding garment (which probably might be provided for the guests on these occasions, and therefore the neglect was criminal, especially if he preferred his rags before the bright garments which lay ready for him) he addressed him with a startling inquiry, how he dared intrude himself there without a wedding-garment: and, speechless at the question, his silence confessed his guilt. Shackled therefore as a malefactor, the king commands him to be dragged from the room illuminated for the bridal feast, and thrust into the darkness without, to bewail, with unavailing expressions of bitter anguish, his presumption, sin, and folly. Where we may observe, (1.) The particular notice the Lord takes of those who profess to believe in him: he trieth the heart. Hypocrisy may deceive men, but not God. The day will come when the false-hearted shall be detected, either by sifting providences in this world, or at the appearing of the king upon his throne. May we now so judge ourselves, that we may not then be judged of the Lord! (2.) The wedding-garment here seems to be the righteousness of our Redeemer, provided for us to put on. And it is our sin, and will be our ruin, that through ignorance we know not the want of it, or through pride reject it, and dare to appear before God in the filthy rags of our own righteousness, which cannot cover our shame. (3.) They must needs be speechless in the day of God, who in profession have joined in the outward ordinances, whilst their faith hath never put on Christ, nor their hearts been conformed to his image. (4.) Hypocrites in the church will receive the sorest damnation in eternal torments, doomed to suffer agonies unutterable and inconceivable, and filled with the most excruciating rage, horror, and despair.

7. The parable concludes with the repetition of the observation Christ had made before, that many are called, but few chosen. An alarming notice to examine ourselves whether we be in the faith; how we came in to the Lord's table; what garments we are clothed with; and how we can bear the Master's piercing eye.

15. ¶ [r] Then went the Pharisees, and took counsel how they might entangle him in his talk. 16. And they sent out unto him their disciples, with the [s] Herodians, * saying, [t] Master, we know that thou art true, and [u] teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man; for thou regardest not the person of men. 17. [x] Tell us therefore, What thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute unto Cesar, or not? 18. But [y] Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why [z] tempt ye me, ye hypocrites? 19. Shew me the tribute money. And they brought unto him a [a] penny. 20. And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and † superscription? 21. They say unto him, Cesar's. Then saith he unto them, [b] Render therefore unto Cesar the things which are Cesar's; and unto God the things that are God's. 22. When they had heard these words, they [c] marvelled, and left him, and went their way.

[r] Mark 12. 13—17. Luke 20. 20—26. & 11. 53. Ps. 2. 2. Jer. 18. 18. Eccl. 4. 4. Job 5. 2. Mic. 2. 1.

[s] Ch. 16. 6. Mark 8. 15.

* Probably the partisans of Herod Antipas, tetrarch of Galilee.

[t] Ch. 26. 49, 50. Ps. 12. 2. & 55. 21.

[u] 2 Cor. 2. 17. 1 Thes. 2. 4. Gal. 1. 10. Acts 10. 34, 35.

[x] Ezra 4. 13. Acts 5. 37. Jer. 42. 2, 3.

[y] See ch. 16. 8. John 2. 25.

[z] Ch. 12. 38. & 19. 3. Luke 11. 16, 54.

[a] A denarius, in value sevenpence three farthings. Ch. 20. 2. & 18. 28. Rev. 6. 6.

† Or inscription.

[b] Ch. 17. 25. Rom. 13. 7. Prov. 24. 21. 1 Pet. 2. 17.

[c] Ver. 33, 4. 1 Cor. 1. 19, 20. Job 5. 12, 13.

Verses 15—22. Ceaseless in their designs of malice, the Pharisees, associated with the Herodians, endeavoured to entangle him in his talk, and, by some captious subject of dispute, to draw from him some expression whereon to found an accusation against him. So little can the purest innocence, or the most faultless integrity, screen us from the malevolence of wicked men.

The Herodians are thought to be a sect of the Jews who were the partisans of Herod, and were zealous for the Roman government and the payment of the tribute; whilst the Pharisees, and the rest of the nation abhorred the yoke, and hardly could brook this ignominious badge of servitude. They were therefore proper instruments on the present occasion.

1. The question they put to our Lord was, whether it was lawful to pay tribute to Cesar, or not? And they concluded this would necessarily involve him in a dilemma. Should he deny the lawfulness of paying tribute, straightway the Herodians would accuse him to the government as a rebel and incendiary: should he affirm it, the Pharisees thought he would immediately exasperate the people, and give them the wished for opportunity to destroy him. Note, It hath been the old practice of Satan's emissaries to lay snares for God's servants, and, by catching an unguarded expression, by wilful mistake or designed misrepresentation to blacken and abuse them. But there is one who heareth and judgeth.

2. To cover this insidious design, they use the deepest expression of respect. As if conscientiously disposed to follow the path of duty, and highly venerating Christ's wisdom and piety, they desired his directions for their conduct, persuaded that, being a teacher come from God, no frown nor fear of man would sway his determinations. Note, (1.) The fairest professions often cloak the foulest designs. (2.) Their character of Christ should be the pattern for all his ministers. Faithful and true to God themselves, no fear nor flattery must tempt them to conceal any thing of the whole counsel of God from others; but, regardless of men's persons, with zeal and simplicity they must discharge their commission, and speak the truth as it is in Jesus.

3. Christ baffles their craft, and disappoints their designs. He knew the secret wickedness they meditated, and by his question, which showed his knowledge of their hearts, reproved their hypocrisy: Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites? Show me the tribute-money. Out of their own mouths he would silence them, and answer them with their own confessions; for, producing to him a penny, a silver Roman coin, he demanded whose image and superscription it bore: and they replied, Cesar's, he answered, Render therefore unto Cesar the things that are Cesar's. As the coining of money was the royal prerogative, the circulation of such coin implied subjection to the person whose image it bore; there could be no doubt therefore but that, if Cesar's money was regarded as the current coin of the land, there could be no unlawfulness in rendering him the tribute which bore his image, in return for the protection and administration of the civil government which they received from him. And this interfered not with their religious duties: they must render also unto God the things which are God's. Thus neither could the civil government have cause to be offended, nor the Pharisees be able to excuse him without condemning themselves. Note, (1.) When we have to deal with crafty adversaries, we need be wise as serpents, whilst we are harmless as doves. (2.) The mask of hypocrites, however naturally painted, cannot impose upon him who trieth the heart. Their hope of concealment is delusion; and whilst they tempt him they destroy themselves. (3.) Captious questions should have a cautious answer, that, if possible, they who come to insnare us may be confounded themselves. (4.) It is reasonable we should pay tribute to the government from which we receive protection. Christ's servants must on principle be loyal subjects. But, though Cesar has our tribute, God must have our hearts. (5.) We must submit to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: but if human injunctions contradict divine commands, God must be obeyed, and we must be content to suffer.

4. Though confounded with his reply, they could not but admire his wisdom; and, defeated in their purpose, they retired with shame as baffled foes, unable to find the least ground for accusation against him. May the Lord ever endue his ministers with the like wisdom, and enable them to disappoint the malice of those who lie in wait for an occasion against them!

23. ¶ [d] The same day came to him the Sadducees, which say that there is no resurrection, * and asked him, 24. Saying, Master, [e] Moses said, If a man die, having no children, his brother shall marry his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother. 25. Now there were with us seven brethren: and the first, when he had married a wife, deceased, and, having no issue, left his wife unto his brother: 26. Likewise the second also, and the third, unto the seventh. 27. And last of all the woman died also. 28. Therefore in the resurrection whose wife shall she be of the seven? for they all had her. 29. Jesus answered and said unto them, Ye do err, [f] not knowing the scriptures, [g] nor the power of God. 30. For [h] in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven. 31. But, as touching the resurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, saying, 32. [i] I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? † God is not the † God of the dead, but of the living. 33. And [k] when the multitude heard this, they were astonished at his doctrine.

d Mark 12. 18—27. Luke 20. 27—39. with Acts 23. 6, 8. 1 Cor. 15. 12. 2 Tim. 2. 17.

* Campbell renders the phrase in the original, who say that there is no future life.

e Deut. 23. 5, 6. Gen. 38. 8.

f Is. 8. 20. & 27. 11. & 28. 9, 10. Hos. 4. 4, 6. & 8. 12. John 20. 31. Rom. 15. 4. 2 Tim. 3. 15—17. with Job 19. 25, 26. Ezek. 37. 5—10. Dan. 12. 2.

g Gen. 18. 14. Jer. 32. 17. ch. 18. 26. Luke 1. 37. Phil. 3. 21. Acts 26. 8.

h Luke 20. 36. 1 Cor. 7. 29, 30. & 15. 42, 44, 49, 52. 1 John 3. 2. John 5. 29.

i Exod. 3. 6, 10. Gen. 17. 7. & 28. 21. & 32. 9. Lev. 26. 12. Acts 7. 32. Heb. 11. 16. Mark 12. 26. Luke 20. 37, 38.

† Or God is not a god, &c.

k Ch. 7. 28, 29. Mark 6. 2. Luke 4. 22.

Verses 23—33. The Pharisees and Herodians being foiled, the Sadducees next resolve to take the field of controversy against him. They utterly denied a future state, the existence of angels or spirits, and the resurrection of the dead: and thought they could propose a question to our Lord which it would puzzle him to decide.

1. They stated a case (whether real or imaginary was not material) founded on the Mosaical institutions, concerning the widow of a man who died childless, whose brother, according to the law, Deut. xxv. 5. was obliged to marry her, and raise up an heir to the inheritance of the deceased. The question they proposed therefore was, if a woman successively married seven brothers, and, having no children by either, at last died herself, whose wife she shall be at the resurrection, since all could claim the same title to her. They thought thus to lead our Lord to join them in denying a resurrection: or to reduce him to own his ignorance, or to make a decision they could prove to be absurd, and unsupported by reason or Scripture.

2. Christ rectifies their mistake, reproves their ignorance, and shows their objection against a resurrection to be fallacious: they erred, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God. The Scriptures declare there shall be a resurrection, Job xix. 26. Ezek. xxxvii. Dan. xii. 2. and though the collection of the scattered atoms of the human body appears ever so difficult, it is not beyond the almighty power of God to effect. Besides, their ideas of a future state were false and carnal. There will be no occasion there for marriage, to perpetuate inheritances, or to keep up a succession of names, or to minister to our comforts, or alleviate our cares; but all will be in heaven as the angels of God, perfectly pure and spiritual, and happy as those glorious ministers which surround the throne of God. But our Lord rests not in confuting their mistakes: he supports the truth by unanswerable arguments, drawn even from the Pentateuch, the sacred authority of which books they themselves admitted. Now, concerning the resurrection of the dead, they must needs remember what God himself declared at that memorable occasion when he appeared to Moses in the burning bush, Exod. iii. 6. where he said, I am the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, though these patriarchs were long since dead. He saith not, I was, but I am, he standing towards them still in the same relation: and as his being their God implies some peculiarly great and glorious advantages thence accruing, but these holy men, during all their lives, were strangers and pilgrims on the earth, exercised with various troubles and afflictions, therefore it follows, there must be a future state, where their eternal reward awaits them. Besides, God is not the God of the dead, but of the living. Had these patriarchs ceased to be when their bodies died, God could not with any propriety be said to continue in the same covenant relation to them as before. He being their God, proves them still alive; and the existence therefore of their souls as immortal is evident; but he was not only the God of their souls, but of the men in their whole persons. As therefore their souls now live, their bodies will be quickened also; else would he be still the God of the dead: the resurrection of the body, as well as the immortality of the soul, therefore, is here supposed, and the argument conclusive against the tenets of the Sadducees. Note, (1.) The cause of all our grand errors is our ignorance of the Scriptures. (2.) Many things appear to the eye of sense impossible, which the eye of faith that looks to the promises and power of God, sees not only possible, but sure and certain. (3.) They who have the Lord for their God need not wish for more: he will be their eternal portion and exceeding great reward.

3. The Sadducees were silenced, the multitude astonished; they had never before heard the eternal happiness of the righteous, the immortality of the soul, and the resurrection from the dead, so nobly defended and proved.

34. ¶ [l] But when the Pharisees had heard that he had put the Sadducees to silence, they were gathered together. 35. Then one of them, which was a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, and saying, 36. [m] Master, which is the great commandment in the law? 37. Jesus said unto him, [n] Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. 38. This is the first and great commandment. 39. And the second is like unto it, [o] Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. 40. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.

l Mark 12. 28—34. Luke 10. 25—28. see ver. 15.

m Ch. 7. 21. Ps. 12. 2. & 55. 21. ch. 26. 49, 50. ver. 16.

n Deut. 6. 5. & 10. 12. & 30. 6. Luke 10. 27. Prov. 23. 26. Mark 12. 30, 33. 1 Tim. 1. 5.

o Lev. 19. 18. Rom. 13. 9. Gal. 5. 14. 1 Tim. 1. 5. Jam. 2. 8. Luke 10. 27, 36, 37. 1 John 3. 18. ch. 7. 12.

Verses 34—40. The Pharisees here again return to the charge; and grieved, probably, he should be able to silence those whom they could not, consulted together how to put a stop to his increasing reputation, which so eclipsed their own. They who greatly shine must expect to be greatly envied. They resolved once more to try their skill, and by a question, which had afforded much disputation among themselves, endeavour, if they can, to draw something from him of which they still hoped to make their advantage.

1. The question was, Which is the great commandment of the law? some esteeming it to be circumcision; others, the observation of the sabbath; others, the wearing the phylacteries. And should he determine the question in favour of any one party of disputants, the rest would probably have been offended with the decision.

2. His answer carries evidence and conviction along with it. The first and great commandment is the perfect love of God; and the next, the loving our neighbour as ourselves; these two commandments comprise the whole moral law, with all the duties enforced by the prophets; and to be obedient to these, this divine principle of love can alone engage us. These commandments still continue in full force; and in the practical exercise of these consists all vital religion: for though we are not under the law, that we should expect life from our obedience, nor capable of discharging perfectly these just and holy precepts; yet we are bound to set them before us as our rule of duty, and by the gospel faith, which worketh by love, shall be enabled in a measure to walk as Christ also walked, humbly following, though unable to attain unto the perfection of his bright example. Note, (1.) We must love the Lord our God. We must first believe that he is our God, our reconciled God in Jesus Christ, and then love will be the immediate effect: this will produce a hearty obedience to his commands, and unreserved submission to his providence. The love of God will make us count none of his commands grievous, and reckon every dispensation righteous, just, and good. (2.) The love of our neighbours follows. They must be dear to us as we are to ourselves: their persons, property, characters, be regarded as our own, and we should be ready by every good word and work to do them service, wish them every blessing, and desire to act towards them, in every situation, as we could reasonably expect they should behave to us if they were in our circumstances. The more we appear under the influence of these divine precepts, the more we shall show of the spirit and power of true Christianity.

41. ¶ [p] While the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them, 42. Saying, What think ye of Christ? whose son is he? They say unto him, [q] The son of David. 43. He saith unto them, How then doth David [r] in spirit call him Lord, saying, 44. [s] The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool? 45. If David then call him Lord, how is he his son? 46. [t] And no man was able to answer him a word, neither durst any man from that day forth ask him any more questions.

p Mark 12. 35—37. Luke 19. 41—44. ver. 15, 34.

q Is. 7. 14. & 9. 6, 7. & 11. 1—4. Jer. 23. 5, 6. Ezek. 34. 23, 24. & 37. 24.

r 2 Sam. 23. 2. 2 Pet. 1. 21. Acts 1. 16. & 2. 30.

s Ps. 110. 1. Acts 2. 34. 1 Cor. 15. 25. Heb. 1. 3, 13. & 10. 12, 13. Eph. 1. 20—22. with Rev. 22. 16. Rom. 1. 3. & 9. 5.

t Mark 12. 34. Luke 14. 6. & 20. 40.

Verses 41—46. Having thus silenced all his opponents, our Lord is now pleased to put a question in turn to those who had so often tempted him. And he did it when they were gathered together to consult how to insnare him, that his triumph over them might be more distinguished.

1. The question seemed so plain that a child might answer it. What think ye of Christ? whose son is he? And they have their reply ready, little imagining in what difficulties it would involve them. They say unto him, the son of David. So far were they right. The Scripture had thus determined, Ps. lxxxix. 35, 36. Isa. ix. 7. xi. 1. It is a question we should be seriously concerned to answer, What we think of his person, offices, undertaking; and whether he is a Christ to us, a Saviour to the uttermost.

2. From their answer our Lord proposes to them another question of more difficult solution. How is the Messiah's being David's son reconcileable with his being David's Lord? for such the Psalmist acknowledges him, when, speaking under divine inspiration, Ps. cx. 1. he saith, The Lord, God the Father, said unto my Lord, the divine Messiah, Sit thou at my right hand, exalted to the throne of the Majesty in the heavens, till I make thine enemies thy footstool; for so long will he reign till every foe is destroyed, and the kingdoms of the world become the kingdoms of the Lord and of his Christ. If David then call him Lord, acknowledging him his superior, and a divine Person, how is he his son? and to descend from him as man?

3. This question quite puzzled them. They seemed to have been ignorant of the divine character of the Messiah; they regarded him as a mere man, and understood not the union of God and man in one Christ; or, if they knew it, they were not willing to acknowledge his Deity, and choose to be silent rather than reply. Perceiving now how unequal a match they all together were for his superior wisdom, they durst not encounter him with any more insnaring questions, and avoided any farther disputes, which they found must issue in their shame. Note, Many are silenced without being convinced; have their arguments confuted while their hearts still remain unconverted.

CHAP. XXIII.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

Christ here, 1. Cautions his disciples against the pride and hypocrisy of the Scribes and Pharisees, ver. 1—12. 2. He denounces woes against them for their sins, ver. 13—33. 3. He foretells the ruin of Jerusalem, ver. 34—39.

1. THEN spake Jesus to the multitude, and to his disciples, 2. Saying, [a] The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat: 3. [b] All therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do; [c] but do not ye after their works: for they say and do not. 4. [d] For they bind heavy burdens, and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers. 5. [e] But all their works they do for to be seen of men: [f] they make broad their * phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments, 6. [g] And love the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues, 7. And greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, † Rabbi, Rabbi. 8. [h] But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren. 9. And call no man your father upon the earth: [i] for one is your Father, which is in heaven. 10. Neither be ye called masters: for one is your Master, even Christ. 11. [k] But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant. 12. [l] And whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted.

[a] Ch. 2. 4. ver. 13, 15, 23, 27, 29. Neh. 8. 4. Deut. 33. 5. Perhaps it meaus, that they were civil governors, as Moses was.

[b] Rom. 13. 1. Tit. 3. 1. Is. 8. 20. John 5. 39.

[c] Tim. 3. 5. Tit. 1. 16. Rom. 2. 1, 2, 17—25.

[d] Luke 11. 46. Is. 10. 1. Acts 15. 10. Gal. 6. 13.

[e] Ch. 6. 1, 2, 5, 16. They impose troublesome rites on others, while they neglect them themselves.

[f] Num. 15. 38, 39. Deut. 22. 12. & 6. 8. Prov. 3. 3.

* Scraps of parchment, with some sentences of the law written on them, fastened to their forehead or hand.

[g] Mark 12. 28, 39. Luke 11. 43. & 20. 46. 3 John 9. Prov. 16. 18. & 29. 23 Hab. 2. 4.

† Heb. My master, or great one.

[h] Jam. 3. 1. 1 Cor. 3. 4. with ch. 17. 5. 2 Cor. 1. 24. 1 Pet. 5. 3, 4.

[i] Mal. 1. 6. John 6. 45. ch. 5. 16, 43. & 6. 1, 4, 6, 9, 14, 18, 26, 32. & 7. 11. & 13. 43. & 19. 17.

[k] Ch. 20. 26, 27. & 18. 3, 4. & 11. 29. John 13. 12—17. Phil. 2. 4—8. Heb. 5. 8.

[l] Luke 14. 11. & 18. 14. Dan. 4. 37. Job 22. 29. Prov. 29. 23. Luke 1. 51, 52. Jam. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 5. Prov. 15. 33.

Verses 1—12. Among all the Jewish sects the Pharisees maintained the most distinguished rank, for their reputed wisdom and piety; their specious appearance of religion, and external attention to the forms of godliness, obtained them so high a character, that it was usually said, if but two men reached heaven, one of them would be a Pharisee. Yet none ever fell under more censures from Christ than these reputed patterns of sanctity, because indeed they were the most inveterate enemies of him and his gospel: as those of a like stamp ever have been, and will be to the end of time. Their religion was outside; their hearts, enmity against God, filled with pride, self-righteousness, love of esteem, worldly-mindedness, and hatred to the power of internal, vital godliness. Whom the world therefore admired as the best sort of people in it, God abhorred as the worst, as the farthest from his kingdom and righteousness. And the case is the same to this very day. Against these whited sepulchres Christ therefore cautions his disciples.

1. He honours the office they bore as expositors of the law, who sat in Moses' seat, and read and interpreted in the synagogues the sacred oracles to the people. And so far as they spoke agreeably to the Scriptures they were to be attended to, and their word to be observed and done. Note, (1.) The most sacred and honourable offices in the church have often been filled by the worst of men. Yet ought not this to bring any dishonour upon the ministry itself, or prejudice us against the order, that many who are a scandal to the name they bear, have thrust themselves into it. (2.) When wicked men preach sound truth, their word is to be received, whilst their works are abhorred. Though example is most forcible to persuade: and it can hardly be expected, that they should convince others who do not themselves appear to believe the very doctrines they preach.

2. He brands the men who lived so unsuitably to the word they taught, and cautions the people to beware of imitating them. Do not after their works: for they say and do not. They boasted indeed of the purity of their morals, as well as the orthodoxy of their sentiments; but the one was as corrupt as the other was culpable. Several things our Lord charges upon them.

[1.] Their hypocrisy. They were very strict preachers of the law, and rigid in enforcing the additions made by their vain traditions, laying upon men's consciences burdens intolerable, whilst they themselves dispensed with their own observance of them, and their practice gave the lie to their preaching. Note, Many preachers pretend the greatest zeal for morality whose lives show the laxest morals; and who must therefore be damned upon their own showing.

[2.] Their formality, and desire of human applause. Their religion consisted of outside; and to make a fair show before men, was their great ambition. Instead of internal spirituality, and meditation on God's word, they made broad their phylacteries, these were scrolls of parchment, on which select portions of the law were written, sewed up in the skin of a clean beast, and hung at their arms, and over their foreheads: and by their uncommon breadth they meant to insinuate their uncommon zeal for the law. And they enlarge the borders of their garments; not only conforming to the precept, Num. xv. 38—40. but affecting by the width of their fringes, to show their distinguished sanctity, and observance of the command. So true it is still, that the most zealous contenders for the form of godliness are often the greatest strangers to the power of it, and the loudest devotees but mere sounding brass and tinkling cymbals.

[3.] Their pride and affectation of pre-eminence. They coveted always the most distinguished place at an entertainment; and even in the synagogues, where they assembled for religious worship, the same desire of precedency appeared in their choice of the chief seats, as if their business there was more to make a figure themselves, than to pay their humble adorations. In like manner they affected sounding titles of respect, and, when they appeared in public, they loved to have deep homage paid them, and to be addressed with Rabbi, Rabbi! that others might hear and observe their importance and dignity. Note, (1.) There is no harm in giving or receiving titles of honour to whom honour is due: but to take a pleasure in hearing the sound, to be puffed up with the title, and to be offended at the omission of it, these mark detestable pride. (2.) Nothing can show a stronger tincture of Pharisaism, than coming to God's house to seek our own glory, and to be more anxious in what pew we are placed, than with what spirit we worship.

3. He forbids his disciples to challenge for themselves, or ascribe to others, any such pompous names as the scribes assumed. They must not be called, Rabbi, affecting human honour, or any title importing dominion over the faith or consciences of their brethren: nor must they be styled, Master, as if upon their own authority they set up for guides and leaders; but must own one Master only, that is Christ, whose word alone must be their rule, whilst they, as brethren, arrogated no supremacy over each other, alike submissive to their common head. Nor may they give flattering titles to any; calling no man Father upon the earth. Not that this forbids us honouring our natural parents, or those who have begotten us in the gospel, or paying due reverence to age or dignity; but we must regard no man as the founder of our religion, or as the head of the church, to whom, in matters of conscience, we owe implicit obedience, this being the sole prerogative of our God and Father, whose throne is in the heavens; but if any man among them excelled in gifts or graces, or was esteemed and preferred to a more honourable place in the church than others, far from being puffed up with his eminence, he is required to be the more condescending and laborious, employing himself the more zealously and humbly for the benefit of his fellow-christians. And our Lord subjoins the most forcible argument to support what he had advanced, Whosoever shall exalt himself, grow proud, imperious, and assuming over his brethren, shall be abased, either in penitent humiliation, when brought to a sight of his sin, in this world, or be covered with confusion in the more awful day of Christ's appearing: whilst he that humbleth himself in every work and labour of love, and in a lowly sense of his own deep unworthiness, he shall be exalted in the eyes of God and all good men, and that both now and for ever.

13. ¶ But [m] woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in. 14. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! [n] for ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayer: therefore ye shall receive the [o] greater damnation. 15. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye [p] compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made, ye make him ‡ twofold more the child of hell than yourselves. 16. Woe unto you, [q] ye blind guides, which say, [r] Whosoever shall swear by the temple, it is nothing; but whosoever shall swear by the gold of the temple, he is a debtor! 17. [s] Ye fools and blind! for whether is greater, the gold, [t] or the temple that sanctifieth the gold? 18. And, Whosoever shall swear by the altar, it is nothing; but whosoever sweareth by the gift that is upon it, he is ‖ guilty. 19. Ye fools and blind! for whether is greater, the gift, or the altar that [u] sanctifieth the gift? 20. Whoso therefore shall swear by the altar, sweareth by it, and by all things thereon. 21. And whoso shall swear by the temple, sweareth by it, and by [x] him that dwelleth therein. 22. And he that shall swear by heaven, sweareth by the throne of God, and by [y] him that sitteth thereon. 23. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! [z] for ye pay tithe of mint, and anise, and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone. 24. [a] Ye blind guides, which [b] strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel. 25. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! [c] for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess. 26. Thou [d] blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also. 27. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are [e] like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness. 28. Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity. 29. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! because [f] ye build the tombs of the prophets, and garnish the sepulchres of the righteous, 30. And say, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them [g] in the blood of the prophets. 31. Wherefore [h] ye be witnesses unto yourselves, that ye are [i] the children of them which killed the prophets. 32. [k] Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers. 33. [l] Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?

m Luke 11. 52. Ezek. 22. 25. 2 Tim. 3. 6. Tit. 1. 11. ye hinder men from believing the gospel, as well as reject it yourselves.

n Mark 12. 40. Luke 20. 47. 2 Tim. 3. 5, 6. Tit. 1. 11. Job 22. 9. i. e. rob them of their property.

o Ch. 11. 22, 24. Luke 12. 47.

p Gal. 4. 17. 2 Tim. 3. 6. Acts 13. 45. & 14. 2, 19. & 17. 5, 6, 13.

‡ More furiously mad against the gospel.

q Is. 56. 10, 11. ch. 15. 14.

r Ch. 5. 33, 34. Jam. 5. 12. Jer. 5. 7. Ezek. 21. 23. They pretended that a man's oath by the temple did not bind him unless he swore by the consecrated treasures of the temple.

s Ch. 3. 7. & 12. 34. John 8. 44. Acts 13. 10. & 23. 3. with ch. 5. 22.

t Exod. 30. 29. & 29. 37. ver. 19.

‖ Or debtor, or bound.

u Ver. 17. Exod. 29. 37.

x 1 Kin. 8. 13. 2 Chr. 7. 2. & 6. 2. Ps. 26. 8. & 132. 13, 14.

y Ch. 5. 34. Is. 57. 15. & 66. 1. Rev. 4. 2, 3. Dan. 7. 9. Acts 7. 49.

z Luke 11. 42. with ch. 9. 13. & 12. 7. 1 Sam. 15. 22. Hos. 6. 6. Prov. 21. 3. Mic. 6. 7. Gal. 5. 22, 23.

a See ver. 16, 17.

b Ver. 23. ch. 15. 2—6. John 18. 28, 40. they scrupled to commit lesser sins, and indulged themselves in greater.

c Luke 11. 39. Mark 7. 4. ch. 15. 19, 20.

d Get your hearts sanctified, that your life may be holy. Luke 11. 41. Jer. 4. 14. & 13. 27. Jam. 4. 8. 1 Cor. 6. 11, 20. Tit. 1. 15. Heb. 10. 22.

e Luke 11. 44. Acts 23. 3. ch. 7. 15, 21. Is. 58. 2. Ezek. 33. 31. 2 Tim. 3. 5. Tit. 1. 16.

f Luke 11. 47—51.

g Ver. 34, 37. 2 Chr. 36. 15, see ch. 21. 35, 36. & 22. 6.

h Josh. 24. 22. Luke 19. 22. Job 15. 5, 6. Ps. 64. 3

i Acts 7. 51, 52. 1 Thes. 2. 15. 2 Chr. 36. 16.

k 1 Thes. 2. 16. Gen. 15. 16. Num. 32. 14. Ps. 69. 27.

l Ch. 3. 7. & 12. 34. John 8. 44. Is. 1. 15. Heb. 2. 3. & 10. 29. & 12. 25, 26.

Verses 13—33. Like Ezekiel's bitter roll, we have here repeated fearful woes, like so many bolts of thunder levelled against these proud self-righteous Pharisees. The general charge against them is their being hypocrites, proved in a variety of particulars; and this being the character God especially abhors, we should be the more jealous over our own souls, that this rank weed of bitterness spring not up under the profession of godliness, and mar the whole.

1. Pretending to be teachers of the law, and possessed of the key of knowledge, instead of explaining the spiritual meaning of all the typical rites, as pointing to Christ; or the purport of the prophecies which related to him; they studiously sought to pervert both; commenting upon them in such a way as most entirely to overturn the true nature of the Messiah's office and kingdom, and led the people to rest on the shadows instead of the substance. Envenomed enemies to the gospel, they turned a deaf ear to all Christ advanced in proof of his own divine character and mission, and not only rejected him themselves, but used their utmost efforts, employing all their influence, their example, and their cunning, to prejudice the people against him and his gospel; reviling his person, doctrine, and miracles, and thundering out their anathemas against those who should profess to receive him as the Messiah.

2. They made the cloak of religion subservient to the basest purposes of gain and avarice; insinuating themselves into the confidence of helpless widows, on whom, by their long prayers and affected show of devotion, they imposed, and who, supposing their piety great as the appearances of it, intrusted them with the management of their affairs, and were directed by their advice, by which means, taking advantage of their superstition and credulity, they fleeced them of their substance, and enriched themselves with the spoil of the most cruel inhumanity, as well as basest injustice; for which, though they might escape the censures of men, God, the all-seeing Judge, would surely give them greater damnation in the day of recompense. Note, (1.) The vilest wickedness may sometimes be so shaded by craft, as to elude the eye of human observation. 2. The appearance of godliness put on to cover worldly designs, is in God's account the most atrocious of crimes. (3.) Long prayers are not always culpable; it is only when they are for a pretence, that they become an abomination. (4.) There are degrees of misery in hell: some shall receive greater damnation than others, and the most dreadful vengeance of all shall light on the hypocrite's head.

3. They exerted the greatest zeal to make proselytes from the Gentiles, in order to heighten their own reputation, and strengthen their party, and stuck at no pains to succeed in their attempts; which, when they had done, they abused the ascendency they obtained over the consciences of their converts to instil the most virulent prejudices into them against Christ and his gospel; making them more bigotted than themselves to the vain traditions of the elders, and more bitter persecutors, even than their masters, of the disciples of Jesus, see Acts xiii. 45. xiv. 2—19. xvii. 5. xviii. 6. Thus their pretended conversion served to render them but twofold more the children of hell than themselves. Note, (1.) Every impenitent sinner and hypocrite is a child of hell, of his father the devil, and doomed to dwell with him eternally. But of these some show greater malignity against Christ and his gospel than others, and these are such usually as fancy themselves converted, and are the strictest observers of the forms and ceremonies of religion. (2.) The industry these Pharisees used to gain proselytes in so bad a cause, should condemn our negligence and want of zeal, who take so little pains to make converts to Christ and his gospel.

4. They were blind guides, erring through greediness after gain, and deceiving others, misleading them into the most dangerous errors respecting the obligation of oaths; distinguishing between the temple and the gold, the altar and the gift; as if they might swear by the former, and break the oath with impunity; but an oath by the latter was conscientiously obligatory; and the reason was clear, because these blind guides made gain of the gold vowed to the temple service, and of the gifts offered on the altar. But how absurd and foolish this distinction? it was the temple which sanctified the gold, and the altar which sanctified the gift, which received all their sanctity from being offered there: the oath made by the temple and altar should therefore rather be thought more binding, than that made by the gold or gift. Indeed these kinds of oaths were in themselves evil and profane; but if a man once made them, he was bound to fulfil them. An oath by the altar included all the gifts thereon; as also to swear by the temple, or by heaven, implied an appeal to him who dwelleth there, manifesting his presence between the cherubim, or sitting on his throne most high: and therefore every breach of such oath was direct perjury. Note, (1.) It is a dreadful thing for the poor people, when they who undertake to show them the way to heaven, are blind and ignorant; and it is still more terrible for the blind guides themselves, who will perish under the guilt of those souls they have misled and ruined. (2.) Oaths are sacred; they are an appeal to the heart-searching God; by him alone we may swear; but if any profanely swear by other things, their profaneness will be no plea for their perjury; they are still in conscience bound to fulfil their oath as to the Lord.

5. They were scrupulous about trifles, and negligent of the essential duties of religion. They were most exact in the payment of their tithes, even to the small herbs of their garden, to the mint, and anise, and cummin; but, they omitted the weightier matters of the law, such as judgment, the due administration of justice, and protecting the weak and helpless against their oppressors: mercy, the kind relief they should have shown to the distressed; and faith, a dependence upon God's care and love, and the grateful return due in consequence thereof. These they should have practised, as the most important and momentous: whilst matters comparatively trivial deserved but a subordinate regard; but they were such blind guides, corrupt in practice as well as doctrine, they strained at a gnat, or strained out a gnat from their liquors, as if it would choke them; pretended such a scrupulous attention to avoid the least sin, and practise the nicest morality; whilst they could swallow a camel, making no conscience in secret of the most enormous crimes, to gratify their pride, their covetousness, and their malice, see ver. 14. chap. xxvii. 6. John xviii. 28. Note, (1.) The payment of our tithes to the uttermost farthing Christ commands: This should ye have done. They who are unjust to God's ministers in withholding their dues; are worse than even these Pharisees. (2.) The practice of one duty can never be pleaded as a compensation for the neglect of another; and much less can observances merely ceremonial excuse the neglect of those weightier moral precepts, judgment, mercy, and faith. (3.) Many pretend a scrupulous conscience in trifles, who, when any thing important to them is at stake, hesitate not at committing the most flagrant immoralities.

6. Their religion consisted in mere externals, whilst their hearts continued utterly corrupt and defiled. They were very curious about washing their cups and platters, and placed much purity in this; whilst they cared little by what oppression they got the provision they ate out of them: at least, their inward parts were very wickedness, whatever specious cloak they threw over their ways. Justly therefore doth Jesus upbraid them. Thou blind Pharisee! blind to the pollution of thy soul; cleanse first thy inmost thoughts, principles, and designs: begin within; be pure in heart, and then you may with consistence contend for an exact conformity to the external rites and ceremonies enjoined by the law. But in their present state they were the very reverse of real purity; like whited sepulchres, garnished and glittering without, but within full of pollution and putrefaction, the lively emblems of their hypocrisy and iniquity, lurking under the splendid guise of uncommon piety. Note, (1.) Our hearts are our grand concern; all our services in religion will be acceptable or abominable, as they are truly purified by the blood of Jesus, or left polluted with native guilt and corruption. (2.) They who have never seen, felt, and lamented the plague of their own hearts, must necessarily be blind to all spiritual concerns, since here all vital godliness begins. (3.) The world abounds with whited sepulchres; we need to be warned of them, lest mistaking show for reality, we esteem those patterns of piety, who are in fact but sinks of pollution, full of pride, worldly-mindedness, and enmity to the power of experimental religion.

7. They pretended a high veneration for the prophets of old, and in honour of their memories, built sumptuous monuments for them, and kept them with the nicest care. They made great professions of the respect they would have paid them, had they been so happy as to have lived in their days; and condemned bitterly the wickedness of their forefathers in persecuting and murdering them: protesting against such violence, and that they would have never joined in shedding such innocent blood. Thus by their own confession they allowed themselves the descendants of those who had murdered the prophets, and how much of their spirit they had imbibed, their behaviour towards John the Baptist, and their past and present malicious designs against Jesus, plainly evidenced. Therefore he justly abandons them to the ruin they have deserved, leaving them to fill up the measure of their iniquities, by crucifying him, the Lord of life and glory, and persecuting even to death his apostles and ministers, till wrath should come upon them to the uttermost. Ye serpents, subtle and poisonous: ye generation of vipers, fierce and malignant; how can ye escape the damnation of hell? In their present temper and conduct it was impossible but that the eternal wrath of God must abide upon them. Note, (1.) Many pretend respect for past reformers and good men, who persecute with the greatest virulence those who tread in their steps. (2.) The deceitfulness of the heart is great: we are strangely apt to flatter ourselves, how well we should have done and acted if we had been in other persons' circumstances. Many think the hard-hearted Jews, who left the Son of God to lie in a manger, who heard his doctrine, and saw his miracles, and yet crucified him, were sinners of a peculiar die; and had they lived then, they should have welcomed him with rapture to their houses and their hearts; who yet treat his word, his ministers, his people, with the same contempt and enmity. (3.) God's patience waits long with offenders, but their measures of sin will be full, and then shall wrath come upon them to the uttermost. (4.) The damnation of hell is to be freely denounced against the impenitent and hypocrites, how unwilling soever they may be to hear it, or ready to mock at these terrors of the Lord.

m 2 Chr. 36. 15, 16. Neh. 9. 26. Luke 11. 49. ch. 10. 17. Acts 5. 40. & 7. 51, 52, 59. & 22. 19. & 8. 4. & 12. 2. & xxi—xxv. 1 Thes. 2. 15, 16. 2 Cor. 11. 24, 25. Rev. 18. 24.

n Exod. 20. 5. Mic. 6. 16. Gen. 9. 5, 6. Ps. 9. 12. Gen. 4. 8. 2 Chr. 24. 21, 22. Zech. 1. 1. Rev. 18. 24.

o Ezek. 7. 2—12. & 12. 21—28. ch. 24. 34. 1 Pet. 4. 17, 18.

p Luke 19. 42. & 13. 34. see ver. 30, 31, 34. ch. 21. 35, 36. & 22. 6. 2 Chr. 36. 15, 16. & 24. 21, 22. Neh. 9. 26. Acts 7. 52, 59.

q Deut. 32. 29. Ps. 81. 10. & 50. 7. Luke 19. 42. with Deut. 32. 11, 12. Ps. 17. 8. & 91. 4.

r Ps. 60. 26. Is. 1. 7. Mic. 3. 12. Ps. 81. 11, 12. Hos. 11. 2, 7. Prov. 1. 24, 25.

s Temple, Ch. 24. 2. Luke 19. 44. 2 Chr. 7. 20—22.

t Prov. 1. 26—30. John 8. 21, 24. & 7. 34. Luke 21. 24. Hos. 3. 4, 5.

u Ch. 21. 9. Ps. 118. 26.

34. ¶ Wherefore, behold, [m] I send unto you prophets, and wise men, and scribes: and some of them ye shall kill and crucify, and some of them shall ye scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city: 35. That [n] upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar. 36. Verily I say unto you, [o] All these things shall come upon this generation. 37. [p] O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, [q] how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and [r] ye would not! 38. Behold, [s] your house is left unto you desolate. 39. For I say unto you, [t] Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, [u] Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

Verses 34—39. Their fathers they allowed had persecuted and slain the prophets of the Lord, and they would soon prove themselves genuine descendants from them.

1. Christ foretells what would be their behaviour towards his apostles and evangelists. Once more he would give them a trial, by sending to them his ministers, invested with divine authority from him their God and King, who in gifts and graces should be no way inferior to the prophets, wise men, and scribes who went before them. But instead of obedience to their word, or respect for their persons, they would just do as their fathers before them, or worse; persecuting them from city to city, scourging them in their synagogues, and putting them to the most ignominious and cruel deaths. See Acts vii. 59. xii. 2. v. 10. xxvi. 11.

2. The measure of all their fathers' sins, which thus they imitated, approved, and exceeded, being full, God would not fail to require at their hands all the blood which had been shed for righteousness' sake, from the blood of righteous Abel, the first martyr, to the blood of Zechariah, the son of Barachiah, or Jehoiada, see 2 Chron. xxiv. 20, 21. whom they slew between the porch and the altar, and was the last martyr for the truth recorded in the Old Testament. On this generation Christ assures them shall all these things come; all the heavy wrath threatened for their forefathers' guilt and their own. Note, (1.) Every insult and injury shown to God's righteous ones, shall sooner or later, be severely avenged. (2.) The nearer judgments approach, the louder the call for repentance.

3. Christ pathetically laments over the wickedness of Jerusalem, and denounces her doom.

[1.] He laments over her wickedness, upbraiding her with ingratitude and impenitence under all the means and mercies she had enjoyed. Thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, as blasphemers. Such had been, and would be again her practice; and the great truths of God have been often thus loaded with the severest censures, and the most faithful and zealous advocates for them persecuted under the specious pretence of vindicating God's honour, and punishing those whom these pretended zealots are pleased to brand as enthusiasts or heretics. Yet, says Christ, How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not. As man, and a minister of the circumcision, Christ peculiarly regarded Israel for their fathers' sake; he wished therefore to engage them to attend his ministry, that by acknowledging him as the Messiah they might at least prevent the doom with which their rejecting him would be attended. But ye, the Scribes and Pharisees, who prejudiced the people against him, would not: effectually preventing the people from receiving Christ as the Messiah, to do which they in general seem to have been disposed; and thus these false guides brought ruin upon themselves and their deluded followers. Note, (1.) They who have fled to Christ for refuge, will find a sure covert from the storm of divine wrath; whilst all who refuse his salvation will be left exposed to deserved vengeance. (2.) Christ will visit for all the means and mercies men have abused; and a despised and rejected gospel will bring down the heaviest condemnation.

[2.] He reads her doom. Your house is left unto you desolate. God was now about to abandon them as incorrigible; to leave his temple; and his presence withdrawn, the gold became dim, the fine gold was changed. Nothing but desolation remained within those once sacred walls, when the divine inhabitant was fled; nor would it be long ere one stone should not be left on another. When God departed, their glory and defence forsook them: their city and nation, with their temple, were now devoted to utter destruction.

4. He takes his sad farewell of that temple he never more would enter; nor would they ever see him after his departure to heaven, till that great day of his appearing and glory, when too late they would be convinced of his being the Messiah, and be glad to join in those ascriptions of praise to him, at which they had been so enraged. Some suppose this refers to the conversion of the Jews in the latter day, when they shall welcome that Redeemer their fathers crucified, with hosannas, blessing, and praise. Note, (1.) The day is near when every eye shall behold the once crucified Jesus on a throne of judgment, and then wo to those who pierced him! (2.) They who will not see, are justly given up to the blindness of their hearts; and since they would not bow to the sceptre of a Redeemer's grace, they must perish under the rod of his judgment. (3.) If we welcome Jesus now to our hearts, and he is pleased to make them his temple, and by his Spirit to take up his residence therein, then shall the day of his appearing and glory be our exceeding great joy, and we shall rise up to welcome and call him blessed, who cometh in the name of the Lord, to be glorified in his saints, and admired of all that believe.

CHAP. XXIV.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

In this chapter we have, 1. The prophecy of the destruction of Jerusalem, and the utter ruin of the Jewish church and nation, which was now hastening on, and was completed about forty years after; the prefaces to that destruction, and consequences of it; yet looking farther to Christ's coming at the end of time and the consummation of all things, of which that was a type and figure, ver. 4—31. 2. The practical application of this prophecy for the awakening and quickening of his disciples to prepare for these great and awful things, ver. 32—51.

1. AND [a] Jesus went out, and departed from the temple: and his disciples came to him for to shew him the buildings of the temple. 2. And Jesus said unto them, See ye not all these things? verily I say unto you, [b] There shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

Verses 1, 2. Having foretold the desolations of Zion, Christ took his last farewell of the temple's devoted walls, and went out to return no more. On his departing we are told the conversation that passed between Jesus and his disciples. They were astonished probably at his prediction, perhaps incredulous of its fulfilment, and begged him a moment to behold the magnificent structure, and view the strength and beauty of the fabric. Tinctured with national prejudices, they seem to have been overpleased with the outward glory of the building, and thought with regret of its desolations; but Christ, so far from reversing the sentence, more awfully confirms it, decreeing its utter and irrecoverable ruin; so that not even one stone should be left upon another; which, by the concurring testimony of historians, was literally fulfilled, and the very ground ploughed up where the temple stood. Note, We are too apt to look upon outward grandeur with the eye of sense, and to be influenced by the pomp and glory of the world; but the eye of faith sees the vanity of every thing below the sun, and looks above it for all that is truly great, and permanently glorious.

3. ¶ And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, [c] Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world? 4. And Jesus answered and said unto them, [d] Take heed that no man deceive you. 5. For [e] many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many. 6. And [f] ye shall hear of wars, and rumours of wars: [g] see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but [h] the end is not yet. 7. [i] For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. 8. All these are the beginning of sorrows. 9. [k] Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you; and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake. 10. And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another. 11. And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many. 12. And [m] because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. 13. [n] But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved. 14. And [o] this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come. 15. [p] When ye therefore shall see the * abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (whoso readeth, let him understand;) 16. Then let them which be in Judea flee into [q] the mountains. 17. [r] Let him which is on the house-top not come down to take any thing out of his house: 18. [s] Neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes. 19. [t] And woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days! 20. But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the [t] sabbath-day: 21. [u] For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. 22. [x] And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened. 23. [y] Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not. 24. [z] For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders, insomuch that, if it [a] were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. 25. [b] Behold, I have told you before. 26. Wherefore, if they shall say unto you, [c] Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not. 27. [d] For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. 28. [e] For wheresoever the carcase is, there will the eagles be gathered together. 29. [f] Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken: 30. [g] And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. 31. [h] And he shall send his angels † with a a Mark 13. 1—8. Luke 21. 5—11. with ch. 23. 38, 39.

---

b Luke 19. 44. Jer. 5. 10. & 26. 18. Mic. 3. 12. 1 Kin. 9. 7. Ezek. 7. 20—22.

c Mark 13. 3, 4. Luke 21. 7. Dan. 12. 6, 8. John 21. 21. 1 Thes. 5. 1.

d Jer. 29. 8. Luke 21. 8. 1 Cor. 6. 9. & 15. 33. & 3. 18. Eph. 5. 6. Col. 2. 8, 18. 2 Thes. 2. 3. Gal. 6. 7. 1 John 3. 7. & 4. 1.

e Jer. 23. 21, 25. & 14. 14. John 5. 43. Acts 5. 36, 37. Rev. 13. 3. ver. 11. 24.

f Jer. 4. 19. & 5. 10, 11.

g Ps. 46. 2, 3. & 27. 1—3. & 112. 7. Is. 8. 12—14.

h Jer. 4. 27. & 5. 10, 18. ver. 14.

i Hag. 2. 22. Zech. 14. 13. Heb. 12. 27. Dan. 2. 44. 2 Chr. 15. 6. Acts 11. 28. Joel 2. 30.

k Ch. 10. 17—22. Mark 13. 9—23. Luke 21. 12—24. John 16. 2. & 15. 20. ch. 23. 34. & 22. 6. & 13. 21. & 11. 6. Rev. 2. 10. Acts iv—xii, xxi—xxv.

l Ch. 7. 15. Acts 20. 29, 30. 1 Cor. 11. 19. 2 Cor. 11. 13. 2 Tim. 2. 17. 2 Pet. 2. 1. Jude 4, 18. 1 Tim. 4. 1.

m 2 Tim. 1. 15. & 4. 10, 16. Heb. 10. 25.

n Dan. 12. 12. ch. 10. 22. Rev. 2. 10. Mark 13. 13. Heb. 3. 6. & 10. 39.

o Ch. 4. 23. & 9. 35. Acts 2. 5. Rom. 1. 8. & 10. 18. & 15. 19. Col. 1. 6, 23. Mark 1. 15. p Mark 13. 14. Luke 21. 20. Dan. 9. 25, 27. & 12. 11. Luke 19. 43.

* Roman armies.

q Gal. 1. 17. Gen. 36. 8. Prov. 22. 3. Heb. 11. 7.

r Job 2. 4. Ch. 6. 25. Luke 17. 31. Mark 13. 14—16.

s Luke 23. 29. Hos. 13. 16. 2 Kin. 15. 16. 2 Sam. 4. 4.

t Exod. 16. 29. Acts 1. 12. i. e. the Jewish Sabbath.

u Dan. 12. 1. Joel 2. 2. Lev. 26. 14—39. Deut 28. 15—68. & 29. 18—28. & 31. 17, 18. & 32. 21—35. Prov. 1. 24—32. Ps. 21. 8—12. & 69. 20—28. Is. 65. 12—15. Zech. 11. 9. & 14. 2. Mal. 4. 1. Luke 21. 23, 34. & 19. 43, 44. 1 Thes. 2. 16. Heb. 6. 8. & 10. 26, 27, 29. 1 Pet. 4. 17, 18. ch. 8. 12.

x Is. 1. 9. & 6. 13. & 65. 8. Zech. 13. 8, 9. & 14. 2.

y Mark 13. 21. Luke 17. 23. & 21. 8.

z See ver. 5, 11. Deut. 13. 1, 2. 2 Thes. 2. 9—11. Rev. 13. 13. John 5. 43. Ch. 7. 15. 2 Pet. 3. 17.

a John 6. 37. & 10. 20, 28, 29. Rom. 8. 28—39. 1 Pet. 1. 5. 2 Tim. 2. 19.

b John 16. 1. Is. 44. 7, 8. & 46. 10. & 48. 5, 6.

c Jude 19. Rom. 16. 17, 18.

d Luke 17. 24. Is. 30. 13, 14. & 24. 1—6. & 10. 22, 23. & 26. 21.

e Luke 17. 37. Job 39. 29, 30. Jer. 16. 16. Dan. 9. 26, 27. Amos 9. 1—4. 1 Thes. 2. 16.

f Is. 13. 10. Ezek. 32. 7. Zeph. 1. 14—18. Joel 2. 30, 31. & 3. 15 Amos 5. 20. Mark 13. 24—37. Luke 21. 25—33. Acts 2. 19, 20. Rev. 6. 12—17.

g Dan. 7. 13. ch. 16. 27, 28. & 26. 64. Rev. 1. 7.

h Mark 16. 15, 16. ch. 28. 18—20. or 13. 41. Acts 26. 19. & 13. 46—48. 1 Cor. 15. 51. 1 Thes. 4. 16. ch. 25. 32, 33.

† Or with a trumpet and a great voice.

great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.

Verses 3—31. Ascending the mount of Olives, opposite to which the temple stood full in view, the disciples, as he sat there, came privately unto him, saying, Tell us when shall these things be? the destruction of the city and temple; and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world? According to their rooted prejudices they seem still to have expected him to appear as a glorious temporal Messiah; and by his coming meant not his appearing in the day of judgment; or, by the end of the world, the final consummation of all things; but rather the end of the present age, and the period of the Jewish economy; supposing it probable, that the destruction of the temple would pave the way for the erection of another far more magnificent, when in all the pomp of earthly majesty he would appear, and they should be highly advanced in that universal kingdom they expected him to establish. They were very solicitous therefore to be informed of the signs which should usher him to the throne; and Jesus, to caution them against delusion, to rectify their mistakes, and to confirm them in the faith when they should see the predictions accomplished, answers their questions.

1. He cautions his disciples against deceivers. Having rejected the true Messiah, yet impatient for the temporal deliverance they expected from him, the Jews were open to receive every pretender who set up in his name; and to the false Christs and false prophets who should arise, were they justly to be given up, who so obstinately and wickedly had rejected the true. They must pay no regard to the pretensions of these deluders, and turn a deaf ear to their emissaries, who say, Christ is in the desert, or hid in some secret chamber, and ready to appear. Nor are they to be believed, though they may do strange feats, and pretend to work miracles, which will impose upon the credulous. So powerfully indeed will the great seducer play off his illusions, that nothing but God's effectual grace and everlasting promises could preserve even the elect from being deceived: but Christ, who had chosen, would keep them; and therefore they must remember these cautions now given them in the day of temptation, (ver. 25.) which would set them on their guard, and preserve them from seduction. Note, (1.) The devil and his instruments may do strange things to support the credit of his falling cause, and lying wonders may be wrought that may stagger the incautious; but whatever would draw us from Christ must be rejected with abhorrence. (2.) It is the comfort of Christ's real disciples, that it is not possible they should be fatally or finally deceived. (3.) Novel pretensions and opinions in matters of religion are ever to be suspected: there cannot be a new, or another gospel. (4.) We are kept by the power of God unto salvation, yet are warned to be on our guard, as if we were to keep ourselves. He who hath ordained the end, hath also appointed the means.

2. Wars and rumours of wars will precede the threatened destruction. By insurrections and seditions against the Roman government in Judea, thousands miserably perished; whilst intestine commotions and slaughter among themselves prepared the way for their final destruction, when, on their last revolt, the Romans marched their armies to besiege and utterly ruin their city and nation. Yet Christ warns his disciples not to be discouraged by these things, so as to discontinue their preaching, or be terrified in their minds; for these things must first come to pass, but the end is not yet; the Jews shall be spared a little longer, to experience other judgments. Note, (1.) The ravages of war make dreadful work: we cannot but tremble at the alarm; though where the heart is fixed on the Rock of ages, we shall not be troubled. Nature will shudder, but faith can raise us above our fears. (2.) God's decrees are unchangeable. What he hath ordained, must come to pass; and this should quiet our minds, and silence our murmurings, we know he doth all things well.

3. Another sign he gives them of the approaching desolation. Nation shall rise up against nation, &c. great commotions being in the Roman empire between the contenders for sovereignty; and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places; all which came to pass before the destruction of Jerusalem: and are called the beginning of sorrows; being but the prelude to the pangs in which she should expire, as all the temporal judgments which light upon the heads of sinners, are but the beginning of sorrows, inconceivably bitter as they are endless.

4. He bids them expect a fiery persecution. Far from standing high in that earthly kingdom with which they flattered themselves, nothing but bonds, imprisonment, and death in all its most terrible forms, awaited them; hated both of Jews and Gentiles for the sake of Christ, and his gospel which they preached. And these trying seasons would have awful effects on many who before professed the faith of Jesus, but now, when the cross lay so heavy, would be offended, and apostatize; for suffering times are the sieve for hypocrites, whose fair profession then is quickly blasted. They studiously seek occasions to quarrel with religion and then revolt from it, content to be Christians only as long as it costs them neither the loss of ease, interest, nor honour; and as apostates usually turn the bitterest persecutors, by such false brethren they should be betrayed, and hated with uncommon malignity. Through the concurrence of such unfaithfulness amongst professors, such enmity in their persecutors, and such deluding and seducing teachers as would arise, iniquity would peculiarly abound; and, as the consequences of it, the love of many should wax cold.—Though persecution would make the flame burn fiercer in some, many would be glad to seek a shelter from the storm by concealing their profession, or falling into decays, into sects and parties, lose the vital warmth and power of godliness, at least for a time; for souls truly alive to God may under temptation suffer much, and, like trees in winter, it cannot be known whether they will ever spring again; but where there is still grace in the heart, there will be a revival, and a return to their first love. But for the comfort of those who approve themselves faithful in these trying times, they shall be saved. The remnant according to the election of grace shall not perish in the furnace of adversity, but either comfortably survive their troubles in this world, or have a more abundant recompense in that which is eternal.

5. Notwithstanding all their sufferings, this gospel of the kingdom, that points the way to the kingdom of grace and of glory, shall be preached in all the world, to which their very persecutions eminently contributed, (Acts viii. 1—4.) the apostles and others carrying the glad tidings into all the kingdoms under the Roman empire, and probably beyond its limits, (Col. i. 6, 23.) for a witness to all nations, of pardon and peace to those who believed, and as a testimony against those who persisted in their infidelity. And all this was done within forty years after our Lord's ascension, and before Jerusalem was destroyed, and is mentioned as the last sign of its approaching ruin.

6. Having foretold the signs of the times, our Lord proceeds to inform them of the immediate causes of the destruction, and to direct them how to act when the desolation came up as a flood. They would see the abomination of desolation; the Roman armies compassing their city and the holy place, with standards flying, on which they bore the images of their gods, so hateful to the Jewish nation; and then whosoever read the prophet Daniel, would see by the event his prediction verified. When this was the case, then it was high time for them to flee, and leave the devoted city and country; betaking themselves to the mountains for concealment from the ravages of the invaders. And when the danger was so near and urgent, not a moment was to be lost: they must not go into their house, if walking on its roof, to pack up their goods, nor return from the field to carry off their clothes; but, as they were, instantly flee for their lives to some place of safety, as we are told the Christians immediately did to Pella, on the approach of the Roman army. In this season of distress some will be found in circumstances peculiarly melancholy and grievous: even such as are with child, and give suck, whose flight will be hereby greatly retarded, and it will be more difficult for them to escape. Also they had need pray, that their flight might not be in the winter, when the inclemency of the weather, and depth of the roads would increase their calamity: nor on the sabbath day, when many, who still were attached to the rigid observance of that day, would be scrupulous of travelling, or when the Jews would prevent their journey as contrary to the law. But flee they must, for in the city of Jerusalem, during the siege, there would be such a scene of misery, horror, and distress, as never before was known, nor ever shall be, till the time of the consummation of all things: so that should these calamities continue, not one of the Jewish nation should be left. But God having yet a remnant among them, according to the election of grace, and from the descendants of those who should escape the sword, designing in some future day to raise up a people for himself; he therefore hath shortened these calamitous days, not dealing with them in that rigour they deserved, but for his elect's sake sparing them from an utter extirpation. Note, (1.) In days of tribulation, when God opens a door of escape, we must thankfully embrace the opportunity. Though we may never fly from duty, we must not expose ourselves to unnecessary danger. (2.) Delays are dangerous; especially where our souls are at stake. The present moment only is allotted us to flee for refuge to the mountain of a Saviour's grace. (3.) At the worst of times, and in the worst of places, God hath a few, and for their sakes he is graciously pleased to shorten the days of calamity. The men of this wicked world little think how much they are indebted to those whom they often despise and abhor.

7. He adds a repeated caution against deceivers, whose fallacious promises in these calamitous times would be more easily credited; and pretending to come as the Messiah to rescue the Jewish nation from the Roman yoke, would find many ready to receive them, and willing to be deluded with the least shadow of hope: and their pretended signs and wonders would have a great effect on multitudes; but they must remember this warning, and reject all these impostors.

8. He assures them the ruin of Jerusalem and the Jewish nation should be sudden, irresistible, and awful, as when the blast of lightning darts from the cloud. And as eagles by their quick scent discover and seize the carcass, so should the Romans, bearing the figures of eagles on their standards, surround the city as a corpse to be devoured by them, and through the land hunt out, seize, and destroy this devoted people.

Some suppose there is a reference here to the swift spreading of the gospel through the world, as a light from heaven illuminating the earth, breaking through the clouds of darkness and superstition, seen far and wide, attended with most amazing success, when innumerable converts eagerly flocked to Christ, as eagles to the carcass, which was indeed the case, but the former sense seems to be principally intended.

9. The utter ruin of the ecclesiastical and civil state of the Jewish nation will then immediately ensue. All their glory will depart, all their temple service cease, their entire dispersion be accomplished; metaphorically represented by a total dire eclipse of all the luminaries of heaven, and by a dissolution of the very frame of nature. Then will the Messiah, whom they have rejected, appear to execute the threatened vengeance upon them; and all their tribes with deepest anguish and distress will too late mourn their infidelity, and feel the weight of that blood they imprecated on their heads.

Lastly, On this final ruin of Jerusalem, the angels of the churches, Christ's ministers, shall blow the gospel trumpet, and spread its awful pleasing sound throughout the earth, which, accompanied with the demonstration of the Spirit and power, will be made effectual to the conversion of all the elect of God through the whole earth: and this gospel will continue to be preached till the end of time, when he shall have accomplished their number: and then shall he be revealed from heaven at the day of final judgment, of which this is the type and figure.

Though to this single event of the destruction of the Jewish people and nation, I incline to think this prophecy most immediately applicable; yet probably there is also contained in it a strong reference to the more awful appearance of the great Judge of quick and dead in the last day, whose coming will be ushered in with the same signs of wars, pestilence, famine, and earthquakes, whose gospel will be first spread through all lands; and whose appearance will be sudden, unexpected, and terrible as the lightning; and then shall all those things literally come to pass, which are here recorded. Before the brightness of his presence shall the sun and moon be darkened, the stars fall from their spheres, the elements melt, the heavens be wrapped together as a scroll, and the earth be consumed. With horror the guilty world, startled from their slumbers and security, will behold the terrible Judge seated on his throne, surrounded by angelic hosts, the ministers of flame, who wait his orders, and execute his sentence. Too late with tears of anguish and despair they will bewail their inevitable misery, who had ever before refused to mourn in penitence their provocations. With power irresistible, and glory inconceivable, shall the Son of man be revealed in clouds burning with vengeance against his foes, bright with refreshing beams of cheering light to gladden the hearts of his redeemed. Then every eye shall see him, and from his lips expect their irrecoverable doom. Awakened from the dust by the last trumpet's blast, around his throne shall his elect be gathered, conducted by ministering angels, whilst every bosom glows with hope, delight, and joy unspeakable and full of glory; and welcomed by their Lord, as those his grace hath chosen, his power hath preserved, their eternal bliss shall be secured; whilst they in wonder, love, and adoration bow before him, with thankfulness unutterable own the sovereign favour, and ascribe to him alone the everlasting praise. Thrust from his presence, speechless with guilt, covered with shame, the unbelievers, the impenitent, the hypocrite, shall then be consigned to their mansions of eternal horror, torment, and despair, and find the just but terrible reward of their deeds. Consider, sinful soul, ere that day comes, who can dwell with devouring fire? who can dwell with everlasting burnings?

32. ¶ Now learn a parable of the fig-tree; When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh: 33. [i] So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors. 34. Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled. 35. [k] Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away. 36. ¶ [l] But of ‡ that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only. 37. [m] But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son

[i] Luke 21. 29—33. Mark 13. 28—36. Jam. 5. 9. 1 Pet. 4. 17, 18. Ezek. 7. 2—13. & 12. 22—28. ch. 11. 16. & 16. 2 & 23. 36. Heb. 12. 37. It took place within forty years after Christ's death.

[k] Mark 13. 31. ch. 5. 18. 2 Pet. 3. 10. Ps. 102. 26. Is. 40. 8. & 51. 6. Heb. 1. 11. 1 Pet. 1. 25. Tit. 1. 2.

[l] Ver. 42, 44. ch. 25. 6, 19, 31. Mark 13. 32. John 5. 28. Acts 17. 31. & 1. 7. 1 Thes. 5. 2. 2 Pet. 3. 10.

‡ i. e. day of the last judgment.

[m] Luke 17. 26—36. Gen. vi, vii. Job 22. 16. 2 Pet. 2. 5. & 3. 6. 1 Pet. 3. 19, 20. Heb. 11. 7. 1 Thes. 5. 2, 3.

of man be. 38. For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying, and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, 39. And knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. 40. [n] Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left. 41. Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left. 42. ¶ [o] Watch therefore; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. 43. [p] But know this, that if the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up. 44. [q] Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh. 45. [r] Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? 46. [s] Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing. 47. [t] Verily I say unto you, That he shall make him ruler over all his goods. 48. [u] But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; 49. And shall begin [x] to smite his fellow servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken; 50. [y] The lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of, 51. And shall ‖ cut him asunder, § [z] and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

n Luke 17. 34—36. 1 Cor. 4. 7.
o Ch. 25. 13. Rom. 13. 11. 1 Cor. 16. 13. 1 Thes. 5. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 8. Rev. 16. 15. Mark 13. 33—37. Luke 21. 34—36. p Luke 12. 39. 1 Thes. 5. 2. Rev. 16. 15. & 3. 3. 2 Pet. 3. 10, 11.
q Ch. 25. 10. Luke 12. 40. Rev. 21. 2. & 19. 7. 1 Thes. 5. 6. 2 Pet. 3. 11, 12. Phil. 4. 4. Jam. 5. 9. 1 Pet. 4. 7.
r Luke 12. 42. & 19. 17. ch. 25. 21. 1 Cor. 4. 2. John 21. 15—17. Acts 20. 28. Gal. 6. 10. Eph. 4. 11—13. Heb. 3. 5. 2 Tim. 2. 2. s Rev. 16. 15. 2 Tim. 4. 7, 8. see ver. 42.
t Ch. 25. 21. Luke 19. 17. & 22. 29, 30. & 12. 44. 1 Pet. 5. 4. Dan. 12. 2, 3. u Luke 12. 45. 2 Pet. 2. 3, 4. Ezek. 12. 22—28.
x Is. 65. 5, 13. John 9. 10. 2 Cor. 11. 10.
y Ver. 42, 44. 1 Thes. 5. 2. 3. Rev. 16. 15. John 5. 28, 29.
‖ Or cut him off.
§ Campbell considers this a Syriasm, denoting, he will deprive him of his office, and so cut him off from his family.
z Job 20. 29. Ps. 11. 6. ch. 8. 12. & 22. 13. & 13. 42, 50. & 25. 30.

Verses 32—51. As the events predicted would speedily have their accomplishment; they must prepare for them.

1. They may judge of the approach of Jerusalem's ruin by the signs mentioned, as easily and as surely as they would conclude summer at hand when the fig-tree begins to bud and put forth leaves. The things Christ had spoken would certainly and speedily have their fulfilment: heaven and earth should pass, sooner than one jot or tittle of his word could fail; and they of that generation would behold it, though the very day or hour fixed in the divine decree for Jerusalem's fall, no man nor angel knew, that being a secret in the Divine Bosom.

Many understand the last verse as a transition to what relates to the final judgment. It is fixed in the divine mind: it cometh certainly; the time is short; the hour unknown, that we might be always ready, lest that day should come upon us unawares.

2. He describes the sensuality and security in which the Jewish people would be surprised. Like the men of the old world, who slighted Noah's warnings, persisted in the service of their lusts and pleasures, and, drowned in carnal gratifications, would not believe the threatened judgment, till wrath came upon them, and the flood swept them away. In such a state of false peace and worldly pursuits would the Jews be found when their destroyers came, notwithstanding all the warnings of Christ and his apostles; and then, by wondrous turns of providence, where two persons were found at the same employments in the field, or at the mill, one shall be taken, either a captive or slain, and the other shall be left, escaping from the hands of the enemy.

And this will especially be the case with the world of the ungodly before the great day of the Lord comes. They will be surprised in the midst of sensual and earthly gratifications; refusing to hear the voice of God's ministers calling them to repentance, he will give them up to the spirit of slumber. Their indulgences drive them to infidelity, and their unbelief hardens them in their sins; so reciprocally do the love of pleasure and infidelity operate. Thus they will put far away the evil day, though they only impose upon themselves, and will be more terribly surprised with its sudden arrival: and then an awful and eternal separation shall be made between the children of men who were before of the same occupation, engaged in the same labours, dwelling perhaps under one roof, or partners of the same bed; but of whom one was taken by sovereign distinguishing grace, and called by the gospel to be a servant of Jesus, and the other left a slave of corruption. These shall now be for ever separated; the one caught up to the Saviour's bosom, the other left to the eternal misery and ruin he hath chosen. What thankfulness then do all they who are taken owe to him, who, when others so near, so like themselves perish, is pleased to save them with an everlasting salvation!

3. He admonishes them in the view of these things to be always ready, faithfully discharging their trust, and, as uncertain of the time, ever wakeful and watchful, that when these judgments come, they may be found on their guard. And what is here said, was not peculiarly directed to them, but is spoken to all, who being in jeopardy every hour, and not knowing whether the very next they may not be called to meet their Lord by death, or at the throne of judgment, have continual need to be expecting and preparing for their great change. Two things we know: That Christ will come, but when is uncertain, and therefore left uncertain, that we might be always ready; unless we act more foolishly respecting our souls, than any man of common prudence does with regard to his person or substance; for if he be admonished of danger from the approach of a thief by night, he will watch to prevent the robber's entrance: and how much more then are we called to watch, that we may not be surprised at midnight with the coming of the great Judge, and perish in a fatal security, body and soul for ever? Our Lord enforces this great duty of watchfulness by the case of a master and his two servants, the one negligent, the other diligent and watchful; recommending it to us to copy the example of the wise and faithful servant, that we may receive his reward, and escape the misery which neglect and carelessness about the concerns of our souls must necessarily be attended with.

[1.] The wise and faithful servant represents every gracious soul, and especially the ministers of Christ, who are sent by him the great Ruler of his family the church, to serve in their several departments, according to their several capacities. Their business is to serve, not themselves, but the heirs of salvation, for whom they are appointed to labour; studying to render them every kind office, and to give them that meat of the sound, savoury, and strengthening doctrines of truth which they need; and this regularly in due season, and as shall best suit the state of every one of their people. Herein the faithful minister must approve, (1.) His wisdom, in studying and consulting their wants, and how to supply them. (2.) His faithfulness, in discharging his trust, with a constant regard to his Master's honour, and an eye to the real good of those committed to his care; willing to approve himself to their consciences, and, when both cannot be done, more solicitous to profit than to please them. (3.) His diligence, always employed in the blessed work, that when his Master comes, he may be found so doing. Note, Love of idleness and ease in a minister is doubly criminal. Where such a faithful servant thus labours, he shall not lose his reward. The blessing of Jesus shall rest upon him in life, in death for ever; he will have the comfort of his work while he lives, will feel satisfaction in it when he dies, and the blessing shall follow him unto the eternal world, where he shall be advanced to the highest honours, and shine forth in the kingdom of Jesus as the sun, for ever and ever. May such a prospect animate our zeal and quicken our diligence!

[2.] The very reverse is the conduct and end of the wicked servant; under which character every minister and professor of religion is represented, whose practice and principles contradict his pretensions. (1.) His practice is described as bad, very bad; quarrelsome, insolent, and oppressive to his fellow-servants, and abusing the power he is intrusted with over them. Instead of studying their good, and labouring for their service, he is wholly taken up with the indulgence of his own appetites. If he can find good eating and drinking for himself, he cares nothing how his master's interest fare; and his company are those with whom he can feast to the full, in luxury, excess, and drunkenness. Note, The Lord observes the conduct of those who call themselves his ministers and servants. He marks their pride and insolence; smiting with words of reproach, or, under pretence of vindicating their Master's honour, abusing with the exercise of oppressive authority their more faithful fellow-servants, usually because they are faithful. The Lord sees their carnal lives, their unbecoming associates, their compliances with a world lying in wickedness, and their partaking in other men's sins, perhaps lost in excess themselves. Ministers! yet, horrid to tell, drunkards, or companions with them! Will He not visit for these things? (2.) His principles are as infidel as his practice is immoral. Far from living in a constant expectation of his Master's coming, he puts far off the evil day, and flatters himself there is no danger yet. And thus his heart is emboldened to live after the fashion of the world, and to neglect the awful charge committed to him. Note, There is much more infidelity both in ministers and people professing godliness than they themselves are aware of; yet many a man would be shocked and affronted to be charged as an infidel, whose practice, notwithstanding, every day evidences the infidelity of his heart, and demonstrates that it is impossible he can believe the solemn account he must shortly make, when he so seldom, or so carelessly thinks of it, and takes so little pains to prepare for it. (3.) His doom is fearful. Surprised by his Master's coming in death or judgment, his negligence and guilt will stare him in the face, when it is too late for repentance or amendment. He shall be cut off from all his sensual pursuits, in the midst of his iniquities; and, separated for ever from the Lord, his portion shall be appointed him with hypocrites in the deepest abyss of misery, where eternal weeping and gnashing of teeth bespeak the unutterable torments of the damned. Let every careless sinner, and, above all, every negligent, faithless, worldly-minded minister, read this awful sentence and tremble, whilst yet there is hope. They shall assuredly receive greater damnation than any others, who, under the guise of a pretended commission from Christ, have deluded and destroyed the people committed to their charge, and, by their errors, negligence, or ill examples, lie down with the blood of lost souls upon their heads crying for vengeance.

CHAP. XXV.—anno domini, 33.

The necessity of preparing to meet the Lord in judgment is enforced, 1. In the parable of the ten virgins, ver. 1—13. 2. In the parable of the three servants, ver. 14—30. 3. In a more plain description of the process of the last judgment, ver. 31—46. And these are things of awful consideration, because of everlasting concern to every one of us.

1. THEN [a] shall [b] the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten [c] virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth [d] to meet the bridegroom. 2. [e] And five of them were wise, and five were foolish. 3. They that were foolish [f] took their lamps, and took no oil with them: 4. [g] But the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps. 5. [h] While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept. 6. [i] And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him. 7. [k] Then all those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps. 8. And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil; for [l] our lamps are * gone out. 9. But the wise answered, saying, Not so; lest there be not enough for us and you: but go ye rather to [m] them that sell, and buy for yourselves. 10. And while they went to buy, [n] the bridegroom came; [o] and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage: [p] and the door was shut. 11. Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, [q] Lord, Lord, open to us. 12. But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not. 13. [r] Watch therefore; for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh.

a Ch. 24. 27, 36. 42.
b Ch. 3. 2. & 5. 17. & xiii. Dan. 2. 44.
c 2 Cor. 11. 2. Rev. 14. 4. Ps. 45. 14. Rev. 21. 2, 9. d Gen. 19. 1. & 46. 29. Num. 23. 15. Eph. 5. 31. Rev. 19. 7.
e Ch. 20. 16. & 13. 20—23. 47. & 22. 10. Rom. 9. 6.
f 2 Tim. 3. 5. Tit. 1. 16.
g 2 Cor. 5. 17. Gal. 6. 15. Zech. 4. 2, 3. John 1. 16. Phil. 3. 3. 2 Cor. 1. 12.
h Ch. 24. 48. 2 Pet. 3. 4. Rom. 2. 4. Rev. 2. 21. Song 5. 2. & 3. 1. Eph. 5. 14. 1 Thes. 5. 6, 7. ch. 26. 43. Rom. 13. 11. Jam. 3. 2. ch. 26. 40, 43.
i Ch. 24. 31, 44. 1 Thes. 4. 16. & 5. 2. Rev. 16. 15. Luke 12. 46. Prov. 1. 24. Mic. 6. 9. Phil. 4. 5. Mark 13. 35. Luke 12. 20. Heb. 10. 25. Jam. 5. 8, 9.
k Ch. 5. 16. Luke 12. 35. 2 Per. 3. 14. ch. 13. 6, 17. 21. & 7. 27. l Job 8. 13, 14. & 18. 5. & 21. 17. & 11. 20.
* Or going out.
m 1 Cor. 12. 28. Eph. 4. 11—13. Mark 16. 15. Eph. 3. 8.
n Ch. 24. 36, 44. Rev. 1. 7. & 22. 12, 20.
o 2 Tim. 4. 8. Eph. 4. 13. 2 Pet. 1. 4—11. 1 Pet. 1. 13.
p Ps. 95. 11. Luke 13. 25.
q Heb. 12. 17. ch. 7. 21—23. Luke 13. 25. Ps. 1. 6. & 5. 5. & 6. 8. Hab. 1. 13. 1 Cor. 8. 3. Gal. 4. 9. 2 Tim. 2. 19.
r Ch. 24. 42. Mark 13. 33, 35, 37. Luke 21. 34, 36. 1 Cor. 16. 13. 1 Pet. 5. 8. Rev. 16. 15.

Verses 1—13. Though this parable, as connected with the former chapter, may have a particular reference to the destruction of the Jewish people, who had slighted the gospel salvation, and neglected their day of grace, yet it may well be understood as of more general import, and including a warning and caution to men in every age and place.

The parable itself is taken from a common custom in those days, when the bridegroom used to go in the evening, attended by his friends, to the house of the bride, who, on hearing of his approach, went out with lights, accompanied by a number of virgins, her companions, to welcome his arrival, and conduct him to the entertainment provided on that occasion; and such shall be the state of the gospel church, at the coming of Christ, as we see here represented. We have,

1. The persons here spoken of, the virgins, who went out with their lamps to meet the bridegroom. The Bridegroom is the Lord Jesus, who condescends to call his church his spouse; and to honour every member of it with that near and exalted relation. The virgins are those professors of religion who appear desirous to present themselves to Christ in the comeliness, beauty, and simplicity which his righteousness and grace puts upon them: they go forth to meet him, found in his ways and ordinances here on earth, expecting his coming from heaven, and if they are his indeed, loving and looking for the day of his appearing.

2. The characters of the virgins. They were very different as their actions showed. Five of them were wise; and as an evidence of their foresight and prudence, they took care to be well provided with oil, that they might have enough if they should tarry long in waiting. These represent the faithful souls made wise unto salvation, whose hearts are truly supplied with the oil of divine grace, and have not only the light of profession, but the real experimental knowledge of Jesus Christ, possess a living principle, and partake of a divine nature; but five were foolish, who, though in appearance associated with the others, were unacquainted with the life-giving truths of the gospel; professors, but not possessors of the grace which is in Jesus Christ; shining to others in a name to live, but really dead and dark in their own souls: they have lamps but no oil with them, destitute of spiritual life; careful only to make a fair show in the flesh, and recommend themselves to their neighbours as Christians, without a single eye to Christ, and a real desire in simplicity and godly sincerity to approve themselves to him. And they are foolish indeed, who thus deceiving others, most fatally deceive and destroy their own souls.

3. The bridegroom not coming so soon as they expected, they all slumbered and slept; but as their state was different when awake, it was different also when asleep. Indeed the wise, the faithful souls, through the abiding corruption of their nature; worldly avocations; removal from the gospel and the communion of lively Christians; slothfulness, or neglect of spiritual exercises; the power and prevalence of temptation; outward ease and affluence; connection with others lifeless or careless in their walk; through these and the like causes, even once vigorous Christians fall sometimes into a lifeless state of soul: the love of Christ, and of their brethren, waxes cold; indifference to the concerns of eternity succeeds; and, though they lament it, the sorrow is not deep or lasting; notwithstanding the root of the matter is in them, and afflictions, the word, and renewed breathings of the divine Spirit, will yet revive the dying flame. The foolish, satisfied in external profession, sleep the sleep of death, sunk in carnal security, and utterly resting upon the form of godliness.

4. At midnight the cry of the bridegroom's approach startled them from their slumbers, and instantly they were summoned to meet him with their lamps. Thus suddenly surprised are we often by death; and even gracious souls start at the summons, not expecting it so near, and conscious of their own unfaithfulness: while horror seizes the hypocrite and the sinner, and they awake to meet their inevitable doom. But doth our Lord delay? Is this moment yet our own? Awake then, thou that sleepest; prevent this dire alarm.

5. Instantly they arose, and began to trim their lamps. The wise found much to do, and blushed to be thus overtaken, but their oil soon revived the expiring flame; their faith and love regained their exercise, and welcoming their Redeemer, they confidently expected to be found of him in peace. The foolish too essayed to prepare; but, alas! too late: their lamps were gone out, and no oil to be procured: in vain they seek to beg from their companions, or buy from others; they have lost the moment which cannot be regained. Thus even in this world the lamp of profession is often extinguished, and the unfaithfulness of the heart appears; though if the hypocrite's hope burns to his last hour, in death it expires: then he will know the value of what he hath lost when it cannot be regained: none will then be found able to impart of their grace, what the best possess being barely sufficient for themselves. Whilst there is life indeed, the market is still open to the latest moment; they who come to Christ may buy pardon, grace, and peace, without money, and without price; but when death closes the scene, the lamp of hope is for ever extinguished; and as the tree falleth it must lie.

6. Whilst the foolish virgins went to buy, the bridegroom came. Many on their death-beds express deep concern for their neglected souls, and think, by some extraordinary acts of devotion and charity, still to purchase heaven; mistaking the market, and spending their labours on that which satisfieth not. Christ alone can save a sinking soul, and to the last; they who come humbly to him never find it too late.—They that were ready went in with him to the marriage; all who are found clothed in his righteousness, and shining in the graces of his Spirit, are admitted to his eternal presence, and sit down with him in glory; and then the door was shut; they who are entered into the rest of the blessed, go out no more; and they who are once excluded, can never more gain admission: the great gulf is fixed, and despair hath for ever barred the door of hope. Too late the foolish virgins came; importunately craving admittance: for in death and judgment, they will often learn to pray and cry who never prayed before; but all entrance is refused to them, and the bridegroom utterly disowns them; verily I say unto you, I know you not; and wo to that sinful soul thus abandoned of God to his misery, and doomed never to enter into his rest!

7. The inference from the whole is, Watch therefore; the concerns of our souls are infinitely momentous, and will not admit of being trifled with; the time is short; eternity depends upon our improvement of it. We know neither the day nor the hour when we shall be summoned away; the sleeping virgins had a midnight call, and why not you or I? Watch therefore, that you may be always ready to go forth with joy to meet the Lord.

14. ¶ [s] For the kingdom of heaven is * as a man travelling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods: 15. And unto one he gave five † talents, to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability; and straightway took his journey. 16. Then [t] he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made them other five talents. 17. And likewise he that had received two, he also gained other two. 18. But he that had received one went and [u] digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money. 19. [x] And after a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them. 20. And so he that had received five talents came and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents: [y] behold, I have gained beside them five talents more. 21. His lord said unto him, [z] Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, [a] I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord. 22. He also that had received [b] two talents came and said, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents: behold, I have gained two other talents beside them. 23. His lord said unto him, [c] Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been s Luke 19. 12—27. Rom. 12. 6. 1 Cor. 12. 7, 11, 28. Eph. 4. 11. ch. 21. 33. 2 Cor. 3. 5.

* Campbell would supply the ellipsis here thus, The Son of man is, &c.

† A talent is £342 3s. 9d. and denotes here gifts, offices, and opportunities.

t 1 Pet. 4. 10. 2 Pet. 3. 18. Job 17. 9. Prov. 4. 18. & 3. 14, 15.

u Phil. 2. 21. & 3. 19. Ps. 17. 14.

x Luke 16. 2. Eccl. 12. 14. 2 Cor. 5. 10. 1 Cor. 3. 12—15. & 4. 5. Rom. 14. 12.

y 1 Cor. 15. 10. 2 Tim. 4. 7, 8. Jam. 2. 18. Rom. 15. 19. Acts 20. 24. 2 Tim. 4. 2.

z 1 Cor. 4. 5. Rom. 2. 29. Luke 19. 17. & 16. 10. 1 Pet. 1. 7. ch. 24. 47.

a Ps. 49. 14. Rev. 2. 26, 27. Luke 22. 29, 30. John 12. 26. & 17. 24. 2 Tim. 2. 12. 1 Pet. 1. 8. Ps. 16. 11. Heb. 12. 2. Acts 2. 28. with Gen. 39 4.

b 2 Cor. 8. 12. Rom. 12. 6—8. 1 Pet. 4. 10. 2 Tim. 2. 2. 1 Cor. 4. 2.

c See ver. 21.

faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord. 24. Then he which had received the one talent came and said, [d] Lord, [e] I knew thee that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed: 25. And I was [f] afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou hast that is thine. 26. His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked* and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not strawed: 27. [g] Thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, and then at my coming I should have received mine own with usury. 28. [h] Take therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents. 29. For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not [k] shall be taken away even that which he hath.† 30. [l] And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

d Ch. 7. 21. Luke 6. 46.

e Tit. 1. 16. 1 Cor. 8. 1. Ezek. 18. 25, 29.

f Rev. 21. 8. Luke 19. 20, 21.

* Or malignant.

g Luke 19. 22, 23. Job 15. 5, 6. 2 Sam. 12. 6. 7. ch. 12 37. Tit. 3. 11.

h Luke 19. 24. Ezek. 46. 17.

i Ch. 13. 12. Mark 4. 25. Luke 8. 18. & 19. 26. John 15. 2. Rev. 22. 11. Ps. 27. 14. 1 Cor. 15. 10. 2 Cor. 6. 1.

k Ezek. 33. 13. 2 John 8. Gal. 3. 4.

† Some MSS. read: even that which he seemeth to have.

l Ch. 8. 12. & 8. 12. & 13. 42. & 22. 13. & 24. 51. Luke 17. 10. 2 Thes. 1. 9. Rev. 14. 10, 11. & 21. 8. & 22. 15.

Verses 14—30. As a farther illustration of the method in which the Lord will deal with the visible members of his church, the following parable is delivered. Christ is the great Master and Lord of all: we are all his servants in profession, and they especially who are put in trust with the gospel: our great business therefore here below is, to make our profiting appear to the glory of our Lord. We are told,

1. The trust committed to these servants during their master's absence. To one he gave five talents; to another, two; to another, one; to the least a very considerable sum, a single talent of silver amounting by the lowest computation to upwards of £187; and these talents may refer either, (1.) To the gifts he bestowed on his disciples after his ascension, qualifying them with extraordinary miraculous powers, and furnishing them with ability for the discharge of the arduous trust committed to them, whilst he went up to heaven, being in the fulness of time again to return, and call his servants to account for the improvement of that which he had committed to their care; or, (2.) The talents may refer in general to all the gifts of nature or providence of which we are possessed, and which are lent us of the Lord purely to serve the purposes of his glory, and promote the interests of his kingdom; and for them we must be accountable to him in the great day of his appearing. Some have more than others, God being sovereign in his bounty; and as we deserve nothing from him, it is a mercy that we should be intrusted with the least talent. They who by their station, abilities, or possessions, are intrusted with much, whose capital is large, and influence most extensive, have the more to answer for, and need give the greater diligence; but all have something; the meanest have one immortal soul to care for, infinitely more precious than millions of silver or gold.

2. The improvement each made of the talents committed to them. Two of them immediately set themselves to work, and by their diligence doubled their capital. Thus faithful ministers and Christians laying out themselves in the Redeemer's work and service, see the most abundant blessing attending their labours of love. Their own souls are enriched with knowledge and grace, whilst they are serving others; the church is edified and increased, and immortal souls are gained for Christ, in his account the richest treasure. One of the servants, and he that had least, was negligent and careless; instead of making use of his talent, he went and hid it in the earth: representing herein the character of those, whether ministers or professors of religion, who make no improvement of their natural abilities, or providential endowments; but are so buried in earthly mindedness, and attention to this world's pursuits, that they have neither inclination nor leisure to serve the interests of Christ and of souls.

3. After a long time the master of these servants came to reckon with them: for though the Lord Jesus waits long, he will assuredly come at last; and we must at his tribunal, every one of us, render up our account. Oh! that it might be with joy, and not with sorrow!

[1.] The faithful servants with readiness appeared, and gave up their accounts, highly to their master's satisfaction, who failed not abundantly to reward their diligence. He that had five talents had gained other five: he that had two had doubled them; both therefore are received with the same token of approbation, and partake of the same rewards. Thus in the day of Christ, the faithful ministers and disciples of Jesus acknowledging the trust committed to them as a matter of grace, will produce full evidence of their diligence and profiting, and, whether it be less or more of the gifts of nature or providence which they have possessed, their Lord will graciously accept the improvement they have made, will commend their fidelity, and abundantly reward them; exalting them to a throne of glory in his eternal kingdom, and admitting them into the participation of those unspeakable and never ending joys which are at his right hand for evermore; a reward indeed infinitely exceeding all their services. But as it was through grace they received their talents, through grace alone were enabled to improve them; so it is of grace, not of debt, they receive the recompense so far beyond all they could desire or deserve.

[2.] The slothful servant next appears, and fain would excuse his own negligence by the most unjust reflection upon his gracious master; pretending apprehensions of his austerity and rigorous exactions, as if he expected to reap where he had neither manured the soil nor sown the seed: producing therefore the talent, and pleading fear, he hopes his lord will be satisfied with his own, and not disapprove his care of hiding it, that he might restore it entire at his return. Such are the sentiments, pleas, and excuses of the false and faithless disciple. (1.) He hath hard thoughts of God, and thinks his demands too rigorous and severe, desirous to lay the blame of his sins on him rather than himself. (2.) He is under the bondage of fear; the little he affects to do proceeds from a slavish principle: and where this reigns, no acceptable service can be rendered to God. (3.) He depends for his acceptance with God on a negative religion, and thinks it very sufficient if he can plead he hath done no harm, hath not been so bad as others, nor indulged in those excesses which they fell into; though he can produce neither the works of faith, nor labours of love. (4.) He presumes on the validity of his plea, and sees not that there is a lie in his right hand.

[3.] Convicted out of his own mouth, judgment is pronounced on him. His sloth and wickedness were evident; and to be idle in the service of God, is highly criminal. His very excuse showed self-contradiction: since if he had so austere a person to deal with, at least he should have given the money into a banker's hands, where it would have been equally safe, and borne lawful interest. Note, The sinner's excuses in the day of judgment will but prove his guilt more evident: if God was the hard Master he pretends, he ought to have been at more pains to please him, and more diligent to improve the measure of gifts or grace, however small, which was vouchsafed him. Justly therefore doth sentence proceed, take the talent from him; for they who use not the gifts, means, and mercies, temporal or spiritual, which they enjoy, deserve to forfeit them; and give it unto him who hath ten talents; God thus graciously rewarding the fidelity and diligence of his servants with an increase of blessings, adding to the store they have improved, whilst he often strips off even the profession of the hypocrites, and deprives them of the common gifts of nature, providence, or gospel privileges which they before enjoyed. Nor doth the unprofitable servant's punishment rest in the mere loss of what he possessed: but in the sufferings to which he shall be doomed, when cast into the outer darkness, where there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. Note, (1.) Hell is the place of the sinner's torment; and the miseries of that dismal mansion, the direst expressions of human agony and distress can but faintly represent. (2.) If the slothful and unprofitable meet so fearful a doom, where will the extravagant and abandoned appear, who have squandered instead of hiding the talent, and abused it to the most immediate dishonour and injury of the Master who intrusted them therewith?

31. ¶ [m] When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: 32. And before him [n] shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats: 33. [o] And he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. 34. [p] Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: 35. [q] For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; 36. Naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited * me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me. 37. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? 38. When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee? 39. Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? 40. And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, [r] Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me. 41. Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, [s] Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels. 42. [t] For I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; 43. I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye clothed me not; sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not. 44. Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee? 45. Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, [u] Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me. 46. [x] And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal.

m Job 19. 25. Zech. 14. 5. ch. 16. 27. & 19. 28. Acts 1. 11. & 3. 21. & 17. 13. Jude 14. 1 Thes. 4. 16. 2 Thes. 1. 7, 8. Heb. 9. 28. Phil. 2. 9, 10. Rev. 1. 7. & 3. 21. & 20. 11. & 22. 12, 20.

n Joel 3. 11—14. Rom. 14. 10, 12. 2 Cor. 5. 10. Rev. 20. 12. ch. 13. 49. Ezek. 20. 38. & 34. 17, 22. Mal. 3. 18.

o Ps. 110. 1. Heb. 1. 3. Rev. 3. 21. ch. 24. 51. Ezek. 34. 17—22. 1 Thes. 4. 16, 17.

p Heb. 9. 28. 2 Tim. 4. 8. Eph. 1. 3—5. John 14. 2. ch. 20. 23. Rom. 8. 17. 1 Cor. 2. 9. Mark 10. 40. Heb. 11. 16. 1 Pet. 1. 3, 9. Rev. 21. 7.

q Is. 58. 7. Ezek. 18. 7. Heb. 13. 1—3. & 6. 10. 1 Tim. 5. 10. Jam. 1. 27. & 2. 15, 16. 2 Tim. 1. 16.

* The English word visited does not sufficiently express the import of the Greek verb here; when the subject of discourse is a sick person, or one in distress. Campbell renders it, Ye assisted me.

r Ch. 10. 42. Mark 9. 41. Prov. 14. 21, 31. & 19. 17. Heb. 6. 10.

s Ps. 6. 8. & 1. 5. & 109. 17. ch. 7. 23. Luke 13. 27. ch. 3. 12. & 8. 12. & 13. 42, 50. 2 Thes. 1. 9. Is. 66. 24. Rev. 14. 10, 11. & 20. 9, 15. Mark 9. 44, 46, 48. 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude 6.

t Jam. 2. 13. Deut. 23. 4. Judg. 1. 7. ch. 7. 2. Ps. 18. 26. Jam. 2. 13—16. 1 John 3. 17. Amos 6. 6.

u Prov. 14. 31. & 17. 5. & 21. 13. Acts 9. 5. Zech. 2. 8. Ps. 105. 15.

x Dan. 12. 2. John 5. 29. Rev. 14. 11. & 20. 10, 15. & 3. 21. & 7. 15—17. & 21. 7. & 22. 14. 1 John 3. 2. & 2. 25. Ps. 16. 10, 11. & 17. 15. & 13. 24, 26.

Verses 31—46. Without a parable, our Lord proceeds in these verses to give a delineation of that awful process which will be observed in the great day of final judgment: may it awaken our minds to prepare for it! We have,

1. The majesty of the eternal Judge displayed. The Son of man, the incarnate Jesus, who once suffered on a cross, and is now exalted to the crown, all power being given him in heaven and in earth; at his bar shall the nations be assembled, and every individual of the sons of Adam must then appear before him, to receive, according to the decisions of his justice, everlasting happiness or eternal torment. In the glory of essential Deity, with the peculiar dignity of Mediator, shall he be revealed; the myriads of bright angelic hosts shall grace his train, and stand the ready ministers to execute his orders; whilst seated on a throne of glory, brighter than the sun when he goeth forth in his strength, every eye shall see him, and from his lips expect their irrevocable doom. Shall I be there? my soul, tremble at the thought, and give all diligence to be found of him in peace.

2. The all-discerning eye of Jesus, incapable of mistaking the true characters of men, shall now make the final separation. His sheep, who in faith unfeigned, and love without dissimulation, followed him the true Shepherd, shall, in distinguished honour, be placed high at his right hand; whilst the goats, the hypocrites and impenitent, whose hearts remain uncleansed from their native filthiness, who lived and died in sin unpardoned, shall be degraded to the left with shame, the prelude to their approaching fearful sentence. Reader, consider where shall thy place be?

3. The faithful shall be received with the most endearing welcome. Then, when he shall have made the separation, and no one spot remains among the glorious host, addressing himself with every endearment of voice and aspect, the King, whose word is with power, and his sentence unchangeable, he shall say unto them, Come ye, the everlasting objects of my love, whom by grace I have chosen and called, and who have followed me in the regeneration; come to be for ever with me, to behold, and partake of my glory, ye blessed children of my Father, honoured with this distinguished title; though despised, abhorred of men, precious to the God of heaven, blessed with his present and eternal favour; come, inherit the kingdom, as joint-heirs with me; a kingdom that cannot be moved, eternal in the heavens; compared with which all earthly grandeur vanishes, as the glow-worm before the meridian sun; a kingdom of never-fading glory, prepared by the power and grace of the Almighty, on purpose to crown the felicity of his chosen, and this from the foundation of the world. From eternity the plan was laid; in the creation the design appeared; and now the thrones are ready to receive you, that you may reign with me for ever and ever. With what rapture and delight, with what joy unspeakable and full of glory will the redeemed hear this address from the mouth of their adored Judge, of their beloved Lord! Oh that my lot may be amongst these saints in light!

4. Christ mentions the evidences of their relation to him as his people, clearly shown in the regard paid for his sake to their brethren in affliction and distress: the destitute, hungry, and naked their hands were open to relieve; the sick were cheered by their presence and sweet counsel; and all the horrors of a prison kept them not from visiting the faithful there confined for the testimony of Jesus Christ, supporting their wants, and not ashamed of their bonds. Works of genuine charity these, which, though in no wise meritorious, or challenging a reward at his hands, Jesus remembers, and in the riches of his grace is pleased to mention to their honour, as undoubted tokens of their faith unfeigned. Surprised to hear their Lord make mention of their poor insignificant services, and, with deep humility, conscious how little they deserved it at his hands, the righteous were ready to question and disclaim the works attributed to them. They never saw, at least the most of them, their Lord in the flesh, and cannot hear without some confusion his declarations with regard to their duties; when they ever blushed to think how defective they had been: but the King from his throne shall answer with strongest assurances of his kind acceptance of their conduct, that he regards what they did for the meanest of his disciples whom in his infinite condescension he is pleased to call, my brethren, as done unto himself. He interprets our practice by our principles; it is not so much the duty, as the spirit in which it is performed, that he respects. The least deed of charity, even a cup of cold water, when bestowed with a desire to his glory, and proceeding from love to him, shall be remembered with distinguished honour. And in the least of his poor people Jesus is still present with us; and what we bestow to relieve their wants, will be equally acceptable to him as if we had visited him in the days of his flesh, and ministered to him of our substance. What an engagement and encouragement this to every work and labour of love!

5. Sentence is passed on those at the left hand. With terror in his voice, frowns of terrible ire, the Judge shall pronounce the unchangeable decree. Depart from me, ye objects of my abhorrence, whose guilt and impenitence provoke my indignation; be for ever banished from my presence, and therewith from all bliss, and ease, and happiness, for ever. Depart ye cursed, on whom my wrath eternally abides, and all the penalties of a broken law; vengeance shall pursue you to the bottomless pit; thither must ye be driven, into everlasting fire, to dwell in flames that never can be quenched, where an agonizing body adds to the misery of the tortured soul; and as intolerable as the torment is, so eternal is the suffering; no ray of hope shall ever cheer the horrid gloom: there is neither prospect of an end, nor remission of the torture: but black despair adds bitterness inexpressible to every pang the damned feel: and this not originally designed for you; but prepared for the devil and his angels, whom ye have chosen to imitate; his service to obey, his works to follow, and therefore with him must suffer; alike in sin, alike in punishment. With such companions to spend eternity, how terrible! in such torments to lie down, how intolerable! Oh sin, sin, what hast thou done!

6. The reason of the sentence is given, and the criminals' plea overruled. The instances of their guilt are produced, drawn from the omissions of those duties which the righteous practised, the sure evidences of the want of that faith which worketh by love. Engrossed with selfish considerations, negligent and at ease, they cared not for the distresses of the miserable, nor sought to alleviate them: were unconcerned what the faithful suffered for their Master's sake; and if at any time humanity, sensibility to distress, ostentation, or self-complacence opened their purses to the relief of indigence, their gifts never flowed from the divine principle of love to Jesus and his brethren, nor were directed to his glory alone, therefore they were as reprobate silver. They object indeed to the charge, and, because they never saw Christ in the flesh, presume they cannot be accused of thus neglecting him; but the plea is frivolous. Christ is one with every member of his church, suffers in them, and with them; and every insult, slight, or neglect shown to them, he reckons done to himself. And this should comfort the despised and suffering servants of Jesus, he feels, and takes a part in all their troubles; and let those who treat them with indignity tremble. They may pretend indeed, they mean to discountenance and discourage a deluded sect; to ridicule or suppress a company of enthusiastic religionists, and the like: but men need well consider what they do, and whether they act clearly on the authority of their Bibles, and under the influence of fervent charity, lest a persecuted Jesus should rise up terribly to avenge his own and his people's wrongs. If the doom of the negligent, the unmerciful, and uncharitable be so dreadful, what will be the case with the unjust, and the persecutors of God's people?

7. The sentence is no sooner pronounced than executed. These shall go away into everlasting punishment; there is no appeal from Christ's bar, nor escape from his judgment; the doom is irrevocable; the execution immediate. Driven from his presence, they are cast into the burning lake, and the smoke of their torments ascendeth up for ever and ever. But the righteous, who in their Redeemer were found complete, and in their characters, by his grace approved as faithful, shall go into life eternal; to the enjoyment of God in his kingdom and glory, to partake of all the blessedness which the boundless love and power of an all-sufficient God can bestow on his most favoured children; their holiness and happiness perfected, and their bliss secured for eternity.

CHAP. XXVI.—anno domini, 33.

The cross of Christ is the Christian's glory. We here see him entering on the scene of his sufferings. We have, 1. The preface to them. [1.] The previous notice given by him of them to his disciples, ver. 1, 2. [2.] The rulers' conspiracy against him, ver. 3—5. [3.] The anointing of his head at a supper in Bethany, ver. 6—13. [4.] Judas' bargain with the priests to betray him, ver. 14—16. [5.] Christ's eating the passover with his disciples, ver. 17—25. [6.] His instituting the Lord's supper, and his discourse with his disciples after it, ver. 26—35. 2. His entrance upon them, and some of the particulars of them. (1.) His agony in the garden, ver. 36—46. (2.) The seizing of him by the officers, with Judas' help, ver. 47—56. (3.) His arraignment before the chief priest, and his condemnation in his court, ver. 57—68. (4.) Peter's denying him, ver. 69—75.

1. AND [a] it came to pass, when Jesus had finished all these sayings, he said unto his disciples, 2. [b] Ye know that after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of man is betrayed to be crucified. 3. ¶ [c] Then assembled together the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders of the people, unto the palace of the high priest, who was called Caiaphas, 4. And consulted that they might take Jesus by subtilty, and kill him. 5. But they said, [d] Not on the feast day, * lest there be an uproar among the people.

[a] John 13. 1. with 17. 4.

[b] Mark 14. 1, 2. Luke 22. 1, 2. John 13. 18.

[c] John 11. 47—53. Acts 4. 25—28. ch. 21. 3. Is. 53. 2, 3. Ps. 2. 1, 2. & 64. 4. & 41. 7. & 56. 6. & 22. 12, 13.

[d] Gen. 3. 1. ch. 21. 26. & 14. 5. Luke 20. 6. John 7. 12, 40. Prov. 21. 30. & 19. 21.

* Literally, the festival; the day of the paschal sacrifice.

Verses 1—5. The time was now at hand fixed in the eternal counsels, when Messiah, the prince, should be cut off for the sins of his people.

1. He gives his disciples notice of his betrayal and approaching crucifixion, that they might be the less surprised. He had finished his discourse on the sufferings they might expect, and their encouragement to bear up under them, and now he was going himself to set them the bright example they should copy. The views of a suffering Christ should support every suffering Christian. Within two days the dreadful plot should be executed: and it is as sure as if already done, that he is betrayed to be crucified.

2. Just at this time the chief priests, scribes, and elders, the members of the Sanhedrim, and the men of highest authority among the Jews, exasperated now beyond measure, and resolving upon the death of Jesus, assembled to consult upon the properest means of accomplishing their bloody purpose. The high priest's palace was the place where these conspirators met; and having weighed the dangers of an uproar which might ensue, if on the feast-day they should attempt to arrest him amidst the concourse of people who attended him, they resolved, if possible, to watch their opportunity to seize him privately, and either thus to make away with him, or get him condemned by the Roman governor, and execute him as a malefactor, on account of crimes they were ready to lay to his charge. Note, The fear of man often restrains those from wickedness, who are unawed by any fear of God.

6. ¶ [e] Now when Jesus was in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper, 7. There came unto him a woman having an alabaster box of very precious ointment, * and poured it on his head, as he sat at meat. 8. But when his disciples saw it, they [f] had indignation, saying, To what purpose is this waste? 9. For this ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor. 10. When Jesus understood it, he said unto them, [g] Why trouble ye the woman? for she hath wrought a good work upon me. 11. [h] For ye have the poor always with you; but me ye have not always. 12. For in that she hath poured this ointment on my body, she did it [i] for my burial.† 13. Verily I say unto you, [k] Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her.

e John 11. 1, 2. & 12. 3—9. Mark 14. 3—9. Luke 7. 37, 38. ver. 12.

* Rather, balsam.

f Eccl. 4. 4. Job 5. 2. Mark 14. 4. John 12. 4—6. Judas stirred up the rest.

g Ps. 109. 31. Job 42. 7, 8. 2 Cor. 10. 18.

h Deut. 15. 11. John 12. 8. & 13. 33. & 16. 5, 28. & 17. 11. Acts 3. 21. with ch. 18. 20. & 28. 20. John 14. 19. Heb. 13. 5, 8.

i Ch. 27. 57—60. Mark 15. 42—47. Luke 23. 50—56. John 19. 38—42.

† Rather, it is to embalm me.

k Mark 16. 15. ch. 28. 19. Rom. 1. 8. & 10. 18. & 15. 19. Col. 1. 6, 23. Is. xlii, xlix, liv, lx.

Verses 6—13. Jesus, though he spent the day at Jerusalem, retired at even to Bethany, a village at a little distance from thence, and was now in the house of Simon the leper: one of those probably who had experienced his healing power, and had become his faithful disciple. We are told,

1. The singular mark of respect shown him by a gracious woman who was present when they sat at meat. She poured upon his head a box of precious ointment, as the profession of her faith in him as the Messiah, the anointed of God, and as a token of her love to him, as her adored Lord and Saviour.

Some have imagined that this occurrenee is the same with that related, John xii. 1. and they reconcile the accounts by supposing, that this woman, there said to be Mary, Lazarus' sister, who with his family were invited to the entertainment, might not only anoint our Saviour's head, but his feet also; though one of the evangelists mentions the one, and the other the other; and that this, though here introduced, was done six days before. Others suppose they are two distinct occurrences, differing in time, place, and manner, and this to me seems most probable.

2. The offence the disciples took at the matter. They among themselves censured the action as an unnecessary waste of what might have been more profitably employed, if the money, so valuable a box of ointment would bring, had been given to the poor; and perhaps meant tacitly to blame their Master for permitting this to be done, and not discountenancing the woman. Note, (1.) Charity bids us put the best construction on what is dubious; and we should be very careful, how we censure those of over-doing or as guilty of imprudence, who go farther than we dare or care to do. Probably the fault we complain of will be found more justly retorted; and that not their intemperate rashness, but our lukewarmness and want of zeal and love for Jesus is to be blamed. (2.) That is never waste which is employed for Christ and his service.

3. Christ rebukes his disciples, and vindicates this gracious woman. He knew their murmurs, and expostulates with them on the unjustness of their indignation, why trouble ye the woman, by such harsh judging, and unkind sentiments of her conduct? The work was both suitable and seasonable, deserving commendation, not censure. Among the poor, for whom they expressed such jealousy, they would always find objects to exercise their charity, but his bodily presence with them was short, and therefore this act of respect was not only pleasing to him, but had a particular view which they knew not: it was intended for his burial, as an embalming of his body though now alive, which she would not have an opportunity to do when he was dead; and this she did either by revelation, or the Holy Ghost directed her to the action for this end. So far therefore from issuing to her reproach, it should be mentioned to her perpetual honour as the evidence of her genuine faith and love, wherever the gospel should be preached in the whole world. Note, (1.) If we knew the principles and motives on which others act, we should often see abundant reason to approve that conduct which now we condemn. (2.) It is a real grief to a gracious soul to be censured for well-doing, especially by those whose approbation he had reason to expect; but our judgment is with the Lord, and our reward with our God. (3.) We never need want opportunities of doing good, if we have hearts to do it; objects of distress every where abound. (4.) Those who honour Jesus he will honour. A name in his records, or the book of life of the Lamb, secures immortal fame and glory.

14. ¶ [l] Then one of the twelve, called Judas Iscariot, went unto the chief priests, 15. And said unto them, What will ye give me, and I will deliver him unto you? And they covenanted with him for [m] thirty pieces of silver. 16. And from that time he sought opportunity to betray him.

l Mark 14. 10, 11. Luke 22. 3—6. ch. 10. 4. Ps. 41. 9. & 55. 12, 14. John 6. 70, 71. & 13. 27.

m Zech. 11. 12, 13. ch. 27. 3. Exod. 21. 32. i. e. £1 8*s.* 5½*d.*

Verses 14—16. The traitor Judas provoked with the vindication of the woman, and vexed at the reproof which he peculiarly felt, as having been the chief murmurer and instigator of the rest, given now up to the devil's power, presently arose full of malice and resentment, and went directly to the chief priests, who wanted, but could not hope to find, so fit an instrument for their hellish purpose. We may not startle that one of the twelve was a traitor, or had a devil: where shall we find, among professors in general, so small a proportion of hypocrites and apostates? We have,

1. The offer he made. What will ye give me, and I will deliver him unto you? This was the very thing they desired: they dared not to seize him openly; nothing therefore could be more opportune than to have a traitor among his followers, who could introduce them secretly, that they might arrest him without an uproar. The love of money, backed by a resentment at a supposed affront, hurried him on; and though conscious of his Master's innocence, he does not presume to vindicate his own baseness by pretending the discovery of any crime, or daring to appear as an evidence against him; yet resolved to ruin him, he proposes this villanous treachery. Note, (1.) Many want only opportunity and temptation, to show the baseness and hypocrisy of their hearts. (2.) None wound the cause so deep as those who from apostles turn apostates, and employ their bitter enmity against the gospel they once preached and espoused. (3.) When the heart is bent on mischief, the devil will suggest the means. (4.) The love of money is the fatal bait by which thousands have perished, and for gold have basely sold their God.

2. The chief priests eagerly embraced the offer, and immediately the bargain is struck for thirty shekels of silver, in value about three pounds fifteen shillings, which was by law the price of a slave, Exod. xxi. 32. the goodly price he was valued at by them, Zech. xi. 13. Note, (1.) They who sell themselves to work wickedness, often find the wages wretched as the service is vile. (2.) Many cry out against the falsehood of this traitor, yet by crafty bargains, and inordinate profit on their goods, how often have they lied, deceived, defrauded, and sold their Master for less than thirty pieces of silver?

3. From that time Judas sought opportunity to betray him, that acquainting them with his retirement, they might seize him in the absence of the multitude. The way of sin is headlong, one crime draws on another, the conscience is hardened by the repetition of guilt, and onward the miserable slave of Satan is hurried to the precipice of eternal ruin.

17. ¶ [n] Now the first day of the feast of unleavened bread, the disciples came to Jesus, saying unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the passover? 18. And he said, Go into the city to such a man, and say unto him, [o] The Master saith, [p] My time is at hand; I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples. 19. [q] And the disciples did as Jesus had appointed them; and they made ready the passover. 20. ¶ [r] Now, when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve. 21. And as they did eat, he said, Verily I say unto you, that [s] one of you shall betray me. 22. And they were exceeding sorrowful, and began every one of them to say unto him, Lord, is it I? 23. And he answered and said, [t] He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish, the same shall betray me. 24. [u] The Son of man goeth as it is written of him: but [x] woe unto that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! it had been good for that man if he had not been born. 25. Then Judas, which betrayed him, [y] answered and said, Master, is it I? He said unto him, [z] Thou hast said.

n Mark 14. 12—17. Luke 22. 7—13. John 18. 28. Exod. 12. 6. & 13. 3, 6. Lev. 23. 5, 6. Num. 9. 3. & 28. 16, 17. Deut. 16. 1—4.

o Ch. 8. 25. & 21. 3. & 23. 8, 10. John 20. 16. & 11. 8, 23. Acts 10. 36.

p Ver. 2. John 7. 30. & 12. 23. & 17. 1. & 13. 1. Luke 22. 53.

q 1 Sam. 15 22. Exod. 23. 21. John 15. 14. Deut. 12. 28.

r Mark 14 18—25. Luke 22. 14—30. John 13. 21—34. Exod. 12. 4, 6. Deut. 16. 1.

s John 6. 70, 71. ver. 2. Ps. 41. 9. & 55. 12—14.

t Ps. 41. 9. & 55. 12—14. John 13. 18, 26. Luke 22. 21, 22.

u Gen. 3. 15. Ps. 22. 1—21. & 69. 1—21. Is. 52. 14. & 53. 1—12. & 50. 5, 6. Dan. 9. 24, 26. Zech. 13. 7.

x Ps. 55. 15—23. & cxx. ch. 27. 3—5. Acts 1. 16—20.

y Ps. 94. 7. Prov. 30. 20. Jer. 8. 12. & 2. 35.

z Ver. 64. John 18. 37. ch. 27. 11. i. e. it is just so.

Verses 17—25. We have here our Lord's celebration of his last passover.

1. The preparation for that solemnity. The first day of the feast of unleavened bread, when the paschal lamb was to be killed and eaten in the evening; the disciples presuming their Master would keep the passover at Jerusalem, though they knew of no house ready for his and their reception, asked him where they must prepare the paschal supper? and Christ, at the same time that he gave them a striking proof of his omniscience, directs them to a person who, on delivering the message he gave them, would show them the place they sought. Say unto him, who was probably a disciple, and well knew Jesus, the Master saith, My time is at hand, the time of his departure: I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples; this was therefore the last kind office he would be able to show him. The disciples, without hesitation, obeyed: found all things as he had said; prepared the passover; and at even when he came, the twelve sat down with him at the table. Note, (1,) Christ must send to prepare himself a welcome in our hearts, when he saith, I will, the work is done. (2.) When we follow Christ in his commands, he will make us feast with him in his comforts.

2. During the supper he took occasion to inform them of a circumstance which many of them would be shocked to hear; and this was, that one of them should betray him. He well knew the traitor and the plot, and gave them this notice for the confirmation of their faith, when the thing should come to pass. Exceedingly distressed at the thought that he should be betrayed, and more that one of them should be so perfidious, with anxious solicitude the eleven began severally to ask him, Lord, is it I? each perhaps trembling at the deceitfulness and treachery of their hearts; or rather grieved at the suspicion, and conscious of their innocence, desired to clear themselves from such an imputation. Just then, it seems, Judas stretched out his hand to dip the bread into the dish, and by this circumstance Christ pointed out the traitor; he that dippeth his hand with me in the dish, the same shall betray me; which he mentions, to make the perfidy appear more base, and to show the fulfilment of the Scripture; whilst he adds a terrible commination, if any thing might startle the hardened conscience of this apostate. The Son of man must indeed, according to the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God be thus betrayed, but wo to the traitor; it had been good for that man if he had not been born, a convincing proof of the eternal misery of every damned soul. With impudent effrontery, unabashed, though conscious of his guilt, Judas, who had been silent before, perceiving himself pointed at, endeavoured to brave it out; either fancying that Christ could not know of his guilt, or would not directly charge him with it, and therefore said, Lord, is it I? He said unto him, Thou hast said. The reply is express: he was the man. Note, (1.) True humility will ever make us jealous over these vile hearts; we know not to what we may be tempted, nor how weak we are to resist: nothing is too bad for the best to do if left one moment to themselves; therefore we should never be high-minded, but fear. (2.) The more nearly we have been connected with Jesus, in the participation of his ordinances, the more aggravated will be the guilt of unfaithfulness. (3.) Many put a bold face upon a bad cause, and they may indeed escape the judgment of men, but God trieth the heart.

26. ¶ [a] And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and * blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to his disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is my body. 27. And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; 28. For this is my [b] blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins. 29. But I say a 1 Cor. 11. 23—29. & 10. 4, 16, 17. Mark 14. 22—25. Luke 22. 19, 20. John 6. 55.

* Many Greek copies have, gave thanks

b Exod. 24. 8. Zech. 9. 11. Heb. 9. 14—17 & 13. 20. ch. 1. 21. & 20. 28. Rom. 5. 10, 11 15—21. Jer. 31. 34. Heb. 8. 10—12.

unto you, [c] I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you [d] in my Father's kingdom. 30. ¶ And when they had sung an [e] hymn, [f] they went out into the mount of Olives.

c Luke 22. 16. Ps. 104. 15. Acts 10. 41.
d Ch. 3. 2. & 4. 17. 1 Cor. 15. 24, 28. Luke 22. 29, 30. e Or psalm, i. e. Ps. cxiii—cxviii.
f John 18. 1, 4. Luke 20. 39. Acts 1. 12.

Verses 26—30. All Jewish ordinances were now about to be abrogated, and among the rest the passover. In its room Christ here institutes the great gospel ordinance called from hence, The Lord's Supper, where he is held forth as our passover, the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world, and we are invited to come and feast thereon. The paschal supper being ended,

1. Our Lord took bread which lay by him, and blessing it, broke, and gave to his disciples, commanding them to eat; and explaining the import of what he did, saying, this is my body, the representation of the sacrifice I am about to offer for your redemption, when my body shall be thus broken on the tree, the constant memorial of which shall thus be observed in my church to all ages, as the passover perpetuated the memory of Israel's deliverance from Egypt.

The doctrine of transubstantiation raised from hence is too absurd to need confutation; and not only gives the lie to our senses, and contradicts the very nature of a sacrament, but would make Christ eat his own flesh and blood.

2. He took the cup, and with thanksgiving and prayer having consecrated the wine, gave it to them, and commanded them all to drink of it, as the representation and memorial of that blood which he was now just ready to shed, to confirm and establish the new testament, or covenant, and to procure for them all spiritual blessings, especially that chief of all, the remission of sins; and for as many also, as afterwards, trusting on his atonement, should plead the redemption hereby purchased for them, from sin and guilt for ever.

3. He takes a solemn farewell. No more would he ever drink of this passover cup: the very ordinance itself was henceforth abolished, to give place to this new institution in the gospel church. No more would they enjoy this free and familiar converse with him, till the day, the glorious day arrived, when, admitted to his eternal kingdom, they should partake of those unutterable joys (signified by the new wine) which are at his right hand for evermore. Note, A dying saint with delight takes his farewell of all the comforts he ever enjoyed here below; sweet as ordinances, the word, communion with God, were to his soul, he is going where, instead of the drops he tasted here below, he shall be admitted to drink of the living streams of eternal consolations, that flow uninterrupted, ever new, from the throne of God.

4. They closed the solemnity with a hymn, and never is the song of praise more suitable than on such an occasion. Hereupon departing from the house, he retired, by moonlight, to the mount of Olives, the place appointed for the scene of his agonizing sorrows.

31. Then saith Jesus unto them, [g] All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, [h] I will smite the Shepherd, and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad. 32. But after I am risen again, [i] I will go before you into Galilee. 33. [k] Peter answered and said unto him, Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended. 34. Jesus said unto him, [l] Verily I say unto thee, That this night, before the cock crow, † thou shalt deny me thrice. 35. Peter said unto him, [m] Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee. [n] Likewise also said all the disciples.

g Mark 14. 27—31. John 16. 32. ch. 11. 6
h Zech. 13. 7. Is. 53. 5, 10. Rom. 8. 32. Job 19. 13—16. Ps. 33. 11.
i Mark 14. 28. & 16. 7. ch. 28. 10, 16.
k Mark 14. 29—31, 66—72. Luke 22. 31—34, 54—62. John 13. 36—38. & 18. 15—27. ver. 69—75. Ps. 30. 6.
l John 13. 38. 1 Cor. 10. 12.
† His principal crowing, about three o'clock in the morning.
m Ps. 30. 6. Prov. 16. 18. & 29. 23.
n Exod. 19. 8. & 24. 3, 7.

Verses 31—35. In their way to the mount of Olives, we are told,

1. The prediction of his sufferings, and of their flight, which Christ delivered to his disciples. He foretells them of the offence they would take at the treatment he must meet that very night, insomuch that every one of them would desert him, and fulfil the Scripture, Zech. xiii. 7. but though he should be smitten, and die, as it was prophesied of him, yet he should rise again, and come to them, recover them from their fright and dispersion, and go before them into Galilee, where they would meet him to their unspeakable comfort. Note, (1.) We know not our own weakness till the trying hour comes, and by our falls we are convinced. (2.) We are never safe, and must never be secure. The sweetest seasons of communion with Christ are sometimes succeeded with the sorest temptations. (3.) The Lord is very pitiful: he knoweth our weakness, and doth not cast us off, though for our cowardice and unfaithfulness we so often deserve it: he turns again, and restores the fallen, by his grace bringing them back to his blessed self.

2. Peter, unable to bear such a reflection, with presumptuous confidence engages for his own fidelity, though all the rest should fly. He not only trusted on his own resolutions, but intimates a strong conceit of his superior courage. Note, A haughty spirit is sure to fall. We have lost our footing the moment we begin to think any thing as of ourselves; and if Jesus hath any love to our souls, he will let us feel, by sad experience, our own weakness and corruption.

3. Christ warns him of the delusion he was under, in this self-confidence of boasting: he assures him, that all his vaunted courage would quickly fail him. Yea, that he should not only forsake, but disown him, repeatedly disown him; and that during the present night, before the crowing of the cock announced the approaching return of day. And this he solemnly confirms, Verily I say unto thee. He knew Peter better than Peter knew himself. Note, The forwardest to boast are usually the first and foulest in their falls.

4. Peter still persists in his vain confidence, though warned by him who could not err, and with increasing vehemence, unable to bear the suspicion of denying his Master, solemnly affirms, that he will sooner die than be guilty of such baseness. And all the disciples joined his assertion, unwilling to be outdone by Peter, and equally confident of their own zeal for their Lord. Note, (1.) When death and danger are at a distance, it is easy to boast great things; but when they come, how many stagger! (2.) It is among the follies bound up in the human heart, that we are all apt to think more highly of ourselves than we ought to think; and sad experience is in general needful to bring us to a more humbling view of our weakness and wickedness.

36. ¶ [o] Then cometh Jesus with them unto a place called Gethsemane, and saith unto the disciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder. 37. [p] And he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee, and began to be [q] sorrowful and very heavy. 38. Then saith he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and [r] watch with me. 39. And he went a o Mark 14. 32—42. Luke 22. 39—46. John 18. 1. Heb. 5. 7. Ps. 22. 2.

p Ch. 4. 18, 21. & 16. 16, 23. & 17. 1. & 20. 20. Mark 5. 37.
q Is. 53. 3, 4, 10. John 12. 27. Gal. 2. 13. Heb. 5. 7. Ps. 116. 3. & 18. 4. & 69. 1, 2. & 22. 14.
r Ch. 24. 42. & 25. 13. 1 Pet. 5. 8. Eph. 6. 18, 19.

little farther, and [s] fell on his face, and prayed, saying, [t] O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt. 40. And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, What! could ye not watch with me one hour? 41. [u] Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: [x] the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak. 42. [y] He went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done. 43. And he came and found them asleep again; for their eyes were heavy. 44. And he left them, and went away again, and [z] prayed the third time, saying the same words. 45. Then cometh he to his disciples, and saith unto them, [a] Sleep on now, and take your rest: [b] behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. 46. Rise, let us be going: behold, he is at hand that doth betray me.

s Num. 14. 5. & 16. 22. Deut. 9. 18. 1 Chr. 21. 16.

t Luke 22. 42. John 12. 27. Heb. 5. 7, 8. ch. 20. 22. John 5. 30. & 6. 38. Phil. 2. 8. Acts 21. 14. 2 Sam. 15. 25. & 16. 10, 11.

u Ch. 24. 42. & 25. 13. ver. 38, 43. Mark 13. 33—37. 1 Cor. 16. 13. 1 Pet. 5. 8. Rev. 16. 15. Eph. 6. 18.

x Song 5. 2. Rom. 7. 18, 22. Gal. 5. 17, 24. Ps. 78. 39.

y Ps. 22. 1, 2. & 109. 4. Heb. 5. 7, 8. Phil. 2. 8. Acts 21. 14. 2 Sam. 15. 25. & 16. 10, 11. ch. 6. 10.

z Ps. 109. 4. 2 Cor. 12. 8. Ps. 22. 1, 2. Heb. 5. 7, 8.

a 1 Kin. 18. 27. Eccl. 11. 9. Judg. 10. 14.

b Ver. 18. John 13. 1. Luke 22. 53. ch. 16. 21. & 17. 22, 23. & 20. 18, 19. ver. 2, 11—16. Gen. 13. 13. with ch. 9. 11.

Verses 36—46. With sacred reverence we are called to approach the scene of our Redeemer's agony. The storm of divine vengeance now arose to discharge all its fury on him who bore our sins and carried our sorrows.

1. The place whither he retired was called Gethsemane, an olive-press; for there it pleased the Lord to bruise him, and put him to grief. The companions he took with him, were his disciples, all but Judas: and leaving the others at a distance, with an injunction to sit there, He, with Peter, James, and John, retired into some more secluded part of the garden to pray. They who had seen his transfiguration, are chosen to be witnesses of his deepest humiliation.

2. There his agony began: the sorrows of death compassed him about, and distress and consternation unutterable seized upon his soul. The words in the original are most emphatical; expressive of the heaviest load of grief, perplexity, dejection, and anguish. No outward cause appeared; the conflict was internal: the powers of darkness now rallied their once defeated forces, and summoned up all their fury for this decisive blow. The wrath of an offended God due to the sins of millions of mankind all centred now on their Redeemer, and weighed him down under the intolerable burden. Death, with all its horrors of ignominy, shame, and torture, stood before him; and, worse than ten thousand deaths of the body, the pains of hell got hold upon his soul, the wages of our iniquities.

3. In this distress he acquaints his disciples with the sorrows of his soul, that even now pressed him down to the gates of death, and only would end entirely with his expiring breath: sorrows such as mortal never knew before, and perhaps beyond what even the damned ever felt. He enjoins them to tarry there and watch with him; observe his agony, and be on their guard against their own approaching temptations.

4. He humbly applies to Him, whose terrors he suffered with a troubled mind. Being truly man, as well as God, he could not but wish for relief from pain, from pain so agonizing, and therefore poured out strong crying and tears, Heb. v. 7. He went a little further, that alone he might tread the wine-press of the wrath of God, and there falling on his face, under a load of guilt and misery to the humanity insupportable, he poured out his complaints before his Father, O my Father, for with unshaken faith he still looked through the dark cloud; if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; if, consistent with the glory of the divine perfections and the redemption of his people, these torments may be alleviated or removed, his nature craves relief: nevertheless, if all I suffer is needful to glorify thee and to secure their salvation, I am all resignation; I bow my neck, and say, Not as I will, but as thou wilt; his human will, with perfect acquiescence, submits to the divine. Note, (1.) In all our sorrows it is good to make God our refuge, and in prayer to pour out our griefs into his compassionate bosom. (2.) Humble desire to be delivered from our sufferings is perfectly consistent with the most unfeigned resignation under them. (3.) Whether our troubles are removed or not, it is a sure token for good when we can say, Not my will, but thine be done.

5. Arising from the earth, he returned to his three disciples, and, lo! astonishing to tell, whilst their Master was agonizing they were asleep. Oppressed with grief, their senses were stupified, and their eyes closed: so weak and wretched is man, left for a moment to himself. But Christ rouses them from their slumbers, and gently chides their disobedience to his commands, and inattention to his sufferings; and directing his discourse to Peter, who lately appeared so forward in his professions of fidelity and zeal, he said, What! is it possible! asleep! and I overwhelmed with anguish. Could not ye, from whom I had such expectations, and whose plighted vows of constancy till death promised other conduct, could ye not watch with me one hour? so short the space, so little difficult the command. Watch and pray; you have need to be awake, if not to sympathize and join with me, at least to guard yourselves, that ye enter not into temptation, and by this sloth and drowsiness be exposed to fall more easily, when the approaching hour of your temptation comes. Yet, whilst he thus gently rebukes and admonishes, he also pities and kindly excuses them, the spirit truly is willing; he knew their hearts were really attached to him, their love without dissimulation, and that their desire was to serve him: but the flesh is weak; the corruptible body weighed down the soul, and the remaining corruption and indwelling evil hindered them from doing the things which they would; and he knew whereof they were made, forgave, and cast the mantle of love over the failings he could not but condemn. Note, (1.) Slothfulness and neglect of prayer in time of temptation, are the sure forerunners of a fall. We need always watch; but when we are forewarned of danger near, we should double our guard, and be more importunate at a throne of grace. (2.) Whilst we dwell in these bodies of flesh and corruption, we shall find sad warrings within; and they whose souls are most sincere and sensible, will groan most, being burdened with this body of sin and death, and long to get rid of it. (3.) We have a compassionate High Priest, who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and will not withdraw his love from us when we fall under temptation, but in mercy will restore our souls to paths of righteousness for his name's sake.

6. Our Lord again retires, repeats his fervent supplications, and submits to all his Father's will. Again he returns and finds his disciples sleeping; their heavy eyelids were involuntarily closed, and all his remonstrances were ineffectual to keep them awake and watchful. The third time he withdraws, redoubles his prayers, renews his self-resignation, and is heard: though the cup may not pass from him, he is strengthened to bear the load, and patiently to yield up his soul to God. Coming to his disciples, still they sleep, and now he consigns them to their repose, if they can or dare any longer indulge themselves when his foes and theirs are now at hand. It is high time to awake when the traitor is so near. Arise, let us be going, not to flee from the sufferings before him, but to meet them: since the hour, fixed in the divine decree, is come, Jesus is prepared, and resigns himself into the hands of his enemies. Note, (1.) Though we have not an immediate answer, we must pray and not faint. (2.) Repetition of the same requests in prayer is often far removed from the vain repetitions which our Lord condemns. Reiterated cries in the same words bespeak the warmest importunity of desire. (3.) When calls and warnings raise us not from spiritual slumbers, it is a mercy if Jesus sends heavier judgments, or corrections to rouse our sluggish souls.

47. ¶ And, [c] while he yet spake, lo, Judas, one of the twelve, came, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves from the chief priests and elders of the people. 48. [d] Now he that betrayed him gave them a sign, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he; hold him fast. 49. And forthwith he came to Jesus, and said, Hail, Master; and kissed him. 50. And Jesus said unto him, [e] Friend, wherefore art thou come? Then came they and [f] laid hands on Jesus, and took him. 51. ¶ And behold, [g] one of them which were with Jesus stretched out his hand, and drew his sword, and struck a servant of the high priest, and smote off his ear. 52. Then said Jesus unto him, [h] Put up again thy sword into its place; [i] for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword. 53. Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and [k] he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels? 54. But how then [l] shall the scriptures be fulfilled, that thus it must be? 55. In that same hour said Jesus to the multitudes, Are ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and staves for to take me? I sat daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye laid no hold on me. 56. But all this was done [m] that the scriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled. [n] Then all the disciples forsook him, and fled.

c Mark 34. 43—52. Luke 22. 47—53. John 18. 3—11. Acts 1. 16. ver. 55. Ps. 3. 1. & 2. 1, 2. John 18. 3.

d John 18. 3, 12. 2 Sam. 20. 9, 10. Ps. 28. 3. & 55. 21.

e Gr. Companion. Ps. 41. 9. & 55. 13, 14. 2 Sam. 16. 17.

f Lam. 4. 20. Acts 2. 23. John 18. 12.

g John 18. 10. ver. 33, 35.

h John 18. 11. Rom. 12. 19. 1 Pet. 4. 16, 19. 1 Cor. 4. 11, 12. 2 Cor. 10. 3.

i Gen. 9. 6. Ezek. 35. 3. Rev. 13. 10. Ps. 55. 23.

k 2 Kin. 6. 47. Dan. 7. 10. Ps. 91. 11. & 34. 7.

l Is. lii. Ps. 22. 1—21. & 69. 1—21. Gen. 3. 15. Lev. i—vi, xvi. Num. xix, xxviii, xxix. Is. 52. 13. & 50. 5, 6. Dan. 9. 24—26. Zech. 13. 7. Luke 24. 25, 26, 44, 46. Acts 17. 3. & 26. 23.

m Ver. 54. Num. 23. 19. 1 Sam. 15. 29. Tit. 1. 2. Is. 44. 26.

n Ver. 31. John 16. 32. Job 19. 13, 14. Ps. 88. 8, 18. & 38. 11. Is. 63. 3, 5. 2 Tim. 1. 15. & 4. 16.

Verses 47—56. As the words dropped from his lips, his enemies appear to seize him.

1. Judas, who knew the place of his Master's retirement, led the way; one of the twelve, and lately dipping his hand with him in the same dish, now the guide of this savage band, composed of Roman soldiers, and the servants and officers of the chief priests, armed with swords and staves, and under their authority pretending to seize Jesus as a criminal. Thus, whilst good men often sleep unapprized of danger, the wicked are awake and plotting their destruction. It is well for us, that one is our guardian who neither slumbers nor sleeps.

2. He had given them a signal before they set out, lest in the night they should mistake, by the glimmering of torches, the person of Jesus; and this was, that whomsoever he should kiss, that was he whom they should seize and bind. Accordingly, with the most hardened impudence, he no sooner descried his well known Master's face, than he approached with the deepest professions of respect and warmest good wishes, and with a kiss executed his traitorous design. Well knowing his villany, Jesus rebukes his baseness, and with the piercing title of Friend, that should have spoken ten thousand daggers to his heart, replies, Wherefore art thou come? how durst thou be present? What! lost to all shame! adding such impudence to foul ingratitude! Note, The bitterest enmity lurks often under the most plausible professions and apparent civilities.

3. Christ is immediately arrested and bound as a malefactor. He quietly yielded up himself, now his hour was come, and as a criminal submitted to the arrests of divine judgment for our transgressions. Though wicked men indeed meant only to gratify their malice, they fulfilled the determinate counsel of God, Acts ii. 23.

4. Peter, fired with zeal at what he saw, instantly drew his sword, and, attempting a rescue, struck at one of the high priest's servants, who probably appeared very active on that occasion, and cut off his ear. His zeal in itself was commendable; but this exertion of it was neither enjoined nor discreet; and therefore,

5. Christ rebuked him for his rashness, and bid him sheath his sword; for they that take the sword shall perish with the sword. Resistance at present only exposed them to useless danger; but, ere long, they would see those who arrested their Master fall by the hand of the Romans, or in some civil tumult as their own executioners. As for them, the weapons of their warfare were not carnal, but spiritual; patience and prayer were their best defence. Besides, Christ neither needed their help, nor chose to be rescued: if he had, effectual succours were even now at hand: more than twelve legions of angels, upwards of seventy thousand, were ready to appear, one of the least of whom could destroy a world. He had only to ask his Father, and these ministers of flame would attend his orders; but how then should the Scriptures be fulfilled, that thus it must be? and their accomplishment, wherein also was involved the salvation of his people, was far dearer to him than his own safety. It must be that he should suffer, that he might redeem; and therefore he willingly resigned himself as a lamb to the slaughter, Is. liii. 7. Note, (1.) God wants not our services; we mistake when we think our feeble arm of importance to his cause. (2.) Christ's sufferings were voluntary; he might, whenever he pleased, have been released; but his love to sinful souls bound him stronger than the cords of his persecutors. (3.) Surrounded as the people of God are with enemies, still more and mightier are those which are for them than all who can be against them; the innumerable company of angels is their guard, and minister to the heirs of salvation.

6. Christ turns from his disciples to the multitude, and mildly expostulates with them on their present conduct. What use was there in all this armed host? had he behaved as a desperate villain who needed such force to overcome him? or had he fled from public justice, that at midnight, in this clandestine manner, they sought to arrest him? The gentleness and innocence of all his conduct confuted the one; and his public daily appearance in the temple, the other: but the Scripture must be fulfilled, and God's eternal counsels thus receive their accomplishment. Note, They who are the most inveterate enemies of Christ and his church are only instruments in God's hand; whose very wickedness he overrules to bring about the counsels of his own will.

7. His disciples hereupon shamefully deserted him, and fled. Seeing him passively submit, fearing lest Peter's rash action should exasperate the guard, and that they should be murdered, or seized with their Master, each endeavoured to shift for himself and left him alone to bear his burdens. Their baseness and ingratitude herein were highly criminal: but thus it became him to tread the wine-press alone.

o Mark 14. 53—65. Luke 22. 54, 66—71. John 18. 12—14, 19—24. Ps. 22. 16. Acts 3. 32. Is. 53. 7.

57. ¶ ° And they that had laid hold on Jesus led him away to Caiaphas the high priest, where the scribes and the elders were assembled. 58. But Peter followed him afar off unto the high priest's palace, p Ver. 33, 35. Prov. 9. 6. & 13. 20.

and went in, [p] and sat with the servants, q Ps. 27. 12. & 35. 11. Acts 6. 13. 1 Kin. 21. 10, 13.

to see the end. 59. Now the chief priests, and elders, and all the council, r Dan. 6. 4. 1 Pet. 3. 16.

[q] sought false witness against Jesus, to ‡ None that witnessed any thing criminal, or who agreed together.

put him to death; 60. [r] But found none: yea, though many false witnesses

s Jon. 2. 19. ch. 27. 40. Mark 15. 29. Acts 6. 13.

came, yet found they ‡ none. At the last came two false witnesses, 61. And t Is. 53. 7. Acts 8. 32. Ps. 38. 13, 14. ch. 27. 12, 14.

[s] said, This fellow said, [t] I am able to destroy the temple of God, and to build it u Josh. 6. 26. Mark 5. 7. Acts 19. 13. 1 Kin. 22. 16. Lev. 5. 1.

in three days. 62. And the high priest arose, and said unto him, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witness against thee? 63. But Jesus [t] held x Ch. 11. 4, 5. & 16. 16. John 1. 49—51. & 10. 30, 36. & 6. 69. Is. 9. 6, 7.

his peace. And the high priest answered and said unto him, I [u] adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us y Ver. 25. ch. 27. 11. 1 Tim. 6. 13. i. e. It is as thou sayest.

whether thou be [x] the Christ, the Son of God. 64. Jesus saith unto him, [y] Thou hast said: nevertheless I say unto you, z Ps. 110. 1. Dan. 7. 13. ch. 16. 27. & 24. 30. & 25. 31. John 6. 62. Acts 1. 11. Rom. 14. 10. 1 Thes. 4. 16. Rev. 1. 7. & 20. 11.

[z] Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven. 65.

a Lev. 21. 10. 2 Kin. 18. 37. & 19. 1. Gen. 37. 29, 34.

[a] Then the high priest rent his clothes, saying, He hath spoken blasphemy; what further need have we of witnesses? behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy. 66. What think ye? They answered and said, b Lev. 24. 16. Acts 6. 13.

[b] He is guilty of death. 67. [c] Then did they spit in his face, and buffeted him; and others smote him with c Is. 50. 6. & 52. 14. & 53. 3. ch. 27. 30. John 19. 3.

‖ Or rods.

‖ the palms of their hands, 68. [d] Saying,

d Judg. 16. 25. Mark 14. 65. Luke 22. 64. Acts 3. 22.

Prophesy unto us, thou Christ, Who is he that smote thee?

Verses 57—68. Our Lord, being seized as a malefactor, is dragged before the rulers, and his process begun.

1. His judges were his inveterate persecutors, the chief priests, scribes, and elders, who, though in the dead of night, waked to do him mischief, and were now assembled at the palace of Caiaphas, the high priest. Before this confederacy of treacherous men was he presented as a criminal, whilst they sat in judgment upon him. The Lamb of God, now about to be offered for the sins of the world, was thus presented to the priest, (see Lev. xvii. 5.) before he bled on the altar.

2. Peter, whose fright began a little to abate, solicitous about his Master's fate, followed at a distance the crowd, and mingling with the servants in the hall, thought he might, unnoticed, there hear the issue of the trial, and see whether Christ would deliver himself by some miraculous act of power, or what punishment they would inflict upon him. Thus, without a call, having thrust himself into temptation, he could not expect divine support; and his cowardly hypocrisy, of appearing among the crowd as one of those who had been employed to seize the prisoner foreboded no good, for they who are ashamed to be known as Christ's disciples, if brought to the trial, will, like Peter, solemnly disown him.

3. Having brought Christ to their bar, and previously determined his condemnation, the question was, where to procure evidence to furnish them with a pretext of putting him to death; nothing less than his blood being able to satisfy his merciless and unjust judges: but though they endeavoured to procure accusations, and suborn witnesses against him, yet the falsehoods they advanced were so palpable and inconsistent, that they carried their own confutation, and even before such partial judges, could not furnish the shadow of a crime. At last two false witnesses appeared, and with virulence and insolence alleged they had heard him say, I am able to destroy the temple of God, and to build it in three days. He had said no such things. His words were, Destroy ye this temple, not that made with hands, as they added, Mark xiv. 58. but the temple of his body, John ii. 21. and his raising it up referred to his own resurrection; not the rebuilding of the material house of God. But by such a false quotation they meant to accuse him as an enemy to the holy place, and a blasphemer against God, as well as one that dealt in magic, from his presuming to say he could raise such a building in three days. A far fetched accusation indeed! and too weak to support the bloody sentence they desired to ground thereon. Note, If false witnesses rose up against the innocent Jesus, laying to his charge things he knew not of, let it not appear strange if we meet with the like injurious treatment. The disciple is not above his Master.

4. Unable longer to restrain his rage, the high priest in a fury arose, vexed to be able to produce no more plausible accusation; and out of all patience to behold the meekness and silence of Jesus, dumb as the sheep before her shearers, Is. liii. 7. he bids him make his defence instantly, if he had aught to say why sentence should not pass upon him. But Jesus held his peace. He knew their designs, and that the clearest evidence of innocence would weigh nothing before such judges. The high priest hereupon adjures and commands him upon oath to answer whether he were indeed the Messiah, God's eternal Son, or not, that from his own mouth they might obtain a charge against him which they sought for from other witnesses in vain. Note, The silence of Jesus should teach us meekness before our bitterest persecutors.

5. To this solemn interrogatory Jesus makes a direct reply. He was apprized of their captious design; but his hour was come; therefore he professes himself to be that very Messiah concerning whom the high priest spoke, though he knew the disdain with which they would treat his claim: nevertheless he made it before them all. And since they would admit no present proof of it, he would give them one hereafter which should astonish them, Ye shall see the Son of man sitting at the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven. Which should be fulfilled in the effusion of his Spirit after his ascension, in the ruin of their state and nation, and most eminently in the great day of his appearing and glory, when they who now sat as his judges, must stand as criminals at his bar, and perish under his righteous vengeance. Note, Impenitent sinners will one day be convinced, when it is too late, of the eternal ruin they have brought upon their heads by rejecting the Lord's Christ.

6. Pretending to be shocked at such blasphemy, in token of his abhorrence, the high priest rent his clothes, and appealing to the council for the evidence of the crime, now clear from the confession of Jesus, presumes further witnesses to be needless: and all concurred in opinion that he deserved to die as a blasphemer, for arrogating to himself divine power and honours. Thus was he condemned, though innocent, that we might be acquitted, though guilty.

7. No sooner was he thus unjustly condemned, than they began to treat him with all manner of indignities; some of the company, or the officers and servants, spit on his face, in token of detestation and contempt; beat and buffeted him with the palms of their hands, or with rods: and in ridicule of his prophetic character, having blindfolded his eyes, bid him tell who smote him. To such insult and suffering did the holy Jesus submit for our sakes: he hid not his face from shame and spitting, that our faces might not be covered with everlasting shame and contempt; he was bruised for our iniquities, that we might not be crushed for ever under the wrath of God. If we then, for his sake, are rendered contemptible, ridiculed, and mocked by wicked men, let it be remembered how much more he bore for us; and let us never be ashamed of his reproach.

e Mark 14. 66—72. Luke 22. 55—62. John 18. 15—18, 25—27. with Ps. 1. 1. & 119. 115.

f Ch. 2. 22, 23. & 3. 13. & 4. 12, 13.

* Campbell prefers to read, Said to them, This man too was there, This fellow, &c.

g Ch. 2. 23. & 21. 11. Luke 2. 30, 51. & 4. 16. John 1. 45.

h Ch. 16. 16. ver. 33, 35.

i Ver. 34. Luke 22. 60. Mark 14. 71. John 18. 26, 27.

k Ver. 34. Mark 14. 30. John 13. 38.

l Ps. 119. 59, 60. Ezek. 7. 16. Zech. 12. 10. Jer. 31. 18. 2 Cor. 7. 11.

69. ¶ [e] Now Peter sat without in the palace: and a damsel came unto him, saying, Thou also wast with Jesus [f] of Galilee. 70. But he denied before them all, saying, I know not what thou sayest. 71. And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid saw him, and said unto them that were there,* This fellow was also with [g] Jesus of Nazareth. 72. And again he denied with an oath, [h] I do not know the man. 73. And after a while came unto him they that stood by, and said to Peter, Surely thou also art one of them; for thy speech bewrayeth thee. 74. [i] Then began he to curse and to swear, saying, I know not the man. And immediately the cock crew. 75. And Peter remembered the words of Jesus, which said unto him, [k] Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. [l] And he went out, and wept bitterly.

Verses 69—75. We have here the memorable event of Peter's fall and recovery. A warning to us never to be self-confident, lest we should fall like him; nor when fallen, however foully, to despair, since the same door of hope is open for us.

1. His sin, with all the aggravations of it, is faithfully recorded; and blessed be God for the simplicity of the sacred historians. Had they in their account of God's saints, like the histories of human biographers, blazoned the excellencies, and concealed the faults and infirmities of their worthies, how many a dear child of God would have wrote bitter things against his soul! Whilst his Master was suffering within, Peter sat with the servants without. In bad company no good can ever be expected: in the devil's palace we must not hope for protection: and if we will associate with the crowd of his servants, the consequence naturally follows, we must be like them or be laughed at. (1.) The temptation came first from one of the servant maids; for the weakest instrument, in the devil's hands, can do much mischief. She shrewdly suspected, perhaps by Peter's melancholy looks, that he was a disciple of Jesus; or she had seen him formerly among Christ's attendants; and therefore charged him with her suspicions. Peter, quite disconcerted, shuffled out an answer, false, as he knew, and faithless, pretending not to understand her, and before them all denying the charge. Note, Many who would hesitate at a direct lie, stick not at an evasion, and will pretend not to understand what is said, when in truth it is because they are ashamed of their profession, and dare not avow their knowledge of Christ: which is most base, cowardly, and criminal. (2.) The second temptation quickly followed, and from a similar quarter. With infinite contempt of Peter's appearance, another maid servant came up to him as he stood in the porch, perhaps meaning to steal off for fear of farther discovery, and looking in his face, perfectly recollected his person among the followers of Jesus, and confidently asserted before those who stood by, that this fellow was certainly a disciple of Jesus the Nazarene: as if it was a reproach to admit such a fellow into their company. With such contempt and insolence are the disciples of Jesus often treated by those who know them not, because they knew him not. To silence such a suspicion, he solemnly denies even his knowledge of the person of Jesus, as if he had never seen him; and to gain credit, backs his assertion with an oath, a shrewd proof of the falsehood he urged: for they justly are to be suspected of making no conscience of a lie, who make none of rash oaths. (3.) A little while after, one who, perhaps excited by what had been suggested, marked Peter more narrowly, and was convinced by his provincial dialect and accent that he must be a Galilean, concluded certainly he was a follower of Jesus, and asserted it to his face before the company, with this evident proof, thy speech bewrayeth thee. Quite in a consternation, and not knowing what to say or do, he thought with a resolute air to carry it off; and, as in a passion at being suspected of such a thing, he began to curse and to swear, affirming, with the most horrid imprecations, that he never had the least knowledge or acquaintance with the man they mentioned, nor had ever before in his life seen him. He could not indeed have taken a more effectual way to prove he did not belong to Jesus; his disciples never used such language. Note, (1.) One lie generally paves the way for another, and then perjury becomes needful to support the falsehood. So dreadfully connected are the links of sin. (2.) A real disciple of Jesus may ever be known by his discourse; his speech will indeed bewray him. (3.) Whilst we look at such a fearful fall, we should tremble for ourselves, and dread the first step of deviation from the path of truth, lest, with Peter, we should be hurried down the precipice.

2. His recovery affords us as amazing an instance of divine grace, as his fall hath done of human weakness and corruption. Immediately, as he spoke, the cock crew, a sound in Peter's ears more terrible than the bursts of loudest thunders; it instantly recalled to his memory what Jesus had foretold, and he had most guiltily accomplished; his baseness, ingratitude, profaneness, perjury, all stared him in the face, and overwhelmed him with confusion. Unable to stay there a moment longer, he went out to give vent, in some retired corner, to the bursting anguish of his soul, and with tears of bitterest sorrow and unfeigned repentance, bewailed his sin, and found mercy with a pardoning God. Note, (1.) Nothing so deeply affects the truly gracious heart, as the sense of his ingratitude and base returns for all the love of Jesus to his sinful soul. (2.) They who have never wept with Peter over their sins, it is to be feared have never felt their bitterness. (3.) It is never too late to return to God. None perish merely because of the greatness of their sins, but through their impenitence and unbelief.

CHAP. XXVII.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

We have in this chapter the affecting story of the sufferings and death of our Saviour, Christ, which are the only foundation of every fallen sinner's hope. We have here, 1. The delivering of him to Pilate, ver. 1, 2. 2. The despair of Judas, ver. 3—10. 3. The arraignment and trial of Christ before Pilate, ver. 11—14. 4. The clamours of the people against him, ver. 15—25. 5. Sentence passed and executed upon him, ver. 26—33. 6. The indignities done him, and reproaches cast upon him, ver. 34—44. 7. Many remarkable signs attended his death, ver. 45—56. 8. His burial, and the watch set on his grave, ver. 57—66.

1. WHEN the morning was come, [a] all the chief priests and elders of the people took counsel against Jesus to put him to death: 2. And when they had bound him, they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor. * 3. ¶ [b] Then Judas, which had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders, 4. Saying, I have sinned, [c] in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And they said, [d] What is that to us? see thou to that. 5. And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, [e] and departed, and went and hanged † himself. 6. And the chief priests took the silver pieces, and said, It is not lawful for to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood. 7. And they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field, to bury strangers in. 8. Wherefore that field was called, [f] The field of blood, unto this day. 9. Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, [g] And they took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, ‡ whom they of the children of Israel did value; 10. And gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord appointed me.

a Mark 15. 1—14. Luke 22. 26. & 23. 1—28. John 18. 28—40. & 19. 15. Acts 4. 25—28. & 2. 23. Ps. 2. 1—4. Is. 53. 7, 8.

* Or, the procurator.

b Ch. 26. 66. 1 Kin. 21. 27. Job 20. 5, 15. 2 Cor. 7. 10. with ch. 26. 15.

c Ver. 24. Acts 18. 6.

d Acts 18. 15. Job 13. 4. & 16. 2.

e Acts 1. 18, 19. 2 Sam. 17. 23. 1 Sam. 31. 4, 5. Judg. 9. 54.

† Strangled himself. The word in the original plainly denotes strangling, but does not determine how, whether by hanging or otherwise.

f Acts 1. 19. Jer. 16. 2.

g Zech. 11. 12, 13.

‡ Or whom they bought of the children of Israel.

Verses 1—10. Though they had condemned the innocent Jesus as worthy of death, they had not in their hands the power of capital punishments, and therefore must have him sentenced by the Roman governor before they could proceed to execution, the sceptre being now departed from Judah, and the country become a Roman province. Hereupon we are told,

1. On a second council held in the morning, in order effectually to get their bloody purposes executed of putting him to death, they determined to accuse him before Pilate, at that time the Roman president, as an infamous malefactor and incendiary; and accordingly, binding him as a criminal, they led him ignominiously through the streets, from the house of Caiaphas to the governor's palace, and delivered him up, that sentence might be pronounced upon him, and that he might die the death of the cross, unwittingly fulfilling the predictions of Jesus, chap. xx. 19.

2. Remorse had by this time seized on the conscience of Judas. When he saw that Jesus was condemned and ready to be executed, filled with horror, and agitated with self-indignation, anguish, and despair, he ran to the temple, and there, in one of the chambers, to which the council seems to have been adjourned, he brought the hated price of his wickedness, the thirty pieces of silver, and, publicly acknowledging the atrocious crime he had committed in betraying innocent blood, would have returned their wages of unrighteousness. But they, instead of being struck with conviction, treated his confession with contempt. He had answered their ends; and as to the means employed, or the guilt he had incurred, they cared not about it; as if it was nothing to them that they had bribed him to commit the villany, and were that moment persecuting to death the innocent person he had betrayed. Made desperate by such neglect, and the unavailableness of this attempt to stop the prosecution of Jesus, his life became a burden, and the devil urged him to put an end to it. Casting down the abhorred silver in the temple before them, and flying to some solitude, he immediately hung himself: by self-murder finishing the measure of his iniquities. Note, (1.) The time will come when the sweetest sins will be turned into the poison of asps. (2.) There is no repentance without restitution of ill-gotten gain, and taking shame to ourselves before the accomplices of our guilt. (3.) When wicked men can bring the professors of religion to join them, indifferent to the remorse they afterwards behold in them, they only mock at the calamity, and at sin the cause of it. (4.) The love of money hath been the fatal snare to many a soul: for this they have plunged themselves into the gulf of perdition. (5.) Despair is among the greatest crimes, and often ends in self-murder, a remedy still worse than the disease. For the deepest guilt there is mercy to be hoped: but when men fly from God to the devil for ease, they are undone for ever.

3. The money being left, they consulted how to dispose of it. Pretending conscience, they would not put it into the temple treasury, though probably it was taken from thence, because it was the price of blood; and therefore, with the show of great piety and humanity, laid it out to purchase a small piece of ground which had been dug up by a potter, and was of little value, to bury strangers or proselytes: whereby they perpetuated their own infamy: the people who knew what money made the purchase, calling it justly Aceldama, or the field of blood. And herein they exactly fulfilled what the prophet had foretold, Zech. xi. 12, 13. The words are said to be in Jeremy, though only found in Zechariah; concerning which there are many ways suggested to solve the difficulty. The most probable seems to be, either that in the division of the sacred books the last volume began with Jeremiah, and therefore, though containing all the latter prophets, bore his name; or that Jeremiah had so prophesied first, but had not committed it to writing, and Zechariah confirmed and wrote it in his prophecy. The words, as they stand in the prophet, are, They weighed for my price thirty pieces of silver. And the Lord said unto me, Cast it to the potter; a goodly price that I was prized at of them. And I took the thirty pieces of silver, and cast them to the potter, in the house of the Lord. Thus did they who rejected the Messiah, fulfil all the prophecies concerning him. Note, (1.) They who are bitter persecutors of God's people, still study to maintain the character of piety and humanity among men. (2.) Christ's blood hath provided a resting place for poor sinners after death. And though he was treated with such contempt, and his price so low, we see in his humiliation peculiar glory; and the deeper his abasement was, it renders him in the eyes of all that believe more precious.

11. ¶ [h] And Jesus stood before the governor: and the governor asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? ‖ And Jesus said unto him, § Thou sayest. ‖ 12. [i] And when he was accused of the chief priests and elders, he answered nothing. 13. Then saith Pilate unto him, [k] Hearest thou not how many things they witness against thee? 14. And he answered him to never a word; insomuch that the governor marvelled greatly. 15. ¶ [l] Now at that feast the governor was h Mark 15. 2. Luke 23. 3. John 18. 33, 37. 1 Tim. 6. 13. with ch. 26. 25, 64.

‖ Or, Thou art the King of the Jews?

§ i. e. It is so as thou sayest.

i Ch. 26. 63. Is. 53. 7. Acts 8. 32, 34. ver. 14. 1 Pet. 2. 23.

k Ch. 26. 62. John 19. 10.

l Ch. 26. 2, 5. Luke 23. 17. Mark 15. 6. John 18. 39.

wont to release unto the people a prisoner, whom they would. 16. [m] And they had then a notable prisoner, called Barabbas. 17. Therefore, when they were gathered together, Pilate said unto them, [n] Whom will ye that I release unto you? Barabbas, or [o] Jesus which is called Christ? 18. For he knew [p] that for envy they had delivered him. 19. ¶ When he was set down on the judgment-seat, [q] his wife sent unto him, saying, Have thou nothing to do with that just man; for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him. 20. ¶ [r] But the chief priests and elders persuaded the multitude that they should ask Barabbas, and destroy Jesus. 21. The governor answered and said unto them, Whether of the twain will ye that I release unto you? They said, Barabbas.* 22. Pilate saith unto them, What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ? [s] They all say unto him, Let him be crucified. 23. And the governor said, Why? what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more, saying, Let him be crucified. 24. When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, [t] he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of [u] this just person: see ye to it. 25. Then answered all the people, and said, [x] His blood be on us, and on our children.

m John 18. 40. Luke 23. 25. Mark 15. 7.

n Josh. 24. 15. 1 Kin. 18. 21. ver. 21.

o Ch. 21. 9, 11.

p Acts 7. 9. John 9. 22. & 12. 42. Eccl. 4. 4. Joh 5. 2. Prov. 27. 4.

q Is. 11. 10. ver. 4. Acts 13. 46. with Dan. 2. 1. & 4. 5. Job 33. 15, 16.

r Mark 15. 11. Luke 23. 18. John 18. 40. Acts 3. 14, 15.

* There is in the verses 17—21. some appearance both of tautology and of incoherency, which Campbell proposes to remove by including the 18th and 19th in a parenthesis.

s Is. 53. 2, 3. John 15. 13. & 10. 32. Rom. 8. 7, 8.

t Deut. 21. 6, 7. Job 9. 30. Ps. 26. 6. Prov. 30. 20. Jer. 2. 35.

u Ver. 4, 19. Deut. 17. 6. & 19. 15.

x Deut. 19. 10. Acts 5. 28. 1 Thes. 2. 15, 16. Heb. 10. 29. Josh. 2. 19. 2 Sam. 2. 16. the crucifixion of multitudes of them by Titus, and in their miseries for 1700 years past, they have felt the effects of their wish.

Verses 11—25. Behold the Son of God a prisoner at a human bar; and He to whom every knee must bow, and meet as their eternal Judge, now appears as a criminal before Pilate; having condescended to bear our sins, he submits to suffer in our stead as a transgressor. We have,

1. The charge laid against him. Knowing the jealousy of the Roman government, the chief priests, his accusers, had suggested, that, in assuming the character of the Messiah, he meant to raise an insurrection, and make himself a king. Pilate therefore interrogated him on this head, whether he presumed to arrogate the title of King of the Jews, and Jesus acknowledged the charge: though he assumed no such temporal dominion as they suggested; his kingdom was not of this world: see John xviii. 36. The chief priests and elders were hereupon very loud and clamorous in their accusations, as if he was a perverter of the people, a sower of sedition, forbidding to give tribute to Cesar, and affecting the sovereignty of the country. To all which Jesus, with astonishing patience, made no reply. What they said was indeed notoriously false, as themselves knew: but he wanted not to defend himself; his hour was come; and he stood prepared to answer the demands of divine Justice, and to bear our sins in his own body on the tree. Therefore, when Pilate urged him to reply to the charges, and clear himself of these accusations, he observed a profound silence, to the great astonishment of the governor, who could not account for so unusual a behaviour in a person whose life was at stake, and depended on that moment. Note, (1.) It hath been usual with the enemies of the servants of Jesus, to dress them up so as to render them suspected by the civil government, and to insinuate ill designs against the state, in order the more easily to oppress them. (2.) Silence is often the best answer to the accusations of malice; and when we know our defence is sure to be overruled, it is fruitless to contend.

2. Pilate, convinced of the innocence of Jesus, and well knowing the motive of the virulence shown against him by the chief priests, who were stung with envy at the excellence of his character, and the high reputation he held with many, which eclipsed their own, wished for a pretext to release him. And hereunto he was yet more induced by a message from his wife, who just at that time, whilst the trial was going on, sent to entreat him to do nothing against that just man before him: for she had that morning been terrified by a very uncommon dream concerning him, which bore strong marks of a divine original: and therefore conjured him to discharge the prisoner, lest he should bring down the wrath of God upon himself and family by condemning the innocent. Therefore, as it was an established custom at that feast to gratify the people with the release of any prisoner whom they chose, Pilate thought he could not fail of succeeding by proposing to the people their choice, whether of Barabbas or Jesus. The infamous character of Barabbas, who for sedition and murder, and other villanies, was held in the greatest detestation, left him no room to doubt that the people would prefer Jesus, whom they had so lately ushered with hosannas into the city, and whose excellences all must have seen. Note, (1.) God hath access to the spirit, and can speak to our souls when our senses are locked up in deep repose. (2.) Sinners have sometimes solemn warnings: but they are too apt to slight the heavenly admonition. (3.) The nearer and dearer any person is to us, the more are we obliged to watch over them for good.

3. The multitude, instigated by the craft of their wily priests, who represented Jesus in every black and diabolical colour, engaged them to prefer Barabbas before him: and, to the astonishment of Pilate, they demanded the murderer, and rejected the Lord of life and glory: and, not content with this, when the governor, willing to release Jesus, inquired of them what they wished he should do with him whom many regarded as the Christ, or Messiah, they with one consent cried out, Let him be crucified, a death the most painful, ignominious, and accursed. Shocked at such a demand, Pilate remonstrates with them on the injustice and cruelty of such an action, Why, what evil hath he done? On severest scrutiny, his judge could see no fault in him, his adversaries prove none, nor did even the traitor suggest the shadow of a crime. A glorious testimony of the avowed innocence of Jesus. But notwithstanding, this tumultuous assembly, wrought up to a pitch of fury by their malignant priests and rulers, with louder cries demanded his crucifixion, determined to extort the governor's consent, and bear down reason and justice with rage and clamour. Note, (1.) How little dependence is to be placed on popular applause. They who one day cried, Hosanna to the Son of David, now cry, Crucify him, crucify him. (2.) The unspotted innocency of the Lamb of God evidently shows, that he bore not his own sins, but the sins of others: he voluntarily submitted to die as a criminal, that he, though just, might suffer the punishment due to the unjust, and thereby bring us unto God.

4. Pilate, unable to prevail with them, and not having resolution to deny their request, so importunately and clamorously urged, for fear of an uproar; yet conscious of the innocence of Jesus, and shocked at the thought of murdering a just man, bethought himself of a miserable expedient to pacify his conscience without disobliging the people: and therefore, though yielding to their importunity, he protests against the fact; and, taking water before them all, he washed his hands, that by this significative action he might appear clear from all the guilt which should ensue, declaring himself innocent of this righteous blood; and therefore, since they compelled him to condemn the innocent, he lays it wholly upon them to answer for the crime before God and the world. An absurd procedure indeed in a judge, whom nothing should awe from the administration of impartial justice. And it but the more aggravated his guilt, thus avowedly to act against his own conscience, and to do the very thing against which he protested. But such contradictions must follow, where men's convictions are strong, but their corruptions stronger.

5. They hesitate not to subject themselves to all the consequences which might ensue; and, since Pilate seemed scrupulous, they are very ready to quiet his conscience by solemnly transferring all the guilt upon their own, madly imprecating on themselves and their latest posterity the vengeance, if any were due, His blood be on us, and on our children. So daring do presumptuous sinners grow; so little are they apprehensive of the consequences of their impiety. But these murderers soon found the vengeance they imprecated terribly lighting on their devoted heads, in the utter destruction of themselves and families; such multitudes being crucified by Titus during the siege, that the crosses stood so thick around the walls, that there was no more room for them; five hundred in a day thus miserably expiring. And to this hour the effects of that imprecation are visible upon this miserable people; and will be, till, returning to the Lord whom they once rejected, the wrath shall be removed, and their iniquity be forgiven.

26. Then released he Barabbas unto them: and when he had [y] scourged Jesus, he delivered him to be crucified.

27. ¶ Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the * common hall, and [z] gathered unto him the whole band of soldiers. 28. And they stripped him, and put on him a scarlet robe. 29. And when they had platted a crown of thorns † they put it upon his head, and a reed in his right hand: and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, saying, Hail, King of the Jews! 30. [a] And they spit upon him, and took the reed, and smote him on the head. 31. [b] And after that they had mocked him, they took the robe off from him, and put his own raiment on him, and led him away to crucify him. 32. [c] And as they came out, they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his cross.

y John 19. 1—15. Luke 23. 24, 25. Mark 15. 15—20.

* Or governor's house.

z Ps. 22. 16. Prov. 20. 12. Luke 23. 11. Mark 15. 16—18. John 19. 2, 3. with Gen. 3. 18.

† Probably of the nabn or nabka tree of the Arabians, a plant common in the East, and very fit for the purpose.

a Ch. 26. 67. Is. 50. 6. & 52. 14 Mic. 5. 1.

b Ps. 22. 6—8. & 69. 7, 19. ch. 21. 39. Heb. 13. 12.

c Mark 15. 21, 22. Luke 23. 26, 33. Num. 15. 35. 1 Kin. 21. 13. Acts 7. 58. Heb. 13. 12. ch. 21. 39. John 19. 17.

Verses 26—31. The matter being thus determined:

1. Pilate having released Barabbas, that most infamous criminal, delivered Jesus over to their will, having first scourged him severely, in hopes of moving their compassion, John xix. 1. but finding it all ineffectual, and that they were bent on his destruction, he appoints his immediate execution on the cross, as they insisted. And herein we may observe, (1.) The fulfilment of the Scriptures, Psal. cxxix. 3. Is. l. 6. liii. 5. where these stripes had been foretold. (2.) In the release of Barabbas we have an emblem of our own deliverance through Jesus Christ. As guilty are we as this notorious prisoner; we have robbed God of his glory, and often laboured to murder our own and others' souls. For which we must all have perished without hope, had not our divine Substitute yielded up himself that we might go free, and that the chief of sinners might find in him plenteous redemption. (3.) Bloody as the stripes of Jesus appear, we need bless God for them, since by these stripes we are healed.

2. Being delivered into the hands of the inhuman soldiers, they dragged him into the common hall, and, to make themselves merry in his miseries, and in the view of the character he assumed as a king, they stripped off his clothes, arrayed him in a scarlet robe in mockery, and platting a crown of thorns, in derision placed it on his head, giving him a reed or hollow cane, for a sceptre, and gathering the whole band around him, they, with insulting homage, bowed the knee, and addressed him with the deriding title of King of the Jews; whilst some spit in his face in contempt of his majesty, and others snatched the cane out of his hand and smote him on the head, that the thorns might wound the deeper his sacred temples. With horror, indignation, and astonishment, whilst we reflect on their wickedness, let some measure thereof be transferred to our own. They were but the instruments, we the cause, of all his torment. And when we see the innocent Lamb of God submitting to these indignities, and look on that face, marred more than any man's, defiled with spitting, black with buffetings and dyed with blood streaming from his temples, what emotions of love and gratitude should glow in our bosom towards him who endured such things for us, that we might not be the mockery of devils, the scorn of angels, and abhorred of God?

3. Glutted with cruelty, and satiated with such inhuman mirth, they stripped off his robes of mock majesty, and put on him again his own seamless garment, the perquisite of those who should be more immediately employed in his execution. Then, binding his cross upon him, John xix. 17. they led him, as a lamb to the slaughter, a spectacle through the city, to suffer without the gate. But, it seems, wearied out with his sufferings, his strength failed him, and they were obliged to release him of his load, lest they should be disappointed of their cruelty in nailing him alive to the tree. Seizing on one who was passing by, known probably to have been a disciple of Jesus, and therefore treated with such indignity, they compel him to bear the cross after Christ to the place of execution. Note, Every faithful soul must expect his cross, and be content to go to Jesus without the camp, bearing his reproach.

33. ¶ And when they were come unto a place called Golgotha, that is to say, a place of a skull, 34. [d] They gave him vinegar to drink, mingled with gall: ‡ and when he had tasted thereof, he would not drink. 35. And they crucified him, and parted his garments, casting lots: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, [e] They parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots. 36. And, sitting down, they watched him there; 37. And set up over his head his accusation written, [f] THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS. 38. [g] Then were there two thieves crucified with him; one on the right hand, and another on the left. 39. ¶ [h] And they that passed by reviled him, wagging their heads, 40. And d Ps. 69. 21. John 19. 28. Mark 15. 23.

‡ Or wormwood. The word sometimes denotes any bitter or poisonous infusion.

e Ps. 22. 18. John 19. 23, 24. Mark 15. 24.

f It avowed his innocence and Messiahship in three languages which were generally understood. Mark 15. 26. Luke 23. 38. John 19. 19—22. Deut. 23. 5.

g Is. 53. 12. Luke 23. 32, 33. Mark 15. 27, 28. John 19. 18.

h Ps. 22. 7. & 69. 20 & 109. 25 Lam. 2. 15. Mark 15. 29. Luke 23. 35. Is. 53. 3.

The Saviour

Engraved by J. Freeman from an Original Painting by Guido.

Published by Archd. Fullarton & Co. Glasgow

saying, [i] Thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. If thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross. 41. Likewise also the chief priests, mocking him, with the scribes and elders, said, 42. He saved others; himself he cannot save. [k] If he be the king of Israel, let him now come down from the cross, and we will believe him. 43. [l] He trusted in God; let him deliver him now, if he will have him: for he said, [m] I am the Son of God. 44. [n] The thieves also, which were crucified with him, cast the same in his teeth. 45. ¶ Now [o] from the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land unto the ninth hour. 46. And about the ninth hour [p] Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? 47. Some of them that stood there, when they heard that, said, [q] This man calleth for Elias. 48. And straightway one of them ran, and took a spunge, [r] and filled it with vinegar,* and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink. 49. The rest said, Let be, let us see whether Elias will come to save him.

i Ch. 26. 61. John 2. 19. ch. 4. 3, 6. & 20. 63, 64.

k Ver. 40. ch. 12. 38, 39. & 16. 1. John 4. 48. Luke 4. 12. Heb. 4. 15. & 2. 18.

l Ps. 22. 8. & 18. 1, 2, 19.

m Ch. 26. 64. John 3. 16. & 5. 17—29. & 10. 30.

n Ps. 35. 15. Luke 23. 39—43. It seems that at first they both railed at him.

o Amos 8. 9. Is. 50. 3.

p Ps. 22. 1—21. & 69. 1—21. Heb. 5. 7. Mark 15. 33—36. Luke 23. 44—46.

q Ps. 56. 5. with Mal. 4. 5. ch. 11. 14. & 17. 11—13.

r Ps. 69. 21. Mark 15. 36. Luke 23. 36. John 19. 29.

* Vinegar was at that time the beverage of the Roman soldiers, and it was probably offered to Christ by one of them more humane than the rest.—Mann.

Verses 33—49. We have here an account of the crucifixion of Jesus.

1. The place where he suffered was called Golgotha, signifying the place of a skull; either from the form of the hill, or because the malefactors executed there, were buried on the spot. Where Death therefore erected his trophies, there Christ, who tasted death for every man, erected his cross, that he might in triumph look down upon his vanquished foe, as it was said, O Death, I will be thy destruction.

2. Before they nailed him to the tree, they offered him a bitter cup of vinegar mingled with gall, instead of the potion usually given to malefactors to stupify their sense of pain; striving thus by every malicious contrivance to sharpen his sufferings, and make his death peculiarly bitter. He tasted it, but refused to drink. He wanted not to prolong his life, nor would do aught to discompose his mind, prepared to feel every misery before him, and desiring not to be excused the sensation of any one painful pang he must endure. The gall of that cup our sins supplied: had he not atoned for them, we must eternally have drank to the dregs the cup of bitterness and trembling.

3. They crucified him; which was done by stretching the arms on the wood as it lay upon the ground, and nailing them; when they fastened the feet to a piece of wood fixed to the body of the cross, and lifting it up, stuck it fast in a hole prepared to receive it, the shock of which dislocated the bones of the criminal; and there hanging upon the nails, in convulsions and torments inexpressible, he expired. Thus did the Son of God humble himself to death, even the death of the cross. Whilst angels with wonder and amaze behold him, what sentiments of transcendent admiration and love should glow in our bosom, when we see him dying on the accursed tree for us men and for our salvation!

4. As he was hung up naked to bear our shame, who by sin had lost the robe of innocence, the executioners divided his garments as their fee; and whilst they sat down and watched him, that no rescue might be attempted, should the people now relent, they cast lots for his outer garment, which was without seam, and must have been spoiled if cut to pieces; thus in the most exact manner fulfilling the prophetic word, Ps. xxii. 18. They parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots.

5. On the cross a tablet was hung, importing the crime for which he suffered, as was usual on these occasions. But this bespoke his honour rather than reproach: This is Jesus the King of the Jews. Such indeed he really was; and whatever intention they had who wrote it, God designed even here that a testimony should be borne to his Messiah.

6. Two thieves were crucified with him, and he placed in the midst, as if to stamp the most indelible infamy upon him, as the vilest of all malefactors. Thus was he numbered with transgressors and with the wicked in his death. Though he had done no violence, yet, bearing the sins of many; Divine Justice treated him as a criminal, and he died under the curse of our iniquities.

7. On the cross he endured the greatest contradiction of sinners against himself.

[1.] From the common people and passengers who went by as he hung on the tree. Unmoved at his sufferings, unaffected with the astonishing patience wherewith he bore them, they vented their blasphemies against him, wagging their heads, as insulting over his miseries, (Ps. xxii. 8.) and triumphing in his torments; upbraiding him with his pretended ability of destroying the temple, and raising it in three days; and bidding him now put forth some of that power of which he boasted, in coming down from the cross to which he was nailed, and thus at least prove the truth of the high pretensions he made, as being the Son of God. Note, (1.) When a man is run down, and cast out by the great and the rulers, every one is ready to join in the cry. (2.) If Christ was thus reviled and ridiculed, let us not think it strange if the mouth of the ungodly be opened upon us in bitter words.

[2.] From the chief priests, scribes, and elders. They came to feast their eyes with this sight of misery, and, instead of being at their devotions in the temple, (Lev. xxiii. 7.) meanly mixed with the rabble around the cross, to gratify their malice and spit their venom; mocking at him, and saying, He saved others: himself he cannot save. His present state they suggest evidently proved the delusion of the miracles to which he pretended, and the impossibility of his being the Saviour of the world: whereas in fact, the very reason why he cannot save himself, is because it would not then be possible for him to save others: since on his sufferings their salvation depended. As he assumed the honour of Israel's King, they upbraid him with his arrogance, and bid him exert his authority, and loose himself from the cross; then they profess they will believe in him, though, after what he had done, this was a mere subterfuge for their infidelity. Had he complied with their proposals, they would instantly have found new objections, and would suppose some trick had been played, that he had never been nailed to the tree, as they afterwards evaded the evidence of his resurrection, by the absurd pretence that his disciples stole away the body by night. Because Jesus had professed such unshaken confidence in God, and claimed so near a relation to the Most High, they now bid him put it to the proof; intimating, that God's not delivering him in his distress showed him a deceiver; and whilst they thus vilified him in the eyes of the people, they hurled a fiery arrow against the faith of the Redeemer, to terrify his innocent soul, as if there was no hope for him in his God, (Ps. xxii. 8.) Unmoved, the Saviour heard in silence their blasphemies, and persisted patiently in accomplishing his own glorious work. Note, (1.) Jesus became a king by suffering the cross; he went from thence to reign,

Let us not forget then the way to his kingdom; if we suffer with him we shall also reign with him. (2.) Many pretend want of evidence as a reason for their unbelief; but were Christ to indulge them with the grant of what themselves propose, they would be as far from faith in him as ever. The fault is in the heart: they who believe not Moses and the prophets, will be proof against every other method of conviction.

[3.] From the thieves who were crucified with him. Some suppose that only one of them reviled him, (see Luke xxiii. 39.) and say this is a Hebrew way of speaking, as if they were afraid of ascribing too much to the sovereign grace of God herein displayed. But I own I see no reason for doubting, that both at first joined in the same blasphemy and abuse; though one of them, struck with the behaviour of Jesus, and convinced of his own wickedness in this, as well as all his former conduct, afterwards casts his eyes of faith on the expiring Saviour: and if so, this tended only to make the triumphs of boundless mercy, and the riches of the redemption of Jesus, appear the more illustrious in his salvation.

8. A dreadful darkness now came on over all the land. The sun miraculously withdrew his light, as if terrified to behold his Maker's agony, and testifying his abhorrence of such transcendently atrocious wickedness; affording an emblem of that judicial blindness to which this devoted people were now abandoned. It might be intended also to represent the dreadful conflict with the rulers of the darkness of this world, which Jesus maintained on the cross, when by dying he destroyed him that had the power of death, that is the devil. And this eclipse of the great luminary of heaven was also but a faint image of the darker eclipse in the Redeemer's soul, when every cheering beam of consolation was withdrawn, the light of his Father's countenance withheld, and a sense of this dereliction, arising from the wrath of an offended God, completed the measure of his sufferings. Three such hours had never passed since darkness was upon the face of the deep.

9. After a long and silent conflict, about the ninth hour, his agony being now at the summit, with a loud but lamentable voice, Jesus cried, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me? Strange accents from him whom God had repeatedly owned for his beloved Son, and in whom he had testified himself so well pleased! We never hear one complaint from these sacred lips of all his inhuman treatment, or bodily torment; what he then felt was infinitely more insupportable, and extorted this exceeding bitter cry. Not that the hypostatic union was dissolved, or that there was any real abatement of the Father's love towards him; never did he as Mediator appear more amiable than now, when by the eternal Spirit he offered himself without spot unto God. But since he took upon himself all the sins of his people, he was given for a while into the enemy's hands, and all the powers of hell let loose upon him; every divine support was withdrawn, and the terrors of wrath due from an offended God seized on his soul, and sunk him in the lowest deeps. Despair excepted, I question much whether the spirits of the damned have felt the wrath of God in this its utmost depth of bitterness: yet, though forsaken, firm and unshaken Jesus hangs fast on God, and in this deepest dereliction still can say, My God.

Lastly, The by-standers, whether wilfully or ignorantly mistaking his words, said he called for Elias, as if he wanted his help, and that it was too late for him to cry now. And hereupon one ran and filled a sponge with vinegar, and with a cane lifted it to his lips, which might be a suggestion of compassion, since his pains must have created intolerable thirst; though usually it is supposed to be done to mock and tease him, and add to his anguish; whilst the rest deriding said, Let be, let him alone; let us see whether Elias will come to save him, since he is to be the forerunner of the Messiah; but no such help they presume will be afforded him, alike abandoned by heaven and earth.

50. [s] Jesus, when he had cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost. 51. ¶ [t] And, behold, the vail of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; [u] and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent; 52. And the graves were opened; [x] and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, 53. And came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many. 54. [y] Now when the centurion, and they that were with him, watching Jesus, saw the earthquake, and those things that were done, they [z] feared greatly, saying, [a] Truly this was the Son of God. 55. [b] And many women were there beholding afar off, which followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto him: 56. Among which was [c] Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James and Joses, and the mother of Zebedee's children.

[s] Mark 15. 37, 38. Luke 23. 46. John 19. 30. Heb. 5. 7. Ps. 22. 14, 15. Dan. 9. 26. Is. 53. 10. John 10. 11, 15, 18. Heb. 9. 14.
[t] Mark 15. 38. Luke 23. 47. Exod. 26. 31. 2 Chr. 3. 14. 2 Cor. 3. 12—16. Heb. 6. 19. & 10. 19. Eph. 2. 15.
[u] Ps. 18. 7. Exod. 19. 18. Hab. 3. 10, 13.
[x] Ps. 68. 20. Is. 26. 19. Hos. 13. 14. John 5. 21, 28, 29. & xi.
[y] Ver. 36. Mark 15. 39. Luke 23. 47. Is. 11. 10. ch. 8. 5—11.
[z] Exod. 20. 18, 19. Ps. 48. 6. Acts 2. 37. & 16. 29.
[a] Ch. 8. 27. & 14. 33. & 16. 16. John 1. 49. & 6. 69. Acts 8. 37. Nah. 1. 6. Ps. 18. 7. ver. 40.
[b] Luke 8. 2, 3. Mark 15. 40, 41. Luke 23. 48, 49, 55. John 19. 25.
[c] Luke 7. 37—50. Mark 16. 1, 9. John 20. 1—18. Mark 6. 3. ch. 20. 20, 21. ver. 61. & 13. 35. Mark 15. 40.

Verses 50—56. The conflict is now over, the victory complete, sin atoned for, Satan's head bruised, justice satisfied, death vanquished, hell shut up, the kingdom of heaven opened for all believers, and all this by the death of Jesus here recorded; concerning which we are told,

1. The manner in which he expired. Having finished the work the Father had given him to do, he cried, not as a dying man, exhausted and spent, but with a loud voice, the shout of victory over all his conquered foes, and thus in his full strength yielded up the ghost; freely resigned his soul unto his Father's hands, and his body to death, the threatened wages of sin, which he had consented to bear. Thus fell the spiritual Samson, spoiling principalities and powers, and triumphing over them on his cross. Thus died the great Redeemer, just at the time when the evening sacrifice of the lamb was slain, the figure of him who in the evening of the world appeared to take away sin by the sacrifice of himself.

2. The miracles which attended his death.

[1.] Behold the veil of the temple was rent in twain, which separated the holy of holies from the outer tabernacle, where the table of incense stood, and the golden candlestick: and this at the very time probably when the priests were there ministering, and burning the sacred incense before it. Whereby was signified, (1.) The abolition of the Mosaical services, the darkness of that dispensation being now removed, and its mysteries unveiled; so that with open face we now behold the glory of the Lord. (2.) The demolition of the partition-wall between Jews and Gentiles, who were alike called into the fellowship of the gospel, and partakers of the same privileges. (3.) The free access which every sinner hath to God; so that they may now come boldly to a throne of grace, and, when death shall rend the veil of flesh, to a throne of glory, by that new and living way which Jesus hath consecrated for us through the veil, that is to say, his flesh, Heb. iv. 16. x. 19, 20.

[2.] The earth did quake, and the rocks were rent by it; marks of God's wrath against these murderers, and of that fury he would pour out upon them, when their rocky hearts should be broken in pieces. Hereby also was signified the destruction of Satan's kingdom, and the wondrous changes now about to be wrought in the world, when the most stout-hearted sinners should tremble before the Lord, and feel their souls rent with deepest conviction when led to look up to a crucified Jesus.

[3.] The graves were opened, immediately by the earthquake, and many bodies of the saints which slept, arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many: a glorious proof of Christ's victory over death and the grave, and an assurance to all his saints of a joyful resurrection.

Who these saints were, whether the patriarchs, or such as had seen Christ in the flesh; whether they kept their bodies, and ascended with their Lord into glory, or afterwards returned into the state of the dead; to whom they appeared; what they said or did; these and the like inquiries, being matters of mere curiosity, the Holy Ghost hath not thought fit to reveal to us. All that is needful for us to know, is told us, and therein we should thankfully acquiesce, not coveting to be wise above what is written.

3. The effect which the death of Christ, and subsequent miracles, had on the centurion and soldiers who kept guard at the place of execution. Though soldiers, savage and cruel; heathens, and strangers to the true God, yea, the very persons who had treated Jesus with such indignity; had dragged him to that place, and nailed him to the tree; these strange sights, the darkness, earthquake, and expiring cry of the Redeemer, filled them with consternation. Their stout hearts trembled for fear, lest they should be swallowed up in righteous vengeance; and these amazing effects of divine power and interposition extorted from them that noble testimony to the Saviour's divine mission and character, Truly this was the Son of God.

4. To the honour of the weaker sex, mention is made of several women, and three of their names are recorded, who, though the disciples in general had forsaken their Master, and fled, continued their attendance in his last moments; and having followed Jesus out of Galilee, and ministered to him of their substance, now stood afar off, perhaps not daring to approach nearer, and with broken hearts and floods of tears beheld and lamented their dying Lord, unable to minister to him either help or comfort. Note, (1.) The longer and the farther we have followed Christ, the more should it engage us to cleave to him, even to the end. (2.) They who love the Lord Jesus in their hearts, will be happy to employ their substance in his service.

d Mark 15. 42—47. Luke 23. 50—56. John 19. 38—42. Ps. 22. 29.

57. ¶ [d] When the even was come, there came a rich man of Arimathea, * named Joseph, who also himself was

* This is supposed to be the same place where Samuel was born, called by the Hebrews Ramathaim-zophim.—Hammond.

Jesus' disciple: 58. He went to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus. Then Pilate commanded the body to be delivered. 59. And when Joseph had taken e Is. 53. 9. Ps. 22. 15. Hos. 13. 14. So it could not be said another had risen.

the body, he wrapped it in a clean linen cloth, 60. And laid it [e] in his own new tomb, which he had hewn out in the rock: and he rolled a great stone to the door of the sepulchre, and departed. 61. And there was Mary Magdalene, † and f Ch. 26. 17. John 19. 14. Mark 15. 42.

† So called from her being of the town of Magdala.

the other Mary, sitting over against the sepulchre. 62. ¶ Now the next day, g Ps. 2. 1—6. Acts 4. 27, 28. ch. 26. 3, 4.

that followed the [f] day of the preparation, [h] the chief priests and Pharisees came toh John 7. 12. Luke 23. 2. 2 Cor. 6. 8.

gether unto Pilate, 63. Saying, Sir, we remember that [h] that deceiver said, while i Ch. 12. 40. & 16. 21. & 17. 23. & 20. 19. John 2. 19. Luke 9. 22. & 18. 33. & 24. 6.

he was yet alive, [i] After three days I will rise again. 64. Command therefore that the sepulchre be made sure until the third day, lest his disciples come by night, and steal him away, and say unto the people, He is risen from the dead: ‡ so the last error shall be worse than the first. 65. Pilate said unto them, Ye have [k] a watch: go your way, make it as sure as ye can. 66. So they went, and made the sepulchre sure, [l] sealing the stone, and setting a watch.

‡ If this is believed, it will be worse than all that hath happened.

k Roman soldiers ready at your service. Acts 4. 1.

l Dan. 6. 17. Their stone, seal, and guard, but concurred to render Christ's resurrection the more illustrious and remarkable.

Verses 57—66. It was foretold, that the Messiah should make his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; and we here see it fulfilled in the honourable interment given him by Joseph of Arimathea, after he had died as a malefactor, and suffered in our stead the wages of sin. Several circumstances concerning his burial are here taken notice of.

1. The time. The evening of the day on which he suffered, which was Friday, some time before the Jewish sabbath commenced.

2. The person who charged himself with the care of the burial. Joseph of Arimathea, a man of wealth and distinction, one of the Sanhedrim, and a secret disciple of Jesus, though through fear he had not publicly avowed it; but now, when Christ seemed deserted of all, he dared step forth, boldly went in to Pilate, and begged the corpse that he might inter it with due respect, which was granted immediately, and an order sent to deliver the body to him. Note, (1.) There are more secret disciples than we are often aware of. (2.) The possession of worldly wealth and honour is usually a grievous check to the faithful and open profession of Jesus and his cause. (3.) In times of trial when the boldest are ready to shrink, we sometimes see those who were scarce numbered among disciples before, come forth with unexpected courage and fidelity, and make a noble confession before many witnesses.

3. The manner of it. He took down the body from the cross, and wrapped it in clean linen, according to the custom of the Jews: and he himself attended, and performed these last kind offices to his dear Master.

4. The place where Joseph laid the corpse. In his own new tomb, hewn out in a rock, and closed with a great stone at the mouth; which when Joseph had done, he departed in silent sorrow to bewail his loss. So Divine providence ordered the circumstances, that none having lain there before, there could be no doubt when Christ arose, concerning the person; and the solid rock out of which the sepulchre was hewn, prevented the possibility of suspicion of any secret access to the body, except by the entrance, and that was sufficiently guarded. Note, (1.) He who when alive had not a house to cover his head, when dead, wanted a grave: so destitute was the Lord of glory; who then after him dares complain? (2.) Since Jesus hath lain in the grave, he hath perfumed the noisome abode; and in this bed of dust, as the phœnix in her fabled nest, we now lie down only to rise in brighter array, and take our flight to mansions of eternal glory.

5. The care Christ's enemies took to have the sepulchre secured. The chief priests and Pharisees who were such scrupulous observers of the sabbath, had not patience to wait the evening till it was over, but assembled and went in a body to Pilate, to petition him for a guard, in order to secure the body against the following day, because they suggest, that Jesus, that deceiver, (so do they call him who is the truth itself,) had said, while he was yet alive, so that they admit he was now certainly dead, After three days I will rise again. We find not indeed he had ever expressly said so to them; and if they founded their suggestion upon what they had heard, John ii. 19. then their own barefaced wickedness was yet more evident, since on this very passage, which they applied to the temple, they formed great part of their accusation against him. Pretending therefore to fear lest his disciples should come by night, and steal him away, and say he is risen, they desire to be furnished with a band of soldiers, to prevent all such attempts; lest, if such a trick should be played, the consequences of this last error, in not properly guarding the sepulchre, should be worse than the first, in suffering him to preach and live so long; for should this be once believed, the character of Jesus would then be established, and his doctrines spread with greater rapidity than ever. Pilate readily gratified them in granting their request, though no doubt he regarded their fears as absurd and ridiculous, and presumed they had little now to apprehend from a dead man. They had a body of soldiers in the tower of Antonia, for the service of the temple, and he permits them to detach what number they pleased to guard the sepulchre, and to use every other method to make the place as sure as they could. Nor did they fail to take every step to prevent the possibility of an imposture; setting a guard of soldiers, in whom they could confide, to watch the body that night, and sealing the stone with the public seal, either of Pilate or the Sanhedrim, that none might presume to enter, till the next day they should return themselves, and producing the dead corpse undeceive the people, and detect the impostor. Thus by the gracious providence of God was every circumstance so ordered, respecting the resurrection of Jesus, that our faith in that great event might have the most unshaken grounds of evidence indisputable, and be more strongly confirmed by all the methods his enemies took to guard the body from the possibility of being clandestinely removed. Indeed it can scarcely be supposed, that his disciples, who all so basely forsook him and fled when he was alive, would ever return to steal him away when he was dead: and they could have no end to answer by it: for to endeavour, by saying he was risen, to impose on the people, would be inconceivable madness and folly in them, since they must thereby expose themselves to every suffering for their testimony, and be of all men the most miserable in this world; conscious of dying with a lie in their right hand, and having no hope in the next. But had they desired or designed to execute such a scheme, they must have been now effectually prevented. In the face of a body of armed soldiers, placed as sentinels on the sepulchre, and whose lives depended upon their watchfulness, to suppose they would ever have attempted to break the public seal, roll back a ponderous stone, descend into the tomb, and carry off the body by stealth, is an absurdity too glaring to be conceived. So far as human, as diabolical power could go, Christ's enemies went; but counsel and might are alike in vain against the Lord. They who oppose his kingdom, will find their attempts not only baffled, but turned to their own confusion; their guilt but the more aggravated, and their eternal ruin more dreadful.

CHAP. XXVIII.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

We left the Lord of life the prisoner of death. The third day arrives; death's bands are loosed, he leads his captivity captive, The Lord is risen indeed. We have here some of the evidences of that signal event. 1. The testimony of the angel, ver. 1—8. 2. His appearance himself to the women, ver. 9, 10. 3. The confession of the adversaries that were upon the guard, ver. 11—15. 4. Christ's appearance to the disciples in Galilee, and the commission he gave them, ver. 16—20.

a Mark 16. 1, 2. Luke 24. 1. John 20. 1. ch. 27. 56.

b Or had been. Mark 16. 4. Luke 24. 2. John 20. 1.

1. IN the [a] end of the sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre. 2. And, behold, there [b] was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it. 3. [c] His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow: 4. And [d] for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men. 5. And the angel answered and said unto the women, [e] Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was [f] crucified. 6. He is not here: [f] for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay. 7. And [g] go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: [h] lo, I have told you. 8. [h] And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring [i] his disciples word. 9. ¶ [k] And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail! And they came and held him by the feet, and worshipped him. 10. Then said Jesus unto [l] them, [k] Be not afraid: [l] go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

c Dan. 10. 5, 6. ch. 17. 2. Mark 16. 5. Luke 24. 4. John 20. 12. Luke 1. 11, 12. & 9. 2, 9. Rev. 18. 1.

d Ch. 27. 65, 66. Ps. 144. 6. & 48. 6. Dan. 8. 27. & 10. 7. Is. 33. 14.

e Mark 16. 6. Luke 24. 5. Is. 41. 10, 14. Rev. 1. 17, 18. Mark 5. 66.

f John 2. 19. ch. 12. 40. & 16. 21. & 17. 24. & 20. 19.

g Ch. 26. 32. ver. 10. Mark 14. 28. & 16. 7. John 21. 1. Acts 1. 3. & 10. 41. & 13. 31. 1 Cor. 15. 5. ch. 4. 15. & 8. 11, 12.

h Eccl. 9. 10. Rom. 12. 11. Ezra 3. 12, 13. John 16. 20, 22. & 20. 20. Ps. 2. 11.

i Is. 64. 5. Ps. 19. 11. Mark 16. 9. John 20. 14, 16. Song 3. 4.

k Is. 41. 10, 14. & 35. 3, 4. Rev. 1. 17, 18. Mark 5. 36.

l Judg. 10. 16. Hos. 11. 8. Ps. 103. 8—13. Heb. 2. 11, 12. ch. 12. 49, 50. John 20. 17. see on ver. 7.

Verses 1—10. The resurrection of Jesus being the grand hinge on which our hope of salvation turns, it must afford the most singular satisfaction to observe the amazing force of evidence wherewith this glorious event is attested. Had he still lain in the grave, and had death maintained his dominion over him, our faith had been vain, and we must have perished in our sins: but glory be to God, he hath raised up Jesus from the dead, and hath thereby begotten us to a new and lively hope. Some testimonies of this fact are here produced; many more will be found in the other evangelists. We have,

1. The visit made to the sepulchre by those holy women who had attended Jesus to the cross and to the grave, even Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James; and they came now to see the sepulchre, if it was as they left it, bringing spices to embalm the body; this was in the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week. Christ had lain in the grave part of our Friday, all Saturday, which was the Jewish Sabbath, and on the Sabbath morning, the third day, very early, probably about four o'clock, he arose, after dwelling among the dead about six and thirty hours; long enough to show his death real, yet not so long as that his body should see corruption, Ps. xvi. 10.

2. As they went, and talked about the difficulty of removing the stone at the mouth of the sepulchre, which seems to have been more ponderous than they could roll away, Behold! to their astonishment, there was a great earthquake, which, had the guards indeed slept, must needs have roused them; for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, as the officer of the Most High, sent to release from the arrests of death the body of the Redeemer: the immense debt of our sins being now paid and cancelled, and the justice of God satisfied, the surety by right became entitled to his discharge. Therefore he came and rolled back the stone from the door, thus opening the prison, whilst Jesus, as our representative, arose for our justification, as he had been delivered for our offences; and the angel sat upon it, defying all the powers of earth or hell to roll it on again; waiting there to welcome the poor women who were on their way, and striking terror and dismay into the stout-hearted soldiers. His countenance was bright as the lightning, and his raiment white as snow, the emblem of purity and victory. Trembling in every limb, the guards shook like the earth which rocked under their feet, and pale as death, with haste fled from the presence of this angelic minister.

The other evangelists mention two angels; one sat on the stone without, and invited and led the women into the sepulchre, where they found another; the one of which stood at the feet, and the other at the head of the grave where the body had lain.

3. The women being come to the sepulchre, were at first affrighted at the sight, Mark xvi. 5. but the angel kindly accosting them, endeavoured to silence their fears. Fear not ye; whatever terrors seize the sinners in Zion, the redeemed of the Lord need not tremble; for I know that ye seek Jesus that was crucified, and they who seek a crucified Jesus, have nothing to fear; have every thing to hope: none ever sought his face in vain. He is not here, that you should any longer bedew his corpse with tears: no, he is risen for your everlasting comfort, as he said he should, on the third day. Then graciously inviting them to come and see the place where the Lord lay, that they might be convinced he was not there, he probably led the way into the sepulchre, whither they followed him, and saw the other angel, mentioned John xx. 12. And hereupon the angel dismisses them with a message to the disconsolate disciples; Go quickly, and be the messengers of this glad news; tell his disciples, now dejected and despairing, he is risen from the dead, to their surprise and joy; and, behold, for the confirmation of your faith and theirs, he goeth before you into Galilee, where you and they must follow him, and there shall ye see him, converse with him, and receive the fullest assurance of his resurrection. Lo! I have told you; remember to deliver these tidings, and be assured of the truth of what I have spoken.

4. Agitated with surprise and joy at what they had seen and heard, and eager to communicate the glad news, they ran to the disciples: and in the way Jesus himself met them, and with kindest salutation accosted them, All hail, all peace, happiness, and joy be with you! With lowliest reverence they cast themselves instantly at his feet, and in a transport of love embraced him, adoring him as their risen Lord and Saviour. Then Jesus, further to confirm their hearts, and remove every fear, bids them not be afraid; they need apprehend neither danger nor delusion, but must deliver the message his angel had put into their mouths, Go tell my brethren; by such an endearing name was he pleased to distinguish his disciples; that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me. Note, (1.) Christ is not ashamed to call his servants brethren: yea, though their unfaithfulness had made them unworthy of such a relation, he will not disown them. (2.) Faith in a risen Redeemer effectually silences a sinner's fears: in him we see the great salvation accomplished, and are filled with joy and peace in believing.

* Being terrified by the earthquake.

m Ps. 2. 1—6. & 94. 2. ch. 26. 3, 4.

† They would not have made this acknowledgment without previous assurance of protection.

n John 3. 19, 20. Acts 12. 19.

11. ¶ Now, when they were going, behold, * some of the watch came into the city, and shewed unto the chief priests all the things that were done. 12. And [m] when they were assembled with the elders, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers, 13. Saying, Say ye, His disciples came by night, † and stole him away while we slept. 14. [n] And if this come to the governor's ears, we will persuade him, and secure you. 15. So [o] they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.

o Ch. 26. 15. 1 Tim. 6. 10. Prov. 1. 10—16. & 28. 21.

Verses 11—15. The resurrection of Jesus is proved by a cloud of unexceptionable witnesses, among whom his very enemies held a distinguished place.

1. The guard who had fled, had just reached the city as the women were on their return thither; and some of them, probably the officers who commanded the detachment, went directly to the chief priest; and to their astonishment related all that had passed; the earthquake, the descent of the angel, the removal of the stone, and the rising of Jesus; and if any thing could ever have shocked their obdurate hearts, one should conceive the report of such incontestable eye-witnesses of the fact would have convinced them of their wickedness, and turned them to the Lord. But they were determined in impenitence and unbelief, and therefore given up to a reprobate mind. Hereupon,

2. The chief priests and elders consulted together, and resolved to support what they had done at all events, and therefore to invent the most plausible pretext to evade the evidence of the resurrection of Jesus, knowing the powerful effects of money, and how ready men are to sell the truth, nay, their very souls for it, they bribed high all the guard to tell a lie as absurd as wicked, that his disciples came by night, and stole him away while they slept. And as the men might justly apprehend such a confessed criminal neglect in them, as sleeping upon guard, might be attended with rigorous punishment if it came to the governor's ears, the rulers engage to interpose their influence, and to save them harmless. But the whole contrivance was so barefaced a sham, that it carried its own confutation, except to such as chose their own delusions. Can it be conceived, that where the trust was so important, and death the penalty of neglect, that a sentinel would sleep? But if one man may be supposed to be overtaken, would a whole band of men be all asleep at once? If they had been so, would those timid disciples, who had fled at the first approach of danger, when their Master was alive, now dare rush into the jaws of death, to rescue his corpse? Could such a number of them as was requisite to roll away the stone, and remove the body, have been able to accomplish such a thing without waking one of the numerous host that lay around the tomb? and if they slept, how could they possibly know that his disciples came and stole him away? Nay, their very living to support the falsehood, was a full proof against them; for, had they slept as they pretended, these very priests had been the first to have had them put to death for their neglect, instead of interesting themselves to screen them from punishment.

3. The bribe extorted from the heathen soldiers an easy compliance; they took the money, and said, and did as they were taught. And this senseless story being industriously propagated by the priests, was readily believed by those who wished to be deceived, and continued long after to be commonly reported among the Jews, to render the disciples odious, and prevent the effects of their ministry. Note, (1.) Money is the grand bait for the grossest crimes: the raging love of that once rooted in the heart, swallows up every consideration of truth, honesty, and justice. (2.) No outward evidence is sufficient to overcome the infidelity of the heart, without the powerful operations of the Holy Ghost. Were we to choose what proofs we would, greater could not be given than these men beheld, and yet not one of them was converted. No signs or wonders will convince those who reject the gospel. (3.) A malicious lie once raised, in its consequences is often fatally extensive; but wo to the author!

16. ¶ [p] Then the eleven disciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them. 17. And when they saw him, they [q] worshipped him: but some † doubted. 18. ¶ And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, [r] All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. 19. [s] Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; 20. Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, [t] I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen.

p Ch. 26. 32. ver. 7, 10. Mark 16. 9. 1 Cor. 15. 5.
q Ps. 45. 11. & 2. 12. John 5. 23. Rev. 5. 9. Heb. 1. 6.
† Or had doubted.
r Dan. 7. 13, 14. Ps. 89. 27. Is. 52. 13. & 53. 12. & 9. 6, 7. ch. 11. 27. & 16. 28. Luke 1. 32. John 3. 35. & 13. 3. & 17. 2. Acts 2. 36. & 5. 31. & 10. 36, 38, 42. Rom. 14. 9. 1 Cor. 15. 24. Eph. 1. 10, 20. Phil. 2. 9—11. Col. 1. 16—18. Heb. 1. 2, 3. & 2. 9. 1 Pet. 3. 22. Rev. 1. 13, 16, 18, 20. & 17. 14. & 19. 16. s Mark 16. 15, 16. Luke 24. 47. Rom. 10. 18. Acts 2. 38. & 8. 12. 1 Cor. 1. 13, 15. & 10. 2. 1 Pet. 3. 21. Col. 1. 23, 28. Acts 20. 27. 1 Cor. 11. 2, 23. Deut. 5. 32. & 12. 32. t Josh. 1. 5, 9. Is. 41. 10, 14. & 46. 4. ch. 18. 20.

Verses 16—20. According to the directions of their Master, the eleven apostles went into Galilee to the mountain appointed, having summoned a general meeting of all the disciples; whose number amounted to above five hundred. There Jesus again appeared unto them, and, fully convinced now of his being the Son of God, they paid him divine adoration. But some among them still doubted, weak and wavering, and scarce able to credit the testimony of their senses; so very slow of heart were they to believe, and so little disposed to be credulous in a matter of such infinite importance. But Jesus soon removed all their doubts, conversing familiarly with them, and giving them the most indubitable proofs of the identity of his person, and the certainty of his resurrection. Hereupon, as he was now about to take his farewell of earth, he invests them with his authority, sends them out under his influence, directs them in their work, and assures them of his blessing on their labours.

1. He asserts the authority with which he is invested, and in virtue of which he puts them in trust with his gospel. All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. As Mediator, he had received the universal sovereignty; angels, principalities, and powers above were made subject unto him; and on earth all things and persons were put under his government: which was a most encouraging consideration to them who were about to go forth in his name, since his support would make them more than conquerors. Note, When we are discouraged with the view of our own weakness and insufficiency, we should look by faith to the all-sufficiency of Jesus, and be comforted.

2. He gives them a commission out of the plenitude of his power. Go ye, therefore, and all who shall in succeeding ages be put in trust with the same gospel, teach all nations; for all respect of persons and people is now at an end; the salvation purchased is a common salvation, and whosoever will, let him come. They are to carry the glad tidings into all lands, and make disciples every where; baptizing them, and their household who should be converted by their ministry, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, admitting them by this rite into the visible communion of the church, on the profession of their faith in the eternal Father, Son, and Spirit, the one God, to whose worship and service they are hereby dedicated: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; declaring to them the riches of the grace, and the extent of the privileges of the gospel; with all the mighty obligations to obedience, resulting from faith, which worketh by love: enjoining the word of Jesus as the only rule of duty, to which nothing is to be added, and from whence nothing must be diminished; and urging the disciples to adorn the doctrines they profess by that conscientious observance of all those moral duties and positive ordinances which may prove the truth of the grace which is in them, bring glory to God, and credit to their holy religion.

3. He assures them of his constant spiritual presence, to teach, comfort, and prosper them in all their labours of love. Lo! I am with you; be assured of it, as the most undoubted truth, though my bodily presence be removed my Spirit shall abundantly supply that loss; in all difficulties and dangers I will support you: in all emergencies I will direct you; I will give you success in all your labours, and consolation in all your sufferings; and that alway, even to the end of the world. Not only all your days shall you find me near to help you, but to the end of time your successors in the ministry shall experience my continual support and blessing, in the preaching that gospel you deliver unto them. Amen. Verily I say unto you who am the faithful and true witness, I will fulfil my promises. Or this may be the evangelist's word, expressing his own, and the church's faith and prayer, that so it may be, and so we believe it shall be. What Christ hath promised, we may confidently expect to receive, only pray in faith, nothing doubting.

A PRACTICAL COMMENT UPON THE

GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST MARK.

Introduction.

WE have heard the evidence given in by the first witness to the doctrine and miracles of our Lord Jesus; and now here is another produced, who calls for our attention. The second living creature saith, Come and see, Rev. vi. 3. The author of this Epistle is Mark; whether the same person mentioned Acts xv. 37, 38. or him whom Peter calls his son, 1 Pet. v. 13. is uncertain. He was not of the number of the apostles, but might probably be one of the seventy. His gospel is shorter than that of Matthew, containing much the same matter, with many additional circumstances. Thus out of the mouth of two or three witnesses is every word established.

CHAP. I.—ANNO DOMINI, 27.

Mark's narrative takes not rise so early as those of Matthew and Luke do, from the birth of our Saviour, but from John's baptism, from which he presently passeth to Christ's public ministry. Accordingly, in this chapter we have, 1. The office of John Baptist illustrated by the prophecy of him, ver. 1—3. and the history of him, ver. 4—8. 2. Christ's baptism, and his being owned from heaven, ver. 9—11. 3. His temptation, ver. 12, 13. 4. His preaching, ver. 14, 15, 21, 22, 38, 39. 5. His calling disciples, ver. 16—20. 6. His praying, ver. 35. 7. His working miracles. (1.) His rebuking an unclean spirit, ver. 23—28. (2.) His curing Peter's mother-in-law that was ill of a fever, ver. 29—31. (3.) His healing all that came to him, ver. 32, 34, 35. (4.) His cleansing a leper, ver. 40—45.

1. THE [a] beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, [b] the Son of God; 2. As it is written in the prophets, [c] Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee. 3. [d] The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. 4. [e] John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance * for the remission of sins. 5. [f] And there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins. 6. And John was [g] clothed with camel's hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins; and he did eat locusts and wild honey; 7. And preached, saying, [h] There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose. 8. [i] I indeed have baptized you with water: but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost.

a Mat. 11. 12. Luke 2. 10, 11. Is. 40. 1—11. Mat. 3. 2. & 17. 11.

b Ps. 2. 7. Mat. 3. 17. & 16. 16. & 17. 5. & 26. 63, 64. John 1. 49. & 6. 69. & 10. 30, 35. & 3. 16. & 1. 14. Rom. 8. 3.

c Mal. 3. 1. Mat. 11. 10. Luke 7. 27.

d Is. 40. 3. Luke 3. 4. & 1. 76. John 1. 15, 23. Mat. 3. 3.

e Mat. 3. 1, 2. & 11. 10. Luke 3. 3. John 1. 31. Mal. 4. 5. Acts 19. 4. & 2. 38.

e Or unto.

f Mat. 3. 5. Luke 1. 17, 76. John 3. 22. & 5. 35. Acts 2. 38. & 19. 18. Jer. 3. 13.

g Mat. 3. 4. 2 Kin. 1. 8. Zech. 13. 4. Lev. 11. 22.

h Mat. 3. 11. Luke 3. 16. John 1. 17, 27. & 3. 28—31. Mat. 3. 14.

i Mat. 3. 11. Luke 3. 16. with Is. 44. 3, 4. Joel 2. 28. Acts 1. 5. & 2. 4, 17. & 10. 45. & 11. 15, 16. & 19. 4. 1 Cor. 12. 13.

Verses 1—8. St Mark commences his history with the account of John's baptism, the messenger sent before the Messiah, according to the ancient prophecies, to prepare his way. Isaiah and Malachi had both spoken of him, Isa. xl. 3. Mal. iii. 1. and agreeable thereunto John commenced his ministry in the wilderness, calling the people to repentance and faith in the promised Messiah, in order that they might obtain remission of their sins.

1. John's preaching was the beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ the Son of God. Not that the gospel then began first to be published; for it had been the subject of the ministry of all the prophets, and in the promise of the Seed of the woman had been preached to the first man immediately after his fall; but the gospel dispensation, in opposition to the law, began more immediately from the baptism of John, whose office it was particularly to point the people to the Lamb of God, now made manifest in the flesh to take away the sin of the world. This was the glad news John declared, the gospel of Jesus Christ, who is both the Author and Subject of it; and as the Son of God, endued with all-sufficiency for the great work of man's salvation, which he came to accomplish. To him the Baptist bore witness, acknowledged his surpassing dignity, and confessed his own unworthiness to be employed in the meanest offices by his Lord and whilst, in consequence of his preaching, and the people's profession of repentance, he admitted them to baptism in token of the forgiveness of their sins, he bade them expect a more efficacious baptism than this of water, even of the Holy Ghost, which the Messiah, to whom he directed them, should shed on them abundantly, to cleanse them from all their iniquities.

2. His appearance was singular, as that of the ancient prophets, and his dress and diet bespoke his mortified spirit and deadness to the world. A rough camel's hair garment, tied with a leathern girdle, defended him from the cold; and locusts and wild honey, such as the wilderness afforded, satisfied his hunger. Note, They who preach the gospel must learn to endure hardness, and be ready, whenever duty calls, to forego any of the delights of sense for the sake of the service in which they are engaged.

3. Multitudes attended him, and appeared deeply affected with John's discourses, confessing their sins, and desiring to be admitted to his baptism. The word of the gospel is powerful. The doctrines of repentance and faith, when urged upon the heart, awaken the conscience: and all who truly preach Jesus Christ will assuredly see the success of their ministrations. They who have never known themselves instrumental to the convincing and converting one sinner, have demonstrative evidence before them, that they are not the messengers of Christ, and do not preach his truth.

9. ¶ [l] And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan. 10. And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens * opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him: 11. And [m] there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. 12. ¶ [n] And immediately the Spirit driveth him into the wilderness. 13. And he was there in the wilderness forty days, tempted of Satan; and was [o] with the wild beasts; and the angels [p] ministered unto him.

l Mat. 3. 13—17. Luke 3. 21—23. John 1. 32—34.

*Or, cloven, or rent.

m Ps. 2. 7. Is. 42. 1, 21. & 49. 3. Mat. 3. 17. & 17. 5. ch. 9. 7. Col. 1. 13. John 10. 17. 2 Pet. 1. 17.

n Mat. 4. 1—11. Luke 4. 1—13. Heb. 2. 17, 18. & 4. 15. with Deut. 9. 18, 25. 1 Kin. 19. 8.

o Ps. 22. 6. & 102. 6. Job 30. 29. Mat. 8. 20.

p 1 Kin. 19. 7. Mat. 26. 53. 1 Tim. 3. 16. cir. 30.

Verses 9—13. The account of Christ's ministry and temptations Matthew hath recorded more at large, chap. iii. iv.

1. He was baptized of John in Jordan. Not that he had any sins to confess though in the likeness of sinful flesh; but he would comply with every instituted ordinance of God: and now also he was eminently to be pointed out as the Messiah, and to enter upon his mission. Accordingly the heavens were opened, the Holy Ghost visibly descended upon him, and God himself by an audible voice, bore testimony to him as his Son, and declared his perfect satisfaction in the undertaking in which he was engaged. Note, (1.) If God is ever well pleased with us, it can only be in and through his dear Son. (2.) Whenever we are truly baptized into Christ, the Spirit of God will as really be communicated to us as it visibly descended upon him.

2. He immediately entered upon his temptation, led by the Holy Spirit from the brink of Jordan into the howling wilderness, to make his abode with beasts, while Satan sharpened every poisoned arrow in his quiver against him; but, to his bitter disappointment, though in this lonely desert, he found all his arts foiled by this second Adam, which even in Eden he had practised with such success upon the first. Thus, forty days Christ bore with all the tempter's malice, and baffled all his wiles; till Satan, despairing, at last quitted the field, unable to make the least impression: and then the angelic hosts, who had with admiration beheld the dreadful conflict, appeared to congratulate the Saviour's victory, and to minister to his hunger. Note, (1.) Every converted soul must prepare for temptation. (2.) Solitude often proves a dangerous snare. (3.) Christ knows what sore temptations mean. He tenderly compassionates his suffering people, and is near to succour and defend them. (4.) The angels minister to the heirs of salvation; yea, the Lord upon their right hand is their defence, and keepeth them, that the wicked one toucheth them not.

14. ¶ Now, after that [q] John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching [r] the gospel of the kingdom of God, 15. And saying, [s] The time is fulfilled, [t] and the kingdom of God is at hand: [u] repent ye, and believe the gospel. 16. ¶ [x] Now, as he walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw Simon and Andrew his brother casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers. 17. And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become [y] fishers of men. 18. And straightway they forsook their nets, and followed him. 19. And when he had gone a little farther thence, he saw James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, who also were in the ship mending their nets. 20. And straightway he called them: and they [z] left their father Zebedee in the ship with the hired servants, and went after him. 21. [a] And they went into Capernaum; and straightway on the sabbath-day he entered into the synagogue, and taught. 22. [b] And they were astonished at his doctrine; for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.

q Mat. 4. 12. & 11. 2. & 14. 3. Luke 3. 19. John 3. 30.

r Mat. 4. 17, 23. Heb. 2. 3. Luke 4. 14—22, 45, 46. Acts 10. 36—38. Is. 61. 1—3. Eph. 2. 17. Luke 2. 10, 11. & 8. 1.

s Gal. 4. 4. Ps. 110. 3. Dan. 2. 44. Eph. 1. 10.

t See Mat. 4. 17. & xiii. & 3. 2. & 10. 7.

u Is. 55. 1—7. Acts 1. 38, 39. & 20. 21.

x Mat. 4. 18—22. Luke 5. 1—11. John 1. 35—44.

y Mat. 4. 19. Luke 5. 10 Heb. 2. 3. Eph. 2. 20. Acts 2. 4—42. & 4. 4, &c.

z Mat. 10. 37. ch. 10. 28. cir. 30.

a Mat. 4. 13, 23. Luke 4. 16, 31. & 13. 10. Acts 13 14, 27, 44. & 15. 21. & 57. 2. & 18. 4.

b Mat. 7. 28, 29. & 13. 54. & 21. 23. ch. 11. 28. Luke 4. 36. & 7. 16. & 20. 2.

Verses 14—22. When John's ministry was finished by his imprisonment, Christ came into Galilee, and there,

1. He preached the gospel of the kingdom of God, inviting all his countrymen to come and partake of the inestimable blessings of that dispensation of grace which he was commissioned to publish; the time being fulfilled which had been marked out for the appearing of the Messiah by the prophets, and decreed in the counsels of God: and therefore, as his kingdom was immediately to be erected, he exhorted all his hearers to repent and believe the gospel; to discover, acknowledge, and bewail their offences against God's holy law; to renounce their vain confidence in themselves; to change their mistaken sentiments concerning the nature of the Messiah's kingdom: and instantly turning to him to receive the glad tidings he brought of the salvation he came to procure for them, even pardon, peace, righteousness, and eternal life, the gift of God through the sacrifice and obedience to death of his Son. Note, (1.) The gospel will be glad tidings to none who do not see and feel their misery and guilt; and, instead of flattering themselves in their own eyes, now change their minds, and stand convinced of their lost estate. (2.) Faith in the gospel word entitles us to claim the fulfilment of all the promises: nor is it any presumption, rejecting all confidence in ourselves, to be confident of the Saviour's love and faithfulness.

(2.) He called four of his disciples to a more constant attendance upon him, that they might be better qualified for the work in which he designed to employ them. (1.) They were fishers; for the kingdom of Jesus was not to be erected by the wisdom of men, but by the power of God. (2.) He found them at their vocation. Honest industry in his sight is highly commendable. (3.) They were two pair of brethren: and that is an additional happiness, when they, who were so near to each other in blood, are united together in one Lord. (4.) They left all to follow Christ. When he calls, we must count nothing too dear to part with for his sake.

3. With these disciples, his attendants, he entered into Capernaum, and on the Sabbath preached in the synagogue, to the astonishment of the auditory; such a divine power and authority attended his teaching, as the people had never found under their Scribes and Rabbies. Note, The gospel word is mighty and powerful. No marvel then if the preachers of it are distinguished from the insipid doctors of moral virtue, philosophical disquisitions, or empty formality.

c Luke 4. 33—37. 1 John 5. 19.

23. ¶ [c] And there was in their synagogue a man with an unclean spirit; and d Luke 4. 41. Mat. 8. 29. ver. 34. ch. 5. 7.

he cried out, 24. Saying, [d] Let us alone: what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, [e] the e Ps. 16. 10. Acts 2 31. & 4. 27. Dan. 9. 24. Luke 1. 35.

Holy One of God. 25. And Jesus [f] rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and f Ver. 34. Luke 4. 41. ch. 3. 11, 12. Ps. 50. 16.

come out of him. 26. [g] And when the unclean spirit had torn him, * and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him.

g Ch. 9. 20, 26. Luke 9. 39, 42. & 11. 22.

* Had shaken or convulsed him. It appears from Luke 4. 35. that he hurt him not. —Pearce.

27. [h] And they were all amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying, What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him. 28. [i] And immediately his fame spread abroad throughout all the region round about Galilee.

h Mat. 12. 23. & 9. 33. ch. 7. 37. & 9. 25.

i Mic. 5. 4. Is. 52. 13. Song 1. 3. Mat. 4. 23. & 9. 31. Luke 4. 15, 37.

Verses 23—28. Christ confirmed his mission by his miracles. And to give the greater weight to his discourse, we find him here,

1. Casting out a devil from one possessed. He is called an unclean spirit; for he is such in his own nature; by his suggestions he defiles the consciences of men, and, by the temptations he presents before them, seduces them into all impurity of body and soul. Dreading the presence and power of Jesus, he cried out, using the man's organs of speech, saying, let us alone, what have we to do with thee? They knew themselves unable to contend, and therefore tremble at the thought of being dispossessed of their prey: but to do him all the mischief in their power, this fiend seems in reproach to call him Jesus of Nazareth: and though he adds, I know thee who thou art, the Holy one of God, there was probably the most malicious design couched under that fair confession, even to raise a suspicion of confederacy between Jesus and Satan. Christ therefore silences him, disdaining to receive a testimony from him, and disappointing his malicious designs: with a sharp rebuke he bids him instantly quit his prey, and leave the body which he had possessed; and, though furious at being dispossessed, with a fearful outcry, as if he would have rent the man in pieces, or designing to terrify the spectators, he departs; compelled, though with reluctance, to yield to the commanding voice of Jesus. Note, (1.) Though such possessions may not now be found, how many, under the influence of an unclean spirit, are still led captive by the devil at his will! (2.) The grace of Jesus is still the same, and he can and doth subdue the strongest powers of Satan in the sinner's heart. (3.) Many a poor soul, when Christ first approaches him with the gospel word, is grievously harassed, and cries out, as if his misery was now greater than ever before; but these terrors are the forerunners of peace and joy in believing.

2. The people were all amazed at what they heard and saw, and could not help saying one to another, What thing is this? Never was such astonishing power before exerted! What new doctrine is this? delivered with such majesty, and confirmed by such miracles. He acts not as exorcists, by charms and invocations; but with authority commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they obey him, unable to make the least resistance. Hereupon the fame of his preaching and miracles began to be exceedingly spread through all the region round about Galilee. Note, Christ's doctrine was not new, but the old doctrine which had been from the beginning; but had for a long time been so forgotten and neglected, that it appeared now quite uncommon. As in these days, the doctrines of the gospel are by many called new doctrines, because, alas! we have for a long season in general so grievously departed from them.

29. ¶ [k] And forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew, [l] with James and John. 30. But Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever, and anon they tell him of her. 31. And he came and took her by the hand, and lifted her up; [l] and immediately the fever [n] left her, and she [m] ministered unto them. 32. ¶ And [n] at even, when the sun did set, † they brought unto him all that were diseased, and them that were possessed with devils. 33. And all the city was gathered together at the door. 34. And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils; [o] and suffered not the devils ‡ to speak, because they knew him. 35. ¶ And [p] in the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed. 36. And Simon and they that were with him followed after him. 37. And when they had found him, they said unto him, [q] All men seek for thee. 38. And he said unto them, [r] Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also: for therefore came I forth. 39. And he preached in their synagogues throughout all Galilee, and [s] cast out devils.

k Mat. 8. 14, 15. Luke 4. 38, 39.

l Exod. 15. 26. Rev. 16. 9. Ps. 103. 3. & 147. 3.

m Ps. 103. 1, 2. & 116. 12. 2 Cor. 5. 14. Luke 8. 3.

n Ver. 21. ch. 3. 2 & 14. 1. Mat. 8. 16, 17. Luke 4. 40, 41. Gen. 49. 10. Is. 53. 4, 5.

† The sabbath was then past, and no objection could be made to their bringing them to be healed.—Pearce.

o Ch. 3. 12. ver. 25. Ps. 50. 16. Acts 16. 17, 18.

‡ Or to say that they knew him.

p Luke 4. 42—45. Eccl. 9. 10. John 4. 34. Heb. 5. 7. Ps. 109. 4.

q Ver. 5. John 3. 26. & 12. 19. Mat. 4. 25. Zech. 11. 11.

r Luke 4. 43. John 16. 28. Is. 61. 1—3. & 42. 1—7. & 49. 1—6. & 50. 4.

s 1 John 3. 8. Gen. 3. 15. ver. 26. ch. 5. 9. & 7. 30.

Verses 29—39. Wherever Jesus went he left the glorious marks of his power and grace.

1. Soon after he had retired from the synagogue to Simon's house to take some refreshment, some of the company informed him of the illness of Peter's mother, confined to her bed with a fever. Immediately he arose, went to her bedside, lifted her up, and instantly the fever left her. The cure was perfect; not so much as any weakness remained; but she immediately rose and waited on Jesus and the guests. Note, When we have experienced the Redeemer's healing grace, it becomes us to show our gratitude by immediately employing the strength he hath given us in his service.

2. A multitude of other cures were wrought by him the same day. For no sooner was the Sabbath ended (before which they might scruple to carry the sick to him) than the door was crowded with patients, and not one went away without a cure; and many devils were ejected by his word, whom he permitted not to say that they knew him (as the words may be best rendered) not choosing to have them speak aught concerning him, lest it should give occasion to suggest there was a confederacy between him and them.

3. After some needful repose, very early in the morning, long before break of day, he retired to a solitary place, that he might, uninterrupted, enjoy sweet communion with his Father in secret, and pour out his soul in prayer before him. Note, (1.) Early rising is as profitable to the soul as the body; whilst sloth is alike hurtful to both. (2.) When our spirits are most fresh and vigorous, it is then the properest time to retire for prayer and communion with God.

4. Peter and his companions no sooner missed him in the morning than they sought him out, and desired him to return to Capernaum, there being so great inquiries made after him. But Christ could not confine himself there; the rest of the country must share his ministrations, being sent for this purpose to go about preaching and working miracles through the whole land: and accordingly he did so, his disciples attending him on his travels, hearing his divine teaching, and beholding the wonders of his power and love.

40. ¶ [t] And there came a leper to him, beseeching him, and kneeling down to him, and saying unto him, [u] If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. 41. And Jesus, [x] moved with compassion, put forth his hand, and touched him, and saith unto him, I will; be thou clean. 42. And as soon as he had spoken, [y] immediately the leprosy departed from him, and he was cleansed. 43. And he straightly charged him, and forthwith sent him away; 44. And saith unto him, [z] See thou say nothing to any man: but go thy way, shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things which Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them. 45. [a] But he went out, and began to publish it much, and to blaze abroad the matter, insomuch that Jesus could no more openly * enter into the city, but was without in desert places: and they came to him from every quarter.

t Mat. 8. 1—4. Luke 5. 12—15. Mat. 11. 5. & 7. 7. Luke 18. 1—13.

u Gen. 18. 14. Jer. 32. 17. Is. 63. 1. Lev. 13. 46.

x Mat. 9. 36. Heb. 4. 15. & 2. 17. Hos. 11. 8. Jer. 31. 18—20.

y Ver. 31. ch. 5. 29. Mat. 15. 28. John 4. 50, 53. Luke 17. 12—14.

z Mat. 8. 4. Lev. xiii, xiv. with ch. 5. 43. Mat. 17. 9. Luke 17. 14.

a Luke 5. 15. Mat. 4. 24. & 9. 26. & 14. 35. & 17. 14.

* Did not think it proper to enter openly any more into the city, Capernaum, called "his own city" by Matthew, ch. 9. 1.—Pearce.

Verses 40—45. This miracle was before recorded, Matt. vii. 2. We are taught by it,

1. What we are: poor, defiled, loathsome sinners, under the incurable disease of a corrupted nature and desperate, unless the great Physician of souls exert his healing power on our behalf.

2. Whither we must go: to Jesus; bowed down under the sense of our vileness and unworthiness to approach him; yet casting ourselves at his feet as alone able to relieve us from our misery, and with a humble persuasion he will not spurn us from him, but that he is willing as well as able to help and heal us.

3. Christ never rejects the souls of the miserable that fly to him; his bowels of compassion yearn over them; the hand of his grace is sure to be stretched out towards them. And though we often come trembling between fear and hope, whether he will receive, pardon, help, and save us, he is pleased to remove our doubts, and saith to our souls, I will, and power instantly accompanies his promise.

4. To those whom Christ cures he gives a strict charge; and they must carefully obey his injunctions, and especially beware not to return unto folly, lest a worse thing happen unto them; but daily they are called to present themselves, body, soul, and spirit, before the great High Priest of their profession, that he, who hath made them clean, may keep them clean.

5. They who have tasted the love of Jesus delight to spread the savour of his name, and to testify their gratitude towards him, both with their lips and in their lives.

CHAP. II.—ANNO DOMINI, 31.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's healing a man that was sick of a palsy, ver. 1—12. 2. His calling Matthew from the receipt of custom, and his eating upon that occasion with publicans and sinners, and justifying himself in so doing, ver. 13—17. 3. His justifying his disciples in not fasting so much as those of the Pharisees did, ver. 18—21. 4. His justifying them in plucking the ears of corn on the sabbath-day, ver. 23—28. All which passages we had before, Matt. ix. and xii.

1. AND [a] again he entered into Capernaum after some days; and it was noised that he was in the house. 2. [b] And straightway many were gathered together, insomuch that there was no room to receive them, no, not so much as about the door: and [c] he preached the word unto them. 3. ¶ And they come unto him, bringing one [d] sick of the palsy, which was borne of four. 4. And when they could not come nigh unto him for the press, they uncovered the [e] roof where he was: and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay. 5. When Jesus [f] saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, [g] Son, thy sins be forgiven thee. 6. But there were certain of the scribes sitting there, and reasoning in their hearts, 7. [h] Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies? [i] who can forgive sins but God only? 8. And immediately, when Jesus [k] perceived in his spirit that they so reasoned within themselves, he said unto them, Why reason ye these things in your hearts? 9. Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk? 10. But that ye may know that [l] the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (he saith to the sick of the palsy,) 11. [m] I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house. 12. And immediately he arose, took up the bed, and went forth before them all; [n] insomuch that they were all amazed, and glorified God, saying, We never saw it on this fashion.

cir. 31.

a Mat. 9. 1—8. Luke 5. 18—26. Deut. 9. 11. & 15. 1. Acts 24. 17.

b Gen. 49. 10. Is. 45. 23. ch. 1. 33, 45.

c Ch. 1. 14. Luke 8. 1. Eph. 2. 17. Heb. 2. 3. Mat. 11. 5. Is. 61. 1—3. John 8. 12. & 12. 35.

d Deut. 28. 15, 22. ver. 10. John 5. 14. 1 Cor. 11. 30. Jam. 5. 15. John 9. 2, 3.

e Flat roof. Deut. 22. 8. 2 Sam. 11. 2. Jer. 19. 13. Mat. 10. 27. Acts 10. 9. Luke 5. 19.

f Gen. 22. 12. John 2. 25. & 21. 17. Heb. 4. 13. Rev. 2. 23. Jer. 17. 10.

g Mat. 9. 2. Acts 5. 31. Is. 53. 11. John 5. 14. Ps. 103. 3. Is. 19. 22. & 38. 17.

h Mat. 9. 3. & 26. 65. John 5. 18. & 10. 33, 36.

i Job 14. 4. Is. 43. 25. & 44. 22. Ps. 130. 4. Rom. 8. 23.

k Ver. 5. 1 Sam. 16. 7. 1 Chr. 29. 17. Ps. 7. 9. & 139. 1—4. Jer. 17. 10. John 2. 24, 25. & 21. 17. Heb. 4. 13. Rev. 2. 23. John 6. 64.

l Dan. 7. 13. Ps. 80. 17. Zech. 13. 7. Mat. 16. 13. Rev. 1. 13. 1 Tim. 2. 5. & 3. 16. John 17. 2. & 5. 22, 23. Is. 53. 11. 1 Tim. 1. 13, 16.

m Gen. 1. 3. ch. 1. 41. Ps. 33. 9. John 6. 63. & 5. 8.

n Mat. 9. 8, 33. & 12. 23. ch. 1. 27. Ps. 8. 1—3. Luke 5. 26. & 7. 16.

Verses 1—12. No sooner had our Lord returned to Capernaum from his journey through the villages of Galilee, than the rumour of it quickly spread through the place; and, eager to improve the precious opportunity of his presence, such multitudes assembled at the house, that there was no coming even to the door, so thick was the crowd. And a blessed sight it is to behold such numbers flocking to the Saviour.

1. He preached unto them. Some might have thought the time, the place, improper for a sermon. There were synagogues; what need of preaching in a house, or at the window? Perhaps to teach us, that no time or place is improper to speak a word for God and for immortal souls.

2. During Christ's preaching, or in some interval of his discourses, the friends of a poor paralytic man, solicitous to present his pitiable case before him, would fain have pressed through the crowd; but, finding the attempt impracticable, they carried him up to the top of the house where Jesus was, and breaking up a part of the flat roof, let down the sick man on his bed before him. Note, They who truly seek the Lord, will be discouraged by no difficulties from coming to him.

3. Struck with such an instance of their faith, the compassionate Jesus kindly accosts the afflicted patient, and seals the pardon of his sins as the introduction to his cure. This being the cause of every sickness and disease, the bitterness of them is past, when the sin that occasioned them is forgiven.

4. The Scribes and Pharisees who were present, regarded it as arrant blasphemy in a mere man, as they regarded Jesus, to assume the incommunicable prerogative of God, in thus by his own authority presuming to forgive sin. He knew their secret reasonings, and in his answer gave them a proof of his divinity as the searcher of hearts. To show them therefore, he possessed the power he assumed, he bids the man arise and walk, and appeals to themselves for the conclusion, whether he who could thus sovereignly, in an instant, remove the effects of sin, could not as easily remit the guilt of it. Note, The man Christ Jesus is also very God, able to forgive and to save to the uttermost every poor sinner that comes to him.

5. The paralytic man received his cure the moment Jesus commanded him to arise; and to the astonishment of all, he was so perfectly restored to health and strength as to carry home the bed on which he had been brought. Such unprecedented cures extorted acknowledgments from every beholder, that the like was never seen before in Israel.

13. ¶ And he went forth again by the sea side; and all [o] the multitude resorted unto him, and he taught them. 14. [p] And as he passed by,* he saw Levi the son of Alpheus sitting †at the receipt of custom, and said unto him, Follow me. And he arose and followed him. 15. ¶ And it came to pass, that, as Jesus sat at meat in his house, [q] many publicans and sinners sat also together with Jesus and his disciples: for there were many, and they followed him. 16. And when the scribes and Pharisees saw him eat with publicans and sinners, they said unto his disciples, [r] How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners? 17. When Jesus heard it, he saith unto them, [s] They that are whole have no need of the physician, but they that are sick: I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

o John 7. 48. 1 Cor. 1. 26. Prov. 1. 20—22. Mat. 22. 9. Zech. 11. 7, 11.

p Luke 5. 27—32. Mat. 9. 9—13.

* There were places for collecting toll on the principal roads, and on the lakes, rivers, &c.—Lightfoot.

† Or at the place where the custom was received.

q Luke 7. 29, 30. & xv. Mat. 21, 31. 32. & 8. 11, 12.

r Mat. 18. 17. Luke 5. 29. & 15. 1, 2. & 19. 7. & 18. 9—14. Is. 65. 5. Acts 10. 28.

s Mat. 9. 12, 13. Luke 5. 31, 32. Is. 55. 7. & 1. 18. Hos. 13. 9. Mat. 1. 21. & 18. 11. 1 Tim. 1. 15, 16. Rom. 5. 6, 8.

Verses 13—17. Having departed from the house to the sea-side, thither the multitude followed him, and he preached to them the gospel. After which,

1. He called Levi, or Matthew, a publican, who was sitting in his office receiving the customs; and such power accompanied his word, that instantly he left his gainful profession, and followed Jesus as his disciple. Note. (1.) Nothing is too difficult for Almighty grace; they who seem most deeply involved in the world, and sunk in guilt and corruption, are often snatched in sovereign love, as brands from the burning. (2.) If Christ did not first seek us, we should never have sought him.

2. Levi, in tender regard for his brother publicans, longed to make them acquainted with Jesus, whose grace he himself had so richly tasted, and therefore invited them to his house, where Jesus disdained not to sit among them: infamous in general as their characters were, he joined them, not as an associate, but as the great physician of souls, visited them as diseased patients. Note, They who have tasted the grace of the Redeemer themselves, cannot but be solicitous that their friends and neighbours should partake with them.

3. Christ vindicates his conduct from the censorious cavils of the Pharisees. He despised not the poor sinners' souls: but as this was the very end of his coming to call such to repentance, he was unaffected with the reviling of those who conceited themselves righteous, and yet were much farther from the kingdom of heaven, than the very sinners whom they despised. Note, (1.) The best deeds are often most basely misrepresented by the envenomed tongue of malice. (2.) None have aught to do with Christ but sin-sick souls, who feel themselves lost without him; the proud and self-righteous are left to perish in the delusions they have chosen.

18. ¶ [t] And the disciples of John and of the Pharisees used to fast: and they come and say unto him, [u] Why do the disciples of John and of the Pharisees fast, but thy disciples fast not? 19. And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the [x] bride-chamber fast while the [y] bridegroom is with them? as long as they have the bridegroom with them, they cannot fast. 20. But the days will come, when the bridegroom [z] shall be taken away from them, and then [a] shall they fast in those days. 21. [b] No man also seweth a piece of ‡new cloth on an old garment: else the new piece that filled it up taketh away from the old, and the rent is made worse. 22. And no man putteth new wine into old bottles: else the new wine doth burst the bottles, and the wine is spilled, and the bottles will be marred: but new wine must be put into new bottles. 23. ¶ [c] And it came to pass, that he went through the corn fields on the sabbath-day; and his disciples began, as they went, to pluck§ the ears of corn. 24. And the Pharisees said unto him, Behold, [d] why do they

t Mat. 9. 14—17. Luke 5. 33—39.

u Rom. 10. 3. Luke 18. 12. Mat. 6. 16.

x Song 1. 4, 17. Is. 26. 20. Mat. 25. 10.

y Messiah. Mat. 25. 1—10. John 3. 29. Rev. 19. 7, 9. Song 1. 4. & 2. 3—5. & 3. 4, 11. & 7. 5. & 8. 5, 6.

z Zech. 13. 7. John 7. 33, 34. & 12. 8, 32. & 13. 33. & 14. 2, 12. & 16. 7. & 17. 11, 13. Acts 1. 9. & 3. 21.

a Acts 1. 14. & 13. 3. & 14. 23. 1 Cor. 7. 5. 2 Cor. 11. 20. Zech. 12. 10—14.

b Deut. 33. 25. 1 Cor. 10. 14. Ps. 103. 9—13.

‡ Or raw, or unwrought.

c Mat. 12. 1—8. Luke 6. 1—5. Deut. 23. 25.

§ A Hebrew form of speech for plucked.

d Mat. 23. 23, 24. & 7. 5. with Exod. 20. 10. & 31. 15. & 35. 2. Num. 15. 32—36.

on the sabbath-day that which is not lawful? 25. And he said unto them, Have ye never read [c] what David did, when he had need, and was an hungered, he, and they that were with him? 26. How he went into the house of God, in the days of [f] Abiathar * the high priest, and did eat the shew-bread, [g] which is not lawful to eat but for the priests, and gave also to them which were with him? 27. And he said unto them, [h] The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath: 28. [i] Therefore the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

c 1 Sam. 21. 3—6.
f 1 Sam. 21. 1. & 22. 20. 2 Sam. 20. 25. 1 Kin. 1. 7. & 2. 26, 27.
* Abiathar is here mentioned instead of Ahimelech, his father, he being the most celebrated person of the two.
g Exod. 25. 30. & 29. 32, 33. Lev. 8. 12. & 24. 5—9.
h 1 Cor. 3. 22. Exod. 23. 12. Deut. 5. 14. ver. 23.
i Christ may permit it to be used for their good. Ch. 3. 4. Luke 13. 16. John 5. 9. & 9. 14.

Verses 18—28. Christ having justified his own conduct from the censure of Pharisaical pride, justifies also his disciples for not observing unnecessary austerities; and vindicates them for plucking the ears of corn on the sabbath-day to satisfy their hunger.

1. The disciples of John, who, after their master's example, fasted often; and the Pharisees, who placed great dependance on his bodily exercise, express their wonder that Jesus enjoined no such rigid rules on his disciples as they practised. So ready are those who fancy their own strictness meritorious, to censure all who come short of their standard of excellence. Christ answers their question, and vindicates his disciples; they were but beginners, and it was improper to put them on the more difficult exercises of self-denial, lest they should be discouraged thereby, and contract a disgust to the service. Besides, during his presence with them, like a newly married bride, it became them to rejoice; it would be time enough when he should be taken from them, to mourn and fast. Thus should we learn not to exact too much from young converts, and the lambs of the flock; and especially in fasting we should consider the great end and use of it, and that of itself, it is no farther good, than these are obtained.

2. The Pharisees soon seized another occasion of offence, from the disciples plucking the ears of corn on the sabbath-day, as they passed through the fields. Rigidly scrupulous, as many others like them still are, about the form of godliness, and severe in judging all who do not coincide with them; yet blind to the deep rooted evil and abominations of their hearts. Christ vindicates them by a precedent the Pharisees will not dispute, and reasons with them by arguments they cannot disprove. David had done what seemed a much more exceptionable thing in eating the shew-bread; and Abiathar, who succeeded his father soon after as high priest, had consented to it, because ceremonial observances must give way to the great law of charity and self-preservation. Besides, the very institution of the sabbath was designed for man's benefit, to give rest to his body, and time to spend in the immediate service of God, and caring for his soul; and therefore doth not require him to abstain from what is more immediately necessary for the support and preservation of his life; the provision for which was a law of nature, and subsisted previous to the institution of the sabbath. The Messiah, therefore, who can best interpret his own laws, and is Lord of the sabbath, has an undoubted right to permit this liberty to his disciples, as such refreshment of their bodies will enable them more effectually to discharge the duties of the holy day. Note, (1.) Our sabbaths should be our delight; and therefore must not, by unreasonable strictness, be made a burden. (2.) Though we are allowed to eat and drink, as shall best enable us for the service of the sabbath, it is a gross violation of the day, by indulging our appetite to stupify our faculties, and render body and soul utterly unfit for the exercises of devotion.

CHAP. III.—ANNO DOMINI, 31.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's healing a man that had a withered hand on the sabbath-day, and the combination of his enemies against him for it, ver. 1—6. 2. The universal resort of people to him from all parts to be healed, and the relief they all found with him, ver. 7—12. 3. His ordaining his twelve apostles to be attendants on him, and the preachers of his gospel, ver. 13—21. 4. His answer to the blasphemous cavil of the scribes, who imputed his power to cast out devils, to a confederacy with the prince of the devils, ver. 22—30. 5. His owning his disciples for his nearest and dearest relations, ver. 31—35.

1. AND [a] he entered again into the synagogue; and there was a man there which had a withered hand. 2. [b] And they watched him whether he would heal him on the sabbath-day; that they might accuse him. 3. And he saith unto the man which had the withered hand, [d] Stand forth. 4. And he saith unto them, [d] Is it lawful to do good on the sabbath-days, or to do evil? to save life, or to kill? But they held their peace. 5. And when he had looked round about on them with [e] anger, being grieved for the [f] hardness of their hearts, he saith unto the man, [g] Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it out: and his hand was restored whole as the other. 6. ¶ [h] And the Pharisees went forth, and straightway took council with the Herodians against him, how they might destroy him. 7. But [i] Jesus withdrew himself with his disciples to the sea: and a great multitude from [k] Galilee followed him, and from [l] Judea, 8. And from Jerusalem, and from [m] Idumea, and [n] from beyond Jordan; and they about [o] Tyre and Sidon, a great multitude, when they had heard what great things he did, came unto him. 9. And he spake to his disciples, that a small ship should wait on him [p] because of the multitude, lest they should throng him. 10. For he had healed many; insomuch that they * pressed upon him for [q] to touch him, as many as had [r] plagues. 11. And unclean spirits, when they saw him, [s] fell down before him, and cried, saying, Thou art the Son of God. 12. And [t] he straitly charged them that they should not make him known.

a Mat. 12. 9—14. Luke 6. 6—11.
b Ps. 37. 32. & 38. 12. Luke 13. 14. John 9. 16. Luke 11. 53, 54. & 20. 20. & 14. 1. c Dan. 6. 10. Phil. 1. 14.
d Ch. 2. 27, 28. Luke 13. 14—17. & 14. 3—6.
e Ps. 69. 9. Eph. 4. 26. Deut. 32. 21. Judg. 10. 16.
f Or blindness. Is. 6. 9, 10. & 42. 18—20. & 48. 4. Zech. 7. 11, 12. 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4.
g 1 Kin. 13. 6. Ps. 33. 9.
h Mat. 12. 13, 14. & 22. 16. Eccl. 4. 4. Prov. 27. 4. Ps. 109. 4. John 10. 32.
i Mat. 10. 23. & 12. 15. & 4 25. Gen. 49. 10. Exod. 1. 12.
k Mat. 4. 12—16. Josh. 13. 29—31. & 19. 10—39.
l Josh. xv. & 18. 28.
m Gen. 36. 8, 31 Num. 34. 3. Ezek. xxxv.
n Num. 32. 33—38 Josh. 13. 8—27.
o Josh. 19. 28, 29. Is. xxiii. Ezek. xxvi—xxviii. Ps. 45. 12. & 87. 4. p Is. 42. 2. John 6. 15.
* Or rushed.
q Mat. 8. 15. & 9. 21. Acts 5. 15. & 19. 12.
r Or scourges. Heb. 12. 6. Meaning diseases of a grievous kind. s Ch. 1. 24. & 5. 7. Luke 4. 41 Acts 16. 17.
t Ps. 50. 16. Acts 16. 18. ch. 1. 25, 34. Luke 4. 41. Mat. 12. 16.

Verses 1—12. We see here Christ dispensing his miraculous cures.

1. In the synagogue on the sabbath-day, he healed a man who had a withered hand. He knew the malignity of his enemies, and that from such a deed of mercy they would seek to raise an accusation against him as a sabbath-breaker. He therefore first put a question to them for their determination, whether it was lawful on the sabbath-day to do an act of mercy, or to do evil, by neglecting it; to contribute to man's health and ease, or to let him languish, perhaps die, for want of assistance? The question answered itself; but they resolved not to admit the conviction, and in sullen silence held their peace. With indignation looking round upon them, grieved and displeased at their wilful obstinacy and hardness of heart, Jesus will not suffer their malevolence to prevent his works of grace; therefore in the face of the congregation he bids the lame man stretch out his hand, and instantly it was restored to perfect strength and soundness. Note, (1.) Deeds of mercy and charity are ever pleasing to God, and no day unseasonable for them. (2.) They who are obstinate in error and unbelief, will be convinced by no arguments. (3.) Jesus looks still with indignation upon the hard-hearted sinner; and if he doth not now tremble under his frowns, he must quickly be consumed under his wrath. (4.) It is a grief to the Saviour, and all who are his people, when they behold men wilfully sinning against their own mercies. (5.) If people will be offended at our well-doing, we must not be concerned about their censures. (6.) He who bids us stretch out the arms of faith and prayer, must himself minister the ability. In vain are gospel calls, without the effectual power of gospel grace.

2. By the sea side, whither he withdrew to shelter himself from the malice of his exasperated foes, who were now consulting his destruction, he liberally dispensed his cures to the multitudes, who resorted to him for healing from all the regions round about; till at last he was constrained to go into a boat, and put off a little from the shore: such crowds of diseased persons thronging upon him, in the confidence that could they but touch him, it would be sufficient to heal them of the most inveterate plagues. Even the devils, who dwelt in many, whose bodies they had possessed, no sooner saw him, than they were forced to prostrate themselves before him, confessing his divine power and Godhead, and owning him as the Messiah. But, to avoid the least appearance of receiving a testimony from them of his mission and character, lest his enemies should suggest there was a confederacy between him and them, he sealed up their lips in silence, and left his own works to speak his glory, enjoining the same silence on all whom he had healed. Note, (1.) It is grievous to think, that men should ever deny that divinity of our Lord, which even devils confessed. (2.) We never should seek the applause of men; it is enough that our works testify for us.

13. ¶ [u] And he goeth up into a mountain, and calleth unto him whom he would: and they came unto him. 14. And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach, 15. And to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils: 16. And [x] Simon he surnamed Peter; 17. And [y] James the son of Zebedee, and John the brother of James; and he surnamed them Boanerges, which is, [z] The sons of thunder: 18. And [a] Andrew, and Philip, and Bartholomew, and [b] Matthew, and [c] Thomas, and [d] James the son of Alpheus, and Thaddeus, and [f] Simon the Canaanite, u Mat. 10. 1—4. ch. 6. 7. Luke 6. 12—16. & 9. 1. John 15. 16. Acts 1. 24. & 14. 23. Gal. 1. 1. This calling was prior to their mission, mentioned Mat. x.

x Mat. 16. 18. John 1. 42.
y Ch. 1. 19, 20. & 5. 37. & 9. 2. & 10. 35. & 14. 33.
z Is. 58. 1. Hos. 8. 1.
a John 1. 40, 43, 45. & 6. 5, 8. & 14. 8.
b Mat. 9. 9. ch. 2. 14. Luke 5. 27.
c John 11. 16. & 20. 26—29. & 21. 2. Acts 13. 1. d Ch. 6. 3. Acts 15. 13. & 21. 18. Gal. 1. 19. & 2. 9. Jam. 1. 1. e Mat. 10. 3. Luke 6. 16. John 14. 22. Acts 1. 13. Jude 1 f Mat. 10. 4. Luke 6. 15. Acts 1. 13.

19. And [g] Judas Iscariot, which also betrayed him: and they went † into an house. 20. ¶ And the multitude cometh together again, so that [h] they could not so much as eat bread. 21. And when his [i] friends heard of it, they went out to lay hold on him: for they said, [k] He is beside himself.

g Luke 6. 16. ch. 14. 10, 11, 42—45. Mat. 26. 14—16, 46—50. & 27. 3—5. John 6. 70, 71. & 12. 4—6. & 13. 18—30. & 18. 1—12. Acts 1. 16—20.
† Or home.
h Ch. 6. 31. John 4. 34.
i Or kinsmen. John 7. 3—10.
k John 10. 20. Acts 26. 24. 2 Cor. 5. 13. 2 Kin. 9. 11.

Verses 13—21. We have here,

1. The ordination of the twelve apostles. Going up into a mountain, he called to him, as the sovereign dispenser of his own gifts, whom he would from among his professed disciples, and they immediately came to him. Twelve of them he selected to be his constant attendants, to be witnesses of his doctrine, life, and miracles, and to preach his gospel. Their names we had before; but the title given to the sons of Zebedee, Mark particularly mentions: they were called Boanerges, sons of thunder; either from the loudness of their voice, the vehemence of their address, or the powerful energy which should accompany their preaching. John, whose epistles breathe nothing but love, was one of them; and it would seem thereby to be intimated, that nothing acts so powerfully and forcibly upon the sinner's heart, as the doctrines of the rich love and free grace of God in Jesus Christ. These twelve the Lord was pleased to invest with miraculous powers, to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils, in confirmation of the doctrines they were to teach. And having thus appointed them their office, Christ retired with them into a house for refreshment; and they henceforward attended him as his peculiar family, and continued in the greatest intimacy with him during his abode upon earth. Note, The Saviour's choice is sovereign, and none but those whom he particularly calls, can be empowered to go forth in his name.

2. No sooner was he known to be in the house at Capernaum, than the multitude assembled, eager to hear him; and though he and his disciples had scarce time for necessary refreshment, yet he is ready to instruct them. Such incessant labours, without respite, excited the concern of some of his friends, who could not help thinking his zeal carried him too far, and that he would faint with fatigue and want of repose. They came therefore to persuade him to desist for a while, lest he should impair his health by such uninterrupted toils. Perhaps some might think his intellects disturbed, and would fain constrain him to come in and rest himself. Note, (1.) Faithful ministers will sometimes find as great trials from the mistaken affection of their friends, as from the avowed opposition of their enemies. (2.) Fervent zeal is often branded with madness by those who never felt the love of immortal souls; but if we be beside ourselves, it is to God, 2 Cor. v. 13.

22. ¶ And the scribes which came down from Jerusalem said, [l] He hath Beelzebub, and by the prince of the devils casteth he out devils. 23. And he called them unto him, and said unto them in [m] parables, [n] How can Satan cast out Satan? 24. And if a kingdom be divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand. 25. And if a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand. 26. And if Satan rise up against himself, and be divided, he cannot stand, but hath an end. 27. No man can [o] enter l Mat. 9. 34. & 10. 25. & 12. 24. Luke 11. 15. John 7. 20. & 8. 48, 52. & 10. 20 Ps. 22. 6. & 69. 20.

m Ps. 49. 4. Mat. 13. 3. 10—53, &c. n Mat. 12. 25—30. Luke 11. 17—23. What tends to ruin Satan's kingdom, can never be from him as the author.
o Is. 49. 24—26. Mat. 12. 29. Luke 11. 21. Eph. 6. 12. John 16. 11. 1 John 3. 8. Gen. 3. 15.

into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he will first bind the strong man; and then he will spoil his house. 28. [p] Verily I say unto you, All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme: 29. But he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation: 30. [q] Because they said, He hath an unclean spirit.

p Mat. 12. 31, 32. Luke 12. 10. 1 Sam. 2. 25. Mat. 11. 19. & 13. 55. John 7. 12, 15. Heb. 6. 4—8. & 10. 26—31. 1 John 5. 16. 2 Thes. 1. 9.

q Ver. 22. Mat. 9. 34. & 10. 25. & 12. 24. Luke 11. 15. John 7. 20. & 8. 48, 52. & 10. 20.

Verses 22—30 That he did cast out devils from them that were possessed, was evident. To evade the force of the miracles therefore, we have here,

1. The cavil raised by the Scribes and Pharisees who came down from Jerusalem. They pretended he was in compact with Beelzebub, the prince of the devils, and derived this power from him.

2. Christ confutes their suggestion, and solemnly warns them of the unpardonable guilt they brought hereby upon their souls. It was as absurd and self-contradictory to suppose that Satan would cast out Satan, to confirm doctrines directly tending to destroy his power over the souls of men, as to suppose that a kingdom or a house, divided against itself, can stand, or be established by intestine factions and civil wars. The power which Jesus exerted over the fiends of darkness, was like that which the conqueror exercises over the vanquished, when he enters the fortress, binds the prisoner, and spoils his substance: Satan never would quit his hold, unless compelled. Evident therefore it was, that Christ came not as his associate, but as his destroyer. To impute, therefore, his miracles to diabolical agency, was such wilful obstinacy and blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, by whose powerful operations these miracles were wrought, that though all other sin might be forgiven, this was eternally unpardonable, and would expose them to everlasting destruction, as no other means of conviction or recovery would be ever afforded them.

31. ¶ [r] There came then his brethren and his mother, and standing without, sent unto him, calling him. 32. And the multitude sat about him; and they said unto him, Behold, [s] thy mother and thy brethren without seek for thee. 33. And he answered them, saying, Who is my mother, or my brethren? 34. And he looked round about on them who sat about him, and said, [t] Behold my mother and my brethren! 35. For whosoever shall do the will of God, the same is my brother, and my sister, and mother.*

r Mat. 12. 46—50. Luke 8. 19—21.

s Mat. 13. 55. ch. 6. 3. John 7. 3, 5. with Deut. 33. 9.

t Luke 8. 21. Mat. 12. 49, 50. Song 3. 11. & 4. 8—10. & 5. 2. Ps. 22. 22. Heb. 2. 11, 12. Rom. 8. 29. Mat. 25. 40, 45. John 15. 14.

* This is doubtless prophetically intended as a scriptural protest against the worship paid by many to the Virgin Mary.

Verses 31—35. Perhaps these were the friends, ver. 20, 21. who wanted to lay hold on him, or they got his mother and brethren to join them; and perceiving him still go on discoursing, made another effort to call him off. Though the crowd sat so thick around him that they could not come near him, they conveyed to him, however, by some of the multitude, their desire to speak with him; but he was too well employed to be diverted from it; and therefore instead of paying any regard to his mother or brethren in this case, he turned to those around him professing a regard for them like that due to a mother or brethren, and declaring those to be his nearest and dearest relations who truly believed, and heartily obeyed the revealed will of God. Note, (1.) How great is the folly, as well as idolatry of the Romish church in worshipping the virgin, as if she could command her Son now he is in heaven, when even in the days of his flesh she was judged so unfit to advise him? (2.) When we are engaged in the work of Jesus, and in the way of duty, nothing must divert us from the service.

CHAP. IV.—anno domini, 31.

In this chapter we have, 1. The parable of the seed, and the four sorts of ground, ver. 1—9. with the exposition of it, ver. 10—20. and the application of it, ver. 21—25. 2. The parable of the seed growing gradually, but insensibly, ver. 26—29. 3. The parable of the grain of mustard-seed, and a general account of Christ's parables, ver. 30—34. 4. The miracle of Christ's sudden stilling a storm at sea, ver. 35—41.

1. AND [a] he began again to teach by the sea-side: and there was gathered unto him a great multitude, so that he [b] entered into a ship, and sat in the sea: and the whole multitude was by the sea on the land. 2. And he taught them many things [c] by parables, and said unto them in his doctrine, 3. Hearken; Behold, there went out † a sower to sow: 4. And it came to pass, as he sowed, some † fell by the way-side, and the fowls of the air came and devoured it up. 5. And some fell on stony ground, where it had not much earth; and immediately it sprang up, because it had no depth of earth: 6. But, when the sun was up, it was scorched; and because it had no root, it withered away. 7. And some fell among thorns; and the thorns grew up, and choked it, and it yielded no fruit. 8. And other fell on good ground, [d] and did yield fruit that sprang up, and increased, and brought forth, some thirty, and some sixty, and some an hundred. 9. And he said unto them, [d] He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. 10. ¶ And [e] when he was alone, they that were about him with the twelve asked of him the parable. 11. And he said unto them, [f] Unto you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God: but unto them [g] that are without, all these things are done in parables: 12. [h] That seeing they may see, and not perceive; and hearing they may hear, and not understand; lest at any time they should be converted, and their sins should be forgiven them. 13. And he said unto them, [i] Know ye not this parable? and how then will ye know all parables? 14. ¶ [k] The sower soweth the word. 15.

a Mat. 13. 11—23. Luke 8. 4—15.

b Luke 5. 3. Mat. 13. 2.

c Mat. xiii. & 12. 43—45. & 18. 23—34. & 20. 1—15. & 21. 28—44. & 22. 1—14. & 24. 43—51. & 25. 1—30. Luke xiii—xix.

† Christ is the sower; his gospel truths the seed; careless hearers the way-side; Satan and his agents the fowls; professors affected, but not changed, in heart, the stony ground; trouble and persecution the scorching sun; carnal cares the thorns; renewed hearts the good ground: their different degrees of grace and good works, their fruit.

d Mat. 11. 15. & 13. 9. Luke 8. 8. & 9. 44. Is. 55. 3. Ps. 50. 7. Rev. 2. 7, 11, 17, 29. & 3. 6, 13, 22.

e Mat. 13. 10. Luke 9. 18. Prov. 4. 7. & 2. 1—7. & 13. 20.

f Mat. 13. 11. & 11. 25. & 16. 17. 2 Cor. 4. 6. 1 Cor. 1. 18—31. & 2. 10—16.

g 1 Cor. 5. 12. Col. 4. 5. 1 Thes. 4. 12. 1 Tim. 5. 7.

h Mat. 13. 14, 15. Luke 8. 10. John 12. 37—41. Acts 28. 25—27. Rom. 11. 8. with Is. 6. 9, 10. Jer. 5. 21. Is. 44. 18.

i 1 Cor. 3. 1, 2. Heb. 5. 12, 13. Mat. 15. 16. & 16. 8, 9. 2 Cor. 13. 5.

k Mat. 13. 37. ch. 1. 14. Luke 8. 1 Eph. 3. 8. 1 Pet. 1 23, 25.

And these are [l] they by the way-side, where the word is sown; but, when they have heard, [m] Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts. 16. And these are [n] they likewise which are sown on stony ground; who, when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with gladness; 17. And [o] have no root in themselves, and so endure but for a time: afterward when affliction or persecution ariseth for the word's sake, immediately they are offended. 18. And [p] these are they which are sown among thorns; such as hear the word, 19. And the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things, entering in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful. 20. And [q] these are they which are sown on good ground; such as hear the word, and receive it, and bring forth fruit, some thirty fold some sixty, and some an hundred.

l Is. 6. 9, 10. & 53. 1. Luke 8. 12. Mat. 20. 16. & 22. 14.

m Job 1. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 8. 2 Cor. 2. 11. & 4. 3, 4.

n Mat. 13. 20, 21. Luke 8. 13. Is. 58. 2. Ezek. 33. 31, 32. ch. 6. 20. John 5. 35. Acts 8. 13.

o Ver. 5. John 15. 2—5. Job 27. 10. 1 Tim. 1. 15. & 4. 10. Gal. 6. 12. Mat. 11. 6. Song 1. 5, 6. with Job 19. 28.

p Mat. 13. 22. Luke 8. 14. Mat. 19. 23. Luke 21. 34. Prov. 23. 5. 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10, 17. Jer. 4. 3.

q Luke 8. 15. John 15. 4, 5. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Rom. 7. 4. Gal. 5. 22, 23. 2 Pet. 1. 4—9. Col. 1. 6—11. & 2. 2. with Gen. 26. 12

Verses 1—20. For the convenience of being heard by the vast multitudes who attended him, our Lord again returns to the sea-shore; and, entering into a boat, sat down and taught this great and attentive congregation. Preaching to them the doctrines of truth under parables drawn from familiar objects. We have,

1. The parable of the sower, which represents the different effects of the gospel word upon the hearts of men, Mat. xiii. 3. He demands attention, ver. 3. for all who would understand must give diligence, and well consider what they hear. The parable itself was plain, but even the twelve were dull of apprehension, and understood it not; but when they were retired with the rest of the disciples, they desired of Jesus the explanation of it: to which he graciously condescends, informing them of the distinguished grace bestowed on them whilst others were left to the blindness of their hearts; yet wondering withal at their wanting an explanation of what was so plain, ver. 13. Note, (1.) The human understanding is strangely dark in spiritual concerns: the plainest truths of God's word to the natural man are utterly unintelligible. (2.) It is a distinguishing act of grace when God is pleased to remove the veil from the heart, and opens the understanding to understand the Scriptures. (3.) The more we are acquainted with our own stupid ignorance in the things of God, the more thankful we shall be for divine teaching.

2. The explication Christ gives is this. The seed is the word of God; himself, and all his faithful labourers, are the sowers. The hearers are the soil; to many of them the word preached doth not profit, not being mixed with faith; but few, comparatively speaking, effectually receive it, so as to profit thereby. Some are careless and inattentive: the seed sown doth not at all abide upon their hearts; Satan, by some vanity, amusement, or avocation, instantly snatches it away. Others for a moment hear it with joy, their passions are affected, but their hearts are unchanged, therefore, no sooner is the impression worn off, than they are like blasted corn which withereth away. Some are so engrossed with the riches and cares of the world, the eager pursuits of its honours, pleasures, or esteem, that these, by degrees, eat out the life of their profession, carnalize their souls, and make them earthly, sensual. Thus, for the perishing trifles of time, they lose all the glories of eternity. A few, amidst the general apostasy, with patient perseverance endure; bring forth the gracious fruits of faith and holiness, in measure according as God is pleased to dispense to every man his gifts.

21. ¶ [r] And he said unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a bushel, or under a bed? and not to be set on a candlestick? 22. [s] For there is nothing hid which shall not be manifested; neither was any thing kept secret, but that it should come abroad. 23. [t] If any man have ears to hear, let him hear. 24. And he saith unto them, [u] Take heed what ye hear: [x] with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you; and unto you that hear shall more be given. 25. [y] For he that hath, to him shall be given: and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he hath. 26. ¶ And he said, So is the [z] kingdom of God, as if a man should cast [a] seed into the ground; 27. And should sleep, and rise night and day, and the seed should [b] spring and grow up, he knoweth not how. 28. For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear. 29. But [c] when the fruit is † brought forth, immediately [d] he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come. 30. ¶ And he said, [e] Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God? or with what comparison shall we compare it? 31. It is like a grain of mustard-seed, which, when it is sown in the earth, is less than all the seeds that be in the earth: 32. But when it is sown, it [f] groweth up, and becometh greater than all herbs, and shooteth out great branches; so that the fowls of the air may lodge under the shadow of it. 33. [g] And with many such parables spake he the word unto them, as they were able to hear it. 34. But [h] without a parable spake he not unto them: and when they were alone, he expounded all things to his disciples.

r Mat. 5. 15. Luke 8. 16. & 11. 33. & 19. 13. 1 Cor. 12. 7.

s Mat. 10. 26, 27. Luke 12. 2, 3. Acts 4. 20. 1 John 1. 1—3. Job 12. 22. & 6. 10. Ps. 40. 9, 10.

t Deut. 29. 4. see ver. 9.

u Acts 17. 11. 1 John 4. 1. Luke 9. 44. Prov. 19. 27.

x Mat. 7. 2. Luke 6. 38. 2 Cor. 9. 6.

y Mat. 13. 12. & 25. 29. Luke 8. 18. & 19. 26. John 15. 2. Rev. 22. 12. Ezek. 46. 16, 17 z Mat. 3. 2. & 4. 17. & 13. 24—52.

a Ch. 1. 14. Luke 8. 1. 1 Pet. 1. 23, 25. ver. 14. or 1 John 3. 9. & 5. 18.

b Ps. 1. 3. & 92. 13, 14. Prov. 4. 18. Job 17. 9. 2 Pet. 3. 18. 2 Cor. 3. 18. & 4. 16.

c Eph. 4. 13. 2 Tim. 4. 7, 8.

† Or ripe.

d Mat. 13. 30, 39. Is. 57. 1, 2. & 51. 11.

e Mat. 13. 31, 32. Is. 2. 2, 3. Mic. 4. 1, 2. Luke 13 18, 19. Ps. 72. 16—19. & 22. 27—31. & lxxii, lxvii, lxxxvii, xlv, xlvii.

f Gen. 22. 17, 18. Is. xxxv, xlix, liv, lv, lx, lxi. Zech. 2. 11. & 8. 20—23. & xiv. Mal. 1. 11. Mat. 8. 11. & 28. 18, 20. ch. 16. 15. Acts ii—xix. Rom. xi. Rev. 11. 15. Ps. 80. 8—11.

g Mat. 13. 34, 35. 1 Cor. 3. 1, 2. Heb. 5. 11, 12. John 16. 12.

h See ver. 11. Luke 24. 27, 45.

Verses 21—34. Our Lord proceeds to teach them under other parabolic representations.

1. By the use we make of a candle when lighted up, Christ informs them what he justly expected of them, even to shine as lights in the world; communicating to others the truths they in secret learned of him, and keeping back nothing of the whole counsel of God. Whatever gifts of nature or grace we enjoy, they are to be employed for God's glory and the good of mankind; and not through love of ease, or false shame, concealed or neglected. It is not enough that we walk in the light ourselves, we must let our light also shine before men.

2. He warns them of the danger of negligence in improving the means and mercies they enjoyed. They are called upon to hear, and to take heed what they hear, that they may not let the word slip, nor be deluded; but by a careful use of their measure of the gift of grace to increase their store, God being ready to communicate more abundant knowledge, to such attentive hearers, and to give farther assistances of spiritual light and strength to those who employ aright in the service of Christ and immortal souls the portion they have received, whilst he punishes the negligent and inattentive, by withdrawing from them the privileges wherewith he had favoured them.

3. He describes the progress of his gospel in the world, and of the seed of divine grace in the heart by the growth of corn, which, though unseen for a while, and covered with earth, shoots up, increases insensibly till the harvest, and then produces the ripe ear. Thus the ministry of Jesus at first was scarce perceived, but the seed he sowed afterwards sprang up, continues through his word and Spirit still to grow, and shall shortly fill the face of the whole world with fruit. And so also in every heart, where the seed of eternal life is sown by any minister of God, it grows without his care, when perhaps he is removed far away, or sleeps in death; it is watered with the dew of heavenly influences; and, though the manner of the Spirit's operation in the divine change which is wrought is mysterious, as the manner how the corn vegetates, yet the effects are visible, the soul is renewed day by day; the seed of grace, from small beginnings, shoots insensibly upwards till the time of harvest, when the ripe corn is gathered in, and perfected in holiness the saints of God enter their eternal rest. Lord, quicken this seed sown in our souls day by day!

4. Much to the same purpose as the former, is the parable of the grain of mustard seed, and represents, (1.) The progress of the gospel; which, from the smallest beginnings of the ministry of twelve poor fishermen, hath spread through the earth, and shall in due time reach from pole to pole, when all the kingdoms of the world shall become the kingdoms of the Lord and of his Christ. (2.) The work of grace upon the heart. At first, like a grain of mustard-seed, it is scarce perceptible; but increasing with the increase of God, the herb grows into a tree, and meet to be transplanted among the cedars of glorified saints in the paradise of God.

5. He added many other like parables, that by line upon line, in this familiar manner, he might communicate spiritual truths under material objects; and without a parable spoke he not unto them. They who desired to understand might easily do it; and where difficulties arose, he was always ready, when alone, to explain them to the disciples; whilst those who superficially heard, neglected, and forgot the word preached, were justly left in their native blindness and ignorance.

35. ¶ [i] And the same day, when the even was come, he saith unto them, Let us pass over unto the other side. 36. And when they had sent away the multitude, they took him ‡ even as he was in the ship. And there were also with him other little ships. 37. [k] And there arose a great storm of wind, and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full. 38. And he was in the hinder part of the ship, [l] asleep on a pillow: and they awake him, and say unto him, [m] Master, carest thou not that we perish? 39. And he arose, and [n] rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm. 40. And he said unto them, [o] Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith? 41. And they [p] feared exceedingly, and said one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?

i Mat. 8. 18, 23. Luke 8. 22. ch. 3. 9. Is. 42. 4.

‡ In the ship from which he had taught.

k Mat. 8. 24—27. Luke 8. 23—25.

l John 11. 14, 15. Ps. 44. 22, 23. & 10. 1. & 22. 2. Is. 45. 15.

m Mat. 23. 8—10. John 20. 17. 2 Chr. 14. 11. & 20. 12. Ps. 6. 3, 4. & 69. 1, 2. & 130. 1, 2. Is. 63. 15.

n Ps. 29. 10. & 93. 4. & 104. 7. & 107. 28, 29. & 102. 13. Exod. 14. 21.

o Is. 41. 10, 14. & 43. 1, 2. Phil. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 7.

p Ch. 5. 33. Luke 8. 25. Mat. 8. 27. Ps. 89. 9. & 65. 7. & 107. 20.

Verses 35—41. No sooner had Christ finished his discourse, and dismissed the people, than he bids the disciples cross the lake, having work that called him to the other side. Jesus was never weary in well-doing, neither should we.

1. The disciples, without hesitation, obey; ready to follow their Master wherever he led them; and accordingly they set sail in the same vessel which had been his pulpit, and a number of other boats accompanied them. For though the multitude departed, those whose hearts were affected with what they had heard, chose to cleave to the Lord and follow him whithersoever he went, by land or by water, Note, (1.) They who are Christ's disciples indeed, will never leave nor forsake him, whatever dangers may threaten. (2.) If Christ be with us, we may boldly launch forth; his presence and blessing will be our support and comfort.

2. A dreadful and sudden storm brought them into the most imminent danger; and, covered with waves, and full almost of water, the boat was ready to founder. Note, The church and every faithful soul in it, hath at times been brought into the most perilous circumstances: nothing hath kept either from sinking but this, that Christ was there.

3. He slept securely in the stern on a pillow, tired with the labours of the day: the storm that drove the disciples to their wits' end, seemed but to rock him faster to repose. Note, When we are in our deepest distresses, Christ sometimes appears to disregard our danger, as if he slept, inattentive to our cries; but he sees, he hears, and will be found a very present help in trouble.

4. The disciples in a fright awake him with their cries; Master, carest thou not that we perish? art thou indifferent about our danger; and wilt thou suffer us to be drowned? Their application to him bespoke their faith, but their address breathed the language of impatience and dishonourable fear. Such a mixture of grace and corruption often appears in the best of men.

5. The Lord, whom winds and waves obey, arose; and at his commanding word, Peace, be still, the billows in a moment ceased to roar, the swelling sea subsided, the winds were hushed, not a breath of air dimpled the ocean, not a whisper broke the solemn silence. When our unruly passions are like the troubled sea which cannot rest, Isa. lvii. 20. the voice of Jesus, heard by faith, subdues their violence, and calms their rage. Under deep afflictions and temptations, when we are ready to abandon ourselves to despair, he silences our fears, and stills our griefs; speaking that inward peace to the conscience, that in the midst of sorrows can make us rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory.

6. He rebukes their unbelieving fears. Why are ye so fearful? so unnecessarily, so inordinately fearful? How is it that ye have no faith? not in exercise at least: though they had faith in him in general, in this particular their fears prevailed. How often do we under our trials deserve the same rebuke?

7. The miracle filled the mariners with most reverential fear of the majesty in which Jesus now appeared, and with amazement they observed to each other, that he must be surely more than man, whom stormy winds and raging waves so instantly obey.

CHAP V.—ANNO DOMINI, 31.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's casting the legion of devils out of the man possessed, and suffering them to enter into the swine, ver. 1—20. Christ's healing the woman with the bloody issue in the way as he was going to raise Jairus' daughter to life, ver. 21—43. These three miracles we had the story of before, Mat. viii. 28, &c. ix. 18, &c. but more fully related here.

1. AND [z] they came over unto the other side of the sea, into the country of the Gadarenes. 2. And when he was come out of the ship, immediately there [b] met him out of the tombs a man with an unclean spirit,* 3. Who had his dwelling among the tombs; and no man could bind him, no, not with chains: 4. [c] Because that he had been often bound with fetters and chains, and the chains had been plucked asunder by him, and the fetters broken in pieces: neither could any man tame him. 5. And always, night and day, he was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying, and [d] cutting himself with stones. 6. But when he saw Jesus afar off, [e] he ran and worshipped him, 7. And cried with a loud voice, and said, [f] What have I do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of the most high God? [g] I adjure thee by God, that thou torment me not. 8. For he said unto him, [h] Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit. 9. And he asked him, What is thy name? And he answered, saying, My name is † Legion: for we are many. 10. And ‡ he besought him much that he would not send them away out of the country. 11. Now there was there nigh unto the mountains a great herd of [i] swine feeding. 12. [k] And all the devils besought him, saying, Send us into the swine, that we may enter into them. 13. And forthwith Jesus [l] gave them leave. And the unclean spirits went out, and entered into the swine; and the herd [m] ran violently down a steep place into the sea, (they were about two thousand,) and were choked in the sea. 14. [n] And they that fed the swine fled, and told it in the city, and in the country. And they went out to see what it was that was done. 15. And they come to Jesus, and see him [o] that was possessed with the devil, and had the legion, sitting, and clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid. 16. And they that saw it told them how it befell to him that was possessed with the devil, and also concerning the swine. 17. ¶ [p] And they began to pray him to depart out of their coasts. 18. And when he was come into the ship, he that had been possessed with the devil [q] prayed him that he might be with him. 19. Howbeit Jesus suffered him not, but saith unto him, [r] Go home to thy friends and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee. 20. And he departed, and began to publish in ‖ Decapolis how great things Jesus had done for him: and all men did marvel.

Verses 1—20. What a miserable creature is man, when left to the power of the devil! What a mercy that Jesus is come to destroy the works of the devil, and to take the prey from the mighty. An eminent instance of this here appears. We have,

1. The wretched case of a poor demoniac, driven by an unclean spirit to dwell among the tombs: a terror to himself, and to all who approached him; so raging that none could sooth him; so strong no fetters could bind him. Though it had been often attempted, he broke the bands in sunder, and fled; living in the mountains, and in the tombs; uttering horrid yellings, and cutting himself with the sharp stones, till the blood gushed out. Note, (1.) We have here a lively emblem of the natural man; his mind and conscience are defiled; his passions drive him furiously on, and will be restrained by no fetters of God's law; under the power of Satan he is hurried to the excess of riot, madly wounding his own soul by sin, and dangerous to all around him; insensible to every fearful consequence, and wilful in disobedience. (2.) Solitude gives peculiar advantage to the temptations of an unclean spirit.

2. No sooner was Jesus disembarked, than the man in whom the devil was, ran and worshipped him; the wicked spirit being awed by his presence, or his power was now suspended. Matthew says they were two; perhaps Mark mentions one only, as being the more fierce, and to him the Lord directed his discourse.

3. On beholding so pitiable an object, Jesus bid the unclean spirit depart, nor could his expostulation or entreaty prevail; though in the greatest dread and horror the devil addressed him, acknowledging his divine power and glory; importunately begging, since he could have no interest in him, he might have nothing to do with him; and that he would not send him into the place of torment, and compel him to retire from the world to the prison of hell before the day of final judgment. Note, (1.) The confession of the devil was orthodox, but it is not a form of sound words, but the work of the Holy Ghost upon the heart that can avail to our salvation. (2.) When Christ comes to visit our souls, he casts out the unclean spirit, gives a new heart, and puts a right spirit within us.

4. To show his own power over the fiends of darkness, Christ demanded the name of this evil spirit, and was answered, My name is Legion, for we are many. A legion of Roman soldiers some reckon at six thousand, whilst others increase it to more than twelve: and this intimates the immense numbers of these fallen spirits which war against the souls of men; their vast power, regular order, and unanimity: what need then have we, who wrestle with these principalities and powers, to put on the whole armour of God, and to be continually looking up for the strength of our God, that we may be able to stand in the evil day.

5. Since they must quit their present hold, the devils earnestly besought him not to expel them from that heathen country, if he dispossessed them from Judea. And there being a herd of swine feeding near the place, they desired permission to enter those unclean animals; hoping by destroying them, to prejudice

a Mat. 8. 28—34. Luke 8. 26—40.

b 1 John 3. 8. Rom. 16. 20. ch. 3. 27. 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude 6. Rev. 20. 1, 2.

*St Matthew mentions two persons possessed with devils. It is probable that one of them was of greater note in the country, or was more remarkable for the effects of his possession by the unclean spirit (ver. 4.) than the other; on which account St Mark and St Luke speak only of one, and wholly omit the mention of the other.—Whitby.

c Luke 8. 29. ch. 9. 18, 20, 22.

d 1 Kin. 18. 28. 1 Pet. 5. 8. John 8. 44.

e Phil. 2. 10, 11. Ps. 72. 9. Acts 16. 17.

f Mat. 8. 29. Luke 8. 28. ch. 1. 24.

g 1 Kin. 22. 16. Mat. 26. 63. Acts 19. 13.

h Ch. 1. 25. & 9. 25.

† About 6000 or 7000.

‡ The chief devil.

i Luke 8. 32. Mat. 8. 30. Lev. 11. 7. Deut. 14. 8. Is. 65. 4. & 66. 3.

k Rev. 12. 12. & 20. 1, 2. Job 1. 11. & 2. 5.

l Mat. 8. 32. Luke 8. 32, 33. 1 Kin. 22. 22. Job 1. 12. & 2. 6. Rev. 20. 7.

m John 8. 44. 1 Pet. 5. 8.

n Mat. 8. 33. Luke 8. 34—36 John 10. 12, 13.

o Is. 49. 24—26. 1 John 3. 8. Rom. 16. 20. Luke 8. 35, 36. Mat. 8. 34.

p Deut. 5. 25. Luke 8. 37. Mat. 8. 34. 1 Kin. 17. 18. Luke 5. 8. Gen. 25. 34. Acts 16. 39. Job 21. 14, 15. 1 Cor. 2. 14, 15. with ver. 7. ch. 1. 24.

q Luke 8. 38, 39. & 23. 42. Ps. 110. 12. & 16. 1. & 22. 19—22.

r Ps. 50. 14. John 4. 29. Ps. ciii—cviii, xviii, cxvi, cxlv. Is. 63. 7—13. & 38. 9—20. Jon. 2. 1—10.

‖ A country on the east of the sea of Galilee.

the people against Jesus, and to gratify their own delight in mischief; and for wise and just reasons Christ permitted their request; when instantly the devils seized the whole herd, about two thousand; and, filling them with madness, hurried them down a precipice into the lake, where they perished in the waters.

6. The keepers, who fled affrighted, spread through all the country the amazing story of the cure of the demoniac, and the destruction of the swine. On which a vast concourse of people assembled to see this strange sight; and, to their great surprise, found the man who had been possessed, and a terror to the country, now peaceably sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and in the perfect exercise of his reason; and they who had been eye-witnesses of the cure reported all the circumstances concerning the recovery of the man, and the destruction of the swine. Hereupon afraid lest Jesus should punish them yet more condignly if he tarried there, and more concerned for their temporal than eternal interests, they entreated him to depart out of the country. And since they thus sinned against their own mercies, Jesus abandons them to the delusions they had chosen.

7. Though his countrymen rejected Christ, the poor man who was cured, would fain have followed him; but Jesus bid him rather return, and bear testimony to the miracle of grace he had experienced, and awaken thereby the concern of his friends to seek after the Lord, who had done so great things for him. Accordingly the man obeyed his command; and, transported with gratitude, published every where in that country what Jesus had done for him, to the great astonishment of all who heard the story. Note, (1.) They who know the blessing of Christ's presence, long to be ever near him, and cannot but lament if their lot be cast among the tents of Kedar, where his gospel hath no place. (2.) They who are restored by Jesus to their right mind, from that moment begin to live to his glory, and to speak his praises. (3.) What the Lord doth for the sinful soul are great things indeed, for which we can never enough adore and thank him.

21. ¶ And when Jesus was passed over again by ship unto the other side, [s] much people gathered unto him: and he was nigh unto the sea. 22. [t] And, behold, there cometh one of the rulers of the synagogue, Jairus by name; and when he saw him, he fell at his feet, 23. And besought him greatly, saying, [u] My little daughter lieth at the point of death:* [x] I pray thee, come and lay thy hands on her, that she may be healed; and she shall live. 24. And Jesus went with him; [y] and much people followed him, and thronged him. 25. ¶ And a certain woman, which had an [z] issue of blood twelve years, 26. And had suffered many things of many physicians, and had spent all that she had, and was [a] nothing bettered, but rather grew worse, 27. When she had heard of Jesus, came in the press behind, and [b] touched his garment. 28. For she said, If I may touch but his clothes, I shall be whole. 29. And straightway the fountain of her blood was dried up; and she felt in her body that she was healed of that plague.

s Mat. 9. 1. Luke 8. 40. ch. 1. 45. Gen. 49 10.

t Mat. 9. 18—25. Luke 8. 41—56. & 13. 14. Acts 13. 15.

u Ezek. 18. 4. Job 30. 23. Heb. 9. 27.

* Is at the last extremity.

x Mat. 8. 15. John 4. 47, 49, 50. ch. 6. 5, 6.

y With John 4. 50. & 11. 6, 7. Mat. 8. 13. & 15. 28. Mat. 4. 23—25. & 8. 1. & 12. 13. & 15. 30.

z Lev. 15. 25. John 5. 5. Luke 8. 43—48.

a Jon. 1. 13. Ps. 108. 12.

b Exod. 15. 26. Ps. 147. 3. Mal. 4. 2. 2 Kin. 13. 21. ch. 6. 56. Acts 5. 15. & 19. 12. with John 14. 12.

30. And Jesus, immediately knowing in himself that [c] virtue had gone out of him,† turned him about in the press, and said, Who touched my clothes? 31. And his disciples said unto him, Thou seest the multitude thronging thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me? 32. And he looked round about to see her that had done this thing. 33. But the woman [d] fearing and trembling, knowing what was done in her, came and fell down before him, and told him all the truth. 34. And he said unto her, [e] Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole: go in peace, and be whole of thy plague.

c Luke 6. 19. & 5. 15. John 1. 16.

† The cures wrought by Christ are ascribed to the divine virtue dwelling in him; whence he so often declares, that the Father dwelling in him did the works. — Whitby.

d Ch. 4. 41. Luke 8. 47. Ps. 89. 7. Josh. 7. 19. Ps. 116. 12. & 66. 16. & 103. 2—5.

e Mat. 15. 28. & 9. 22. Luke 7. 47—50. & 17. 19. & 18. 42. & 8. 48. Mark 9. 23. & 10. 52.

Verses 21—34. Since the Gadarenes rejected him, Christ crosses the lake to Capernaum, where he expected a more welcome reception. Hereupon,

1. A ruler of the synagogue, with deepest respect, made his application to him, in behalf of his little daughter who lay a dying when he came out from his house, and was even then dead; yet such was his faith in the power of Jesus, that he was persuaded, desperate as the case appeared, he could still restore her to life and health. Note, The state of the sinner dead in trespasses and sins, is to human view irrecoverably desperate, but nothing is impossible with God.

2. As Jesus went with the ruler, a poor diseased woman stole a cure. Her malady discouraged her from making an open application to Jesus, and her faith persuaded her it was needless: the very touch of his garments being, in her apprehension, sufficient for her cure: even though her disorder had baffled the physicians' skill, and under their hands her pockets had not only been emptied, but her complaints aggravated. Nor was she mistaken; for no sooner had she through the crowd got near enough to touch his garments, than immediately on so doing, her disease was removed, she felt her health perfectly restored, and was retiring with wonder and thankfulness. But Jesus, who perceived the virtue which had gone out of him, for the manifestation of his own glory, and the confirmation of the poor patient's faith, turning himself, demanded who touched him? which the disciples answered with a kind of surprise and rudeness, as if, considering the crowd, such a question was very strange. But Jesus overlooked their forwardness, and casting his eyes round to discover the person he meant, the poor woman, conscious of what had passed, and trembling lest the Lord should be displeased at the manner in which she had surreptitiously obtained her cure, came and fell at his feet, declaring all that had passed. Whereupon, far from being angry, Jesus encouraged and comforted her, making honourable mention of her faith; and dismissed her not only with a cure, but with his peace and benediction, which was infinitely better. Note, (1.) We are generally driven to Christ by mere necessity, having in vain tried all other methods, and convinced at last that he must save us freely or we must perish. (2.) All our spiritual diseases can only be removed by the touch of faith; till virtue come out of Christ, we can have no health in ourselves. (3.) Where he works, a universal blessed change appears in all the tempers of the mind, and in the whole outward conduct and conversation. (4.) When we are discouraged with fear, at the feet of Jesus we should lay our burdens, and he will speak peace to our troubled souls.

35. ¶ [f] While he yet spake, there came from the ruler of the synagogue's f Luke 8. 49—56. Mat. 9. 23—26.

house certain which said, thy daughter is dead: why troublest thou the Master any further? 36. As soon as Jesus heard the word that was spoken, he saith unto the ruler of the synagogue, [g] Be not afraid, only believe. 37. And he suffered no man to follow him, save [h] Peter, and James, and John the brother of James. 38. And he cometh to the house of the ruler of the synagogue, and seeth the tumult, and [i] them that wept and wailed greatly. 39. And when he was come in, he saith unto them, Why make ye this ado, and weep? [k] the damsel is not dead, but sleepeth. 40. And they [l] laughed him to scorn. But when he had [m] put them all out, he taketh the father and the mother of the damsel, and them that were with him,* and entereth in where the damsel was lying. 41. And he took the damsel by the hand, and said unto her, [n] Talitha cumi; which is, being interpreted, Damsel, I say unto thee, arise. 42. [o] And straightway the damsel arose, and walked; for she was of the age of twelve years. And they were [p] astonished with a great astonishment. 43. [q] And he charged them straitly that no man should know it; and commanded that something should be given her to eat.

g Mat. 17. 20. ver. 23, 34. ch. 9. 23. 2 Chr. 20. 20. Is. 50. 10. Rom. 4. 17—20. John 11. 25.

h Ch. 3. 16, 17. & 9. 2. & 14. 33.

i 2 Chr. 35. 25. Jer. 9. 17. Acts 9. 39.

k John 11. 4, 11, 13. Acts 20. 10.

l Acts 17. 32. Gen. 19. 14.

m Mat. 7. 6. 1 Kin. 17. 19. 2 Kin. 4. 33. Acts 9. 40.

* That is, Peter, James and John, ver. 37. Our Saviour takes with him no more witnesses than were sufficient to confirm the fact, lest he should seem to be desirous of vain-glory.

n John 6. 63. Rom. 4. 17.

o Mal. 4. 2. Rom. 4. 17. John 5. 21. & 6. 63. Ps. 33. 9.

p Ch. 1. 27. & 4. 41. & 6. 51. & 7. 37.

q Ch. 1. 44. & 7. 36. Is. 42. 4. John 5. 41. see Mat. 8. 4. & 9. 30. Luke 5. 14.

Verses 35—43. A discouraging message met the afflicted Jairus as Jesus was now on the way with him. Tidings were brought that his daughter was dead, and his friends conclude that it was in vain to trouble Christ any further; supposing that though he cured the sick, to raise the dead was beyond his power. But,

1. Our Lord encourages the distressed parent, bids him not to give way to despondence, but only believe, and he should still see that death, as well as disease, was under his control. Note, Faith is the great preservative from all our fears; when those who are nearest and dearest to us are removed, we have a ground of abiding consolation, that we shall meet them at the resurrection of the just.

2. When he came to the house, he suffered none to enter with him but Peter, James, and John, enough to be witnesses of the miracle, with the father and mother of the child; and rebuking the excessive lamentations of those who were within, he assured them there was no real cause for them, as the damsel was not irrecoverable, as they apprehended; but though sleeping in the arms of death, he would awake her. But they, fully assured of her death, treated with derision this suggestion. Unworthy, therefore, to be witnesses of his wondrous power and grace, he put them all out, and permitting only his three disciples, and the parents of the damsel, to be with him, he went in where the child lay, took her by the hand, and bid her rise; when instantly her spirit returned, she arose, being about twelve years old, and, to the exceeding amazement of her parents, walked about in perfect health; and to show she still retained her former animal life, and that her appetite was restored with her health, he bid them give her something to eat. Note, (1.) We are dead in trespasses and sins, as this child, till, by the gospel-word awakened, Jesus imparts the effectual power, and enables us to arise at his command to newness of life. (2.) When Christ gives spiritual life, it must be daily fed in the use of those means of grace, whereby he continues to minister strength and nourishment to the soul.

3. He gave them all a strict charge not to divulge this miracle. He knew how his growing fame would exasperate his enemies, and as his hour was not yet come, he used every prudent means to preserve his life, till he had finished the work which was given him to do.

CHAP. VI.—ANNO DOMINI, 31.

Here is, 1. Christ contemned by his countrymen, ver. 1—6. 2. The power he gave his apostles over unclean spirits, ver. 7—13. 3. A strange notion which Herod and others had of Christ, upon which occasion, we have the story of the martyrdom of John Baptist, ver. 14—29. 4. Christ's retirement into a desert place with his disciples; the crowds that followed him thither to receive instruction from him, and his feeding five thousand of them with five loaves and two fishes, ver. 30—44. 5. Christ's walking upon the sea to his disciples, and the abundance of cures he wrought on the other side the water, ver. 45—56.

1. AND [a] he went out from thence, and came into his own country; and his disciples follow him. 2. And [b] when the sabbath day was come, he began to teach in the synagogue: and many hearing him were astonished, saying, From whence hath this man these things? and what wisdom is this which is given unto him, that even such mighty works are wrought by his hands? 3. [c] Is not this the carpenter, * the son of Mary, the brother of James, and Joses, and of Juda, and Simon? and are not his sisters here with us? And they were offended at him. 4. But Jesus said unto them, [d] A prophet is not without honour, but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house. 5. [e] And he could there do no mighty work, save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them. 6. And [f] he marvelled because of their unbelief. [g] And he went round about the villages, teaching.

a Mat. 13, 54—58. Luke 4. 16—30.

b Mat. 7. 28. ch. 1. 22. Luke 4. 32. John 6. 30, 42, 52. & 7. 15.

c Is. 53. 2, 3. & 49. 7. Ps. 22. 6. Mat. 11. 6. & 13. 55, 56. & 12. 46. Luke 2. 34. & 4. 22. John 6. 42, 60. Gal. 1. 19. 1 Cor. 1. 23.

* We should observe here the strict impartiality of the evangelist; and his consciousness that nothing could derogate from the dignity of his Master.—Newcombe.

d John 4. 44. Luke 4. 24. Mat. 13. 57. Jer. 11. 21. & 12. 6.

e Mat. 13. 58. & 17. 17, 20. ch. 9. 23. Gen. 19. 22. Is. 59. 1, 2. Heb. 4. 2. & 3. 19.

f Is. 59. 16. ch. 3. 5. Heb. 3. 18, 19.

g Mat. 4. 23. & 9. 35. Luke 4. 31, 44. & 13. 22. John 4. 43. Is. 61. 1—3. & 48. 17. Eph. 2. 17.

Verses 1—6. From Capernaum our Lord visited the place of his education, Nazareth, accompanied by his disciples. And there, as was his custom,

1. On the sabbath-day he entered into the synagogue; and from the law and the prophets preached the things concerning himself with such dignity and elocution, as quite amazed his countrymen. He had been bred among them, a carpenter by trade, without any education; his family and relations were all persons of mean and low circumstances; how he should be able to discourse with such readiness, and perform such miraculous works, they could not conceive; and yet their prejudices against him, on account of his low birth and education, prevailed over their admiration; and notwithstanding all the wonders they beheld, they disdained to be followers of a person so mean and despicable in their account. Note, (1.) The humiliation of Jesus, at which they were offended, should make him the dearer to us. (2.) If the Lord, in our nature, submitted to earn with the labour of his hands the bread he eat, let it teach us how commendable is industry, and never to despise any man because he is poor.

2. To rebuke their folly, and punish their unbelief, he reminds them how they verified that proverbial saying, A prophet is not without honour but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house; people ordinarily paying more respect to strangers and persons unknown, than to those with whom having been indulged in familiarity, they are ready to treat with contempt. Therefore, except healing a few sick folk, he refused to exercise his power and grace among them. Their unbelief bound up, as it were, the hands of his omnipotence; and marvelling at it, he left them, in just judgment, to the perverseness and impenitence of their hearts, carrying the glad tidings of salvation from them to the other villages of Galilee, where greater respect would be paid to his person and ministry.

7. ¶ [h] And he calleth unto him the twelve, and began to send them forth by [i] two and two; and gave them power over unclean spirits; 8. And commanded them that they [k] should take nothing for their journey, save a staff only; no scrip, no bread, no * money in their purse: 9. But be shod with [l] sandals; and not put on two coats. 10. And he said unto them, [m] In what place soever ye enter into an house, there abide till ye depart from that place. 11. [n] And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear you, when ye depart thence, shake off the dust under your feet for a testimony against them. [o] Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrha in the day of judgment than for that city. 12. And they went out and preached [p] that men should repent. 13. [q] And they cast out many devils, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them.

h Mat. 10. 1—13. ch. 3. 13—19. Luke 6. 13—16. & 9. 1—6.

i Exod. 4. 14. Rev. 11. 3. Mat. 18. 16. 2 Cor. 13. 1. Eccl. 4. 9, 10.

k Mat. 10. 9, 10. Luke 9. 3. & 10. 4. & 22. 35. 2 Tim. 2. 4.

* Gr. brass money.

l Soles buckled on the feet. Acts 12. 8.

m Mat. 10. 11—13. Luke 9. 4.

n Mat. 10. 14, 15. Luke 9. 5. & 10. 10—12. Acts 13. 51. & 18. 16. Neh. 5. 13.

o Ezek. 16. 48, 51. Luke 10. 12—15. Mat. 11. 20—24. John 15. 22—24. Heb. 6. 4—8. & 10. 26—31.

p Ch. 1. 4, 15. Acts 2. 38. & 3. 19. & 20. 21. Mat. 10. 7, 27. Luke 9. 2, 6. ver. 30.

q Ver. 7. Jam. 5. 14.

Verses 7—13. The twelve, having now for a while attended their Master, are here,

1. Sent forth to preach what they had learned of him; and endued with power to work miracles, and cast out devils, in confirmation of the doctrine they taught. For their mutual comfort and support they were joined in pairs, and forbid to cumber themselves with clothes or provisions; but must set off just as they were, with only their stick in their hand, the clothes on their backs, and the sandals on their feet, trusting upon divine providence for a supply of their wants during their travels. Their message would deserve and procure them a welcome. Wherever therefore they came, and were received into a house, there they must fix their quarters till they removed to another city or village. But if in any place they were refused a hospitable entertainment, and no attention was paid to their preaching, they are commanded immediately to depart, shaking off the dust of their feet, in testimony of abhorrence of their wickedness and infidelity; and not Sodom or Gomorrha, in the day of judgment, will meet so severe a doom as that city. Note, (1.) They who reject the calls of the gospel, perish under the most accumulated guilt. (2.) The ministers of Christ are worthy of their maintenance; and since they have renounced the world for the service of men's souls, it becomes those to whom they minister liberally to supply their wants, that they may be wholly without care, to give themselves up to the word of God and to prayer.

2. The apostles went in obedience to their Master's orders, preaching the doctrine of repentance, and calling men to turn unto the Lord, and receive his Messiah, whose kingdom was ready to appear. And in confirmation of their divine authority, they cast out devils, and miraculously healed the sick, by anointing them with oil in the name of the Lord, in token of their being restored to health. Note, The great end of the ministry is the conversion of men's souls. They who have not this in view, and do not see any fruit of their labours, may justly suspect they run without being sent

14. ¶ [r] And king Herod * heard of him; (for his name was spread abroad;) and he said, That John the Baptist was risen from the dead, and therefore mighty works do shew forth themselves in him. 15. [s] Others said, That it is Elias. And others said, That it is a prophet, or as one of the prophets. 16. [t] But when Herod heard thereof, he said, It is John, whom I beheaded: he is risen from the dead. 17. ¶ [u] For Herod himself had sent forth, and laid hold upon John, and bound him in prison for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife: for he had married her. 18. For John had said unto Herod, [x] It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife. 19. Therefore [y] Herodias had † a quarrel against him, and would have killed him: but she could not: 20. For Herod [z] feared John, knowing that he was a just man and an holy, and ‡ observed him; and when he heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly. 21. And when [z] [a] a convenient day was come, that Herod on his birth-day made a supper to his lords, high captains, and chief estates of Galilee; 22. And when [b] the daughter of the said Herodias came in, and danced, and pleased Herod and them that sat with him, the king said unto the damsel, Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee. 23. And he sware unto her, [c] Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me, I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom. 24. And she went forth, and said unto her mother, What shall I ask? And she said, [d] The head of John the Baptist. 25. And she came in straightway [e] with haste unto the king, and asked, saying, I will that thou give me by and by in a charger the head of

cir. 32.

r Mat. 14. 1—12. Luke 9. 7—9. 1 Thes. 1. 8.

* Thus his courtiers and flatterers called him, though only a tetrarch, or governor of Galilee under the Romans; being a fourth part of his father's kingdom: see marg. ref.

s Mat. 16. 14. & 17. 10. ch. 8. 28. John 1. 21. Luke 9. 19.

t Luke 3. 19. & 9. 7. Mat. 14. 2. Ps. 14. 5.

cir. 30.

u Mat. 14. 3—12. & 4. 12. & 11. 2 Luke 3. 19, 20.

x Lev. 18. 6, 16. & 20. 21. Heb. 13. 4. 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10.

y Gen. 49. 23. & 39. 12—20.

† Or an inward grudge.

z Ch. 11. 18. Mat. 14. 5. & 21. 26. & 13. 20. Luke 20. 6. 2 Chr. 24. 2. & 26. 5. John 5. 35. Ezek. 33. 32.

‡ Or kept him, or saved him.

cir. 32.

a Gen. 27. 41. & 40. 20. Rev. 11. 10. Mat. 14. 16. Esth. 1. 3. & 2. 18. Acts 12. 21.

b Gen. xxxiv. Num. xxv. Judg. xix. Eccl. 7. 26. Prov. ii, v, vii.

c Esth. 5. 3, 6. & 7. 3. Mat. 4. 9. Prov. 6. 2. Eccl. 5. 6.

d Prov. 1. 16. & 4. 16. & 12. 10. & 27. 4.

e Rom. 3. 15. Prov. 1. 16. & 4. 16.

John the Baptist. 26. And the king [f] was exceeding sorry: [g] yet for his oath's sake, and for their sakes which sat with him, he would not reject her. 27. And [h] immediately the king sent * an executioner, and commanded his head to be brought: and he went and beheaded him in the prison, 28. And brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damsel: and the damsel gave it to her mother. 29. And when his disciples heard of it, [i] they came and took up his corpse, and laid it in a tomb.

[f] 1 Sam. 15. 30. & 26. 21. Mat. 27. 4. 2 Cor. 7. 10.

[g] Luke 7. 30. & 10. 16. John 12. 48. Prov. 29. 12.

[h] Rom. 3. 15. Prov. 1. 16. & 4. 16. Mat. 14. 10.

* Or one of his guard.

[i] 1 Kin. 13. 29 Acts 8. 2. Mat. 27. 58—61. & 14. 12. Is. 57. 2.

Verses 14—29. The fame of Jesus had by this time reached the ears of Herod. His guilty conscience suggested to him that John, whom he had murdered, was now risen from the dead, and invested with greater powers than before, perhaps to avenge his blood upon the head of his murderer. Others thought him to be Elijah, the forerunner of the Messiah; others one of the ancient prophets revived; others a new prophet sent of God, like those of old; but all mistook his true character, and knew him not as the Saviour of the world. Herod, haunted with the ghosts of his injustice and cruelty, persisted in the conviction, that this was surely John the Baptist, whom he had beheaded. The narrative of which bloody transaction is related in nearly the same words as before, Mat. xiv. To what was there said, we may here farther observe,

1. How far a man may go in his convictions, without being ever effectually wrought upon. Herod was in his conscience persuaded that John was a just man and a holy; his whole demeanour showed the Baptist to be such, and commanded veneration. And so far many go, as to be convinced of the integrity of God's ministers, and reverence their character; to observe them, to attend their ministry with seriousness and constancy, to do many things that are right through their preaching; yea, to take delight in their discourses, and to feel a transient joy whilst sitting under them: and yet, like Herod, may never be divorced from their darling sins, nor their hearts at all effectually changed.

2. How commendable is fidelity! All the respect and kindness of Herod did not make John the least indulgent to his sins; he told him plainly, though a king, the guilt and danger of his state, and charged upon his conscience his lewdness, adultery, and incest in marrying his brother's wife; and such should we be, imitating this holy plainness and simplicity, neither moved by caresses, nor deterred by fear; but approving ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God.

3. They who will be thus faithful may expect to be often severely treated. The hearts of sinners will be exasperated, and malice will drive them, like Herodias, to contrive some mischief against their reprovers, and thus to revenge the honest rebukes, which they regard as premeditated affronts.

30. ¶ [k] And the apostles gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things, both what they had done, and what they had taught. 31. And he said unto them, [l] Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while: for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat. 32. And they departed into a desert place by ship privately. 33. And the people saw them departing; [m] and many knew them, and ran afoot thither out of all cities, and outwent them,† and came together unto him. 34. ¶ [n] And Jesus, when he came out, saw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd: and [o] he began to teach them many things. 35. [p] And when the day was now far spent, his disciples came unto him, and said, This is a desert place, and now the time is far passed: 36. Send them away, that they may go into the country round about, and into the villages, and buy themselves bread: for they have nothing to eat. 37. He answered and said unto them, [q] Give ye them to eat. And they say unto him, [r] Shall we go and buy two hundred [s] pennyworth of bread, and give them to eat? 38. He saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? go and see. And when they knew, they say, Five, and two fishes. 39. And he commanded them to make all sit down ‡ [t] by companies upon the green grass. 40. And they sat down in ranks, by hundreds and by fifties. 41. And when he had taken the five loaves and the two fishes, [u] he looked up to heaven, and blessed, and brake the loaves, and gave them to his disciples to set before them; and the two fishes divided he among them all. 42. [x] And they did all eat, and were filled. 43. And they took up twelve baskets full of the fragments, and of the fishes. 44. And they that did eat of the loaves were about five thousand men.

[k] Luke 9. 10. & 10. 17.

cir. 32.

[l] Ch. 1. 45. & 3. 7, 20. Mat. 14. 13—21. John 6. 15 Is. 42. 2. Luke 9. 10—17.

[m] Jam. 1. 19. John 6. 2. ch. 1. 45. & 2. 2. & 3. 7, 20. & 4. 1. & 5. 24. ver. 54, 55. Mat. 4. 25. & 14. 13—21. Luke 9. 10—17.

† The people were at the place before Jesus and his disciples landed.

[n] Mat. 9. 36. & 14. 14. & 15. 32. Heb. 4. 15. & 5. 2. & 2. 17. Num. 27. 17. 1 Kin. 22. 17. Jer. 23. 1. & 50. 6. Ezek. 34. 2. Zech. 10. 2.

[o] Is. 48. 17. & 54. 13. & 61. 1—3.

[p] Mat. 14. 15—21. Luke 9. 12—17. John 6. 5—21.

[q] 2 Kin. 4. 42, 43. Luke 9. 13. John 6. 6—10. Mat. 6. 33.

[r] Num. 11. 22. 2 Kin. 7. 2 & 4. 43. Mat. 15. 33. John 6. 7.

[s] The Roman penny is sevenpence halfpenny; as Mat. 18. 28. It was the value of a day's labour in harvest. Mat. 20. 2.

‡ Gr. banquets, banquets.

[t] 1 Cor. 14. 33, 40. 1 Kin. 10. 5.

[u] Mat. 14. 19. & 15. 36. & 26. 26. 1 Sam. 9. 15. Deut. 8. 10. 1 Tim. 4. 4, 5. Luke 9. 16. John 6. 11. Rom. 14. 6. with Mat. 24. 45.

[x] Ps. 37. 16. & 23. 1. & 145. 18. Prov. 13. 25. & 6. 6. Mat. 16. 9. & 14. 20, 21. Luke 9. 17. John 6. 12—14.

Verses 30—44. The apostles having executed the commission with which their master had intrusted them, return to give him an account of their ministry and success. And blessed and happy are they who can give up this account to him with joy!

Satisfied in their report, and well pleased with their service, our Lord,

1. Testifies his tenderness and regard for them, by calling them into a retirement, where they might repose themselves awhile after their labours. For where they were, such crowds were perpetually coming and going, desirous to hear, or wanting to be healed, that they had not leisure even to eat their necessary food. Note, (1.) In these frail bodies at present, the most ardent spirits must yield to some repose and relaxation; it is reserved for the felicity of a better world, to serve God day and night without ceasing. (2.) Our rest must be but for a while, just enough to strengthen us to return with fresh vigour to the work of the Lord.

2. He shows his compassions to the multitude who followed them. For though they withdrew privately, and coasted the lake in a boat, to a desert place near the city of Bethsaida, yet many watched the course they steered, and were so eager after the company and teaching of Jesus, that they ran faster than the boat went, and were on the spot when he arrived, ready to receive him. Jesus, on disembarking, beheld them with compassion, knowing how destitute they were of faithful guides, and neglected as sheep without a shepherd: and therefore well pleased to be interrupted and deprived of his purposed retirement, he instantly set himself to instruct them in the things pertaining to his kingdom, and their own everlasting peace, in which delightful work, and in healing their sick, he continued till evening drew on. Note, (1.) They who have a true relish for the gospel of Jesus, will take many a weary step for the sake of attending that ministry, where it is dispensed with power. (2.) It is a peculiar pleasure to preach to those who appear athirst for the word of truth.

3. He not only fed their souls with the heavenly manna of his doctrine, but their bodies by miraculous food. The disciples, as the day drew to a close, reminded him how far the people were from any inhabited place, and that the night would soon come on; it would be necessary, therefore, they suggest, to dismiss the multitude, that they might get some refreshment after fasting so long. But He, to prove their faith, bid them provide for them the necessary repast. In a surprise they look not to his power, but to their own inability: Where should they get bread, or money to buy it, when two hundred pennyworth would not be sufficient to give a morsel to each! Perceiving they had no notion whence the supply should come, he inquired what store of provision they had with them? they told him only five barley loaves and two fishes, a quantity utterly insufficient to satisfy such a multitude. Commanding them to be brought, Jesus took the loaves, and having disposed the people in ranks, a hundred in depth, and fifty in length, he gave thanks, brake, and gave to his disciples, who waited on the guests; and far from want, there appeared enough and to spare: they not only made a hearty meal, but left fragments sufficient to fill twelve baskets, which Christ commanded to be collected with care, not only to supply their future wants, but to make the miracle appear more illustrious. Note, (1.) They who love the word, will for the sake of it sometimes forego their necessary food. (2.) Barley loaves, with Christ's blessing, afford a sweeter feast than the richest delicacies without it. (3.) Christ's disciples must be content with, and thankful for, coarse fare. (4.) Waste, even of crumbs of barley bread, is sinful: no fragments are to be lost, when there are so many who want them.

45. ¶ And [y] straightway he constrained his disciples to get into the ship, and to go to the other side before * unto Bethsaida, while he sent away the people. 46. And when he had sent them away, he departed [z] into a mountain to pray. 47. [a] And when even was come, the ship was in the midst of the sea, and he alone on the land. 48. And he saw them toiling in rowing; for the wind was contrary unto them? and [b] about the fourth watch of the night he cometh unto them, walking upon the sea, and [c] would have passed by them. 49. But when they saw him walking upon the sea, they [d] supposed it had been a spirit, and cried out: 50. For they all saw him, and were troubled. And immediately he talked with them, and saith unto them, [e] Be of good cheer: it is I; be not afraid. 51. [f] And he went up unto them into the ship, and the wind ceased: and they were [g] sore amazed in themselves beyond measure, and wondered. 52. [h] For they considered not the miracle of the loaves; for their heart was hardened. 53. ¶ [i] And when they had passed over, they came into the land of [k] Gennesaret, and drew to the shore. 54. And when they were come out of the ship, straightway they knew him, 55. And [l] ran through that whole region round about, and began to carry about in beds those that were sick, where they heard he was. 56. And whithersoever he entered, into villages, or cities, or country, they laid the sick in the streets, and besought him that they might [m] touch if it were but the border of his garment: and as many as touched † him were made whole.

y Ver. 31. John 6. 15—21. Mat. 14. 32, 33. Is. 42. 2.

* Or over against Bethsaida.

z John 6. 15. Mat. 14. 23. Luke 6. 12. ch. 3. 7, 13. Acts 1. 12. & 19. 9.

a Mat. 14. 23. John 6. 15, 17. Is. 54. 11.

b Gen. 22. 14. Job 9. 8. Ps. 46. 1. & 93. 4. & 29. 10.

c Luke 24. 28. Gen. 32. 26.

d Job 4. 14, 15. Ps. 88. 15.

e Is. 41. 10. & 43. 1, 2. Ps. 46. 1—5. Rom. 8. 31. Gen. 22. 11—14. Mat. 14. 27.

f Ps. 29. 10. & 93. 4. & 107. 28—30. Mat. 14. 32. & 8. 26.

g Ch. 1. 27. & 2. 12. & 4. 41. & 5. 42. & 7. 37. Is. 8. 18.

h Ch. 8. 17. Mat. 16. 9, 10. John 6. 26. Luke 24. 14. ch. 3. 5. & 8. 17. & 16. 14. Heb. 3. 8, 13.

i Mat. 14. 34—36.

k A city on the west of the sea of Galilee. John 6. 24.

l John 4. 28. Mat. 4. 24, 25. ch. 3. 7—10. Gen. 49. 10. Zech. 8. 20—23. Is. 52. 13.

m Ch. 1. 31. & 3. 10. & 5. 27—29. Luke 6. 19. Acts 5. 15. & 19. 12.

† Or it.

Verses 45—56. The entertainment being finished, Christ bid his disciples first embark, and cross the lake, which they did with reluctance, thinking this a good opportunity for him to declare himself, and set up, as they expected, his temporal kingdom. But he, dismissing the multitude, retired into a mountain, as he was wont, to spend some time in prayer, to teach us the necessity of keeping up private communion with God, as the best mean of enabling us to go comfortably through our public ministrations. Meantime we are told,

1. The distress of the disciples. The wind was tempestuous and directly ahead, so that though they pulled hard, they got no way, and had advanced in many hours not above thirty furlongs. We may expect in Christ's service to meet with difficulties, but if we patiently persevere, all will be well.

2. After exercising their faith and patience till the morning watch, at last Christ came to them, walking upon the waters, and seemed as though he would have passed them; but they all discovered something walking on the water, and supposing it an apparition, shrieked out, exceedingly affrighted; till his well known voice stilled their fears, saying, Be of good cheer, it is I, be not afraid; and entering the boat, instantly the wind and waves subsided, to the exceeding astonishment of the apostles, who, forgetting the miracle of the loaves which they had just seen, were so dull and stupid in their hearts, as to be surprised at this new manifestation of their Master's divine power, though they were daily eye-witnesses to his stupendous miracles. Note, (1.) If Christ's people toil hard through a night of temptations or desertion, the morning will come, a little faith and patience shall bring them to the light of peace and joy. (2.) Our fancies raise a thousand unnecessary fears; and in our distress we often suspect that Christ is passing from us, when he is really coming to us. (3.) It is then comfortable with the troubled soul when Jesus reveals himself, and saith with the voice of love, It is I, be of good cheer. Lord, speak thou to my soul, and it shall rest from all its fears!

3. No sooner had they reached the shore, near Capernaum, than immediately the rumour of his arrival spread on every side, and vast multitudes crowded around him, bringing the sick and diseased, in every city, town, or village that he passed, they were laid on beds in the streets, and besought him, that they might touch, if but the border of his garment; and as many as touched him were perfectly cured, whatever was their malady. O Jesus, enable me to touch thee with my trembling hand of faith, and heal thou my sin-sick soul!

CHAP. VII.—ANNO DOMINI, 32.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's dispute with the Scribes and Pharisees about eating meat with unwashen hands, ver. 1—13. The needful instructions he gave to the people upon that occasion, and these further explained to his disciples, ver. 14—23. 2. His curing the woman of Canaan's daughter that was possessed, ver. 24—30. 3. The relief of a man that was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech, ver. 31—37.

1. THEN [a] came together unto him the Pharisees, and certain of the Scribes, which came from Jerusalem. 2. And when they saw some of his disciples eat bread with * defiled (that is to say, with unwashen) hands, [b] they found fault. 3. For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash their hands † oft, eat not, holding the tradition of the elders. 4. And when they come from the market, except they [c] wash, they eat not. And many other things there be which they have received to hold, as the washing of cups, and ‡ pots, brazen vessels, and of ‖ tables. 5. Then the Pharisees and scribes asked him, [d] Why walk not thy disciples according to the tradition of the elders, but eat bread with unwashen hands? 6. He answered and said unto them, Well hath Esaias prophesied of you [e] hypocrites, as it is written, [f] This people honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. 7. Howbeit, in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. 8. For, laying aside the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the washing of pots and cups: and many other such like things ye do. 9. And he said unto them, [g] Full well ye * reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition. 10. For Moses said, [h] Honour thy father and thy mother; and, Whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death: 11. But ye say, If a man shall say to his father or mother, It is [i] Corban, † that is to say, a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me; he shall be free. 12. And ye suffer him no more to do ought for his father or his mother; 13. [k] Making the word of God of none effect through your tradition, which ye have delivered: and many such like things do ye. 14. ¶ [l] And when he had called all the people unto him, he said unto them, Hearken unto me every one of you, and understand: 15. [m] There is nothing from without a man, that entering into him can defile him; but the things which come out of him, those are they that defile the man. 16. [n] If any man have ears to hear, let him hear. 17. [o] And when he was entered into the house from the people, his disciples asked him concerning the parable. 18. And he saith unto them, [p] Are ye so without understanding also? Do ye not perceive, that whatsoever thing from without entereth into the man, it cannot defile him; 19. [q] Because it entereth not into his heart, but into the belly, and goeth out into the draught, purging all meats? 20. And he said, [r] That which cometh out of the man, that defileth the man. 21. [s] For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts adulteries, fornications, murders, 22. Thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness: 23. All these evil things come from within, and defile the man.

[a] Mat. 15. 1—9. Luke 5. 17. & 11. 53, 54. & 14. 1. & 15. 2.

* Or common.

[b] Mat. 23. 23, 24. & 7. 3—5. Gal. 1. 14.

† Or diligently, or with the fist, or up to the elbow. (All interpretations imply diligent and accurate care in washing. — Leigh.)

[c] Mat. 20. 25. Luke 11. 39. Job 9. 30, 31.

‡ Sextarius, containing 33 solid inches.

‖ Or beds.

[d] Mat. 9. 11, 14. & 12. 21. & 23. 23, 24. Col. 2. 8, 18. Luke 11. 42.

[e] Mat. 23. 13—29.

[f] Is. 29. 13. & 1. 11—15. Mat. 15. 8, 9. Ezek. 33. 31. Col. 2. 18—22. Tit. 1. 14, 16. 2 Tim. 3. 5. 1 Tim. 1. 6, 7.

[g] Is. 24. 5. Jer. 7. 32. & 44. 16, 17. 2 Thes. 2. 4. Dan. 7. 25. Prov. 1. 25.

* Or frustrate.

[h] Exod. 20. 12. & 21. 17. Lev. 19. 3. & 20. 9. Deut. 5. 16. & 21. 18. & 27. 16, 17. Prov. 20. 20. & 23. 22. & 30. 17.

[i] Mat. 15. 5. Lev. xxvii. All that I could spare is dedicated to God. with 1 Tim. 5. 8.

† Corban is a Hebrew word, very often used in the Old Testament for various kinds of oblations.

[k] Prov. 1. 25. Hos. 8. 12. Is. 24. 5. Jer. 44. 16, 17 Gal. 1. 14. 1 Tim. 1. 6, 7. Tit. 1. 14.

[l] Mat. 15. 10—20. & 11. 15. & 16. 9—11. & 22. 29. Ps. 94. 8. ch. 4. 9, 23

[m] Acts 10. 14, 15. Rom. 14. 17. 1 Cor. 8. 8. & 10. 25. 1 Tim. 4. 4. Tit. 1. 15. Jam. 3. 6.

[n] See ver. 14. ch. 4. 9.

[o] Mat. 13. 36. & 15. 15. Acts 8. 30, 31.

[p] Mat. 15. 16, 17. & 16. 9—11. Heb. 5. 11. 1 Cor. 3. 2. Deut. 29. 29. Is. 28. 9, 10. see ver. 14.

[q] 1 Cor. 6. 13. Col. 2. 21, 22.

[r] Jam. 3. 6. Mat. 12. 34—37. Ps. 39. 1.

[s] Gen. 6. 5. & 8. 21. Mat. 15. 19. & 20. 15. Prov. 6. 14—19. Jer. 17. 9. & 4. 14. & 6. 7. Gal. 5. 19—21. 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. Rom. 13. 13. Acts 8. 22. Tit. 3. 2, 3. Jam. 4. 11.

Verses 1—23. The Scribes and Pharisees could not bear to see the poor people follow Jesus though to be cured; yet they could take a long journey purely to cavil with him.

1. They found fault with his disciples for eating with unwashen hands, contrary to the tradition of the elders, and complained to Christ of their criminal neglect; for so they esteemed it, being superstitiously scrupulous to wash before they sat down to meat, when they returned from market, and on a variety of other occasions; pretending great carefulness to avoid defilement. And for the same purpose they washed also their pots, cups, brazen vessels, and tables, or beds; lest by the touch of any impure person they should have contracted pollution; and fancying much religion consisted in these absurd traditions, they were ready to condemn every deviation from them with greater severity, than even the breaches of God's written law.

2. Christ vindicates his disciples, and reproves the hypocrisy and wickedness of their accusers. They truly fulfilled the prophecy of Isaiah; apostate in heart from God, whilst they pretended to honour him with the lip and the knee in much apparent devotion. They stamped human traditions with divine authority; imposed them as obligatory on men's consciences; and not only laid great stress upon the observance of these superstitious washings, but really subverted the plainest and weightiest commands of the law, when they stood in competition with their traditions. A more flagrant evidence of which cannot be conceived, than our Lord here produces against them. The tradition of the elders had established it as a rule, that if a man swore by Corban, by the gold of the temple, or that he would devote such a thing to the treasury of the temple, or would regard it as a devoted thing, and not part with it on any occasion, he was bound to fulfil his vow. And though the commandment of God had so expressly provided for the honour and support of parents, laying an awful curse upon the undutiful son that spoke or acted contemptuously against them; yet they held he was bound by his vow, and dispensed with from observing the evident commands of God, and the plainest dictates of duty and gratitude; so that he might safely withhold the least relief from his parents, however indigent, infirm, or aged; yea, was conscientiously obliged to do so; a tradition so iniquitous and shocking, as most directly violated the word of God, and made it of no effect. Yet that, and many other things as impious, did the Pharisees impose on their disciples; and, under the mask of pretended sanctity, and reverence for the temple, sapped the very foundations of true religion.

2. To prevent the people from being imposed upon by these blind guides, he demands their attention to his discourse, as being a matter of the highest importance; for if their principles were right, a correspondent practice would follow. This great axiom therefore Christ lays down, that nothing without a man, which he touches or eats, any farther than it hath a bad influence upon his heart, can render him in God's sight morally unclean; but that all impurity comes from within: and the evil thoughts and desires which are expressed in words and actions, these are what defile the man, and render him odious in the sight of God; and this he bids them carefully remark and remember. The disciples, far from being yet emancipated from the vulgar opinions concerning the things by which a person was defiled, when they were alone, desired our Lord to explain his last observation to them, which appeared to them hard to be understood. With an air of surprise at their dulness, our Lord reproves their stupidity: if others were in the dark, they at least should have understood him. However, he is pleased to explain his meaning, so as to prevent the possibility of mistake. Two things he lays down, and supports with the clearest arguments. (1.) That whatever meats a man may eat, as they do not enter into his heart, which is the source of all moral purity, or pollution, but merely pass through the body, therefore without intemperance they can communicate no defilement before God. (2.) That the origin of all evil, and the cause of all uncleanness, is from within; whence preceeds all that train of evils before observed, Matt. xv. 19. to which others are here added, covetousness, the unsatisfied cravings of the heart after worldly things; wickednesses, the contrivances of malice, and delight in mischief; deceit, in words or deeds, to conceal the designs of iniquity; lasciviousness, the impure imaginations, dalliance, or discourse, which the lewd indulge, though deterred from grosser acts of impurity; an evil eye, envying the enjoyment of others, or coveting what they possess: pride, the high conceit, the lofty look, the contemptuous or insolent carriage of the swelling heart: foolishness, the boasts of vanity, the ebullitions of folly, the rashness of inconsiderate censure, and the hastiness of imprudence. These, and these alone, are the defiling things that spring from the fountain head of evil in the fallen spirit, and render the soul vile in itself, and abominable in the eyes of God.

24. ¶ [t] And from thence he arose, and went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon, and [u] entered into an house, and would have no man know it: but he could not be hid. 25. For [x] a certain woman, whose young daughter had an unclean spirit, heard of him, and came and fell at his feet: 26. The woman was a [y] Greek, a Syro-phenician by nation; and [z] she besought him that he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter. 27. But Jesus said unto her, [a] Let the children first be filled: for it is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it unto the dogs. 28. And she answered and said unto him, Yes, Lord: [b] yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs. 29. And he said unto her, [c] For this saying go thy way; the devil is gone out of thy daughter. 30. And [d] when she was come to her house, she found the devil gone out, and her daughter laid upon the bed.

t Mat. 15. 21—28. see ch. 3. 8.
u Is. 42. 2. ch. 1. 45. & 2. 1. & 3. 7. & 6. 31—33. John 5. 41. & 7. 18.
x Gen. 49. 10. Ps. 45. 12. & 87. 4.
y Or Gentile. Is. 11. 10. & 49. 12. & 60. 3, 5, 11.
z Ch. 10. 14. Jer. 49. 11. 1 John 3. 8. Mat. 15. 22. & 4. 23—25. & 8. 16. ch. 1. 32. a Mat. 7. 6. & 10. 5. 6. Rom. 15. 8. & 9. 4. with Eph. 2. 12.
b Mat. 5. 45. Is. 49. 6. & 42. 6, 7. & 45. 22. & 11. 10. & 55. 6, 7. Acts 13. 46. Rom. 1. 16. c Is. 57. 16. Mat. 15. 28. & 8. 10, 13. John 4. 50—52. d Ch. 9. 23. 1 Cor. 10. 13. Eph. 3. 20. 1 John 3. 8. Ps. 12. 6, 2 Cor. 1. 20

Verses 24—30. We have here one short excursion of the divine Redeemer into the coasts of the Gentiles; an earnest of the gracious designs he had in store for them: but, that he might not offend the Jews to whom he was particularly sent, he chose not to appear in public, and therefore entered into a house: but, though he would have no man know it, his fame was too much spread abroad to admit of his concealment. And we have,

1. The application of a poor Gentile to him in behalf of her daughter who was possessed. Falling at his feet, she earnestly importuned him to cast out the devil from her child. At first her address met with such discouragement as Jesus was very unused to give to poor petitioners. Compared with the chosen people of Israel, he speaks as if the Gentiles were but as dogs, to whom the children's meat (the miracles he wrought) must not be thrown, at least, not till the children first be filled. Far from desisting on such a repulse, she wonderfully turns the apparent refusal into an argument for granting the favour she asked, and desired, as a dog, only to have one crumb, one miracle, among the multitudes that every day were so abundantly dispensed to the Jewish children. Note, (1.) They who have children possessed with unclean spirits, cannot but earnestly present their sad case before the Lord, who alone can cure them. (2.) A poor supplicant at the feet of Jesus, may confidently hope amidst every discouragement, for an answer of peace at the last. If Jesus delays it is to exercise their faith, and prove their perseverance.

2. The cure is wrought. Pleased with the poor Gentile's address, and admiring her faith, he grants her request: The devil is gone out of thy daughter; as she found to her unspeakable comfort, when, depending on the accomplishment of the word of Jesus, she returned to her house. So sure is the prayer of faith to prevail.

31. ¶ [e] And again, departing from the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, he came unto the sea of Galilee, through the midst of the coasts of † Decapolis. 32. And [f] they bring unto him one that was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech; and they beseech him to put his hand upon him. 33. And he took him [g] aside from the multitude, and put his fingers into his ears, and he spit, and touched his tongue; 34. And, [h] looking up to heaven, he sighed, and saith unto him, Ephphatha, that is, Be opened. 35. And [i] straightway his ears were opened, and the string of his tongue was loosed, and he spake plain. 36. And [k] he charged them that they should tell no man: but

e Mat. 15. 29—31.
† A country of ten cities in east Galilee.
f Mat. 9. 32. Luke 11. 14. Mat. 19. 15. ch. 8. 22.
g Ch. 8. 23. & 5. 40. Is. 42. 2. Mat. 7. 6. 1 Kin. 17. 19. 2 Kin. 4. 33. Acts 9. 40. John 9. 6. h John 11. 33, 38, 41. & 17. 1. Heb. 4. 15. i Ch. 1. 27, 31, 42. & 2. 12. & 3. 5. & 5. 30. 42. & 8. 25. & 10. 52. Ps. 33. 9. Is. 35. 6. k Ch. 1. 45. & 3. 12. & 5. 43. & 8. 26. & 10. 48. Is. 42. 2. John 5. 41. & 7. 18.

the more he charged them, so much the more a great deal they published it; 37. [l] And were beyond measure astonished, saying, He [m] hath done all things well: he maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak.

l Ch. 1. 27. & 2. 12. & 4. 41. & 5. 42. & 6. 51.

m Ch. 1. 31. Is. 35. 5, 6. Mat. 11. 5.

Verses 31—37. Jesus was never weary of the delightful work of going about doing good. On his return from the Gentile coast into the region of Decapolis, a new object of mercy is presented before him.

1. The case was afflictive; the poor patient was deaf, and either quite dumb, or not able to speak without much difficulty: the emblem of the miserable sinner, whose ears are closed to all the sweet sounds of gospel grace, and unaffected with the thunders of Sinai; his lips sealed up, unable to speak the language of prayer or praise, or to communicate in conversation grace to the hearers.

2. The cure was singular; not by a word merely, as Jesus usually wrought his miracles; but taking the poor man aside, he put his fingers into his ears, and spit, and touched his tongue; not as causes that could contribute to his cure, but to show he was not bound to any method of procedure. Then, looking up to heaven, he sighed, in compassion to the human miseries, or grieved for the hardness of their hearts, who, after so many miracles, believed not on him; and then saith unto him, Ephphatha; that is in the Chaldee dialect, Be opened; and instantly the cure was wrought, he heard distinctly and spoke plainly. And thus by the commanding voice of his Spirit he saith to the spiritually deaf and dumb, Be opened; and the ears are unstopped, the tongue is loosed, they know the joyful sound of gospel grace, and speak aloud the praises of their Redeemer.

3. To avoid all appearances of vain-glory, and not to exasperate his malicious enemies, he gave the people a charge to conceal the miracle; but they could not be silent; nay, rather the more they published it, that such modest excellence might be known; and all with astonishment heard the report, and from such repeated instances were compelled to acknowledge to his honour, that all his works bespoke the glory of his character, full of power and grace, without the least tincture of ostentation, He hath done all things well; he maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak. Is not this then the Christ? See Isa. xxxv. 5, 6.

CHAP. VIII.—ANNO DOMINI, 32.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's miraculous feeding four thousand with seven loaves and a few small fishes, ver. 1—9. 2. His refusing to give the Pharisees a sign from heaven, ver. 10—13. 3. His cautioning his disciples to take heed of the leaven of Pharisaism and Herodianism, ver 14—21. 4. His giving sight to a blind man at Bethsaida, ver. 22—26. 5. Peter's confession of him, ver. 27—30. 6. The notice he gave his disciples of his own approaching sufferings, ver. 31—33. and the warning he gave them to prepare for sufferings likewise, ver. 34—38.

a Mat. 15. 32—39.

1. IN those days [a] the multitude being very great, and having nothing to eat, Jesus called his disciples unto him, and saith unto them, 2. [b] I have compassion on the multitude, because they have now been with me three days, and have nothing to eat: 3. And if I send them away fasting to their own houses, they will faint by the way: for divers of them came from far. 4. And his disciples answered him, [c] From whence can a man satisfy these men with bread here in the wilderness? 5. And he asked them, [d] How many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven. 6. And he commanded the people [e] to sit down on the ground; and he took the seven loaves, and [f] gave thanks, and brake, and gave to his disciples to set before them; and they did set them before the people. 7. And they had a few small fishes: and he blessed, and commanded to set them also before them. 8. So [g] they did eat, and were filled: and they took up of the broken meat that was left seven baskets. 9. And they that had eaten were about four thousand: and he sent them away.

b Mat. 9. 36. & 14. 14. Ps. 103. 13. & 145. 8, 9, 16. & 146. 9. & 34. 10. & 23. 1, 5. Heb. 4. 14. & 2. 17. Is. 63. 7, 15.

c Mat. 15. 33. 2 Kin. 4. 42, 43. & 7. 2. Num. 11. 21, 22. ch. 6. 52. John 6. 7—9.

d Num. 11. 22. Mat. 14. 15. & 15. 34.

e Ch. 6. 39, 40. 1 Cor. 14. 33, 40. 1 Kin. 19. 5. Ps. 46. 10. Phil. 4. 19.

f Ch. 6. 41. & 14. 22. Rom. 14. 6. 1 Sam. 9. 15. Deut. 8. 10. 1 Tim. 4. 4, 5. Mat. 26. 26. & 24. 45.

g Ps. 37. 16. & 23. 1. & 68. 10. & 145. 18. Prov. 13. 25. ver. 19, 20. Mat. 15. 37, 38. & 16. 10.

Verses 1—9. The compassions of Jesus flow without ceasing towards the wretched and indigent. Vast multitudes followed him; and, so eager were the people to attend him, that neither toil nor hunger discouraged them. He therefore who graciously fed their souls with his heavenly doctrine, here again is pleased by a miracle to feed their famished bodies. We have seen it recorded in nearly the same words, Matt. xv. 32. and may learn, (1.) To count nothing hard in the way of duty, whilst we are following Christ. (2.) To trust him with our bodies as well as souls, and verily we shall be fed. (3.) Not to be discouraged if we do not sometimes see any immediate prospect of relief under our difficulties: the Lord can open an unexpected door of deliverance for us.

10. ¶ [h] And straightway he entered into a ship with his disciples, and came into the parts of Dalmanutha. 11. [i] And the Pharisees came forth, and began to question with him, seeking of him a sign from heaven, tempting him. 12. And he [k] sighed deeply in his spirit, and saith, Why doth this generation seek after a sign? [l] Verily I say unto you, There shall no sign be given unto this generation. 13. And he [m] left them; and, entering into the ship again, departed to the other side. 14. ¶ [n] Now the disciples had forgotten to take bread, neither had they in the ship with them more than one loaf. 15. And he charged them, saying, [o] Take heed, beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and of the leaven of Herod. 16. And they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is [p] because we have no bread. 17. And when Jesus [q] knew it, he saith unto them, Why reason ye, because ye have no bread? [r] perceive ye not yet, neither understand? have ye your heart yet hardened? 18. Having eyes, see ye h Mat. 15. 39.

i Mat. 16. 1—4. & 12. 38. & 22. 23, 24. Acts 5. 17, 34. & 23. 6—8. John 7. 48. Luke 12. 54—57. & 11. 16. Mat. 12. 38. & 19. 3. & 22. 18. 1 Cor. 1. 22. John 4. 48. & 6. 30.

k Ch. 3. 5. & 9. 19.

l Mat. 12. 39, 40. & 16. 4. Jon. 1. 17. 1 Cor. 15. 4.

m Ps. 81. 12. Hos. 4. 17. Mat. 7. 6. & 15. 26.

n Mat. 16. 5—12. Ps. 37. 16.

o Mat. 16. 6. Luke 12. 1. 1 Cor. 5. 7, 8. ch. 12. 13. Mat. xxiii.

p Mat. 16. 7.

q Mat. 9. 4. & 12. 15, 25. ch. 2. 8 Jer. 17. 10. John 2. 24, 25. Heb. 4. 12, 13. Rev. 2. 23. Ps. 139. 1—4.

r Deut. 29. 4. Ps. 69. 23. & 94. 8. Is. 6. 9, 10. & 42. 18—20. & 63. 17. ch. 3. 5. & 6. 52. & 9.

not? and having ears, hear ye not? and do ye not remember, 19. When [s] I brake the five loaves among five thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? They say unto him, Twelve. 20. And [t] when the seven among four thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? And they said, Seven. 21. And he said unto them, [u] How is it that ye do not understand?

s Ch. 6. 34—44. Mat. 14. 17—21. Luke 9. 12—17. John 6. 2—13.

t Ver. 1—9. Mat. 15. 34—38. Prov. 11. 24, 25.

u Mat. 16. 11, 12. Heb. 5. 12. Ps. 94. 8. 1 Cor. 3. 2. John 14. 9.

Verses 10—21. Dalmanutha was a place not far from Magdala, Mat. xv. 39. thither our Lord bent his course.

1. The Pharisees there met him, and cavilling as usual, demanded a sign from heaven, as if all his other miracles did not sufficiently prove his divine mission: not that they desired to be convinced, but sought a pretence for their infidelity. Therefore,

2. Christ refused to grant their request. Not that he could not work the miracle they sought, but because he knew the wickedness of their intentions in asking it; and therefore sighing deeply, as grieved for the hardness of their hearts, he expostulates with them on the unreasonableness of their infidelity, when such amazing signs had been given them for their conviction already; and denying their request, he abandons them to their ruin. Note, They who will not submit to the evidence of the Scriptures, are justly given up to the blindness of their minds, and left to perish in their unbelief.

3. On this he took occasion, as they were crossing the lake, to caution his disciples against the leaven of the Pharisees and of Herod; which they, having forgotten to take scarce any bread with them, interpreted literally as a rebuke for their carelessness, and an admonition not to apply to the Pharisees for relief, or to eat of their bread. And whilst they were casting the blame of their negligence upon each other, Jesus, who perceived their folly and stupidity, sharply rebuked them for their uneasiness in this matter, as arguing great unbelief of his power, which they had seen so wonderfully and lately exerted, whereof he reminds them; and therefore it was strange they should be so senseless, and their hearts so hardened, as not to perceive that he meant not his discourse concerning bread literally, which he could so easily supply, but of the doctrines of the Pharisees and Herod, which were to be shunned as dangerously pernicious. Note, (1.) It is amazing to think of the hardness of our hearts, that, after multiplied experience of God's goodness, we are apt again to distrust his care the moment new difficulties arise. (2.) The more we know and understand what Christ is, and hath done for his people, the more will our hearts be engaged to trust him in every emergence.

22. ¶ And he cometh to [x] Bethsaida; and they [y] bring a blind man unto him, and besought him to touch him. 23. [z] And he took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town; and when he had spit on his eyes, and put his hands upon him, he asked him if he saw ought. 24. And he looked up, and said, I [a] see men as trees, walking. 25. After that he put his hands [b] again upon his eyes, and made him look up: and he was restored, and saw every man clearly. 26. And he sent him away to his house, saying, [c] Neither go into the town, nor tell it to any in the town.

x Mat. 11. 21. John 1. 44.

y Ch. 2. 3. & 5. 23, 29. & 6. 56.

z Ch. 7. 32, 33. 1 Kin. 17. 19. 2 Kin. 4. 33. Is. 42. 2, 6, 7. John 5. 41. & 7. 18. & 9. 6. Rev. 3. 18.

a 1 Cor. 13. 11, 12. Prov. 4. 18. Job 17. 9. Hos. 6. 8.

b Mat. 13. 12. & 25. 29. Phil. 1. 6. Prov. 4. 18. Job 17. 9. 2 Pet. 3. 18. Dan. 12. 4.

c Mat. 9. 30. & 12. 16. & 16. 20. & 17. 9. & 8. 4. ch. 7. 36. Is. 62. 2. John 5. 41. & 7. 18.

Verses 22—26. This miracle is related by Mark alone, and is probably selected from the innumerable multitude of others, because some circumstances in it are singular.

1. The application was made to Jesus by this poor blind man's friends, who led him to the Saviour, desiring that he would touch him, persuaded that this would effectually work the cure. Note, In our prayers we should not cease to pray for poor blind souls, entreating the Lord to open the eyes of their mind.

2. He took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town, choosing to heal him secretly, and perhaps in just judgment upon the place, where so many miracles had been wrought, and yet they continued in their infidelity.

3. He healed him; and this he did not by a word, but in an unusual manner, and gradually. He spat on his eyes, and asking what he saw, some glimmerings of light broke in upon him, and he beheld men as trees walking, his vision being yet indistinct and confused; but when Jesus had put his hands upon his eyes, and bid him look up again, then he saw every object clearly. Thus often is he pleased to work in the heart: at first the light, like the dawning day, breaks upon the soul, and some glimmerings of spiritual things are perceived; of the danger and guilt of sin; the necessity of caring for the soul; the want of a Redeemer, &c. Afterwards our views enlarge; we gain deeper discoveries of our own corruption, and Christ's all-sufficiency; till at last we come to the perfect day in glory, and know even as we are known.

4. He charges the man not to return to Bethsaida, nor acquaint any one there with his cure; their obstinate impenitence under the miracles they had seen, rendered them unworthy of any more of those mighty works. They who slight their own mercies, justly forfeit them.

27. ¶ [d] And Jesus went out, and his disciples, into the towns of Cesarea Philippi; and by the way he asked his disciples, saying unto them, Whom do men say that I am? 28. And they answered, [e] John the Baptist: but some say, Elias; and others, One of the [f] prophets. 29. And he saith unto them, But [g] whom say ye that I am? And Peter answereth and saith unto him, [h] Thou art the Christ. 30. And [i] he charged them that they should tell no man of him. 31. ¶ [k] And he began to teach them, that the Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again. 32. And he [l] spake that saying openly. And Peter [m] took him, and began to rebuke him. 33. But when he had turned about, and looked on his disciples, [m] he rebuked Peter, saying, Get thee behind me, Satan: for [n] thou [o] savourest not the things that be of God, but the things that be of men. 34. ¶ And when he had called the people unto him with his disciples also, he said unto them, [o] Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. 35. [p] For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: but

d Mat. 16. 13—23. Luke 9. 18—22.

e Ch. 6. 14. Mal. 4. 5. Luke 9. 7—9, 19.

f i. e. risen from the dead, Luke 9. 8, 19.

g Ch. 4. 11. John 14. 9.

h John 1. 41, 49. & 6. 69. & 11. 27. & 4. 42. 1 John 4. 15. & 5. 5. Acts 8. 37. & 9. 20.

i Ch. 9. 9. ver. 26. ch. 7. 36. Luke 9. 21, 22. 1 Cor. 2. 8.

k Mat. 16. 21. & 17. 22, 23. & 20. 17, 18. ch. 9. 31. & 10. 33. Luke 9. 22. & 18. 31. & 24. 7, 26. Is. 53. 2—10. Ps. 118. 22. John 16. 1, 7. 2 Cor. 15. 4.

l John 16. 25, 29. & 2. 19. & 3. 14. & 6. 51.

m 2 Sam. 19. 22. Prov. 29. 27. John 6. 70 & 8. 44. Acts 13. 10 n Rom. 8. 7, 8. 1 Cor. 2. 14. 2 Cor. 2. 16. Jam. 3. 15.

o Mat. 16. 24—28. Luke 9. 23—27. Mar. 10. 32—39. Gal. 5. 24. & 6. 14. Acts 14. 22. Col. 1. 24. Esth. 4. 16. 1 Thes. 3. 8. 2 Tim. 3. 12. 1 Cor. 3. 18. Phil. 3. 7, 8. Heb. 11. 24.

p Mat. 10. 39. Luke 17. 33. John 12. 25. Gal. 6. 12. Rev. 12. 11. Heb. 11. 35.

whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it. 36. For [q] what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? 37. Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? 38. [r] Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in [s] this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the [t] Son of man be ashamed, when he [u] cometh in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels.

q Job 2. 4. Mat. 16. 26. Luke 9. 25. & 12. 19, 20. Ps. 49. 7, 8. 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19.

r Mat. 10. 33. Luke 12. 8, 9. 2 Tim. 2. 12. 1 John 2. 23.

s Mat. 16. 4. & 3. 7.

t Dan. 7. 13. Ps. 80. 17. Zech. 13. 7. John 1. 14. Mat. 16. 13.

u Mat. 24. 30. & 25. 31. & 26. 64. Zech. 14. 5. Jude 14. Job 19. 25. Dan. 7. 10.

Verses 27—38. In their journey to the towns of Cesarea-Philippi, we are told,

1. The inquiry of Christ concerning the opinion which the people entertained of him, and what were the sentiments of the apostles in particular. They inform him of the general veneration in which he was held, though men's opinions concerning him were divided; some supposing him the Baptist risen from the dead; others, Elias; others, one of the former prophets returned. With regard to themselves, Peter, in the name of the rest, professes his faith in him as a much greater character, even that of the divine Messiah. Hereupon Jesus commanded them to keep this for the present secret, the time being not yet come for declaring in such express terms his pretensions, lest the people, prepossessed with the notions of a temporal Messiah, should be excited to an insurrection, or his enemies be exasperated to cut him off immediately, before he had finished his work. For, though nothing happens but by the divine decree, in time and manner as fixed from eternity, and no man dies before his appointed hour, yet he who hath ordained the end, hath ordained the means most proper to accomplish the counsels of his own will.

2. Christ hereupon informs them more freely and openly than he had done before, concerning the sufferings he must endure, to wean them from those vain imaginations concerning the temporal kingdom they expected, and to prepare them for so afflictive an event. Peter's heart fired at the mention; he could not bear to hear of his Master's death, when he had just entertained the most sanguine hopes of his greatness; and therefore taking him aside, expressed his astonishment that he should talk in such a manner: for which Peter got a severe and just rebuke before his fellow-disciples, to check their aspiring views, as well as his own. Christ tells him he acted as his bitterest enemy in opposing his sufferings; Satan could do no worse: and he showed an utter want of discernment concerning the nature of the Messiah's kingdom, and the great ends which God designed to accomplish by that death he was about to undergo. In truth, Peter's eyes were so fixed on temporal grandeur, that he could relish nothing which seemed to contradict his aspiring views. Note, (1.) In true disciples there may be found what calls for sharp rebuke. (2.) The cross is ever displeasing to our fallen nature, and we are too apt, like Peter, to be seeking for ourselves ease or greatness: hence in suffering times so many are offended.

3. He takes occasion hereupon to declare the terms of discipleship, and to suggest arguments to engage his faithful followers to meet courageously the persecutions they must expect in his service. Self-denial, readiness to take up the cross, and conformity to the pattern of a suffering Saviour, are absolutely required of every follower of Jesus; nor must we count our lives dear to us, when his service requires us to part with them. Not that our sufferings, or even death itself, will be our loss; no: they will prove our greatest gain, and we shall find in life eternal an abundant recompense. Whilst if through fear or dread of suffering in this world, we save our lives by base compliances, our loss will be irreparable and eternal; we shall perish without remedy, and the gain of ten thousand worlds will never countervail the loss of an immortal soul: and as sure as ever we are ashamed of the cause of Jesus, and disown him by our unfaithfulness, so surely may we expect to be disowned by him in the great day of his appearing and glory: let us therefore count the cost, and with full purpose of heart cleave unto the Lord.

CHAP. IX.—ANNO DOMINI, 32.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's transfiguration upon the mount, ver. 1—13. 2. His casting the devil out of a child, when the disciples could not do it, ver. 14—29. 3. His predictions of his own sufferings and death, ver. 30—32. 4. The check he gave to his disciples for disputing who should be greatest, ver. 33—37. And to John, for rebuking one who cast out devils in Christ's name, and did not follow with them, ver. 38—41. 5. Christ's discourse with his disciples of the danger of offending one of his little ones, ver. 42. and of indulging that in ourselves which is an offence, and an occasion of sin to us, ver. 43—50. most of which passages we had before, Matt. xvii. and xviii.

1. AND he said unto them, [a] Verily I say unto you, That there be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death, till they have seen the [b] kingdom of God come with power. 2. ¶ [b] And after six days Jesus taketh with him [c] Peter, and James, and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain [d] apart by themselves: and he was [e] transfigured before them. 3. And his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can white them. 4. And [f] there appeared unto them Elias with Moses: and they were talking with Jesus. 5. And Peter answered and said to Jesus, Master, it is [g] good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias. 6. For he wist not what to say; for they were sore afraid. 7. [h] And there was a cloud that overshadowed them: and a voice came out of the cloud, saying, [i] This is my beloved Son: [k] hear him. 8. And suddenly, when they had looked round about, they saw no man any more, save Jesus only with themselves. 9. And as they came down from the mountain, [l] he charged them that they should tell no man what things they had seen, till the Son of man were risen from the dead. 10. And they kept that saying with themselves, questioning one with another what [m] the rising from the dead should mean. 11. ¶ And they asked him, saying, Why say the scribes that [n] Elias must first come? 12. And he answered and told them, [o] Elias verily cometh first, a Mat. 16. 28. & 26. 64. Luke 9. 27. & 22. 18. Heb. 2. 8, 9. & 12. 28.

b Mat. 17. 1—13. Luke 9. 28—36.

c Ch. 5. 37. & 14. 33.

d Ch. 6. 31, 32. Song 7. 11.

e Exod. 34. 29, 35. Is. 33. 17. John 1. 14. 2 Pet. 1. 16, 17. Mat. 28. 3. Dan. 7. 9.

f Ch. 4. 11. Acts 10. 43. Rom. 3. 21. Luke 24. 27 44. 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11.

g Ps. 30. 6.

h 2 Pet. 1. 17. Exod. 40. 34. 1 Kin. 8. 10. Ps. 97. 2. Rev. 15. 8.

i 2 Pet. 1. 17. Mat. 17. 5. & 3. 17. Is. 42. 1. Ps. 2. 7. John 1. 14. & 3. 16. & 1. 34. Col. 1. 13.

k Exod. 23. 21. Deut. 18. 15—18. Acts 3. 22. Heb. 2. 3. & 1. 1. & 12. 25, 26.

l Ver. 30. ch. 1. 45. & 5. 43. & 7. 36. & 8. 30. Mat. 11. 29. Luke 9. 36. Is. 42. 2. John 5. 41. & 7. 18.

m John 2. 19. ch. 8. 31. ver. 31. & 10. 34. & xvi. Mat. xxviii. Luke xxiv. John xx.

n Mal. 4. 5. Mat. 17. 10. & 11. 14. Is. 40. 3. Mal. 3. 1.

o Ch. 1. 2—9. & 6. 16—29. Mat. iii. & 11. 2—18. & 14. 3—12. & 21. 24, 25. Luke i. & iii. John 1. 6—36. & 3. 23—36. & 5. 33—35.

and restoreth all things; and [p] how it is written of the Son of man, that he must suffer many things, and be set at nought.

13. But I say unto you, that Elias is indeed come, and they have done unto him whatsoever they listed, as it is written of him.*

* Might be read thus: "Elias is indeed come, as it is written of him: and they have done unto him whatsoever they listed."

Verses 1—13. The first verse of this chapter should properly, as in Matthew, have closed the preceding: as it is the conclusion of that discourse, and an argument to engage the fidelity of his disciples, from the view of the nearness of the Messiah's coming with power and glory to punish the persecutors of his people by the destruction of the Jewish state and nation; and, by the mighty effusion of his Spirit, to erect his church in the world, and bless the labours of his faithful ministers with the most astonishing success; and these events some of those then present should live to see.

Six days after the former discourse we have an account,

1. Of his transfiguration on the mount, in presence of three of his disciples, see Matt. xvii. This glimpse of his glory would serve to prevent the offence of the cross, and enable them, when they reflected on what they now saw and heard, to stand fast, unmoved under all the discouragements which their faith might afterwards encounter.

2. Of the discourse which passed between Christ and his disciples as they came down from the mountain. However desirous Peter was of dwelling there, the glorious scene was transient, like those bright beams of heavenly consolation we sometimes enjoy below; and though we say it is good for us to be here, he who knows best, will not have us now live by sight, but by faith. Christ, as they went, particularly charged them to take no notice of what they had seen and heard; at least not till after his resurrection from the dead, when this vision would gain the more ready credence, and serve to prove his divine glory even in the midst of his humiliations. What this resurrection from the dead should mean, they were at a loss to conceive; whether it was to be taken literally, or to be applied metaphorically to his exaltation from his present state of poverty and indigence, to the throne of that glorious temporal kingdom which their prejudices still expected. And as they had been taught by their scribes, that Elias was to prepare the way for the Messiah's coming and kingdom, they inquired of him whether there was any real ground for such an expectation, especially as Elias had made so short a stay with them on the mount, and had not appeared at all in public. Christ clears up their doubts; the person spoken of by the prophet Malachi, was not to be Elias personally, according to the traditions taught by the scribes, but one in his spirit and power, and he had already appeared, and been rejected; plainly pointing them to John the Baptist in whom the prophecy was fulfilled. And the same inspired writings that foretold the coming of John, predicted also the sufferings and indignities the Messiah should suffer; these therefore also they may assuredly expect to see accomplished in their season.

14. ¶ [q] And when he came to his disciples he saw a great multitude about them, and the scribes questioning with them. 15. And straightway all the people, when they beheld him, were [r] greatly amazed, and, running to him, saluted him. 16. And he asked the scribes, What [s] question ye * with them? 17. And one of the multitude answered and said, Master, [t] I have brought unto thee my son, which hath a dumb spirit; 18. [u] And wheresoever he taketh him, he † teareth him; and he foameth, and gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth away: and I spake to thy disciples that they should cast him out; and [x] they could not. 19. He answereth him, and saith, [y] O faithless generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him unto me. 20. And they brought him unto him: and when he saw him, straightway the spirit [z] tare him; and he fell on the ground, and wallowed, foaming. 21. And he asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? And he said, [a] Of a child. 22. And oft-times it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him: but, if thou canst do any thing, [b] have compassion on us, and help us. 23. Jesus said unto him, [c] If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. 24. And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; [d] help thou mine unbelief.‡ 25. When Jesus saw that the people came running together, [e] he rebuked the foul spirit, saying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee, Come out of him, and enter no more into him. 26. [f] And the spirit cried, and rent him sore, and came out of him: and he was as one dead; insomuch that many said, He is dead. 27. But [g] Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up; and he arose. 28. [h] And when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out? 29. And he said unto them, [i] This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting.

‡ This struggle in the father's heart, between solicitude for the preservation of his child, and a kind of involuntary distrust of Christ's power to heal him, is here expressed with an air of reality which could hardly be counterfeited.—Paley.

Verses 14—29. At the return of Jesus with his three disciples from the mount, he found their companions in no small perplexity.

1. The cause of it was, their being unable to heal a child possessed of a devil, who was brought to them for cure during their Master's absence: whereupon the scribes triumphed over them, and probably were now disputing against them, concerning their Master's doctrine and miracles, and the authority they pretended to derive from him. In this juncture Jesus himself appeared; and, struck with surprise at his critical arrival, the people with eagerness ran to him, congratulating him on his return, and giving him a hearty welcome. Note, (1.) They who have ever tasted the sweetness of communion with Jesus, cannot but mourn his absence, and welcome his return. (2.) When we are most at a loss what to say or do, the Lord then

[p] Ps. 22. 1—21. & 69. 1—21. Is. 50. 5, 6. & 52. 14. & liii. Dan. 9. 24, 26. Zech. 13. 7.

[q] Mat. 17. 14—21. Luke 9. 37—42.

[r] Ver. 2, 3. Exod. 34. 30. It seems the lustre of his face still partly continued.

[s] Ver. 14. ch. 8. 11. † Luke 11. 53, 54.

* Or among yourselves.

[t] Ch. 2. 3. & 6. 56. & 8. 22. & 10. 14. & 7. 26.

[u] 1 Pet. 5. 8. John 8. 44. Mat. 13. 22. Luke 9. 39.

† Or dasheth him.

[x] Mat. 17. 16. Luke 9. 40. ver. 19, 28, 29.

[y] Mat. 17. 16. & 6. 30. & 8. 26. & 14. 31. & 16. 8. & 13. 58. Heb. 3. 19.

[z] Luke 9. 42. ch. 1. 26. ver. 18, 22, 56. Rev. 12. 12. 1 Pet. 5. 8. John 8. 44.

[a] Job 14. 1. & 5. 7. John 9. 1, 20.

[b] Mat. 15. 22. Ps. 25. 7.

[c] Mat. 17. 20. & 21. 22. ch. 11. 23. Luke 17. 6. 2 Chr. 20. 20. Acts 14. 9. Is. 7. 9.

[d] Luke 17. 5. Phil. 1. 29. 2 Thes. 1. 11.

[e] Mat. 17. 18. Luke 9. 42. Mat. 4. 24. & 9. 33. & 12. 22. Acts 10. 38. 1 John 3. 8. Gen. 3. 15.

[f] Ch. 1. 26. ver. 18, 20. with Gen. 22. 14. Deut. 32. 36.

[g] Ch. 3. 10. & 5. 41. & 7. 33. & 8. 23. Mat. 17. 19. & 13. 10, 36. & 15. 15. Ps. 109. 31.

[h] Mat. 17. 20, 21. Eph. 6. 18. 2 Cor. 12. 7, 8. 1 Kin. 17. 20, 21. 2 Kin. 4. 33, 34.

[i] Ps. 50. 15. Is. 45. 11. Mat. 7. 7. Jam. 5. 16.

appears peculiarly gracious in coming to our help, and ordering our goings.

2. Addressing himself to the scribes on the cause of the dispute, they dared not to answer him; but the father of the child represented the piteous case, and the unsuccessfulness of his application to the disciples. His child was possessed of a dumb spirit, under whose malicious influence he was often thrown into terrible convulsions, foaming at the mouth, gnashing his teeth, and pining away under the frequent and violent returns of these diabolical agitations. And he had brought him to the disciples, who attempted to cure him in vain.

3. With a sharp rebuke to the malicious scribes, and all others who had joined them in their dispute with the disciples, (among whom probably, the father of the child might be included, on being disappointed in his application) he brands them as a faithless generation, wilfully blind to all the stupendous evidences of his power which he had shown, a people who wearied out his patience; but he would give them, notwithstanding, a fresh evidence of that divine mission they disputed, and therefore bids the father bring the child to him. If they will not believe, they shall, at least, be left without excuse.

4. No sooner was the lad brought within sight of Jesus, than the spirit, enraged at being about to be dispossessed, threw him to the ground in the most violent agonies, as if he would have torn him in pieces, and there he lay wallowing and foaming. To make the cure appear more singular, Jesus hereupon asked, how long he had been thus afflicted? The father answered, from his very infancy; and representing the imminent dangers to which he was frequently exposed, of being drowned or burned by this malicious spirit, who had oft cast him into the fire and into the water, he importunately begs, if this be not a case beyond the power of Jesus, that he would compassionate a parent as well as child so distressed, and help them out of their miseries. Note, (1.) In their first approaches to Christ, young converts often meet the most violent conflicts. (2.) The possession of inveterate corruption is from the womb, and nothing but the almighty grace of Jesus can cure the deeply rooted evil. (3.) Sometimes we doubt Christ's power, sometimes his willingness to help us, and both show the unbelief of our hearts.

5. In answer to his suggestion, Christ replied, If thou canst believe, all things are possible, &c. He had said, If thou canst do, as if he suspected Christ's want of power, therefore he retorts upon him, and bids him suspect his want of faith; yet to encourage his trust, assures him, that this and every other case is possible, when the application is made in faith. With eagerness and tears, between fear and hope, the afflicted father cried out, Lord, I believe thy all-sufficiency, and grieving over the hardness and infidelity of my heart, beg thee to help mine unbelief, and enable me confidently to trust thee. Note, (1.) If ever we come short of any of our requests, we may assuredly impute it to our unbelief. (2.) It is a sure sign of some faith when a man is convinced of, and really cries to be delivered from the unbelief of his heart. (3.) The strongest in faith need every day to pray for the pardon of their remaining unbelief, and an increase of this most necessary grace.

6. Christ performs the wondrous cure. The people came running to see how the affair would end, and whether Jesus or Satan prevailed; when with a voice of authority our Lord bids the foul fiend, who had made the child dumb and deaf, to depart, and never more return to him; nor dared the devil disobey; though with the deepest reluctance and most violent struggles quitting his hold, insomuch that the lad lay breathless and motionless, so that many verily thought him dead. But Jesus, stretching forth his hand, lifted him up, and immediately he arose perfectly well. Note, (1.) After Christ hath begun his work upon the heart in seasons of sore temptation, the soul, to human view, may appear as if utterly lost, but Jesus causes it again to revive, and restores us from our falls. (2.) Where he hath once dispossessed the enemy, he will effectually prevent his return; those whom he will save, shall never perish.

7. When the disciples inquired privately why they had miscarried, our Lord lets them know it was through want of this kind of faith, and their having neglected the instituted mean for obtaining it, prayer and fasting. Note, If we neglect the means, our grace will necessarily decay and languish.

30. ¶ [k] And they departed thence, and passed through Galilee: [l] and he would not that any man should know it.
31. [m] For he taught his disciples, and said unto them, The Son of man is delivered into the hands of men, and they shall kill him; and after that he is killed, he shall rise the third day. 32. But [n] they understood not that saying, and were afraid to ask him. 33. ¶ [o] And he came to Capernaum: and, being in the house, he asked them, What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way? 34. But they held their peace: [p] for by the way they had disputed among themselves who should be the greatest. 35. And he sat down, and called the twelve, and saith unto them: [q] If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all, and servant of all.
36. And he took [r] a child, and set him in the midst of them: and when he had taken him in his arms, he said unto them, 37. [s] Whosoever shall receive one of such children in my name, receiveth me: and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me.
38. ¶ [t] And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us: and we forbade him, because he followeth not us. 39. But Jesus said, Forbid him not: [u] for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name that can lightly speak evil of me. 40. For he that is not against us is on our part.

[k] Mat. 17. 22. Luke 9. 44.
[l] Ch. 1. 45. & 3. 7. & 4. 10, 11. & 6. 31, 32. ver. 2, 9
[m] Mat. 16. 21. & 17. 22, 23. & 20. 18, 19, 28. & 26. 2. & 21. 38, 39. Luke 9. 44. & 18. 31. & 24. 26. John 2. 19. & 3. 14. & 10. 18. & 12. 32, 33. & 19. 11. Acts 2. 23. & 4. 27, 28. 1 Cor. 15. 4. 2 Tim. 2. 8. ch. xiv—xvi.
[n] Luke 2. 5. & 18. 34. ver. 10.
[o] Mat. 17. 24. & 18. 1—7. Luke 9. 46—48.
[p] Prov. 13. 10. Jer. 45. 5. ch. 10. 42. Luke 22. 24—27. 3 John 9.
[q] Ch. 10. 43. Mat. 20. 26, 27. & 23. 8—12. Luke 14. 11. Jam. 4. 6.
[r] Ch. 10. 14. Ps. 34. 11. & 45. 10. Prov. 8. 17. Eccl. 11. 9. & 12. 1.
[s] Mat. 18. 5. & 10. 40—42. & 25. 40, 45. Luke 9. 48. & 10. 16. John 5. 23. & 12. 44. & 13. 20. & 14. 21. 1 Thes. 4. 8.
[t] Luke 9. 49, 50. & 11. 19. Num. 11. 27. Job 5. 2. Eccl. 4. 4. Gal. 5. 26.
[u] 1 Cor. 12. 3. Luke 9. 50. & 11. 23. Mat. 12. 30. Phil. 1. 18.

Verses 30—40. Being in haste to go toward Jerusalem, and designing to be alone with his disciples, he travelled through Galilee with all secrecy, to prevent any interruption from the people assembling around him. And by the way, we are told,

1. The repeated notices he gave to his disciples of his approaching sufferings, death, and resurrection: but they understood not his meaning, clear as the words were. Their prejudices concerning his temporal kingdom, spread a veil over their hearts, and they were ashamed and afraid to ask him, lest they should meet with a rebuke from him for their dulness. Note, Many live and die in ignorance, because they are ashamed to own it, and to inquire of those that would instruct them.

2. He reproves them for their pride and affectation of superiority. He knew the subject of their disputes in the way had been, who should possess the first honours in his kingdom; but he put a question, as if he wanted to be informed concerning it to which, ashamed of what had passed, they returned no answer. But Jesus, to show them that he knew the secrets of all hearts, and to check these most unbecoming desires of temporal grandeur, assured them that this ambitious affectation of pre-eminence would be punished with the lowest degradation: whilst the surest way to rise, would be by entertaining the lowliest thoughts of themselves, and studying how to be most serviceable to the meanest of his disciples. And to impress what he had spoken the more deeply, he took a little child into his arms, whose humility, teachableness, and unambitious simplicity they ought to imitate; assuring them, that whoever showed regard to the lowest of his people, because of such a spirit in them, for the sake of their resembling and relation to him, he would regard it as done to himself; yea, God the Father, who sent him, would requite it. Note, (1.) Christ observes, and is displeased with the angry disputes of his disciples, and will call them to account for them. (2.) Nothing is so contrary to the spirit of Christianity, as the affectation of pre-eminence.

3. He checks the jealousy and rashness of the beloved disciple. John in his travels, when he was sent forth with his fellow-labourers to preach the gospel, had seen a man casting out devils in Christ's name; perhaps one of the Baptist's disciples, who, though a believer in Jesus as the Messiah, had not constantly attended him as they had done, nor been invested with any particular commission from him. Jealous therefore for their Master's honour, or perhaps rather for their own, unwilling others should share these miraculous powers with them, they had forbade him, because he had not been a professed disciple, or invested with any such commission as they had received. But Jesus said, Forbid him not. One who had such faith in his name would not easily be brought to say or do any thing dishonourable to his cause. Such a one ought rather to be countenanced than discouraged; and as he took no part with the enemy, but rather the contrary, he was to be regarded as a friend. Note, (1.) Partial to our own opinion and party, we are apt to monopolize Christ, and to think our cause is so much his, that all who follow not with us are to be regarded as separated from him: but there may be a great diversity of opinions in lesser matters among those who together hold the head, and therefore we should bear and forbear, think and let think, without rash and rigid censures of those who differ from us. (2.) Wherever real good is done, where Christ is preached and souls rescued from the power of Satan, though we may count the methods pursued irregular and unauthorized, we must leave every man to stand or fall to his own Master, and beware how we oppose what is attended with a blessing from God. (3.) Where nothing appears contradictory to the faith of the gospel, charity ever bids us hope the best.

x Mat. 10. 42. & 25. 40.

41. [x] For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward. 42. [y] And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones that believe in me, [z] it is better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he were cast into the sea. 43. [a] And if thy hand ‡ offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: 44. [b] Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. 45. And if thy foot ‖ offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than having two feet to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: 46. Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. 47. And if thine eye * offend thee, [c] pluck it out: it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire: 48. Where their worm dieth not,† and the fire is not quenched. 49. [d] For every one shall be salted with fire, and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt. 50. [e] Salt is good: but if the salt have lost its saltness, wherewith will ye season it? [f] Have salt in yourselves, and have peace one with another.

y Mat. 18. 6. Luke 17. 1, 2. Rom. 14. 13, 21. 1 Cor. 8. 9—13. & 10. 32.

z Acts 9. 4. Mat. 25. 41—46. 2 Thes. 1. 6—9.

a Mat. 5. 30. & 18. 8. Deut. 13. 6. 8. Heb. 12. 1. 1 Pet. 2. 1. Col. 3. 5. Rom. 8. 13.

‡ Or cause thee to offend.

b Is. 66. 24. Jer. 7. 20. 2 Thes. 1. 9. Mat. 25. 41. Rev. 14. 10, 11. & 21. 8. & 20. 10, 15.

‖ Or cause thee to offend.

* Or cause thee to offend.

c Mat. 18. 9. & 5. 29. Heb. 12. 1. 1 Pet. 2. 1. Jam. 1. 21. Col. 3. 5. Gal. 5. 24. Rom. 8. 13.

† The duration of the punishment of the wicked is here sufficiently marked.

d Lev. 2. 13. Ezek. 43. 24.

e Mat. 5. 13. Luke 14. 34. with Job 6. 6.

f Col. 4. 6. Eph. 4. 29. Ps. 34. 14. Mat. 5. 9. Rom. 12. 18. & 14. 19. 2 Cor. 13. 11. 2 Tim. 2. 22. Heb. 12. 14.

Verses 41—50. Christ will not suffer the least kindness done to his poorest disciples to be unrewarded, nor the least offence given to them to go unpunished. The heaviest of all judgments hangs over that guilty head that shall hinder, discourage, or grieve the weak, or do ought to turn them back from Christ. And therefore, if any corruption in our hearts, or allurement from the world, or darling idol, would seduce us from the path of duty, and lead us and others into sin, though they were near and dear to us as a hand, a foot, or an eye, they must be cut off without pity. Eternity is at stake; and as a life of everlasting glory will amply repay us for every such sacrifice we make, so will the endless torments in hell make us rue the indulgence of our sins, when for a momentary gratification, we should be doomed to endure the gnawings of a guilty conscience filled with the wrath of God, and the intolerable agonies of burnings unquenchable and eternal. For as, under the law, every burnt-offering was salted before it was laid on the altar, where the fire never went out; so every apostate shall fall a sacrifice to divine justice, and be cast into the fire of hell, preserved by the power of God from an extinction of their being, to suffer that wrath of God which is for ever wrath to come. And, on the other hand, the soul which is seasoned with divine grace, and offered daily a living sacrifice to God, shall be preserved incorruptible, separated from the taint of this world's pollutions, and kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation. For, as salt is good to preserve meat from putrefaction, and render it savoury, so doth the grace of God preserve the soul from the corruption of sin, and renders those who possess this inestimable gift blessings to others, by spreading the sweet savour of Christ in the world. But if the salt have lost its saltness, and they, whose hearts, lips, and lives, should be seasoned with the salt of grace, prove destitute of it, and apostatize from their profession, their fall is usually irrecoverable, and their ruin inevitable. Therefore see that ye have salt in yourselves, the life of grace in your souls, subduing the corruptions within, and showing itself in a savoury conversation, in every good word and work, that may minister edification to others; and have peace one with another, united in closest bonds of love and fellowship, laying aside all disputes and envyings, and concurring to promote and propagate the gospel through the world. Note, (1.) The terrors and eternity of hell torments, if really believed, will be a powerful check to the raging passions of the soul. (2.) They who have the salt of grace must show it in their lips, and in their lives; and where this is really found, such shall never see corruption.

CHAP. X.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's dispute with the Pharisees concerning divorce, ver. 1—12. 2. The kind entertainment he gave to the little children that were brought to him to be blessed, ver. 13—16. 3. His trial of the rich man that inquired what he must do to get to heaven, ver. 17—22. 4. His discourse with his disciples upon that occasion concerning the peril of riches, ver. 23—27. and the advantage of being impoverished for his sake, ver. 28—31. 5. The repeated notice he gave his disciples of his sufferings and death approaching, ver. 32—34. 6. The counsel he gave to James and John, to think of suffering with him, rather than of reigning with him, ver. 35—45. 7. The cure of Bartimeus, a poor blind man, ver. 46—52. All which passages of story we had the substance of before, Mat. xix. and xx.

1. AND [a] he arose from thence, and cometh into the coasts of Judea by the farther side of Jordan: and the [b] people resort unto him again; and, as he was wont, he taught them again. 2. ¶ [c] And the Pharisees came to him, and asked him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife? tempting him. 3. And he answered and said unto them, [d] What did Moses command you? 4. And they said, [e] Moses suffered to write a bill of divorcement, and to put her away. 5. And Jesus answered and said unto them, [f] For the hardness of your heart he wrote you this precept: 6. But [g] from the beginning of the creation God made them male and female. 7. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife; 8. [h] And they twain shall be one flesh: so then they are no more twain, but one flesh. 9. [i] What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder. 10. And in the house his disciples asked him again of the same matter. 11. And he saith unto them, [k] Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery against her. 12. And if a woman shall put away her husband, and be married to another, she committeth adultery.

a Mat. 19. 1—9. Luke 4. 16. John 3. 22. & 10. 40.

b Mat. 4. 23—25. & 8. 1, 18. & 9. 35. & 12. 15. & 13. 1. & 14. 35. & 15. 30. & 17. 14. ch. 6. 33. & 8. 1.

c Ch. 2. 16, 18, 24. & 3. 6. & 7. 1, 2. & 8. 11. & 12. 13. Luke 11. 53, 54.

d Is. 8. 20. John 5. 39.

e Deut. 24. 1. Jer. 1. 1. Mat. 5. 33. & 19. 7.

f Deut. 9. 6. & 31. 27. Acts 7. 51. & 13. 18. & 14. 16.

g Gen. 1. 27. & 5. 2. & 2. 24. Mal. 2. 14—16. with Jer. 6. 16.

h Gen. 2. 24. Eph. 5. 31. 1 Cor. 6. 16.

i Mat. 5. 31, 32. Mal. 2. 14—16. Rom. 7. 1—3. 1 Cor. 7. 10—13.

k Mat. 5. 32. & 19. 9. Luke 16. 18. Rom. 7. 1—3. Mal. 2. 14—16. 1 Cor. 7. 10—13.

Verses 1—12. Wherever our Lord journeys, we find him employed in the blessed work of preaching the word, to teach us to be instant in season and out of season. Multitudes still followed him, some to hear, some to be healed, and some with a malignant purpose to entangle him in his talk, and raise some matter of accusation against him. Of this number were the Pharisees, who, by an insnaring question concerning divorce, endeavoured to lead him into a dilemna, either of contradicting Moses, or being exposed to the censure of a man of loose morals. He asked them what Moses had commanded? They answered, that in many cases he had permitted divorce. Our Lord replies, that it was no more than a permission, granted merely because of the hardness of their hearts and their cruel disposition, as a law of the state to prevent worse consequences; but at the beginning it was not so; the very creation of one man and one woman, and but once, intimated the inseparable union between them; the settling the law of marriage, Gen. ii. 24. declared it, since for the sake of this relation, a man must quit even the dearest ties of nature, and prefer his wife to father and mother: and the connection arising from the marriage-bond is so close, that, as Adam and Eve were one flesh, her body being formed from his, so must every husband and wife reckon themselves as no more twain, but one flesh. Whom God therefore hath thus indissolubly joined together, it would be the highest presumption in man to separate.

The disciples, who had been used, according to the generally received opinion among the Jews, to think divorces lawful, desired in private farther information on this point. And our Lord informs them there was but one lawful cause for divorce; and, except in the case of adultery, whatever man or woman divorced their partner, and married again, would themselves be adulterers, and expose the injured party to the like crime. Note, It becomes us first well to weigh the case before we take a companion for our lives: when once the choice is made, mutual kindness and forbearance, and desire to please, should every day endear the relation, and remove whatever might occasion a wish of separation.

13. ¶ [l] And they brought young children to him, that he should touch them: and his disciples [m] rebuked those that brought them. 14. But when Jesus saw it, he [n] was much displeased, and said unto them: [o] Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. 15. Verily I say unto you, [p] Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein. 16. [q] And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them.

l Mat. 19. 13—15. Luke 18. 15, 16. Gen. 48. 14, 15. Jer. 49. 11.

m Ch. 9. 38. Mat. 15. 23.

n Ch. 3. 5. & 3. 33. & 9. 39. Luke 9. 54—56.

o Mat. 18. 3. & 19. 14. Luke 18. 16. Gen. 17. 7. Deut. 29. 11. 1 Cor. 14. 20. Prov. 8. 17. & 23. 26. Eccl. 12. 1. Ps. 34. 11. & 45. 10.

p Mat. 18. 3. & 20. 26. 1 Pet. 2. 1, 2. John 3. 3, 5, 6. Rom. 12. 2. Eph. 4. 24. Col. 3. 10. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Gal. 6. 15.

q Gen. 48. 14. & 16. 8. Luke 4. 40. & 13. 13. Is. 40. 11. Num. 8. 10.

Verses 13—16. Christ Jesus hath a tenderness for the lambs of his flock: he doth not refuse the request of those pious parents who present their babes to him before they can lisp his praises. The disciples here indeed opposed their application; but Jesus encouraged it, took up the infants in his arms, laid his hands upon them, and blessed them. And, if they were capable of receiving the spiritual blessings of his kingdom, what should hinder their being admitted by baptism into the visible communion of his church? Of such he declares the kingdom of God consisted, as well as of grown persons, who in humility, teachableness, and dependence upon their father's care, must become as little children; without which they never can partake of the privileges of this kingdom. Lord, give me then this spirit of a child, that I may be enabled to cry, Abba, Father!

17. ¶ [r] And when he was gone forth into the way, there came one running, and kneeled to him, and asked him, [s] Good Master, [t] what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life? 18. And Jesus said unto him, [u] Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God. 19. [x] Thou knowest the commandments; Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Defraud not, Honour thy

r Mat. 19. 16—22. Luke 18. 18—23.

s John 3. 2. & 11. 28.

t John 6. 28. Acts 2. 37. Exod. 19. 8. Rom. 9. 31, 32. & 10. 2, 3. & 2. 17, 18. Gal. 2. 16. & 3. 10, 12.

u 1 Sam. 2. 2. Ps. 119. 63. James 1. 17.

x Gal. 4. 21. Exod. 20. 12—17. Deut. 5. 16—21. Rom. 13. 9. Jam. 2. 11. Lev. xix. Gal. 5. 14.

father and mother. 20. And he answered and said unto him, Master, [y] all these have I observed from my youth. 21. [z] Then Jesus, beholding him, loved him, * and said unto him, One thing thou lackest: go thy way, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come, [a] take up the cross, and follow me. 22. [b] And he was sad at that saying, and went away grieved: for he had great possessions. 23. ¶ And Jesus looked round about, and saith unto his disciples, [c] How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God! 24. And the disciples were astonished at his words. But Jesus answereth again, and saith unto them, Children, how hard is it for them [d] that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God! 25. It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. 26. And they were astonished out of measure, saying among themselves, [e] Who then can be saved? 27. And Jesus, looking upon them, saith, [f] With men it is impossible, but not with God: for with God all things are possible. 28. ¶ [g] Then Peter began to say unto him, Lo, we have left all, and have followed thee. 29. And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say unto you, [h] There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake and the gospel's, 30. But he shall receive [i] an hundred-fold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, [k] with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life. 31. [l] But many that are first shall be last; and the last first.

[y] Phil. 3. 6. Tit. 1. 16. 2 Tim. 3. 5. Is. 58. 2. Ezek. 33. 31. Luke 18. 11, 12.

[z] Ch. 8. 34. Luke 12. 33. & 16. 9. 1 Tim. 6. 18, 19. Acts 2. 44. & 4. 32, 34. Mat. 6. 19, 20.

* Approved of him with expressions of outward kindness and friendship for his care of his parents and other good deeds. — Lightfoot.

[a] Ch. 8. 34. John 16. 33. Acts 14. 22. 2 Tim. 2. 12.

[b] 2 Cor. 7. 10. Judg. 18. 24. ch. 4. 19. Phil. 3. 19. Ps. 17. 14. 2 Tim. 4. 10.

[c] Mat. 19. 23—26. Luke 18. 24—27. Mat. 13. 22. Luke 21. 34. Job 31. 24. Ps. 62. 10. 1 Cor. 1. 26. Jam. 4. 4. & 5. 1—3. & 2. 5. 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10.

[d] Ps. 52. 7. & 62. 10. & 17. 14. Prov. 11. 18. & 18. 11. & 23. 5. 1 Tim. 6. 17.

[e] Mat. 7. 14. Luke 13. 24. Num. 24. 23.

[f] Job 10. 13. & 42. 2. Jer. 32. 17, 27. Zech. 8. 6. Luke 1. 37. Heb. 7. 25. Is. 63. 4.

[g] Mat. 19. 27—30. Luke 18. 28—30. ch. 1. 20. Phil. 3. 7—9. Deut. 33. 9—11.

[h] Luke 22. 28, 29. 2 Cor. 6. 8.

- Ps. 19. 11. Is. 61. 10. 2 Chr. 25. 9.

[k] Mat. 16. 24. John 16. 33. Acts 14. 22. 2 Tim. 3. 12. Col. 1. 24. Heb. 12. 6.

[l] Mat. 19. 30. & 20. 16. & 8. 11, 12. & 21. 13. Acts 13. 46. Luke 13. 30. & 7. 29, 30. & 18. 14.

Verses 17—31. We have here,

1. The young ruler's application to Christ, and sorrowful departure from him; which we considered, Mat. xix. 16. His address was most respectful, and his question infinitely important; eternal life being our great concern, and to secure that the one thing needful: and, where the value of an immortal soul is felt, we cannot but be solicitous in our applications to Jesus, who is the way, the truth, and the life. Our Lord perceived the error under which he laboured, and, rebuking him for giving the title of good to any person whom he regarded as a mere man, desired to discover to him the insufficiency of his own righteousness, and his inability to keep that law, by a perfect obedience to which eternal life alone could be secured: and in the precepts of the second table our Lord sets before him the path of duty. Ignorant of the spiritual extent of the commandments, he conceives he may venture to say he hath kept all these from his youth, because he hath escaped the grosser violations of them. So apt are we to flatter ourselves in our own eyes that we are righteous, when indeed it is our ignorance that hides from us our sinfulness. Something amiable in him attracted the regards of Jesus, and looking upon him with compassion he would fain humble those high thoughts of himself which he had entertained: and to bring him to the test, he bids him give one proof of his obedience and charity, by selling all his possessions, distributing them to the poor, trusting on the promise of a more enduring substance in heaven, and then let him take up his cross and follow a suffering Saviour: and this would infallibly bring him to the eternal life he sought. But, alas! these were too hard sayings for so rich a man to comply with: he went away sorely chagrined at the proposal; and if such was the only alternative, he rather chose to part with eternal life than his great possessions. Note, (1.) The only proper use of worldly wealth is to do good with it. Though we may not be commanded to sell all literally, we must remember we are really no more than stewards, and that a solemn account will shortly be required concerning every penny we have possessed. (2.) Great riches often prove a great snare. How many by these have lost eternal life! (3.) A man may be possessed of a thousand amiable qualities, and yet be utterly destitute of true grace.

2. Christ observes, to the astonishment of the disciples, the difficulty of their salvation who have the abundance of this world, and whose hearts, in consequence thereof, are engaged to trust on their riches: and when, by the impracticability of a camel's going through a needle's eye, he intimated the immense obstructions there were in the way of a rich man's salvation, the disciples, above measure astonished, concluded the impossibility of any man's being saved, since such as were not rich in general wished to be so, and they were conscious to themselves how much their own hearts were set on temporal grandeur. Jesus, looking with compassion upon them, to relieve in some measure their anxiety, bid them consider that, though such a change of heart as was needful to every mortified disciple of his was beyond the power of man, it was not beyond the power of God, who can give the most wealthy the deepest poverty of spirit, and enable those, who have the greatest obstructions in their way to glory, to surmount them.

3. They who leave all for Christ shall be no losers thereby. Peter mentions with some satisfaction, that though their possessions and connections were not great, they had given them up to follow him. And Christ assures him that what they or any others should part with for his sake, would prove in the issue to be their unspeakable gain; whether a man quitted his home, his substance, his relations, friends, or whatever else was dear to him, for the sake of faithful adherence to Christ and his gospel, he should find his truest advantage in it, in present comfort, and sometimes in kind, the Lord will give him a hundred fold, with persecutions, which all who will live godly in Christ Jesus must expect as long as they are in the body, and in the world to come an eternal life of happiness and glory. But many that are first in profession will be so outstripped in zeal and fidelity by others, who will be called after them, as to come in last in the race: whilst the last, who seemed farthest from the kingdom of heaven, and latest embraced the offers of the gospel, by their diligence will often first reach the goal; see 1 Cor. xv. 10. Note, (1.) The nearest and dearest relations must not weigh with us, when set in competition with our professing of Christ, and the service of his gospel. (2.) Till we come to heaven, however prosperous our circumstances may be, we are to expect the cross; t is only then that we shall have finished our warfare, and entered into our eternal rest.

32. ¶ [m] And they were in the way going up to Jerusalem: and Jesus went before them; and they were amazed; and as they followed they [n] were afraid. [o] And he took again the twelve, and began to tell them what things should happen unto him, 33. Saying, [p] Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests, and unto the scribes; and they shall condemn him to death, and shall deliver him to the Gentiles: 34. And they shall mock him, and shall scourge him, and shall spit upon him, and shall kill him: and the third day he shall rise again. 35. ¶ [q] And James and John, the sons of Zebedee, come unto him, saying, Master, [r] we would that thou shouldest do for us whatsoever we shall desire. 36. And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you? 37. They said unto him, Grant unto us that we may sit, one [s] on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy glory. 38. But Jesus said unto them, [t] Ye know not what ye ask: can ye drink of [u] the cup that I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? 39. And they said unto him, [x] We can. And Jesus said unto them, [y] Ye shall indeed drink of the cup that I drink of; and with the baptism that I am baptized withal shall ye be baptized: 40. [z] But to sit on my right hand and on my left hand is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared. 41. And [a] when the ten heard it, they began to be much displeased with James and John. 42. But Jesus called them to him, and saith unto them, [b] Ye know that they which * are accounted to rule over the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and their great ones exercise authority upon them. 43. [c] But so shall it not be among you: but whosoever will be great among you, shall be your minister: 44. And whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all. 45. [d] For even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

[m] Mat. 20. 17—19. Luke 18. 31—34. Ps. 40. 8. Is. 53. 7.

n John 11. 8, 16. ch. 9. 31.
o Mat. 11. 25. & 13. 11. ch. 4. 31.
p Mat. 16. 21. & 17. 22, 23. & 20. 18, 19. ch. 8. 31. & 9. 31. Luke 9. 22. & 18. 31—33. & 24. 7. with ch. xiv—xvi. John xviii, xx. Mat. xxvi—xxviii. Luke xxii—xxiv. Ps. xxii, lxix. Is. liii. Acts 4. 27. & 2. 23.
q Mat. 20. 20—28. & 4. 21. ch. 1. 19. & 5. 37. & 9. 2.
r 1 Kin. 2. 16. Rom. 8. 26. Jam. 4. 3. Jer. 45. 5. They asked by, or along with, their mother. s Be thy chief ministers of state. 1 Kin. 2. 19. & 22. 19. Ps. 45. 9. & 110. 1. Mat. 16. 27. & 19. 28.
t Rom. 8. 26. Jam. 4. 3.
u John 18. 11. Ps. 75. 8. Luke 12. 50. & 22. 42. ch. 14. 36. Mat. xxvi, xxvii. Ps. xxii, lxix.
x John 11. 16. ch. 11. 31.
y John 16. 33. Mat. 10. 17—31. & 24. 9. Col. 1. 24. Acts iv—xii. Rev. 1. 9.
z Is. 52. 13. & 49. 3. John 17. 2, 6, 24. Mat. 25. 34. Rom. 8. 30, 33. 1 Pet. 1. 3, 4. a Luke 22. 24. Mat. 20. 24. Prov. 13. 10. Jam. 4. 1. Job 5. 2.
b Luke 22. 25. Mat. 20. 25.
* Or think good.
c Mat. 20. 26, 27. & 18. 3, 4. & 23. 8—13. Luke 22. 26, 27. & 14. 11. & 18. 14. John 13. 12—17. 1 Cor. 9. 19—23. Jam. 4. 6, 10. 1 Pet. 5. 5, 6. d Mat. 11. 29. & 26. 28. Phil. 2. 5—8. Heb. 5. 8. 1 Tim. 2. 4—6. Tit. 2. 14. Gal. 3. 13. 2 Cor. 5. 21. Dan. 9. 24, 26. see Mat. 20. 28. Is. 53. 10. 1 Pet. 1. 19.

Verses 32—45. The nearer Christ drew to the scene of his sufferings, the plainer he warns his disciples of them, that they might be the less surprised at them when they came.

1. He here appears eagerly hastening to face his enemies; whilst his disciples, considering what he had suggested would happen to him at Jerusalem, were amazed at his resolution, and followed him trembling, apprehensive, probably, lest they might be involved in his troubles. To prepare them for this distressing event, Christ again called them, and told them distinctly all that would befall him; that when it came to pass, they might remember that he suffered nothing of which he was not apprized, and to which he did not voluntarily submit: adding, after all his indignities and death, that he should rise again; and that, if they had understood it, would have been a sufficient support against all their fears.

2. He rebukes the pride and ambition of his disciples, which all these warnings could not cure. Two of them wanted to be prime ministers in his kingdom; and, through their mother, wished to have a general promise granted them of bestowing on them a request they were about to make, which proved to be no less than securing the two most honourable places next the throne, when Christ should, as they expected, set up his earthly reign. But, as they mistook the nature of the Messiah's kingdom, which called them to suffer, not to bear rule, so also was their desire impossible to be granted; it being unalterably fixed by the eternal decree of God on whom the honours of glory should be bestowed. The ten, as culpable as the two petitioners, and equally ambitious of the places they sought, were exceedingly displeased at their affecting this precedency, to which they thought themselves equally entitled. But Jesus, to silence both parties, lets them know, that the kingdom he was about to erect, was not to be governed as earthly monarchies, where the rulers exercised despotic sway: but, on the contrary, he would be the greatest in the Messiah's kingdom, who was in his own eyes most abased, and most ready in every work and labour of love to serve the meanest disciple; for herein he nearest resembled his Master, who came with deepest humility as a servant, and was to die upon a cross as a slave, paying down the ransom for the sins of many, whom he intended to bring in this way unto glory.

46. ¶ [e] And they came to Jericho: and as he went out of Jericho with his disciples, and a great number of people, blind Bartimeus, the son of Timeus, sat by the highway-side begging. 47. And when he heard that it was [f] Jesus of Nazareth, he began to cry out, and say, Jesus, thou [g] son of David, have mercy on me. 48. And [h] many charged him that he should hold his peace: but he cried the more a great deal, Thou son of David, have mercy on me. 49. [i] And Jesus stood still, and commanded him to be called. And they call the blind man, saying unto him, [k] Be of good comfort; rise, he calleth thee. 50. [l] And he, casting away his garment, rose, and came to Jesus. 51. And Jesus answered and said unto him, [m] What wilt thou that I should do unto thee? The blind man said unto him, [n] Lord, that I might receive my sight. 52. And Jesus said unto him, [o] Go thy way; thy faith hath† made thee whole. [p] And immediately he received his sight, and followed Jesus in the way.

e Mat. 20. 29—34. Luke 18. 35—43. with Is. 59. 10.
f Mat. 1. 21. & 2. 23. Luke 4. 16. John 1. 45, 49.
g Is. 11. 1. Jer. 23. 5, 6. Mat. 1. 1, & 9. 27. & 12. 23. & 15. 22. & 22. 42, 45. Rom. 1. 3, 4. Rev. 22. 16. h Mat. 20. 31. & 19. 13. & 15. 23. Luke 18. 1.
i Heb. 4. 15. & 2. 17. Ps. 145. 8. & 86. 15. & 103. 10—14.
k John 11. 28. Is. 45. 22.
l Eccl. 9. 10. Phil. 3. 7—9. Song 1. 4. Ps. 84. 2. & 42. 1, 2. m Ver. 36. Mat. 7. 7, 8. with Is. 35. 5.
n Or. Rabboni. John 20. 16.
o Mat. 8. 13. & 15. 28. & 9. 22. Luke 7. 50. ch. 5. 34.
† Or saved thee.
p Gen. 1. 3. Ps. 33. 9. Is. 35. 5. & 42. 18. Mat. 11. 5. & 9. 29. & 12. 22. ch. 8. 25.

Verses 46—52. In Matthew we were told of two blind men, here but of one; perhaps he was the most remarkable, as the son of Timeus. He sat begging by the way-side; and no sooner heard of Jesus passing by, than crying incessantly, he would not be silenced till Jesus stood and called him; when, eager to be led to him, he threw off his upper garment, and, coming before the Saviour, presented his request and received his cure. In him we see, (1.) An emblem of the sinner's misery; poor, blind, and destitute. And a happy thing it is when, brought to a sense of this misery, he is found at the way-side of ordinances, crying after Jesus. (2.) The blind and lame are amongst the truest objects of charity, and to their cries we must never be deaf. (3.) The calls of Jesus are our encouragement to come to him: and they are so general, free, and full, that, whenever a poor, guilty, corrupted creature feels his wants, we may safely say to such a one, He calleth thee. (4.) When we are coming to Christ, whatever would prove a hinderance, like this garment, should be cast off, particularly that robe of self-righteousness and self-sufficiency which sticks so close to us. (5.) None truly cry to him, and go away without relief. If we have faith in his power and love, we shall assuredly see the salvation of God. (6.) When Christ enlightens the eyes of our minds, it is in order that we should henceforth keep him ever in view, and follow him in all his holy ways.

CHAP. XI.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

We have here, 1. Christ's riding in triumph into Jerusalem, ver. 1—11. 2. His cursing the barren fig-tree, ver. 12, 13, 14. 3. His driving those out of the temple that turned it into an exchange, ver. 15—19. 4. His discourse with his disciples concerning the power of faith and efficacy of prayer, on occasion of the withering of the fig-tree he cursed, ver. 20—26. 5. His reply to those who questioned his authority, ver. 27—33.

a Mat. 21. 1—11. Luke 19. 29—40. John 12. 12—16.

1. AND [a] when they came nigh to Jerusalem, unto Bethphage and Bethany,* at [b] the mount of Olives, he sendeth forth two of his disciples, 2. And saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you: and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat; loose him, and bring him. 3. And if any man say unto you, Why do ye this? say ye that [c] the Lord [d] hath need of him; and straightway he will send him hither. 4. And they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door without, in a place where two ways met; and they loose him. 5. And certain of them that stood there said unto them, What do ye, loosing the colt? 6. And they said unto them even as Jesus had commanded: and they let them go. 7. And they brought the colt to Jesus, [e] and cast their garments on him: and he sat upon him. 8. And many spread their garments in the way: and others cut down branches off the trees, and strawed them in the way. 9. And they that went before, and they that followed, [f] cried, saying, Hosanna; blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: 10. Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest. 11. And [g] Jesus entered into Jerusalem, and into the temple: and when he had looked round about upon all things, and now the even tide was come, he went out unto Bethany with the twelve.

* A village at the foot of mount Olivet, on the west side, about two miles east of Jerusalem, where the ascension of Christ is said to have taken place. The name of Bethany was sometimes extended to the whole tract from the village itself to Bethphage.

b 2 Sam. 15. 30. 1 Kin. 11. 7. 2 Kin. 23. 13. Luke 22. 39. Acts 1. 12. Zech. 14. 4. ch. 13. 3.

c Ps. 24. 1. & 50. 10, 11. Acts 10. 36. Heb. 1. 2.

d 2 Cor. 8. 9. Zech. 9. 9.

e 2 Kin. 9. 13. John 12. 12—14. & 1. 14. Lev. 23. 40.

f Ps. 118. 24—26. Mat. 21. 9. & 23. 39. John 12. 13. Luke 19. 37, 38. & 2. 14. & 1. 32. Ps. 72. 17—19. Is. 9. 6, 7. & 11. 2—4. & 52. 13. & 53. 12.

g Mat. 21. 10—17. Luke 19. 45.

Verses 1—11. The last week of the life of Jesus now is come, and we see him here entering Jerusalem in triumph, so little terrified with the fears of his enemies, or cast down by the sufferings he was about to undergo.

1. He enters Jerusalem amidst the hosannas of the people. He ordered his disciples, when he drew near the city, to bring an ass' colt from the opposite village, directing them to the spot, and delivering a message from him, if any questioned them for what they did. Accordingly they went as Jesus had commanded them; and, when the owners of the colt demanded why they loosed him, they told them the Lord hath need of him; and they contentedly let him go. Seated on this mean animal did Jesus enter the city, whilst, to express their gladness, his poor followers spread their garments in the way, and cut down branches from the trees as at the feast of tabernacles, surrounding him with hosannas, wishing prosperity to the long expected Messiah, now bringing salvation to his people: praying that his reign may be long, and happy who comes to sit on his father David's throne, invested with divine authority; calling on the angels to join their praises, and begging God to pour down the best of blessings on the Messiah and his people.

2. He went directly to the temple: that was his palace: he aimed not at a temporal but spiritual dominion. After looking round him to observe what was done there, and spy out the abuses which called for his correction, and, as appears, from Matt. xxi. 12, 13. casting out those who trafficked there, he retired in the evening to Bethany with the twelve, the place he chose for his abode. Note, The eye of Jesus is upon his temple, to see what the priests do there; it is upon the living temple of his people's heart, observing every rising thought of evil. How watchful then need we be!

12. ¶ [h] And on the morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry: 13. [i] And, seeing a fig-tree afar off having leaves, he came, if haply he might find any thing thereon: and when he came to it, he found nothing but leaves: for the time of the figs was not yet. 14. And Jesus answered and said unto it, No man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever. And his disciples heard it. 15. ¶ [k] And they come to Jerusalem: and Jesus went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money changers, and the seats of them that sold doves; 16. And would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple. 17. And he taught, saying unto them, Is it not written, [l] My house shall be called of all nations, The house of prayer?† but ye have made it a den of h Mat. 21. 18.

i Mat. 21. 19. Luke 13. 6—9. & 19. 42—44. Phil. 3. 18, 19. 2 Tim. 3. 5. Tit. 1. 16. Heb. 6. 4—8. & 10. 26—31. 2 Pet. 2. 20—22. Mat. 12. 43—45. & 21. 40—44. Rev. 3. 1.

k Mat. 21. 12—16. Luke 19. 45—48. John 2. 12—16. Deut. 14. 25, 26.

l Is. 56. 7. & 60. 7. Zech. 2. 11. & 8. 20—23. with Jer. 7. 11. Hos. 12. 7. Luke 19. 46. Mat. 21. 13.

† There is a reverence due to God's house for the owner's sake, for the service' sake: secular and profane actions are not fit for that sacred roof. What but holiness can become that place which is the beauty of holiness?—Hall.

thieves. 18. [m] And the scribes and chief priests heard it, and sought how they might destroy him: for they feared him, because all the people were astonished at his doctrine. 19. [n] And when even was come, he went out of the city. 20. ¶ [o] And in the morning, as they passed by, they saw the fig-tree dried up from the roots. 21. And Peter, calling to remembrance, saith unto him, Master, behold, the fig-tree which thou cursedst is withered away. 22. And Jesus, answering, saith unto them, [p] Have faith in God. 23. [q] For verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass, he shall have whatsoever he saith. 24. Therefore I say unto you, [r] What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them. 25. [s] And when ye stand * praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any: that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses. 26. But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses.

m Mat. 21. 15. Luke 19. 47, 48. John 12. 19. Acts 4. 2. & 13. 45. Is. 26. 11. Ecc. 4. 4. Job 5. 2. ch. 1. 22. & 6. 2.

n Ver. 11. ch. 13. 1. John 12. 36. Luke 21. 37.

o Mat. 21. 19, 20. & 24. 42, 44, 50. & 25. 6, 13. Job xviii, xx. Is. 30. 13, 14. Heb. 6. 8. & 10. 26, 27.

p Or have the faith of God. 2 Chr. 20. 20. Is. 7. 9. Prov. 3. 5. Ps. 62. 8. ch. 5. 36. & 9. 23.

q Mat. 17. 20. & 21. 21. Luke 17. 6. Jam. 1. 5, 6. Rom. 14. 19, 20. 1 Cor. 13. 2.

r Mat. 7. 7, 11. & 18. 19. & 21. 22. Luke 11. 9. John 14. 13. & 15. 7. & 16. 24. Jam 5. 16—18. 1 John 3. 22. & 5. 14. Is. 45. 11. Gen. 32. 26. Ps. 118. 5. & 123. 2. 2 Cor. 12. 8. Heb. 4. 16.

s Mat. 6. 14. & 18. 23—35. Eph. 4. 32. Col. 3. 13. Mat. 7. 1, 2. Jam. 2. 13.

* Standing seems to have been a frequent posture in praying among the Jews.

Verses 12—26. We have here,

1. The cursing of the barren fig-tree, the type of the destruction of the Jewish nation. Our Lord, on his return from Bethany to the temple in the morning, being hungry, seeing a very flourishing fig-tree, came, expecting to find some figs thereon; for the time of figs was not yet, or, it was not a season of figs, it was a bad year: but that tree promised better than others: or the time of figs, when they should be gathered in was not yet, and therefore he might expect fruit on the tree; but, finding none, he cursed the tree in the hearing of his disciples who took particular notice of it. Note, The curses of the Lord are fearful, and never fall in vain.

2. He purges the temple of the buyers and sellers, who had made that sacred place a house of merchandise. It appears from Matt. xxi. 12. he had done the same the preceding day; but probably supported and encouraged by the priests the traders had returned to their former traffic the next day, and were thus again expelled. And, to vindicate his procedure, he quoted the words of the prophet, Isa. lvi. 6, 7. where God, speaking of the sons of the stranger, the proselytes, undertakes to welcome them to his house, which should be a house of prayer to all nations. But the court, which was appropriated to the service of the Gentiles, they had profaned by turning it into a market, and made it by their knavery and extortion a den of thieves.

3. The priests and scribes, incensed at what they saw and heard, especially those severe rebukes, which reflected so deeply on their characters, were bitterly exasperated; and being determined to murder him, sought only how they might do it without exposing themselves to the fury of the populace; for they were afraid openly to use violence, the people in general expressing such a veneration for Christ's person, and such respect and reverence for his doctrine. Note, Envy and malice naturally lead to murder, and it is only the fear of men that in a multitude of instances deters the wicked from the very act.

4. In the evening they returned to Bethany, and next morning, in their way to the city, the disciples took notice with surprise of the withering of the fig-tree; and Peter, pointing to the tree, observed to his Master how it was withered away in consequence of the curse he had pronounced upon it. And from thence Christ took occasion to encourage them confidently to exercise faith in God at all times; and especially in the exertion of the miraculous powers with which he had furnished them, they should find nothing impossible, not even to remove the mountain on which they stood, and cast it into the sea, if they had an unshaken trust in the divine power and promises, and looked up to God, nothing doubting; for whatever they should ask in prayer, which should be for his glory to give, and they were warranted from his word to expect, should certainly be given them. And on this occasion, as what would be essential to their obtaining an answer to their prayers, he inculcates fervent charity and mutual forgiveness: when they stood praying for forgiveness they must be ready to grant that pardon to others which they themselves sought at God's hand. But if, under the spirit of uncharitableness, they refused to forgive their brother his trespasses, their prayers would be in vain, and they may never hope for the pardon themselves sought at the hands of their heavenly Father. Note, (1.) Faith is the conquering grace that overcomes the world, and bears down all obstacles before it. If at any time we are terrified by guilt, or enslaved by corruption, it is through our want of faith in God. (2.) Nothing can be a more powerful argument to engage our charity and forgiveness towards others than what arises from our own prayers.

27. ¶ [t] And they come again to Jerusalem: and, as he was walking [u] in the temple, there come to him [x] the chief priests and the scribes, and the elders, 28. And say unto him, [y] By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority to do these things? 29. And [z] Jesus answered and said unto them, I will also ask of you one † question, and answer me, and I will tell you by what authority I do these things. 30. [a] The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men? answer me. 31. And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven, he will say, Why then did ye not [b] believe him? 32. [c] But if we shall say, Of men, they feared the people: for all men counted John that he was a prophet indeed. 33. And they answered and said unto Jesus, [d] We cannot tell. And Jesus answering saith unto them, [e] Neither do I tell you by what authority I do these things.

t Mat. 21. 23—32. Luke 20. 1—8.

u Mal. 3. 1. Hag. 2. 7, 9.

x Ps. 2. 1—5. & 22. 12, 16. Is. 53. 3. Acts 4. 27, 28.

y Exod. 2. 14. Acts 7. 27. & 4. 7. Mat. 7. 29.

z Is. 52. 13. Amos 5. 13. Mat. 10. 16. Eph. 5. 15. John 5. 13.

† Or thing.

a Ch. 1. 1—11. Mat. iii. Luke i, iii. John 1. 6—36. & 3. 22, 36. & 5. 32—36. Luke 7. 29, 30. ch. 9. 13.

b John 1. 26, 29—36. & 3. 28—36. & 5. 32, 33.

c Mat. 3. 5. & 11. 9. & 14. 5. John 1. 25. & 5. 35. ch. 6. 20. Luke 7. 26—30.

d Rom. 1. 18, 21, 22, 28. 2 Cor. 2. 15. & 4. 3, 4. 2 Thes. 2. 9, 10. Is. 6. 9, 10.

e Prov. 26. 4. Job 5. 13.

Verses 27—33. Vexed at the heart to behold the respect paid to Jesus, and impatient to revenge his rebukes, which they construed into reproaches, we have here,

1. The demand of the high priest and elders challenging Christ to produce his authority for what he had said and done the preceding days, as if he had been lord and master of the temple.

2. He answers their question by another. By what authority did John preach and baptize? give me a direct reply? The answer was easy, but the difficulties in which on either side it involved them were great. They saw that to confess his mission divine, was to own all that Jesus claimed, John having borne testimony to him; to deny that the Baptist was sent of God, and to brand him as a pretender and impostor, would instantly enrage the people to rise up, perhaps, and stone them, all men in general being persuaded of John's prophetic character: therefore, after reasoning on the matter, they are forced to conceal under a lie a truth they dared not own, and to pretend ignorance of what they knew, as the only way to evade the answer Christ demanded of them. He therefore was fully justified in refusing them farther information, when it evidently appeared they sought not conviction of the truth, but merely his destruction. Note, (1.) It is a mercy to be able to put to silence the ignorance of foolish men, and at least to confound those who refuse to be convinced. (2.) They who wilfully choose to be ignorant are justly abandoned to judicial blindness.

CHAP. XII.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

In this chapter we have, 1. The parable of the vineyard let out to unthankful husbandmen, representing the sin and ruin of the Jewish church, ver. 1—12. 2. Christ's silencing those who thought to insnare him with a question about paying tribute to Cesar, ver. 13—17. 3. His silencing the Sadducees, who attempted to perplex the doctrine of the resurrection, ver. 18—27. 4. His conference with a scribe about the first and great command of the law, ver. 28—34. 5. His puzzling the scribes with a question about Christ's being the Son of David, ver. 35, 36, 37. 6. The caution he gave the people to take heed of the scribes, ver. 38, 39, 40. 7. His commendation of the poor widow that cast her two mites into the treasury, ver. 41—44.

1. AND [a] he began to speak unto them by parables. A certain man planted a vineyard, and set an hedge about it, and digged a place for the wine-fat, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country. 2. And [b] at the season he sent to the husbandmen [c] a servant, that he might receive from the husbandmen of the fruit of the vineyard. 3. [d] And they caught him, and beat him, and sent him away empty. 4. And again he sent unto them another servant; and at him they cast stones, and wounded him in the head, and sent him away shamefully handled. 5. And again he sent another; and him they killed, and many others; beating some, and killing some. 6. [e] Having yet therefore one son, his well-beloved, he sent him also last unto them, saying, They will reverence my son. 7. [f] But those husbandmen said among themselves, This is the [g] heir; come, let us kill him, and the inheritance shall be ours. 8. And they took him, and killed him, and cast him out of the vineyard. 9. What shall therefore the lord of the vineyard do? [h] he will come and destroy the husbandmen, and will give the vineyard unto others. 10. And have ye not read this scripture; [i] The stone which the builders rejected is become the head of the corner: 11. This was the Lord's doing, and [k] it is marvellous in our eyes? 12. And they sought to lay hold on him, but [l] feared the people: for they knew that he had spoken the parable against them: and they left him, and went their way.

a Mat. 21. 33—46. Luke 20. 9—19. Is. 5. 1—4. Jer. 2. 21. Ps. 80. 8—15. Song 8. 11, 12. Exod. xxxv—xl. Lev. i—xxv. 1 Kin. vi—viii. Num. iii, iv, viii. Deut. i. 15. & 16. 18. 1 Chr. xxii—xxvii.

b Ps. 1. 3. Song 8. 11, 12.

c 2 Kin. 17. 13. 2 Chr. 36. 15. Jer. 44. 4. Zech. 7. 7. Neh. 9. 29. Heb. 1. 1.

d 1 Kin. 22. 24. 2 Chr. 16. 10. & 23. 19, 21. & 36. 16. Jer. xx, xxvi, xxxvii, xxxviii. 1 Thes. 2. 15. Mat. 23. 34—37. Acts 7. 52, 59. Heb. 11. 36.

e John 3. 16. Rom. 8. 3. Gal. 4. 4. John 1. 14. Luke i, ii, iv, &c. Mat. i—xxv. ch. i—xiii. John i—xvi.

f Acts 2. 23, 36. & 3. 15. 1 Cor. 2. 8. 1 Thes. 2. 15. Ps. 22. 6—21. & 69. 1—21. Mat. 2. 3—20. & 12. 14. & 21. 46. & xxvi, xxvii. ch. 3. 6. & xiv, xv. Luke 4. 28, 29. & 11. 53, 54. & xxii, xxiii. John v, vi—xii, xviii, xix. Heb. 13. 12.

g Heb. 1. 2. Ps. 82. 8. & 2. 8, 9, 12.

h Mat. 21. 41, 43, 44. & 8. 11, 12. & 12. 43—45. & 23. 35—38. & 22. 7. & 3. 12. & 24. 2—34. ch. xiii. Luke 19. 27, 42—44. & 20. 15, 16. & 17. 22—37. & 21. 6—33. John 9. 39—41. Prov. 1. 21—32. Acts 28. 23—28. Lev. xxvi. Deut. 4. 26, 27. & xxviii—xxxii. Rom. xi. Acts 13. 46, 47.

i Ps. 118. 22. Acts 4. 11, 12. Rom. 9. 33. 1 Pet. 2. 7, 8. Is. 28. 16. Eph. 2. 14—22. & 1. 19—23. Phil. 2. 6—11. Mat. 16. 18.

k 1 Tim. 3. 16. Rom. 16. 26, 27. Col. 1. 25—27. Eph. 3. 3—9. 1 Cor. 2. 7.

l Ch. 11. 18, 32. Mat. 21. 26, 46. Luke 20. 6, 19. John 7. 19.

Verses 1—12. Since they had thus wickedly rejected their Messiah, he here in parables sets forth before them the guilt and ruin coming upon them in consequence thereof. The parable of the vineyard we had before, Matt. xxi. 33. The scope and design of it is to upbraid them with their continual rejection and persecution of God's prophets from the days of their forefathers to that hour, the measure of whose guilt they were now about to fill up in the murder of the Son of God, and thus they would bring down the temporal and eternal wrath of God, upon their devoted heads; who, instead of the Jewish people, would admit the Gentiles in their stead, and, in spite of all their envy and enmity, erect his glorious church on that one foundation and chief corner-stone the Messiah, whom they rejected, and hereby make his marvellous power and grace evident to all. The parable was too plain for them to mistake the meaning, the chief priests and elders perceived it was levelled at them; and enraged beyond measure at such boldness, though they dared not apprehend him publicly, they consulted how they could privately get him into their power and cut him off. Note, (1.) God expects from those who are placed in his vineyard the church, that they should render him that tribute of love and duty for which they stand so highly indebted. (2.) In all ages the true ministers of Christ have met with the cruelest usage, and usually their bitterest persecutors have been those who have pretended a divine commission, and to be labourers in God's vineyard. (3.) God will have a church and people in the world, whatever opposition may be formed against them. (4.) It is a truly marvellous thing in the eyes of a gracious soul, when he observes the operations of divine grace in himself, and how the Lord sets up his kingdom within him, in spite of all the opposition from Satan and indwelling sin. (5.) They who refuse to be convinced by the truth of God's word are generally exasperated both against the minister and his message; and thus what was sent as a savour of life unto life, to them becomes a savour of death unto death.

13. ¶ [m] And they send unto him certain of the Pharisees and of the [n] Herodians, to catch him in his words. 14. And when they were come, they say unto him, [o] Master, we know that thou art true, and carest for no man: for thou regardest not the person of men, but teachest the way of God in truth: [p] Is it lawful to give tribute to * Cesar, or not? 15. Shall we give, or shall we not give? But he knowing their hypocrisy, said

m Mat. 22. 15—22. Luke 20. 20—26. & 11. 53, 54. Ps. 2. 2. Jer. 18. 18. Eccl. 4. 4. Job 5. 2. Is. 29. 21.

n Ch. 8. 15. Mat. 16. 6.

o Ch. 14. 45. Ps. 12. 2. & 55. 21. with 2 Cor. 2. 17. 1 Thes. 2. 4. Gal. 1. 10. Acts 10. 34, 35.

p Ezra 4. 13. Acts 5. 37. Mat. 17. 25. Jer. 42. 2, 3. 20.

* i. e. the Roman emperor.

unto them, [q] Why tempt ye me? bring me a [r] penny, that I may see it. 16. And they brought it. And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription? And they said unto him, Cesar's. 17. And Jesus answering, said unto them, [s] Render to Cesar the things that are Cesar's, and to God the things that are God's. [t] And they marvelled at him.

q Ch. 3. 2. & 8. 11. Luke 11. 16, 53, 54.

r Seven pence half-peuny; as Mat. 28. 28. & 20. 2.

s Mat. 17. 25. & 22. 21. Luke 20. 25. Rom. 13. 7. Prov. 24. 21. 1 Pet. 2. 17.

t 1 Cor. 14. 19, 20. Job 5. 12, 13. Mat. 22. 22, 33, 46. Luke 20. 26.

Verses 13—17. We have here a new attempt made by the Pharisees and Herodians, bitter enemies to each other, but close leagued against Christ. They wanted to catch up something which might serve to accuse him, and they thought they had a question which would not fail either to render him obnoxious to the civil powers, or to blast his reputation with the people, should he enforce subjection to the Roman yoke, which they so abhorred. Pretending therefore great respect to Christ, as a person of unspotted integrity, and above the fear of men, they bring to him a case of conscience, as if they wished to be guided by his superior judgment. The question was whether it was lawful to pay tribute to Cesar or not? He saw their hypocrisy, and confounds their devices; bidding them produce the tribute-money, and tell him whose image or superscription it bore. On their saying, Cesar's, he then bid them render to Cesar his own. By admitting the currency of his coin, they owned their subjection to him, and were bound to pay the tribute required in return for the protection they enjoyed: whilst God's right over them remained unalienably the same: in all religious concerns he was alone the Lord of their conscience, and to all his commands unreserved submission must be paid: an answer so wise, so convincing and unexceptionable, as even astonished his very enemies. Note, (1.) The sects most bitter against each other will readily unite to oppose the power of true Christianity. (2.) The professions of false friends are usually most specious, when their designs are most malignant. (3.) It is a dangerous thing for ministers to interfere about civil rights; their business is to teach subjection to the powers that are. (4.) Hypocrisy, however artful the veil, cannot be concealed from the knowledge of him who trieth the reins and the heart.

18. ¶ [u] Then came unto him the Sadducees, which say there is no resurrection;* and they asked him, saying, 19. Master, Moses wrote unto us, [x] If a man's brother die, and leave his wife behind him, and leave no children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother. 20. Now there were seven brethren: and the first took a wife, and, dying, left no seed. 21. And the second took her, and died; neither left he any seed: and the third likewise. 22. And the seven had her, and left no seed: last of all the woman died also. 23. In the resurrection therefore, when they shall rise, whose wife shall she be of them? for the seven had her to wife. 24. And Jesus answering, said unto them, Do ye not therefore err, because [y] ye know not the [z] scriptures, neither [a] the power of God? 25. For, when they shall rise from the dead, they neither marry, nor are given in marriage; but are [b] as the angels which are in heaven. 26. And as touching the dead, that they rise; have ye not read in the book of Moses, [c] how in the bush God spake unto him, saying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? 27. He is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living: ye therefore do greatly err.

u Mat. 22. 23—33. Luke 20. 27—39. Acts 23. 8. 1 Cor. 15. 12. 2 Tim. 2. 17.

* The object of the Sadducees here is to show the absurdity and the falsehood of these doctrines of a resurrection and a future state, by stating a difficulty respecting them which they conceive to be insuperable. —Porteus.

x Gen. 38. 8. Deut. 25. 5, 6.

y Is. 8. 20. & 27. 11. & 28. 9, 10. Hos. 4. 6. & 8. 12. John 20. 9, 31. Rom. 15. 4. 2 Tim. 3. 15—17. John 5. 39. Acts 17. 11.

z Job 19. 25. Ezek. 37. 5—10. Dan. 12. 2.

a Gen. 17. 1. & 18. 14. Jer. 32. 17. ch. 10. 27. Luke 1. 37. Eph. 1. 19. 20. Phil. 3. 21.

b Mat. 22. 30. Luke 20. 36. 1 Cor. 15. 42, 44, 49, 52. & 7. 29, 30. 1 John 3. 2.

c Exod. 3. 6, 16. Acts 7. 32. Gen. 17. 7. & 28. 21. & 32. 9. Lev. 26. 12. Heb. 11. 16. with Rom. 4. 17. John 5. 21.

Verses 18—27. The Sadducees, the freethinkers and reasoners of the age, came next, fraught with wisdom and sophistry, and thought that, though others had been unequal to the task, they were able to propose a question which the wisdom of Jesus would find it hard to answer. But they were deceived to their cost, their ignorance exposed, their errors detected, and that resurrection they denied proved by the clearest evidence of Moses, whose authority they admitted: see Mat. xxii. 23. Note, (1.) Many infidels pretend a reverence for the Scriptures, in order the more artfully to introduce their suggestions, to shake our faith and destroy their credit. (2.) It is impossible but they should err, not knowing the Scripture, who, instead of submitting their fallen reason to God's word, insist that even the doctrines of revelation shall be first cited to this fallacious tribunal, and be admitted only so far as they are pleased to stamp them as rational; but if found incomprehensible, they reject them as absurd.

28. ¶ [d] And one of the scribes† came, and having heard them reasoning together, and perceiving that he had answered them well, asked him, Which is the first commandment of all? 29. And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, [e] Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord: 30. And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. This is the first commandment. 31. And the second is like, namely this, [f] Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these. 32. And the scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth: for [g] there is one God; and there is none other but he: 33. And to love him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbour as himself, [h] is more than all whole burnt-offerings and sacrifices. 34. And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, he said unto him, [i] Thou art not far from the kingdom of God. [k] And no man after that durst ask him any question.

d Mat. 22. 35—40. Luke 10. 25—28.

† The office of the scribes consisted of two parts, the interpreting of the law in the synagogues, and the explaining of the traditions.—Whitby.

e Deut. 6. 4, 5. & 10. 12. & 31. 6. Prov. 23. 26. Mat. 22. 37. Luke 10. 27. 1 Cor. xiii. 1 Tim. 1. 5.

f Lev. 19. 18. Rom. 13. 9. Gal. 5. 14. 1 Tim. 1. 5. Jam. 2. 8. 1 John 3. 18. 1 Cor. xiii. Mat. 7. 12. & 39. Luke 10. 27, 36. 37.

g Deut. 6. 4. & 5. 7. & 4. 30. Is. 45. 6, 14, 22. & 46. 9. 1 Cor. 8. 4—6.

h 1 Sam. 15. 22. Is. 1. 11—17. & 58. 5—7. & 66. 3. Jer. 6. 20. & 7. 22, 23. Hos. 6. 6. Amos 5. 21—24. Mic. 6. 6—8.

i Acts 26. 23. ch. 16. & 1. 14, 15.

k Mat. 22. 46. Luke 14. 6. & 20. 40.

Verses 28—34. Struck with the force of our Lord's reasoning, one of the scribes, who were of the sect of the Pharisees, acknowledged he had answered well; yet, willing to try his judgment farther, he proposes,

1. An important question for his solution; which is the first commandment of all; the greatest, most necessary to be observed, and most influential over the whole tenor of our conduct.

2. Christ fully answers him. The first and great commandment is the love of God. He, who is God, alone demands and deserves the whole heart and mind, and soul and strength: and in this one word is comprehended the principle of all holy obedience, and that which necessarily engages in his worship and service the whole body, soul, and spirit; and without this love nothing acceptable to him can be performed. The second commandment is of a like comprehensive nature, enjoining us, to love our neighbour as ourselves, fervently and unfeignedly, behaving towards him with such justice and mercy as we, if our circumstances were reversed, might justly desire and expect from him. These two comprehend every supposable duty towards God and man; and there can be no greater commandment, since in these the whole law is fulfilled.

3. The scribe confesses the justness of our Lord's answer, convinced of its admirable propriety and wisdom; and adds his testimony to the truth of his observations, that there is one only living and true God, and that to love, worship, and serve him with the most active powers of our souls, and to exercise this divine charity to our neighbour, is in God's account far more acceptable than the most expensive services, or all the ritual observances.

4. Christ approves the judicious remarks he made: he showed himself a man of understanding, unbiassed by the generally received traditions; and, as his mind appeared ingenuous and open to conviction, he was not far from the kingdom of God. In such a spirit, if he had examined the prophets, and weighed under the divine benediction the evidence of Christ's mission and miracles, he would be led into the truth, and become a member of the Messiah's kingdom.

5. From that time all the captious cavillers were silenced. Such consummate wisdom appeared in him, that none durst any more encounter him. Note, (1.) They who improve the light God hath given them, will receive an increase of it, and be led into all truth. (2.) Many a man goes to the borders of the truth, not far from the kingdom of God, and yet never enters into it; almost but not altogether a Christian.

l Mat. 22. 41—45. Luke 20. 41—44.

35. ¶ [l] And Jesus answered and said, while he taught in the temple, How say the scribes that Christ is the son of m 2 Sam. 23. 2. 2 Tim. 3. 16. 2 Pet. 1. 21. Ps. 110. 1. Acts 1. 16. & 2. 30, 34. 1 Cor. 15. 25. Heb. 1. 3, 13. & 4. 14. & 8. 1. & 10. 13.

David? 36. For David himself said [m] by the Holy Ghost, The Lord said to my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool. 37. David therefore himself calleth him Lord; and [n] whence is he then his son? And the common people heard him gladly. 38. ¶ And he said unto them in his doctrine, [o] Beware of the scribes, which love to go in long clothing, and love salutations in the market-places, 39. And the chief seats in the synagogues, and the uppermost rooms at feasts: 40. [p] Which devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayers: [q] these shall receive greater damnation.

n Rom. 1. 3, 4. & 9. 5. Mat. 1. 1. & 15. 22. Rev. 22. 16.

o Mat. 23. 5—7. Luke 11. 43. & 20. 45—47. & 14. 7. 3 John 9.

p Mat. 23. 14. Luke 20. 47. Ezek. 20. 25. Mic. 3. 11. 2 Tim. 3. 5, 6. Tit. 1. 11. Mat. 6. 5, 7.

q Mat. 11. 22, 24. Luke 12. 47, 48.

Verses 35—40. They had frequently endeavoured to puzzle him with questions captious and difficult. Our Lord now poses them with a question, which, as expositors of the Scripture, the scribes should have thoroughly understood.

1. The question was, How the Messiah, whom they all admitted to be David's son, could at the same time be David's Lord, as he expressly calls him, Psal. cx. 1. This was a mystery to the scribes; not understanding the twofold nature of the Messiah as God and man, they could not answer the question. Hereupon the common people, convinced how far Jesus in wisdom surpassed all the teachers, hearkened with delight to his divine discourses. Note, (1.) A babe in Christ understands more of the mysteries of godliness than the wisest unenlightened scribe. (2.) Popularity, and the approbation of the vulgar, is often cast as a reproach on the ministers of the gospel by those who envy them, as the scribes of old did their Master.

2. He takes occasion to caution the people from being deceived by the sanctified appearance of their false teachers, whilst in fact they were slaves to pride and worldly mindedness. They wore particular garments, long and trailing on the ground, or with fringes of extraordinary breadth, as a token of superior piety, and made long prayers that they might appear men of extraordinary devotion; but all they did was hypocritical and designing, in order to gain the seat of pre-eminence, and public salutations of high respect, and as a cloak under which to worm themselves into the confidence of widows, whom they plundered to enrich themselves: for which abominations they would bring down the heaviest wrath of God upon their souls. Note, (1.) Inordinate desire of human respect and honour is the sure symptom of a proud, worldly, and unmortified heart. (2.) Hypocrisy is among the most common and most crying sins. Beware of it.

41. ¶ [r] And Jesus sat over against the treasury, and beheld how the people cast [s] money into the treasury: and many that were rich cast in much. 42. And there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two † mites, which make a farthing. 43. And he called unto him his disciples, and saith unto them, [t] Verily I say unto you, That this poor widow hath cast more in than all they which have cast into the treasury. 44. For all they did cast in of their abundance; but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living.

r Luke 21. 1—4. 2 Kin. 12. 9.

s A piece of brass-money; see Mat. 10. 29.

† It is the seventh part of one piece of that brass-money. Two mites are not quite the fifth part of a farthing.

t 2 Cor. 8. 2, 12.

Verses 41—44. For the maintenance of the temple worship and sacrifices, there were coffers placed in the court for the reception of the free-will offerings of the people. Our Lord, being seated near the treasury, where these stood, observed the people who cast in their money. Many of the rich gave much, as became them; but, among the rest, a poor widow came and cast in two mites. Highly applauding the deed, our Lord pointed her out to his disciples, as having presented a richer and more acceptable offering than those who out of their abundance had given more liberally. They had enough left still to supply their wants; but she, out of love to the service, threw in her little all, trusting on divine providence for her future sustenance. Note, (1.) Almsgiving is a most needful duty; and our Lord expects, according to our abilities, that we should be ready to distribute, willing to communicate: but he looks not merely at the gift, but at the spirit and temper of the giver; for that alone stamps the offering with its value in his account. (2.) None can be supposed poorer than this widow; yet she gave. If we have but little, that must be no excuse; we must give our diligence to give of that little, and then it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not. (3.) A truly gracious and charitable soul will sometimes straiten himself to supply others' more urgent wants, willing not only to his power, but above his power, to assist them.

CHAP. XIII.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

Christ foretells the destruction of the city and temple; the figure of the day of final recompense; warning all men to watch, lest they be surprised unawares by judgments in this world, or the sudden appearing of the Son of man.

1. AND [a] as he went out of the temple, one of his disciples saith unto him, Master, see what manner of stones and what buildings are here! 2. And Jesus answering, said unto him, Seest thou these great buildings? [b] there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down. 3. ¶ And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, over against the temple, [c] Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, asked him [d] privately, 4. [e] Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign when all these things shall be fulfilled?

a Mat. 24. 1—3. Luke 21. 5—11. John 2. 20. Ezek. 7. 20. & 24. 21, 25.

b Luke 21. 6. & 19. 44. Jer. 5. 10. & 26. 18. Mic. 3. 12. 1 Kin. 9. 7. Ezek. 7. 20—22. & 24. 21, 25.

c Ch. 1. 16, 19. & 5. 37. & 9. 2. & 10. 35. & 14. 33.

d Mat. 13. 10, 36.

e Mat. 24. 3. Luke 21. 7. Dan. 12. 6, 8. John 21. 21. Acts 1. 6.

Verses 1—4. Departing now from the temple to return no more, one of his disciples, pleased with the beauty of that stupendous fabric, could not help observing to him, of what massy stones it was built, and how magnificently adorned. But Christ assures him, admirable as it appeared, and strong as it stood, the day was near when it should be so utterly rased from the foundations, that one stone should not be left upon another. Struck with so sad a prospect four of the disciples came privately to him, as he sat upon the mount of Olives, desiring to be informed when these awful predictions would come to pass, and what would be the signs of their approaching fulfilment.

5. And Jesus, answering them, began to say, [f] Take heed lest any man deceive you: 6. [g] For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many. 7. [h] And when ye shall hear of wars, and rumours of wars, be ye not troubled: for such things must needs be; but [i] the end shall not be yet. 8. [k] For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be earthquakes in divers places, and there shall be famines and troubles: these are the beginnings of [l] sorrows. 9. [m] But take heed to yourselves: for they shall deliver you up to councils; and in the synagogues ye shall be beaten: and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them. 10. [n] And the gospel must first be published among all nations. 11. [o] But when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, take no thought beforehand what ye shall speak, neither do ye premeditate: but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye: for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost. 12. [p] Now the brother shall betray the brother to death, and the father the son; and children shall rise up against their parents, and shall cause them to be put to death. 13. And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: [q] but he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

f Jer. 29. 8. Eph. 5. 6. Col. 2. 8. 2 Thes. 2. 3. 1 John 4. 1. & 3. 7. Gal. 6. 7. 1 Cor. 6. 9. & 15. 33.

g Jer. 14. 14. & 23. 21, 25. John 5. 43. ver. 22.

h Jer. 4. 19. & 5. 10, 11. & 51. 46. with Ps. 46. 2, 3. & 27. 1—3. & 112. 7. Is. 8. 12.

i Jer. 4. 27. & 5. 10, 18.

k Is. 19. 2. Hag. 2. 22. Zech. 14. 13. Heb. 12. 27. Dan. 2. 44. Acts 11. 28. Mat. 24. 8.

l Or the pains of a woman in travail. Is. 37. 3. & 66. 7, 8. Ps. 48. 6.

m Mat. 24. 9—14. Luke 21. 12—19. Mat. 10. 17—22. & 23. 34, 37. & 22. 6. & 13. 21. & 11. 6. John 15. 20. & 16. 2. Acts ii—xxvi. Rev. 2. 10. Phil. 1. 28. 2 Thes. 1. 5.

n Mat. 24. 14. & 26. 13. & 28. 18—20. ch. 16. 15. Rom. 1. 8. & 10. 18. & 15. 19. Col. 1. 6, 23. Acts ii—xix.

o Mat. 10. 19, 20. Exod. 4. 12. 2 Sam. 23. 2. Jer. 1. 6—9. Luke 12. 11, 12. & 21. 14, 15. Acts 2. 4, 17. & 4. 8, 31. & 6. 10, 15. Dan. 3. 16, 17.

p Mat. 10. 21. Ezek. 38. 21. Mic. 7. 4—6. John 15. 18—21. & 16. 1—3.

q Rev. 2. 7, 10. & 3. 10. Mat. 10. 22. & 24. 13. Heb. 3. 6, 14. & 10. 39. Gal. 6. 9. 2 Tim. 4. 7, 8. 1 Pet. 4. 16, 18. Dan. 12. 13.

Verses 5—13. In answering the question, their curiosity raised, Christ gives them some cautions for the direction of their conduct, it being infinitely more their concern to be always ready to meet the approaching calamities, than to know the precise time of their arrival.

1. He cautions them against the false Christs which should arise, and seduce many of the Jews, who were ready to run after every impostor, whilst they had rejected the true Messiah.

2. He warns them not to be discouraged with the wars and commotions, the famines, earthquakes, and pestilence, which would ravage the earth; these being but the beginning of sorrows, the end is not yet: and what is here spoken with an immediate reference to the Jewish state and nation, seems also to have a view to the like calamities which will be the signs and presages of the final dissolution of all things. But amidst the wreck of nature, and the flames of a dissolving world, the soul that is stayed upon Christ need not be troubled; his safety is secured by the everlasting promises of the unchanging Jehovah.

3. He bids them prepare for persecutions, and exhorts them to bear up courageously under them. Far from possessing that earthly greatness and respect with which they flattered themselves, they must expect the very reverse; they will be hated of all men for his sake: in enmity to Jesus and his gospel, the world in general would combine against them: yea, even their nearest relations would prove false and faithless, and become the bitterest enemies; and, breaking the strongest ties of nature, persecute them even to death. They would be dragged before the rulers, civil and ecclesiastical, and punished as heretical and seditious: yea, even before the heathen kings and magistrates they would be accused, and called to seal the testimony they bore, with their blood. But distressing as these things might appear, they have abundant reason to trust and not be afraid Jesus assures them he will stand by them. When called to answer before the tribunals of the Mightiest, they need not distress themselves about what they shall say: a divine revelation shall be given to them, and they shall be directed in the properest manner to reply to every charge; yea, their very trials before the kings and rulers shall prove a testimony against them; they will thereby have an opportunity of preaching the gospel to those who might never else have heard it. And whatever attempts are made to suppress and silence them, they shall prove abortive; Christ will cause his gospel to be preached and spread, in defiance of opposition, into all lands; and either shelter them from the malice of their persecutors, or reward their fidelity unto death with a crown of everlasting life and glory: considerations sufficient to make them welcome the cross, while such a crown was in view. Note, (1.) Sufferings for Christ stumble many; we need to take heed that we be not thereby offended.

(2.) The image of Jesus, as it must reprove the world, will ever procure the hatred of men against those who possess it. (3.) The spirit of bigotry and enmity, which is in the natural heart, against Christ and his people, sometimes breaks through the strongest ties of blood; makes children rebellious, and parents unnatural, even to wish the death of those they are most bound to love and cherish. (4.) Wherever the gospel is preached, if it be not received, it will at least rise up for a testimony against all who neglect or reject so great a salvation. (5.) When we are called to stand forth for Christ, we may still confidently expect to be supported by him, and to be taught by his Spirit how to speak and act for his glory. (6.) All sufferings, and even death itself, will be regarded as light afflictions that are but for a moment, by those whose faith realizes to their minds the far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

r Mat. 24. 15—28. Luke 21. 20—24. & 19. 43. Dan. 9. 27. & 12. 11. with Gal. 1. 17. Gen. 36. 8.

s Lam. 1. 10. Ezek. 44. 9. Deut. 23. 3.

t Job 2. 4. Mat. 6. 25. Prov. 22. 3. Heb. 11. 7. Acts 7. 18, 19. Luke 17. 31, 33.

u Luke 21. 23. & 23. 29. Hos. 13. 16. Deut. 28. 56, 57.

x Lev. 26. 14—39. Deut. 28. 15—68. & 29. 18—28. & 31. 17, 18. & 32. 21—31. Prov. 1. 24—32. Ps. 21. 8—12. & 69. 22—28. Is. 65. 12—15. see on Mat. 24. 21. Joel 2. 2. Dan. 12. 1.

y Zech. 13. 8, 9. Is. 1. 9. & 6. 13. & 65. 8.

z Mat. 24. 23. Luke 17. 23. & 21. 8. Deut. 13. 1—3. 2 Thes. 2. 11.

a Ver. 6. 2 Thes. 2. 9—11. Deut. 13. 1, 2. Rev. 13. 3, 13. John 5. 43. Mat. 7. 15. 2 Pet. 2. 1. & 3. 17.

b John 6. 37. & 10. 20, 28, 29. Rom. 8. 28—39. 1 Pet. 1. 5. 2 Tim. 2. 19. 1 John 2. 19.

c Ver. 5. Luke 21. 8, 34. Mat. 7. 15. 2 Pet. 3. 17. John 16. 1. Is. 44. 7, 8. & 46. 10. & 48. 5, 6.

14. [r] But when ye shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing [s] where it ought not, (let him that readeth understand,) then let them that be in Judea flee to the mountains: 15. [t] And let him that is on the house-top not go down into the house, neither enter therein, to take any thing out of his house: 16. And let him that is in the field not turn back again for to take up his garment. 17. [u] But woe to them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days! 18. And pray ye that your flight be not in the winter. 19. [x] For in those days shall be affliction, such as was not from the beginning of the creation which God created unto this time, neither shall be. 20. [y] And except that the Lord had shortened those days, no flesh should be saved: but for the elect's sake, whom he hath chosen, he hath shortened the days. 21. [z] And then, if any man shall say to you, Lo, here is Christ; or, lo, he is there; believe him not: 22. [a] For false Christs and false prophets shall rise, and shall shew signs and wonders, to seduce, [b] if it were possible, even the elect. 23. [c] But take ye heed: behold, I have foretold you all things.

Verses 14—23. Two things the disciples are here taught,

1. To secure their lives by flight, when the Roman army, the abomination of desolation, appears before Jerusalem. No moment must be lost, no attempt made to save any thing: they must seek their safety in instant flight. Those who are heavy with child, or have babes at their breast, will be in that day most peculiarly miserable, as least able to fly, or to bear the hardships which they must undergo; and if this flight were in winter, the inclemency of the season would make the situation of the fugitives more deplorable, therefore they need pray that it may not be so. But whenever the time comes, such a scene of affliction, misery, and desolation, will appear, as never was from the creation before, and never will be again to the end of time. They who read the history of Josephus, may see this prophecy awfully fulfilled. Indeed it is marvellous that any inhabitant of Judea survived the dire catastrophe; nothing but the most gracious interposition of divine providence could have prevented their utter extirpation. But God having still a remnant among the Jewish people, and designs of grace towards some, who, in distant ages should descend from them, for the sake of these his elect, will shorten the days of affliction, and pluck some as brands from the burning. Note, Many who abhor and persecute God's people, know not how much they are indebted to them and their prayers.

2. To take care of their souls. Seducers will abound in those evil days, and with large promises of procuring them relief from the impending calamities, will persuade many to join them; giving themselves out for the Messiah, or pretending to have found him; and with lying wonders and false miracles, will not only impose upon the credulous, but would, if it were possible, deceive the very elect. Christ warns them, therefore, against impostures, which he so plainly foretells. Note, It is a most comfortable consideration, that in spite of Satan's wiles, and all the cunning craftiness of men who lie in wait to deceive, God's chosen cannot be seduced. They have an infallible test, his written word, to prove the spirits whether they are of God, and he will enlighten their minds, and lead them into all truth.

24. ¶ [d] But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, 35. And the stars of heaven shall fall, and the powers that are in heaven shall be shaken. 26. [e] And then they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds, with great power and glory. 27. [f] And then shall he send his angels, and shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven. 28. Now learn a parable of the fig-tree; When her branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is near: 29. So ye in like manner, when ye shall see these things come to pass, [g] know that it is nigh, even at the doors. 30. Verily I say unto you, That this generation shall not pass, till all these things be done. 31. [h] Heaven and earth shall pass away: but my words shall not pass away. 32. ¶ [i] But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father. 33. [k] Take ye heed, watch and pray: for ye know not when the time is. 34. For the Son of man is [l] as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. 35. [m] Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh; at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning: 36. Lest coming sud-

d Mat. 24. 29—41. Luke 21. 25—33. Joel 2. 30, 31. Acts 2. 19, 20. Zeph. 1. 14—18. Amos 5. 20. with Is. 13. 10. Ezek. 32. 7. Rev. 6. 12—17. & 20. 12.

e Dan. 7. 10, 13. ch. 8. 38. & 14. 62. Mat. 16. 27, 28. & 26. 64. Rev. 1. 7. Zech. 14. 5. Acts 1. 11. 1 Thes. 4. 16. 2 Thes. 1. 8—10. Mat. 25. 10, 31.

f Prov. 9. 1—5. Ps. 22. 27—31. & xiv, lxxii, lxxxvii. Is. 2. 2—5. & liv, lx, xlix. Zech. 2. 11. & 8. 20—23. John 10. 16. ch. 16. 15, 16. Mat. 28. 18—20. Acts i—xx. or 1 Cor. 15. 52. 1 Thes. 4. 16. Mat. 25. 31. & 13. 41.

g Luke 21. 29—33. Mat. 24. 32—35. Jam. 5. 9. 1 Pet. 4. 17, 18. Heb. 10. 37. Mat. 11. 16. & 16. 28. & 23. 36. Ezek. 7. 2—13. & 12. 22—28.

h Mat. 24. 35. & 5. 18. 2 Pet. 3. 10. Is. 40. 8. & 51. 6. Heb. 1. 11. 1 Pet. 1. 25. Rev. 20. 11.

i Mat. 24. 36—51. Luke 17. 26—36. Mat. 25. 10, 13. 31. 1 John 5. 28. Acts 1. 7. & 17. 31. 1 Thes. 5. 2. 2 Pet. 3. 10.

k Luke 21. 34—36. & 12. 40. Mat. 24. 42, 44. & 25. 13. & 26. 41. 1 Cor. 16. 13. 1 Thes. 5. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 8. Rev. 16. 15.

l Mat. 25. 14—31. & 25. 1—30. Luke 19. 12—27.

m Mat. 25. 13. Luke 12. 39, 40. & 21. 34. Rom. 13. 11. 1 Cor. 15. 34. Eph. 5. 14. 2 Pet. 3. 10, 13. Rev. 3. 3. & 16. 15. Mat. 24. 42. & 25. 13.

denly, he find you [n] sleeping. 37. And what I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch.

n Song 3. 1. & 5. 2. Mat. 25. 5. Luke 21. 34. 1 Thes. 5. 6, 7. Eph. 5. 14. Rom. 13. 11—13. Prov. 6. 9—11. & 24. 33, 34.

Verses 24—37. The things here predicted primarily refer to the destruction of the Jewish people; but they seem also to have respect to the final appearing to judgment of our great God and Saviour Jesus Christ. As his hand visibly appeared in the ruin of Jerusalem, the temple, and Jewish nation, and also in his separating his disciples, when the calamity came near, who fled to Pella, and escaped the Roman sword; so will he fulfil this prophecy in the approaching dissolution of all things, when he shall personally appear, coming in the clouds with power and great glory, to execute judgment on all impenitent sinners, and to gather his elect into his eternal kingdom. Concerning these great events he warns them,

1. That the time of their fulfilment is near, and they might judge of their approach by the preceding signs, just as surely as they would of the summer's drawing nigh by the budding of the fig-tree. Some of that generation would live to see the utter ruin of Judea and Jerusalem: his prophetic word must infallibly take place, and heaven and earth sooner pass away, than one tittle of his predictions fail. Near also, even at the door, is the great day of judgment. The period of time, which yet remains, we know is short; how short, who can tell?

2. The time, when, is uncertain. None in heaven or earth precisely knows the hour, not even the Son, as man, or in virtue of his designation to the mediatorial office; it is a secret locked up in God's eternal mind, and neither revealed to men nor angels. We are left in this awful uncertainty, that we may be always ready.

3. He admonishes them, in the view of what he had spoken, to watch and pray, which he enforces by the following parable. His appearing would be like that of a master, who took a long journey, committed to his stewards the management of his affairs, and directed the work in which he would have his servants employed during his absence; charging the porter to take especial care that no thief broke in, and that all should be ready to receive him at his return, which he left uncertain, that they might be in constant expectation of him, and prepared to welcome him. Thus, when Jesus ascended up on high, he left a charge with all his servants, whether ministers or private Christians, to employ themselves diligently in the work he hath appointed them, and to be prepared to give an account of their fidelity. He is coming again to make a solemn inquiry; the time when, is uncertain; every hour we stand in jeopardy, not knowing whether by day or by night the calls of death or judgment may place us before him. Our care therefore must be, above all things, that we are not surprised by him, slothful, negligent, and unprepared to meet him, though he come never so suddenly. What, therefore, our Lord inculcates upon his disciples, we are alike bound to hear, for unto us it is alike addressed, I say unto all, Watch. Note, Our great concern upon earth is to be ready for death and judgment; each breath we draw may be our last: let us seize then the moment as it flies: and whilst the hour lasts, give all diligence, that we may be found of him in peace.

CHAP. XIV.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

In this chapter we have, 1. The plot of the chief priests and scribes against Christ, ver. 1, 2. 2. The anointing of Christ's head at a supper in Bethany, ver. 3—9. 3. The contract Judas made with the chief priests to betray him, ver. 10, 11. 4. Christ's eating the passover with his disciples, his instituting the Lord's supper, and his discourse with his disciples at and after supper, ver. 12—31. 5. Christ's agony in the garden, ver. 32—42. 6. The betraying of him by Judas, and the apprehending of him by the chief priests' agents, ver. 43—52. 7. His arraignment before the high priest, his conviction, and the indignities done him at that bar, ver. 53—65. 8. Peter's denying him, ver. 66—72. Most of which passages we had before, Matt. xxvi.

1. AFTER [a] two days was the feast of the passover, and of unleavened bread: and the chief priests and the scribes sought how they might take him by craft, and put him to death. 2. [b] But they said, Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar of the people. 3. ¶ [c] And being in Bethany in the house of Simon the leper, as he sat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaster box of ointment of * spikenard, very precious; and she brake the box, and poured it on his head. 4. [d] And there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said, Why was this waste of the ointment made? 5. For it might have been sold for more than † three hundred pence, and [e] have been given to the poor. And they murmured against her. 6. And Jesus said, [f] Let her alone; why trouble ye her? she hath wrought a good work on me. 7. [g] For ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good: but me ye have not always. 8. She hath done what she could: she is come aforehand [h] to anoint my body to the burying. 9. Verily I say unto you, [i] Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also that she hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her. 10. ¶ [k] And Judas Iscariot, one of the twelve, went unto the chief priests, to betray him unto them. 11. And when they heard it, they were glad, and promised to [l] give him money. And he sought how he might conveniently betray him.

a Mat. 26. 2—5. Luke 22. 1, 2. Ps. 2. 1—5. & 22. 12, 16. John 11. 47, 53. & 13. 18. Acts 4. 26—28.

b John 7. 12, 40. & 13. 1. Luke 20. 6. ch. 11. 18, 32. with Prov. 19. 21. & 21. 30.

c Mat. 26. 6—13. Luke 7. 37. John 11. 2. & 12. 3—9.

* Or pure nard, or liquid nard. The spikenard was accounted the most precious kind of nard.

d Eccl. 4. 4. Job 5. 2. Mat. 26. 8. John 12. 4—6.

† About £9: 7s. sterling.

e Ps. 12. 2. & 55. 21. & 78. 36, 37 John 12. 6. & 13. 29.

f Ps. 109. 31. Job 42. 7, 8. 2 Cor. 10. 18.

g Deut. 15. 11. Mat. 26. 11. John 12. 8. & 13. 33. & 16. 5, 28. & 17. 11. Acts 3. 21. with Mat. 18. 20. & 28. 20. & 14. 19

h Mat. 27. 57—60. ch. 15. 42—47. Luke 23. 50—56. John 19. 38—42.

i Ch. 16. 15. Mat. 26. 13. & 28. 19. Rom. 1. 8. & 16. 18. & 15. 19. Col. 1. 6, 23. Is. xxxv, xlii, xlix, liv, lx. Ps. lxvi, lxvii, lxxii, lxxxvii. Acts i—xix.

k Mat. 26. 14—16. Luke 22. 3—6. Ps. 41. 9. & 55. 12—14. John 6. 70, 71.

l 1 Tim. 6. 10. Prov. 28. 22. & 1. 10—16. Zech. 11. 12, 13. Exod. 21. 32.

Verses 1—11. The scene of our Saviour's suffering now approaching, we have here the steps preparatory thereunto.

1. The anointing him as he sat in the house of Simon the leper; so called, probably, as having been cured by Jesus of that nauseous disease. Note, When the sin is forgiven, and the backslider restored, the reproach will still frequently abide. Whilst Jesus was at supper, a woman supposed to be Mary Magdalene, or Lazarus' sister, came behind him, and poured upon his head a box of precious spikenard. Some of the disciples, with Judas at their head, with indignation beheld what they esteemed such unnecessary waste, the value of the ointment amounting to above nine pounds, which they suggested might have been much more profitably employed in charitable uses; but Christ, who knew the secret murmurs they were afraid to utter, reproved their rash censures, and commended the deed as highly praiseworthy; it being intended as a burial unction, which, according to her power, willing to honour her Lord whilst alive, she thus anticipated, as she would not have an opportunity to do it for him after his death. Their care indeed for the poor was commendable, but they being ever present, abundant occasions would offer to relieve them. But as he was ready to depart, it was the only opportunity of showing him respect which would be ever afforded her: therefore to her honour shall this be mentioned, wherever in future days the gospel shall be preached, and this remarkable instance of her faith and love shall for ever accompany the narrative of his death and resurrection. Note, (1.) They who love the Lord Jesus Christ, never think they can do enough to testify their regard for him. (2.) They who honour him, whatever censures others may cast on them, he will honour.

2. The scheme laid for his betrayal and ruin. Determined upon his death, the chief priests and scribes consulted only on the means of effecting it with the least noise; and at first bethought them that on the feast-day it would be dangerous to arrest him for fear of the people: but whilst they were in council, a most unexpected incident fixed their resolutions. Judas, one of the twelve apostles, came and offered to betray his Master. The bargain was instantly struck, the money engaged for, and immediately he set himself to find the properest opportunity to put him into the hands of these his implacable enemies. Note, (1.) Where the love of filthy lucre reigns, whatever profession a man may make, there wants nothing but temptation to draw forth the apostasy of his heart. (2.) The devil often favours his servants with most unexpected success, in order to embolden and harden them in wickedness, and to bind them faster in his chains.

12. ¶ [m] And the first day of unleavened bread, when they killed the passover, his disciples said unto him, Where wilt thou that we go and prepare that thou mayest eat the passover? 13. And he sendeth forth two of his disciples, and saith unto them, Go ye into the city, and there shall meet you a man bearing a pitcher of water: follow him. 14. And wheresoever he shall go in, say ye to the good man of the house, [n] The Master saith, Where is the guest chamber, where [o] I shall eat the passover with my disciples? 15. And he will shew you a large [p] upper room furnished * and prepared: there make ready for us. 16. And his disciples went forth, and came into the city, and [q] found as he had said unto them: and [r] they made ready the passover. 17. And [s] in the evening he cometh with the twelve. 18. [t] And as they sat and did eat, Jesus said, Verily I say unto you, [u] One of you which eateth with me shall betray me. 19. And they began to be [x] sorrowful, and to say unto him one by one, Is it I? and another said, is it I? 20. And he answered and said unto them, It is one of the twelve, that [y] dippeth with me in the dish. 21. The Son of man indeed goeth, [z] as it is written of him: but [a] woe to that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! good were it for that man if he had never been born. 22. ¶ [b] And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take, eat: this [c] is my body. 23. And he took the cup: and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them: and they all drank of it. 24. And he said unto them, This is my [d] blood of the new testament, which is shed for many. 25. Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the [e] fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new in the [f] kingdom of God. 26. ¶ And when they had sung an [g] hymn, they [h] went out into the mount of Olives. 27. [i] And Jesus saith unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, [k] I will smite the Shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered. 28. But after that I am risen, [l] I will go before you into Galilee. 29. [m] But Peter said unto him, Although all shall be offended, yet will not I. 30. And Jesus saith unto him, Verily I say unto thee, That this day, even in this night, before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice. 31. [n] But he spake the more vehemently, If I should die with thee, I will not deny thee in any wise. [o] Likewise also said they all.

m Mat. 26. 17—29. Luke 22. 7—23. John 18. 28. Exod. 12. 6. & 13. 3. Lev. 23. 5, 6. Num. 9. 3. & 28. 16, 17. Deut. 16. 1—4.

n Mat. 8. 25. & 21. 3. & 23. 8—10. John 11. 8, 28. & 20. 16. Acts 10. 36. Mat. 26. 18. ch. 11. 3. & 10. 17.

o Exod. 12. 6—11. Lev. 23. 5. Num. 9. 3—5. Deut. 16. 1—4.

p Acts 1. 13. & 9. 39. & 20. 8.

* The English word which comes nearest the import of the Greek here is carpeted. Not only the floor, but the couches on which the guests reclined at meals, were spread with a coverlet or carpet for the sake both of neatness and convenience.

q Ps. 33. 9. Num. 23. 19.

r 1 Sam. 15. 22. Exod. 23. 21. John 15. 14. Deut. 11. 32.

s Exod. 12. 6. Lev. 23. 5. Deut. 16. 1.

t Mat. 26. 20—25. Luke 22. 14—18. John 13. 21—30.

u John 6. 70, 71. Mat. 26. 2, 21. Ps. 41. 9. & 55. 12—14.

x Mat. 9. 15. 2 Kin. 8. 13. 2 Sam. 3. 8.

y John 13. 18, 26. Luke 22. 21, 22. see on ver. 18.

z Gen. 3. 15. Ps. 22. 1—21. & 69. 1—21. Is. 52. 14. & 53. 1—12. & 50. 5, 6. Dan. 9. 24, 26. Zech. 13. 7.

a Ps. 55. 15—23. & 109. 1—20. Mat. 27. 3—5. Acts 1. 16—20.

b Mat. 26. 26—29. Luke 22. 19, 20. 1 Cor. 11. 23—29. & 10. 16, 17

c Represents. Gen. 41. 26, 27. 1 Cor. 10. 4. Exod. 12. 11, 12.

d Exod. 24. 8. Zech. 9. 11. Mat. 10. 28. Heb. 9. 14—17. Rom. 5. 10, 11, 15—21. Heb. 13. 20. Jer. 31. 33.

e Luke 22. 16. Ps. 104. 15. Acts 10. 41.

f Mat. 3. 2. & 4. 17. 1 Cor. 15. 24, 28. Luke 22. 29, 30.

g Or psalm, i. e. Ps. cxiii—cxviii.

h Mat. 26. 30—35. Luke 22. 39. John 18. 1—4.

i Mat. 26. 31. John 16. 32. Jer. 17. 23.

k Zech. 13. 7. Is. 53. 2—10. Dan. 9. 26. Gen. 3. 15. Rom. 8. 32. Mat. 16. 21.

l Mat. 26. 32. & 28. 10, 16. ch. 16. 7.

m Mat. 26. 33—35. Luke 22. 31—34. John 13. 36—39. with ver. 66—72. Mat. 26. 69—75. Luke 22. 54—62. 1 Cor. 10. 12.

n Ps. 30. 6. 2 Kin. 8. 13. Prov. 16. 18. & 29. 23.

o Exod. 19. 8. & 25. 3, 7. Deut. 5. 27.

Verses 12—31. We have here,

1. Christ's celebration of the passover with his disciples. By his orders, two of them had been sent with particular directions where to prepare it; and having accordingly found the person with the pitcher of water, and followed him home, they were shown by the master of the house a furnished room, where they prepared the supper; and in the evening Jesus came with the rest of the disciples, and sat down to eat the paschal lamb. Note, (1.) When we have our Lord's order, we must go forth depending on his providence, even when we know not whither we go. (2.) The purest communions will not be without false brethren this side heaven; of twelve apostles, one was a traitor.

2. At the table he startled his disciples with an information the most alarming, that one of them, who now appeared so friendly, would prove a traitor, and betray him into the hands of his enemies. Exceedingly grieved at such an assurance, each unwilling to suspect another, and unconscious of such design, Judas excepted, began to say, Lord, is it I? I dread the thought of such villany, and wish not a moment to lie under the suspicion of it. In answer to their question, Christ points out the traitor, by directing them to one of the twelve then dipping in the dish with him, adding a most fearful commination against him, ver. 21. if any thing at last might touch that hardened traitor's conscience. Note, (1.) A zealous soul is grieved but to be suspected of unfaithfulness. (2.) We cannot be too jealous over ourselves. A sincere disciple wishes others to search him, and prays the Lord each day to try the ground of his heart, and show him if there be any hidden iniquity there that it may be repented of and renounced. (3.) Not one jot or tittle of God's word can fail, and all his decrees infallibly have their accomplishment; even wicked men, when most envenomed against him, are nevertheless made subservient to his purposes, though this neither extenuates their guilt, nor will at all mitigate their punishment.

3. At the close of the paschal supper, our Lord instituted that ordinance, which in his church should supersede, and supply the place of this solemn feast. Having taken bread, he blessed it, broke, and gave to each of them, to be eaten in remembrance of his broken body, which should procure for them a more glorious redemption than in the passover they commemorated; a redemption from sin, and death, and hell. Then taking the cup in like manner, after his solemn benediction, he bid them all drink of it, as they did; and this he explains as his blood of the New Testament; by the shedding of which, all the promises of the covenant of grace would be confirmed to them, and to as many as in faith received these instituted seals of that covenant. And hereupon our Lord takes his farewell of them, till the day came when they should sit down with him in glory, and drink the new wine in the kingdom of God, partaking of the joys at his right hand for evermore. Then closing the solemnity with a hymn, they departed for the mount of Olives.

4. In the way to the retirement whither Jesus went, he took occasion to warn his disciples of their approaching desertion of him, which the Scripture had foretold, and they were about to fulfil that very night. But to encourage them to return to him again, he lets them know, though he should be smitten, and they scattered from him, yet after his resurrection, they should again see him to their comfort in Galilee. Peter, shocked at the thought, confident in himself, and with warmth resenting the suspicion, solemnly engages, though every one of his brethren, like Judas, should desert his Master, he never would. And, notwithstanding the repeated warnings our Lord gives him, that he would not only forsake, but deny him before the morning returned; more resolute and peremptory than before, Peter with vehemence insists he will die with him, sooner than deny him. And all the rest, unwilling to be outdone in assurances of fidelity, declared this also to be their determined resolution. Note, (1.) We know not our own hearts, when we confidently boast what we will do. The first temptation will prove our weakness. (2.) Many are discouraged from the Lord's table, for fear of falling afterwards, as if every subsequent sin was mortal: but though no doubt we are called to use peculiar watchfulness, we must not think, if we fall, the door of grace is shut. The disciples, immediately after the sacrament, fell, and foully too; and yet the Lord recalled and recovered them. Let us not then despair.

32. ¶ [p] And they came to a place which was named Gethsemane: and he saith to his disciples, Sit ye here, while I [q] shall pray. 33. And he taketh with him [r] Peter, and James, and John, and began to be [s] sore amazed and to be very heavy; 34. And saith unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death: tarry ye here, and [t] watch. 35. And he went forward a little, and [u] fell on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from him. 36. [x] And he said, Abba, Father, [y] all things are possible unto thee: [z] take away this cup from me: nevertheless, not what I will, but what thou wilt. 37. And he cometh, and findeth them sleeping, and saith unto Peter, Simon, sleepest thou? [a] couldest not thou watch one hour? 38. [b] Watch ye and pray, lest ye enter into temptation. The spirit truly is ready, but the flesh is weak. 39. And [c] again he went away, and prayed, and spake the same words. 40. And when he returned, he found them [d] asleep again: for their eyes were heavy; neither wist they what to answer him. 41. And he cometh the third time, and saith unto them, [e] Sleep on now, and take your rest: it is enough, * the hour is come; [f] behold, the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. 42. Rise up, let us go: lo, he that betrayeth me is at hand.

p Mat. 26. 36—46. Luke 22. 39—46. John 18. 1—4.
q Ps. 22. 2. & 109. 4. Heb. 5. 7. ver. 36, 39.
r Ch. 1. 16, 19. & 5. 37. & 9. 2. s Is. 53. 3, 4, 10. John 12. 27. Gal. 3. 13. Heb. 5. 7. Ps. 116. 3. & 69. 1, 2. & 22. 14.
t Ver. 38. ch. 13. 33, 35, 37. 1 Pet. 5. 8. Eph. 6. 18, 19.
u Num. 14. 5. & 16. 22. Deut. 9. 18. 2 Chr. 21. 16.
x Mat. 6. 9. Gal. 4. 6. Rom. 8. 15.
y Gen. 17. 1. & 18. 14. Jer. 32. 17, 27.
z Luke 22. 42. John 12. 27. Heb. 5. 7, 8. Phil. 2. 8. Ps. 40. 8. John 5. 30. & 6. 38, 39. & 18. 11. Mat. 20. 22.

a Ver. 29, 31, 34. Mat. 25. 5. Jer. 10. 23. John 15. 5. b Ch. 13. 33—37. Mat. 24. 42. & 25. 13. 1 Cor. 16. 13. 1 Pet. 5. 8. Eph. 6. 18. c Ps. 109. 4. & 22. 2. 2 Cor. 12. 8. Heb. 5. 7. Luke 18. 1. d Song 5. 2. Mat. 25. 5. ver. 34, 37, 38.
e 1 Kin. 18. 27. Eccl. 11. 9. Judg. 10. 14.
* Rather, All is over. 'Tis done. The time wherein they might have been of use to him by their counsel and comfort was now lost.
f Ver. 18. John 13. 1. ch. 8. 31. & 9. 31. & 10. 32.

Verses 32—42. We have before us the amazing scene of the Redeemer's agony in the garden of Gethsemane. Having left eight of his disciples at a greater distance, he took three of them to be nearer spectators of his sufferings.

1. His anguish was unutterable. Amazement and horror seized his soul, and a sense of the divine wrath oppressed his conscience with its intolerable load. Sorrows, like the agonies of death, compassed him about; and pains, like those the damned feel, got hold upon him. He acquaints his three disciples with something of what he endured, which words were too feeble to express, and bids them tarry there, and watch with him in this hour of temptation. We may here, as in a glass, observe, (1.) The dreadful evil of sin, and every pang the Redeemer feels should be a dagger to our hearts, begetting deepest self-abhorrence and most unfeigned grief for those abominations, which nothing but these sufferings of the Son of God could expiate. (2.) The sure foundation of our faith. The Lord hath laid on him the iniquities of us all; these agonizing pains are the ransom he pays to satisfy the justice of an offended God; and having accepted one for all, there is no more condemnation to those that are in Christ Jesus. (3.) The inexpressible transcendent love of our Lord and Saviour, willingly resigning himself thus for our sakes: what returns, then, do we not owe him? (4.) The comfort procured for us under our affliction and dejection. Whatever we suffer, Jesus hath drank deeper of the bitter cup; and having been thus tempted himself, can tenderly feel for us and will succour us under our sorrows, and bring us happily to the end of them.

2. His prayer was humble, fervent, importunate, submissive. As man, he could not but wish the bitter cup might remove; as mediator, he bowed submissive to his Father's will, content, whatever must be endured, to finish the work which God had given him to do. Thrice he renews the same request, and thrice resigns himself to suffer whatever might be for the glory of the divine Justice to inflict. Note, (1.) We are not forbid to mourn and pray for the removal of our burdens, even when most resigned to suffer God's holy will. (2.) Though our troubles are not soon removed, we must not be weary in waiting upon God. In his time they shall end, and we shall finally receive the answer of peace, if we faint not; either deliverance from our trials, or strength to endure them.

3. On coming to his disciples, he finds them asleep, and therefore rouses them with a just and sharp rebuke, especially addressed to Simon, who had lately appeared so zealous and promised such distinguished fidelity. How shameful that they could not watch one hour with their agonizing Master? or if not for his sake, at least for their own, when it was so needful for them to watch and pray: such temptation being ready to overtake them, as nothing but almighty grace could enable them to bear: but whilst he thus upbraids and warns, the tender Saviour pities them, and kindly seeks to excuse what he must condemn. Their spirit was willing, he knew their hearts; but the flesh was weak to withstand the effects of weariness and the oppressions of grief: and the infirmities incident to this feeble frame, disabled them from doing what they desired. A second time he goes to pour out his sorrows before God; again he returns, and they are asleep, and when awaked, unable to answer his just rebuke, after having received such repeated admonition. The third time he retires to redouble his cries, yet finds them on his return sleeping still. Now therefore he bids them sleep on, if they dared any longer; or rather, will ye sleep yet? when danger was now at the door; he calls them, therefore, to go with him to meet his betrayer. Note, (1.) Slothfulness in prayer is usually the forerunner of sad falls. (2.) Jesus, by his word and providences, is repeatedly knocking at our stupid hearts, to awaken our attention, and rouse us to watchfulness and prayer. (3.) Those who have made the strongest professions are peculiarly criminal if they act unsuitably. (4.) It is well for us we have a compassionate High Priest who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and sees that the spirit of his people is willing, even when through the frailty of our nature we cannot always stand upright. (5.) They who do not watch and pray when danger threatens, will be unprepared to meet it, and sink under the temptation.

43. ¶ [g] And immediately, while he yet spake, cometh Judas, one of the twelve, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves,* from the chief priests and the scribes and the elders. 44. And he that betrayed him had given them a token, saying, Whomsoever [h] I shall kiss, that same is he; take him, and lead him away safely. 45. And as soon as he was come, he goeth straightway to him, and saith, [i] Master, master; and kissed him. 46. [k] And they laid their hands on him, and took him. 47. [l] And one of them that stood by drew a sword, and smote a servant of the high priest, and cut off his ear. 48. And Jesus answered and said unto them, Are ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and with staves, to take me? 49. [m] I was daily with you in the temple teaching, and ye took me not: but the scriptures must be fulfilled. 50. [n] And they all forsook him, and fled. 51. And there followed him a certain young man, having a linen cloth† cast about his naked body; and the young men laid hold on him: 52. And [o] he left the linen cloth, and fled from them naked.

g Mat. 26. 47—56. Luke 22. 47—53. John 18. 3—11. Acts 1. 16. Ps. 3. 1. & 2. 1, 2. & 22. 12, 16.

* Or, clubs.

h John 18. 3, 12. 2 Sam. 20. 9. Ps. 28. 3. & 12. 2. & 55. 21. Prov. 27. 6.

i Gr. Rabbi, Rabbi. Ch. 10. 51. John 20. 16. Mat. 23. 8—10. & 26. 49.

k Lam. 4. 20. Acts 2. 23. Ps. 22. 12, 16.

l John 18. 10. ver. 33. Mat. 26. 51, 52. Luke 22. 49—51.

m Mat. 26. 54—56. Luke 22. 52, 53. Ps. 22. 1—12. & 69. 16. Is. 53. 2—11. Luke 24. 25, 27, 44.

n Ver. 27. John 16. 32. Job 19. 13, 14. Ps. 88. 8, 18. & 38. 11. 2 Tim. 1. 15. & 4. 16.

† Pearce supposes this to have been a tunic, or vest-coat; but Campbell argues that it was only a piece of loose cloth cast carelessly about the wearer.

o Gen. 39. 12. Job 2. 4. see ch. 13. 14—16.

Verses 43—52. His internal sufferings in the garden being ended, his external sufferings begin; so fast doth billow roll on billow, till all the storms of wrath are gone over him.

1. He is apprehended by a band of men sent from the chief priests, scribes, and elders, under the conduct of Judas the traitor; who, as it was night, that they might not mistake the person of Jesus, gave them this signal, that they might know him, by his going up and kissing him. And hereupon, with great pretended respect, approaching Christ, he kissed him, and they who were at his heels laid hands upon him. Note, (1.) Apostates ever prove the blackest instruments of hell, and no height of office, or profession, is safe from temptation. We need not stumble at the falls of the greatest apparent Christians, when we see an apostle a traitor and a devil. (2.) The basest schemes of villany are often crowned with success, and the wicked triumphant, but their time is short.

2. Peter, ever violent, no sooner saw his Master apprehended, than he attempted a rescue; and drawing his sword, struck at one of the men who had seized Jesus, and cut off his ear; his intention was good, but his zeal intemperate. Note, (1.) Many have more zeal than prudence, and their good intentions are no excuse for their rashness. (2.) In times of persecution, it is much easier to draw the sword and fight, than patiently to bow down and meekly suffer.

3. Christ expostulates with his enemies on this clandestine manner of apprehending him, as if he had been some infamous villain and murderer that needed to be seized, and overpowered with arms and numbers, when they knew he had every day appeared in the temple; where they might easily have taken him; but the Scriptures must be fulfilled that spoke of his betrayal and sufferings, and the flight of his disciples; for they no sooner saw him submit quietly to be bound, than they all forsook him and fled, glad every one to shift for himself, lest they also should be apprehended. Note, (1.) The most innocent men are often proceeded against, as if they were the vilest of mankind, and such apprehensions studiously raised against them, to cloak the malice of their persecutors. (2.) The fulfilment of the Scriptures should be a great comfort to us under all our sufferings for Christ's sake: thus, we see, it must be. (3.) We need not think it strange, if in times when we most need such support, our dearest friends abandon us, through fear of being involved in our troubles. In these seasons we should remember Jesus in the garden.

4. A young man near the garden, probably disturbed by the noise, started up from his bed, and ran down with only a sheet about him, or some linen garment, to inquire into the cause, and followed the crowd a little way. Being observed by one of the soldiers, and perhaps suspected for a disciple, they attempted to lay hold of him; but with the loss of his garment, he got loose and fled naked. This incident seems to be related to show the inveteracy of these enemies of Jesus; none that looked like his disciples might expect to meet any quarter from them.

53. ¶ [p] And they led Jesus away to the high priest: and with him were assembled all the chief priests and the elders and the scribes. 54. [q] And Peter followed him afar off, even unto the palace of the high priest: and he sat with the servants, and warmed himself at the fire. 55. [r] And the chief priests and all the council sought for witness against Jesus to put him to death; and [s] found none. 56. For many bare false witness against him, but their witness agreed not together.‡ 57. And there arose certain, p Mat. 26. 57—68. Luke 22. 66—71. John 18. 12—14, 19—24. Acts 8. 32. Is. 53. 7. Ps. 22. 12, 16.

q Ver. 29, 31. John 8. 15, 17. Prov. 9. 6. & 13. 20. ch. 13. 33—37. ver. 38.

r Mat. 26. 59—62. John 18. 19—23. Ps. 27. 12. & 35. 11. Acts xiii. 1 Kin. 21. 10.

s Dan. 6. 4. 1 Pet. 3. 16.

‡ Campbell prefers the rendering, their testimonies were insufficient.

and bare false witness against him, saying, 58. We heard him say, [t] I will destroy this temple that is made with hands, and within three days I will build another made without hands. 59. But neither so did their witness agree together. 60. And the high priest stood up in the midst, and asked Jesus, saying, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witness against thee?* 61. [u] But he held his peace, and answered nothing. Again the high priest asked him, and said unto him, Art thou [x] the Christ, the Son of the Blessed? 62. And Jesus said, I am: [y] and ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven. 63. Then the high priest [z] rent his clothes, and saith, What need we any further witnesses? 64. Ye have heard [a] the blasphemy: what think ye? And they all condemned him to be guilty of death. 65. [b] And some began to spit on him, and to cover his face, and to buffet him, and to say unto him, Prophesy: and the servants did strike him with the palms of their hands.

t John 2. 19. Mat. 27. 40. & 26. 61. ch. 15. 29. Acts 6. 13.

* Admitting all that was attested, it did not amount to a capital crime. This made the high-priest think of extorting from our Lord's mouth a confession which might supply the place of evidence.—Campbell.

u Is. 53. 7. Acts 8. 32. Ps. 38. 13, 14. ch. 15. 3, 5. John 19. 9. 1 Pet. 2. 23. Mat. 11. 29.

x Mat. 11. 4, 5. & 16. 16. John 1. 49—51. & 6. 69. & 10. 30, 36. Is. 9. 6, 7. Zech. 13. 7.

y Mat. 24. 30. & 25. 31. & 16. 27. ch. 8. 38. & 13. 26. Ps. 110. 1. Dan. 7. 13, 14. John 6. 62. Acts 1. 11. & 17. 31. Rom. 14. 10. 1 Thes. 1. 7—10. 2 Thes. 1. 7—10. Rev. 1. 7. & 20. 11.

z Lev. 21. 10. Is. 36. 22. & 37. 1.

a Lev. 24. 16. Acts 6. 13. John 19. 7.

b Is. 50. 6. & 52. 14. & 52. 3, 5. ch. 15. 19. 29—32. John 19. 3. Luke 22. 63. Mic. 5. 1.

Verses 53—65. Our blessed Lord, after being dragged through the streets as a criminal, is here carried before the high priest and Sanhedrim, in order that some matter of accusation might be found whereon to ground his condemnation: and Peter, now a little recovered from his fright, and prompted by strong curiosity to see the end, at a distance followed the band; and having got admission into the palace, sat and warmed himself with the servants at the fire, presuming in such company none would take him for a disciple. We are here informed,

1. What pains were taken to suborn false witnesses, in order to have a pretence for putting Jesus to death: this being their bloody resolution, and the process a mere veil to cover the murder. But though many, to please the priests, witnessed against him, and some perverting the words which he had spoken of the temple of his body some years before, and applying them to the temple of Jerusalem, would have represented him as the enemy of their worship and religion, yet all the charges they could muster up amounted to nothing capital, whilst the most glaring contradictions appeared in their evidence.

2. Unable to condemn him upon the evidence of others, the high priest seeks to extort from himself something more material. Finding him silent under all these frivolous and false accusations and not to be prevailed upon to reply aught to these charges, he rose with vehemence, and solemnly adjured him to say directly whether he really was, as he pretended, the Messiah, the Son of the blessed God? Then Jesus, undismayed, with dignity becoming his office, asserted his divine mission and character, with an awful warning to them who now thus despised and set him at nought, that the time would come when they should tremble at his presence, and behold him executing his temporal judgments on their place and nation, and yet more fearfully meet him at the great day, when they must stand at his tribunal, and perish eternally. Pretending indignation against what he termed blasphemy, the high priest rent his clothes, exclaimed against the need of further evidence, and, branding him as a blasphemer, appealed to the rest for their opinion; who, following such a wicked example, unanimously condemned him to death. Note, (1.) We may not be staggered if we see the most reverend, aged, wise, and noble, conspiring against the cause of Jesus, and persecuting his people. By such was Jesus himself condemned. (2.) The silence of our Redeemer under every accusation should teach us patience when we are thus reviled, committing our cause to him that judgeth righteously. (3.) It is easy to brand those as blasphemers who have the highest desire to give glory to God. The best men have often been dressed up in the most shocking colours, and blackened with the most opprobrious names, in order to make the persecution of them appear necessary and laudable.

3. No sooner was judgment given against him, than they began to insult him with the most grievous indignities. They spit upon him, blindfolded him, buffeted him, struck him on the face, and in derision bid him exercise his prophetical office, by telling who smote him. Thus did he not hide his face from shame and spitting, that we might be enabled without shame to stand before the tribunal of God.

66. ¶ [c] And as Peter was beneath in the palace, there cometh one of [d] the maids of the high priest: 67. And when she saw Peter warming himself, she looked upon him, and said, And thou also wast with Jesus [e] of Nazareth. 68. But he denied, saying, I know not, neither understand I what thou sayest. And he went out into the porch; and the cock crew. 69. [f] And a maid saw him again, and began to say to them that stood by, This is one of them. 70. And he denied it again. And a little after, they that stood by said again to Peter, Surely thou art one of them: for thou art [g] a Galilean, and thy speech agreeth thereto. 71. [h] But he began to curse and to swear, saying, I know not this man of whom ye speak. 72. [i] And the second time the cock crew. And Peter called to mind the word that Jesus said unto him, Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice. And [k] when he thought thereon, he wept.

c Mat. 26. 58, 69—75. Luke 22. 54—62. John 18. 15—18, 25—27. with ver. 29, 31. John 13. 36—38.

d Gen. 3. 13. & 16. 2.

e Mat. 1. 21. & 2. 23. Luke 4. 16. John 1. 45, 49. ch. 10. 47. Acts 10. 38.

f Mat. 26. 71. Luke 22. 58. John 18. 25. see ver. 66, 67.

g Ch. 1. 16. Luke 13. 1. John 1. 43, 44. Judg. 12. 6.

h Ver. 29, 31. Mat. 26. 74. Luke 22. 60. John 18. 26, 27. Ps. 144. 3. 1 Cor. 10. 12.

i Mat. 26. 34, 79. ver. 30. John 13. 38. Luke 22. 61, 62.

k Or he wept abundantly, or he began to weep. Ps. 119. 59, 60. Ezek. 7. 16. Zech. 12. 10. Jer. 31. 18. 2 Cor. 7. 11. 2 Sam. 24. 10. Many versions have it, Having covered his head, or his face, he wept.

Verses 66—72. Peter's fall had been foretold, and we here see the prediction sadly verified.

1. He had rushed needlessly into temptation, and thrust himself into the midst of bad company, and then no marvel he fell. He was first ashamed of Christ, and that was but one step from denying him. Note, They who care not to be found among the disciples of Jesus because it is reproachful, and associate with the world in order to gain estimation, and to be thought well of, will pierce themselves through with many sorrows.

2. On the slightest trial Peter repeatedly denied and disowned his Master, and from words descended to oaths, sealing perfidy and lies with foulest perjury. Lord, what is man, when left to himself! A servant-maid confounded the chief of the apostles when trusting for a moment to the strength of his own resolution. Peter's mouth hardly knew how to pronounce an oath, and would before have shuddered at the thought; but, when a lie had first opened the door, profaneness and perjury easily entered. When once we turn aside from the path of truth never so little, none know to what dreadful lengths they may be hurried. Complicated crimes loaded the apostle's conscience; denial of his Master, falsehood before God, repeated lies, horrid profaneness, and wilful perjury. Yet even this is of use. Many a poor sinner might have despaired, if he had not seen such examples, and read in their pardon and recovery the possibility of his own.

3. When he was sunk into the lowest depths of sin, then was the time for the almighty, sovereign, saving grace of Jesus to appear. Once had the cock crowed, after his first denial of his Master, and that warning had passed unnoticed; for, till God softens the heart, all alarms of providence or the word are disregarded. The second time, after his repeated crimes, this herald of God reminds him of his Master's words, and his dire fulfilment of them. And now in full view his horrid guilt stared him in the face: every reflection shocked him; and, unable to bear that place, he retired to pour out in tears his bitter anguish. Some render the words, covering his face as a mourner, he wept bitterly, with penitential sorrow returning to a pardoning God. And it stands upon record, for the comfort of the chief of sinners, that he found mercy with him.

CHAP. XV.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

Here we have, 1. Christ arraigned and accused before Pilate the Roman governor, ver. 1—5. 2. Cried out against by the common people at the instigation of the priests, ver. 6—14. 3. Condemned to be crucified immediately, ver. 15. 4. Abused as a mock king by the Roman soldiers, ver. 16—19. 5. Led out to the place of execution with all possible ignominy and disgrace, ver. 20—24. 6. Nailed to the cross between two thieves, ver. 25—28. 7. Reviled and abused by all that passed by, ver. 29—32. 8. Forsaken for a time by his Father, ver. 33—36. 9. Dying and rending the veil, ver. 37, 38. 10. Attested and witnessed to by the centurion and others, ver. 39, 40, 41. 11. Buried in the sepulchre of Joseph of Arimathea, ver. 42—47.

1. AND [a] straightway in the morning the chief priests held a consultation with the elders and scribes and the whole council, and bound Jesus, and carried him away, and delivered him to Pilate. 2. [b] And Pilate asked him, Art thou the King of the Jews? And he answering said unto him, Thou sayest it. 3. [c] And the chief priests accused him of many things: but he answered nothing. 4. [d] And Pilate asked him again, saying, Answerest thou nothing? behold how many things they witness against thee. 5. But Jesus answered yet nothing;* so that Pilate marvelled. 6. ¶ [e] Now at that feast he released unto them one prisoner, whomsoever they desired. 7. [f] And there was one named Barabbas, which lay bound with them that had made insurrection with him, who had committed murder in the insurrection. 8. And the multitude, crying aloud, began to desire him to do as he had ever done unto them. 9. But Pilate answered them, saying, [g] Will ye that I release unto you the King of the Jews? 10. (For [h] he knew that the chief priests had delivered him [h] for envy.) 11. [i] But the chief priests moved the people, that he should rather release Barabbas unto them. 12. [i] And Pilate answered and said again unto them, What will ye then that I shall do unto him whom ye call the [k] King of the Jews? 13. And they cried out again, Crucify him. 14. Then Pilate said unto them, Why? what evil hath he done? [l] And they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify him.

a Mat. 27. 1—23. Luke 22. 66. & 23. 1—28. John 18. 28—40. & 19. 1—15. Acts 3. 13. & 4. 26—28. & 2. 23. Luke 18. 32.

b Mat. 27. 11. Luke 23. 3. John 18. 33—37. 1 Tim. 6. 13.

c Luke 23. 2, 5. John 18. 30. & 19. 7, 12. Mat. 27. 12. Is. 53. 7.

d Ch. 14. 61. Mat. 26. 62. & 27. 13, 14. John 19. 10.

* Rather, answered no more. The present translation would imply that he had answered nothing to the former questions: the reverse of which was the fact.

e Mat. 26. 2, 5. & 27. 15. Luke 23. 17. John 2. 13. & 4. 45. & 18. 39.

f Luke 23. 18, 19, 25. John 18. 40. Mat. 27. 16.

g Josh. 24. 15. 1 Kin. 18. 21. Mat. 27. 17, 21. Luke 23. 13—21. John 18. 39. & 19. 12.

h Acts 7. 9. John 9. 22. & 12. 42. Eccl. 4. 4. Job 5. 2. Prov. 27. 4. Luke 12. 47. Jam. 4. 17. 1 John 3. 12.

i Mat. 27. 20. Luke 23. 18. John 18. 40. Acts 3. 14, 15. Hos. 5. 1. Ezek. 22. 26.

k Mat. 2. 2. Is. 9. 6, 7. Jer. 23. 5, 6. & 30. 21. & 33. 15, 16. Mic. 5. 2.

l Prov. 27. 4. Is. 53. 3. John 15. 18, 24, 25. Ps. 35. 19. & 69. 5. Luke 23. 23.

Verses 1—14. Unwearied in wickedness, we see those who had great part of the night sat up to seize and condemn the Lord Jesus, early in the morning again in consultation how to get their sentence confirmed by the Roman governor and executed. Let it shame our slothfulness, that they should be carried farther by enmity against Christ, than we by zeal to serve him.

1. They bound and led him prisoner to Pilate's tribunal. Our mighty Samson might indeed easily have snapped these cords asunder; but, faster bound with bands of love to our sinful souls, he quietly submitted to be led as a lamb to the slaughter.

2. Before Pilate our Lord witnessed the good confession. In answer to his interrogatories, he confessed, and denied not, that he was the Christ, the King of his spiritual Israel: but to the clamorous charges of the priests, his envenomed persecutors, he observed a profound silence; nor, when urged to answer by Pilate, deigned to make the least reply. He despised their malice; he was prepared to suffer; he desired not to be delivered; and he knew it in vain to remonstrate with those who wilfully and obstinately rejected the truth; and therefore to Pilate's admiration he still held his peace. Note, (1.) Christ is a king; and they who refuse to bow as willing subjects to his government, will find him able to punish the rebels that will not have him to reign over them. (2.) We need not marvel if false brethren are our bitterest accusers. Read the Scriptures, and from the beginning it will be seen, that wicked, worldly, and sensual priests are ever the most envenomed enemies to the cause of truth. (3.) Silence is the best answer to false and scurrilous invective.

3. Pilate, convinced of the innocence of Jesus, greatly desired to deliver him from his enemies; as he plainly saw that the envy of the priests was alone the cause of this malicious prosecution; and as it was an established custom at the passover, to gratify the people by the release of any prisoner they desired, he bethought him of an expedient which he imagined could scarce fail of success. There was a most infamous miscreant then in prison for murder and insurrection, and he doubted not, but if he proposed to the people these two, Jesus and Barabbas, they would infallibly prefer the former. The supposition was reasonable; but he was disappointed in the issue. Note, (1.) When people think to extricate themselves from their difficulties by indirect means, because if they act openly and honestly it may expose them to censure, they often but farther involve themselves. (2.) Whatever many pretend as the specious pleas for reviling the zealous ministers of truth, it is envy that instigates their enmity; they cannot bear the reproof of their lives and doctrine.

4. Swayed by the malignant insinuations of the priests and elders, who, forgetting their dignity, mingled with the crowd, the people rejected Jesus, and demanded Barabbas. Pilate, amazed, laboured still to get Jesus off, and proposed the question to them, what he should do with that poor man, who was called the King of the Jews, and more to be pitied than feared. They cried out all together, Crucify him, crucify him. In vain the governor attempted to expostulate on the injustice, the cruelty of such a punishment, where a man had been proved guilty of no crime; they only grew more outrageous and clamorous, and tumultuously demanded an instant compliance with their request. Note, We must not judge of the justice of a cause by the clamours of the populace: the voice of truth is often silenced amidst the louder cries of prejudice.

15. [m] And so Pilate, willing to content the people, released Barabbas unto them; and delivered Jesus, when he had scourged him, to be crucified. 16. ¶ [n] And the soldiers led him away into the hall called Pretorium; and they call together the whole band. 17. And they clothed him with purple,* and platted a crown of thorns, and put it about his head; 18. And began to salute him, Hail, King of the Jews! 19. [o] And they smote him on the head with a reed, and did spit upon him, and [p] bowing their knees, worshipped him. 20. And when they had mocked him, they took off the purple from him, and put his own clothes on him, and [q] led him out to crucify him. 21. [r] And they compel one Simon a Cyrenian, who passed by, coming out of the country, the father of Alexander and Rufus, to bear his cross.

m Mat. 27. 24—53. Luke 23. 24—46. John 19. 13—30.

n Mat. 27. 27, 31. Luke 23. 11. John 19. 1—5. Gen. 3. 18. Ps. 22. 16. Prov. 29. 12.

* Matthew calls it a scarlet cloak. In strictness, the garment may have been neither purple nor scarlet; yet it may have had so much of each colour as would lead one to give it one of these names, and another, the other.

o Ch. 14. 65. Mic. 5. 1. Is. 50. 6. & 52. 14. & 53. 3—5. Ps. 22. 6, 7, 12—21. & 69. 7, 8, 19.

p Ch. 1. 40. & 10. 17. Gen. 41. 43.

q Ch. 12. 8. Heb. 13. 12.

r Mat. 27. 32. Luke 23. 26. Rom. 16. 13.

22. And they bring him unto [s] the place Golgotha, which is, being interpreted, The place of a scull. 23. And they gave him to drink [t] wine mingled with myrrh: but he received it not. 24. ¶ And when they had crucified him, [u] they parted his garments, casting lots upon them what every man should take. 25. And it was the [x] third hour, and they crucified† him. 26. [y] And the superscription of his accusation was written over, THE KING OF THE JEWS. 27. [z] And with him they crucify two thieves; the one on his right hand, and the other on his left. 28. And the [a] scripture was fulfilled which saith, And he was numbered with the transgressors. 29. ¶ [b] And they that passed by railed on him, wagging their heads, and saying, Ah, thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, 30. Save thyself, and come down from the cross. 31. Likewise also the chief priests, mocking, said among themselves with the scribes, He saved others; himself he cannot save. 32. Let Christ the King of Israel descend now from the cross, that we may see and believe. [c] And they that were crucified with him reviled him.

s Num. 15. 35. 1 Kin. 21. 15. Acts 7. 58. Heb. 13. 12. Mat. 27. 33. Luke 23. 33. John 19. 17.

t Ps. 69. 21. John 19. 28. Mat. 27. 34. Luke 22. 36.

u Ps. 22. 18. John 19. 23, 24. Mat. 27. 35. Luke 23. 34.

x John 19. 14. Luke 23. 44. Mat. 27. 45. ver. 33. John says it was about the sixth hour. The seeming discrepancy may be reconciled by supposing that the third hour was past, but that the sixth hour was not yet come.

† Literally, nailed him to the cross.

y Mat. 27. 37. Luke 23. 38. John 19. 19—22. Deut. 23. 5.

z Mat. 27. 38. Luke 23. 32, 33. John 19. 18.

a Is. 53. 12. with Num. 23. 19. Tit. 1. 2. Heb. 6. 18.

b Ps. 22. 7, 8. & 69. 7, 20. & 109. 25. Lam. 2. 15. Mat. 27. 39—43. Luke 23. 35—38.

c Mat. 27. 44. But one afterwards repented. Luke 23. 39—43.

Verses 15—21. The importunity and clamour of the people overcame the convictions of Pilate's conscience. To content them, he released Barabbas, pronounced sentence of crucifixion on Jesus, and delivered him up for execution, having before scourged him in hopes of moving their compassion, But,

1. The soldiers, in order more bitterly to insult him, dragged him to the hall called Prætorium, and gathering their whole company, in derision of the pretensions of Jesus, arrayed him as a king, in a purple robe, placed a crown of thorns upon his head, and, ridiculing his mock dignity, wished all happiness to the King of the Jews; striking him on the head with the cane which they had put into his hand, to make the thorns on his head pierce the deeper: spitting upon him in contempt, whilst they fell on their knees, pretending to pay him homage. Thus, because sinful man had affected to be like God, he who came to bear the punishment of our pride, must submit to the basest indignities to expiate our guilt. With wonder and love then let us behold the man, astonished at his humiliation, and bowing with no fictitious homage, but with deepest reverence before him, as our incarnate God and king.

2. When they were tired of this inhuman sport, they disarrayed him of the purple robe, put on his own garment, and led him away to the place of execution, bearing his cross. But being unable to support the load, lest he should die by the way, and disappoint their cruelty, they took it off from him, and seizing one who passed by, perhaps known to be a disciple, the father of Alexander and Rufus, men afterwards of note among the faithful, they compelled him to carry the cross after Jesus to Calvary. Note, (1.) Unexpected crosses often come upon us; it is well to be habitually prepared for them. (2.) However ignominiously we may be treated now for Christ's sake, it shall hereafter redound to our everlasting honour.

Verses 22—32. We are here led to the lowest step of the Saviour's humiliation, his humiliation to death, even the death of the cross.

1. They crucified him about nine o'clock on mount Golgotha; a punishment and death the most painful, ignominious, and accursed. The hands and feet torn with the nails, excited the most excruciating pain, the whole body hanging on the wounds; the bones dislocated; the blood streaming down; and, lingering in agonies inexpressible, he felt all the horrors of death in its most tremendous form. None but the vilest miscreants and slaves were thus punished; and God in his law had branded the death upon a tree with his curse, Deut. xxi. 23. He who stood in the room of sinners, of the chief of sinners, therefore submitted to bear their sins in his own body on the tree, to endure all the shame, the pain, the curse, which they had deserved, and thus to take away sin by the sacrifice of himself.

2. On the tree he continued to endure every fresh insult and cruelty which malice could devise. [1.] Instead of the intoxicating draught usually given to criminals, he was offered some sour wine, mixed with bitter ingredients, which he refused to drink. [2.] Whilst he hung in agonies, the four soldiers more immediately his executioners, sported themselves with dividing his clothes as their fee, and casting lots for their several shares. [3.] The superscription over his cross, though it fastened no crime upon him, was an insult on his pretensions. [4.] Two thieves were crucified with him, one on each side, that he might not only appear numbered with the transgressors, but branded as the vilest of the vile. Thus undesignedly they fulfilled the Scriptures concerning him, Isa. liii. 12. [5.] Every passenger with bitterest sarcasms cast in his teeth what they regarded as his arrogant boasts, ver. 29. wagging their heads in scorn, and bidding him prove the mission which he challenged by coming down from the cross. The chief priests and scribes also, who came to glut their vengeance with this spectacle, and to see the execution performed with every circumstance of ignominy and cruelty, now triumphed over him, deriding his pretensions as a Saviour to others, who was so little able to save himself: insultingly demanding now that he would show himself the Messiah, the King of Israel, and promising to believe on him, if he can give an instance of the power he assumed, by unfastening himself from the tree, and coming down before them all. Nay, even the very thieves who hung by his side, vented their rage and reviling against him, so hardened even in the jaws of death. Whilst with horror and amaze at such wickedness we read and tremble, let us fear that we do not repeat those crimes we so condemn, by our sins crucifying the Son of God afresh, and putting him to open shame.

d Amos 8. 9. Is. 50. 3. Mat. 27. 45—53. Luke 23. 44—46.

33. ¶ And [d] when the sixth hour was come, there was darkness over the whole [*] land until the ninth hour. 34. And at the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, [e] Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani? which is, being interpreted, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? 35. And some of them that stood by, when they heard it, said, [f] Behold, he calleth Elias. 36. And one ran and filled a spunge full of [g] vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink, saying, Let alone; let us see whether Elias will come to take him down. 37. And [h] Jesus cried with a loud voice, and gave up the ghost. 38. ¶ [i] And the vail of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom. 39. ¶ [k] And when the centurion, which stood over against him, saw that he so cried out, and gave up the ghost, he said, [l] Truly this man was the Son of God. 40. [m] There were also women looking on afar off: among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the less and of Joses, and Salome: 41. (Who also, when he was in Galilee, followed him, and ministered unto him;) and many other women who came up with him unto Jerusalem.

* Or earth.

e Eloi is the Syriac as well as the Hebrew word for my God. Mat. 27. 46. Ps. 22. 1—21. & 69. 1—21. & 109. 4. Heb. 5. 7.

f Ps. 56. 5. Mat. 11. 14. & 17. 11—13. ch. 9. 11—13.

g Ver. 23. Ps. 69. 21. Mat. 27. 34, 48. Luke 23. 36. John 19. 29.

h Mat. 27. 50. Luke 23. 46. John 19. 30. & 10. 11, 15, 18. Is. 53. 10. Dan. 9. 26. Heb. 5. 7. Ps. 22. 15.

i Exod. 26. 31. 2 Chr. 3. 14. Mat. 27. 51. Luke 23. 45. Heb. 6. 19. & 10. 19. Eph. 2. 14, 18.

k Mat. 27. 54—56. Luke 23. 47—49.

l Mat. 3. 17. & 8. 27. & 14. 13. & 16. 16. John 1. 49. & 6. 69. Acts 8. 37.

m Luke 8. 2, 3. & 23. 48, 49. & 7. 37—50. Mat. 27. 55, 56. & 20. 20, 21. & 13. 55. John 19. 25. & 20. 1—18. Ps. 38. 11.

Verses 33—41. Death at last brings the welcome release from such uncommon wretchedness, after Jesus had hung on the tree about six hours; during which we are told,

1. The dreadful darkness that for the three last hours covered the earth, portending that fearful state of blindness and hardness of heart to which the Jewish people were now abandoned for their wickedness. The Sun of Righteousness was now setting, to rise on them no more; and most justly do those who hate the light, deserve to be deprived of it, and to be left to the darkness of their fallen minds.

2. The darkness of the sun was but the emblem of the more dreadful darkness which involved the Redeemer's soul, and extorted from him that exceeding bitter cry, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? Such a complaint from the mouth of the Son of God may well amaze every hearer. The arrows of wrath now drank up his spirit, the powers of darkness struggled with their might, and all that Jesus could endure was laid upon him. Never had such an hour passed since the sun began its revolutions; nor shall be again, till he is plucked from his sphere.

3. Astonishingly hardened, notwithstanding all that had passed, some that stood by mocked him, as if he now wanted Elias to come; and running and filling a sponge with vinegar, they put it to his lips, the more to insult him; while others said, Let alone; let us see whether Elias will appear to save him or no. Thus they regarded him as abandoned of God, and concluded, that none on earth or heaven desired to help him.

4. Having finished the atonement, he dismissed his spirit, and left the lifeless corpse upon the tree. He cried with a loud voice, not as one worn out with pains, but as a triumphant conqueror, and vanquished as he fell, by death destroying him that had the power of death, that is the devil.

5. At that instant the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom, intimating the abolition of the ritual service, the rending the Jewish state in pieces, and the access opened now through the cross of Jesus, and his body there offered, for every sinner into the holiest of all; God being reconciled through the blood of his cross, and willing to receive all that come unto him through this dying Redeemer.

6. The amazing cry, and sudden departure of Jesus, deeply affected the Roman centurion, under whose command the soldiers were; and, convinced by what he saw and heard of his innocence, and the truth of that assertion for which he suffered, he could not but confess, that this was verily the Son of God. He was the first fruits of the Gentile confessors, and appointed to bear testimony to the Redeemer's glory in the hour of his deepest humiliation.

7. Those pious women who had followed Jesus from Galilee, and supported him out of their substance, continued with him to the last. The names of some of them are mentioned to their everlasting honour. Mary Magdalene was one; much had been forgiven her, and she thus proved how much she loved the Saviour in return: and Mary the mother of James the Less, so called probably from his low stature: and Salome, the mother of Zebedee's children: and now all their hopes seemed to be extinguished by the death of their Lord. Thus when we seem sunk into the lowest depths, then doth the glory of God more eminently appear in raising our desponding souls, and filling us with the triumphs of faith and joy.

42. ¶ [n] And now when the even was come, (because it was the preparation, that is, the day before the sabbath,) 43. [o] Joseph of Arimathea, an honourable counsellor, which also waited for the kingdom of God, came, and went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus. 44. [p] And Pilate marvelled if he were already dead: and calling unto him the centurion, he asked him whether he had been any while dead. 45. And when [q] he knew it of the centurion, he gave the body to Joseph. 46. [r] And he bought fine linen, and took him down, and wrapped him in the linen, and [s] laid him in a sepulchre which was hewn out of a rock, and rolled a stone unto the door of the sepulchre. 47. [t] And Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of Joses, beheld where he was laid.

n Mat. 27. 57—61. Luke 23. 50—56. John 19. 38—42. The word answering to evening is used with some latitude in scripture. The first began at the ninth hour' answering to our 3 o'clock afternoon. And this is probably the period meant here.

o Ps. 22. 29. Is. 53. 9. Luke 2. 25, 38.

p John 19. 33. ver. 37.

q John 19. 31—34. Mat. 27. 58.

r Mat. 27. 59, 60. Luke 23. 52, 53. John 19. 40—42.

s Is. 53. 9. Ps. 22. 15. Hos. 13. 14. 1 Cor. 15. 4. Mat. 12. 40.

t Mat. 27. 61. Luke 23. 55, 56. Mat. 28. 1. ch. 16. 1.

Verses 42—47. Nothing now remained but to take down the bodies as the evening approached, longer than which they were forbidden to hang there; and also, it being the preparation of the sabbath, the work needed to be hastened. But who shall perform this last kind office to the corpse of Jesus? The Lord hath prepared an unexpected person for the service, Joseph of Arimathea, a person of distinction, a counsellor, probably one of the great Sanhedrim, a secret disciple of Jesus: and who, notwithstanding his sufferings and death, expected that this glorious kingdom would come, and in faith waited for it.

1. He went in boldly to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus, when none of his apostles or followers had the courage to own him. Pilate, who could hardly believe that Christ was yet dead, called the centurion, and when he was assured of the fact, readily granted Joseph's request, and gave an order for delivering the body. Note, (1.) In Christ's cause we have need of courage. They who dare appear on the side of the people that are every where spoken against, must not be shamefaced. (2.) God hath his chosen among the great, the noble, and honourable counsellors; though not many, yet enow to leave the rest inexcusable in their infidelity.

2. Joseph with great respect having taken down the mangled corpse of his Lord, and wrapped it in fine linen bought for the occasion, interred the body in his own new tomb, which was hewn out of a rock, and closed the door with a large stone; whilst the two Marys, who had continued near the cross, now followed their master to his grave, and marked the place, intending after the sabbath to embalm the corpse. Note, (1.) They who love the Lord Jesus, serve him with their best, and count nothing too much to bestow for his honour. (2.) In the grave of Jesus the poor sinner beholds with joy all his iniquities buried, and never more shall they rise up to condemn or destroy him. (3.) Visits to the grave are very useful; they serve to quicken us to prepare for our great change.

CHAP. XVI.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

Christ here, 1. Rises from the dead, ver. 1—8. 2. Appears to Mary Magdalene, ver. 9—11. 3. To two of his disciples; then to the eleven, ver. 12—14. 4. Invests them with their commission to preach the gospel, ver. 15—18. He ascends into heaven, ver. 19, 20.

1. AND [a] when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him. 2. [b] And very early in the morning, the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun.* 3. And they said among themselves, [c] Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre? 4. And when they looked, they saw that [d] the stone was rolled away; for it was very great. 5. [e] And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted. 6. And he saith unto them, [f] Be not affrighted: ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: [g] he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him. 7. But go your way, tell his disciples, and Peter, that he goeth before you into Galilee: [h] there shall ye see him, as he said unto you. 8. [i] And they went out quickly, and fled† from the sepulchre; for they trembled, and were amazed: neither said they any thing to any man; for they were afraid.

a Mat. 28. 1—8. Luke 23. 56. & 24. 1—12.

b Luke 24. 1. John 20. 1. Mat. 28. 1.

* Or, about sunrise.

c Ps. 14. 5. ch. 5. 36. Mat. 6. 34.

d Ch. 15. 46. Mat. 27. 60, 66. & 28. 2. Luke 24. 2.

e John 20. 11, 12. Mat. 28. 6. Dan. 10. 4, 5. Rev. 18. 1. Luke 1. 12, 19. Dan. 8. 17, 27. & 10. 8, 16, 17.

f Mat. 28. 4. Luke 24. 5. Is. 41. 10, 14. Rev. 1. 17, 18. ch. 5. 36.

g John 2. 19. Mat. 12. 40. & 16. 21. & 17. 23. & 20. 19. 1 Cor. 15. 4. Ps. 16. 10.

h Mat. 26. 32. & 23. 10, 16. ch. 14. 28. John 20. 19. & 21. 1. Acts 1. 3. & 10. 41. & 13. 31. 1 Cor. 15. 5.

i Mat. 28. 8. Luke 24. 9. John 20. 18. Eccl. 9. 10.

† Or, and they, getting out, fled.

Verses 1—8. No sooner was the sabbath past, during which Christ had lain in the grave, than we find,

1. Early in the morning on the first day of the week, the pious women, who the preceding evening had provided spices for embalming the body, little expecting his resurrection from the dead, set out from the city for the sepulchre, which they reached just at sun-rising; and by the way having expressed to each other their concern how to roll back the ponderous stone from the mouth of the cave, to their surprise they beheld it already done for them. Note. (1.) Though difficulties at a distance seem insurmountable, when we go on steadily depending upon God, we shall often meet with unexpected assistances. (2.) It is mentioned to their distinguished honour, how assiduous and faithful the women who followed Jesus proved, when the men forsook him. The weaker vessel is often seen to be the stronger Christian.

2. An angel appears to them. As they entered into the sepulchre, to their great surprise and terror, they beheld one in the likeness of a young man, in long white robes, sitting within. But the angel soon quieted their fears: bid them not be terrified; he knew their business there was to seek the crucified Jesus; and, to their inexpressible joy, informs them, he is no longer numbered with the dead, but risen. There was the place where he lay: they are therefore enjoined without delay to carry the glad tidings to Peter and the rest of the apostles, and to tell them, according to his promise, that their glorified Master will meet them in Galilee, and make them happy with his presence and converse. Note, (1.) We are often apt to fear where no fear is, and to dread our mercies as miseries. (2.) They who seek a crucified Jesus are sure to find comfort to their souls. (3.) Though we for our unfaithfulness might justly be left to mourn our folly, Christ is a compassionate Saviour, willing to pardon, and in haste to speak peace to the souls of his afflicted disciples. (4.) Peter is particularly mentioned; had he not, perhaps he would have thought the message was good news for the rest, but not for him, as having rendered himself unworthy the name of a disciple: but where sin hath abounded, there will the Lord make his grace much more to abound. (5.) They who know the joy of meeting Jesus, and of his spiritual presence in the ordinances of his worship, will not count the way long to go, where his word is dispensed, and his voice is still heard.

3. The women ran eagerly to carry the message, trembling with a mixture of surprise and joy, and spoke to no man by the way, afraid the news was too good to be true, or that the Jews would be exasperated if they heard it, and say they had stolen the body. Note, The great good news of a finished salvation, perfect and entire in Christ Jesus, appears to the trembling sinner almost beyond belief.

9. ¶ Now when Jesus was risen early, the first day of the week, [k] he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils. 10. [l] And she went and told them that had been with him, as they mourned and wept. 11. And they, when they had heard that he k John 20. 14, 16 Luke 8. 2. & 7 37, 50. ch. 15. 40, 47.

l Luke 24. 10, 11 John 20. 17, 18. & 16. 20. Mat. 9. 15. & 5. 4. Jer. 31. 13—20. Ezek. 7. 16. Is. 66. 2.

was alive, and had been seen of her, [m] believed not. 12. ¶ After that he appeared in another form [n] unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country. 13. [o] And they went and told it unto the residue: neither believed they them.

m Exod. 6. 9. ver. 13, 17. Luke 24. 11, 25. & 16. 31.

n Luke 24. 13—35. with 16. 31.

o Luke 24. 34, 35. & 21. 25. & 16. 31.

Verses 9—13. Christ here appears,

1. On the morning he arose, to Mary Magdalene, that remarkable sinner, out of whom he had cast seven devils. Sometimes the greatest sinners prove the greatest saints, and dearest to the Saviour. She immediately carried the joyful news to the eleven, who, inconsolable, with bitter anguish lamented their departed Lord, and their own unfaithfulness to him, and seemed sunk in despair of ever seeing him again. Nay, so slow of heart were they to believe, notwithstanding the repeated predictions Christ had given them of his rising from the dead, that they received her declarations as a mere fancy, and imagined her deceived by some spectre or apparition. Note, (1.) The most reviving comforts usually are sent when we are most dejected and desponding. (2.) The very incredulity of the disciples tends to the confirmation of our faith: it shows, they were not themselves willing to believe, but upon the most indubitable evidence.

2. The same day at evening he appeared to two others of his disciples, who were going towards Emmaus, a village about seven miles from Jerusalem; but perhaps being in a different dress from what he usually wore, and their eyes being holden that they should not know him, Luke xxiv. 16—31. they conversed with him for a while, and at last their eyes were opened, and they knew him: whereupon they instantly returned to acquaint their brethren; and even then they would not be persuaded, though the witnesses were so unexceptionable.

14. ¶ [p] Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat * at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because [q] they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen. 15. [q] And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. 16. [r] He that believeth † and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not ‡ shall be damned. ‖ 17. [s] And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; 18. [t] They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover.

p Luke 24. 36—46. John 20. 19—29. 1 Cor. 15. 5, 7.

* Or together.

q Mat. 28. 19. Luke 24. 47. Acts 1. 8. Is. 2. 2, 3. & 52. 10. John 15. 16. Rom. 10. 18. Col. 1. 6, 23. Is. 45. 22.

r John 3. 3, 5, 16, 18, 36. & 12. 48. Acts 2. 38. & 8. 37. 1 Pet. 3. 21. Rom. 10. 9.

† Or, He that shall believe.

‡ Or, he who will not believe.

‖ Rather, shall be condemned.

s Luke 10. 17. Acts 2. 4. & 5. 16. & 8. 7. & 10. 46. & 19. 6. 1 Cor. 12. 10, 28. Acts 16. 18.

t Acts 28. 5, 8. Luke 10. 19. Jam. 5. 14, 15. John 14. 12.

Verses 14—18. Since they are so loath to believe the report of others, Jesus condescends to put the matter beyond dispute, by appearing himself the same evening unto all the apostles, except Thomas, as they were sitting at table together.

1. He upbraids them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, that they were so backward to receive the testimony of those who had seen him, notwithstanding the many assurances of his rising again, which he had given them before his death. Note, (1.) Unbelief is a most besetting sin, and highly displeasing to the Lord Jesus. (2.) Naturally we are indisposed to believe farther than we can see; and yet, if even we did see, it would not truly produce faith in any soul that is not satisfied with the evidence of the gospel.

2. He solemnly invests them with authority to go and preach the gospel among all nations, and to confirm their mission by the miracles he would enable them to work. This transaction passed, it should seem, not at the time of his first appearing to them, but afterwards, just before his ascension.

[1.] He enlarges their commission to go into all the world, and to preach that gospel, which had been hitherto confined to the Jewish people, to every human creature, as far as their labours would reach; with power also to send out others, as fellow-labourers with them, to spread the savour of the truth in every place.

[2.] The summary of their preaching must be faith in the Son of God, in his life, death, and resurrection; the necessity of the salvation obtained by his obedience and sufferings for lost sinners; the fulness and all-sufficiency of it to procure pardon, life, and glory for all who trust in him: and the sin and danger of those who reject this method of divine wisdom and love, and refuse obedience to the faith of the gospel, their damnation being as inevitable, as the salvation of those who believe in Jesus, and in consequence thereof make open profession of their faith, and are by baptism received into the bosom of the church, is sure and certain. Note, Under the gospel none perish because of the greatness of their sins, but because they sin against the remedy, and seal themselves up under wrath by their unbelief.

[3.] In confirmation of their doctrine they are empowered to work the most astonishing miracles. In the name of Jesus, depending on his power, and to advance his gospel, they shall be enabled to cast out devils from those that were possessed; to speak with new tongues, which they had never learned, with the most entire fluency and readiness, as if they had severally been their native language. They shall take up serpents, the most venomous, without the least harm, see Acts xxviii. 3—6. If they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; when thus openly or secretly their persecutors might strive to make away with them. They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover, every disease giving way to their healing touch. And these miraculous powers they not only possessed themselves, but were enabled to impart to others, and were continued till Christianity got firm footing in the world: since which these miracles, being no longer necessary, are ceased.

19. ¶ So then, after the Lord had [u] spoken unto them, he was [x] received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God. 20. And [y] they went forth and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Amen.

u John 20. 20—22. & 21. 15—22. Mat. 28. 18—20. Acts 1. 23.

x Luke 24. 50, 51. Ps. 110. 1. Acts 1. 2, 3, 9. & 3. 21. & 7. 55. Heb. 1. 3. & 4. 14. & 8. 1. & 10. 12. Rev. 3. 21. & 5. 6. John 16. 5, 28. & 17. 5, 13.

y Acts ii—xix. & 1. 4. & 14. 3. Rom. 10. 18. & 15. 19. 1 Cor. 3. 6, 9. & 15. 10. 2 Cor. 6. 1. Heb. 2. 4.

Verses 19, 20. When our Lord had thus commissioned and qualified them for the great work he had committed to their charge, we see him,

1. Ascending to his throne of glory, and exalted to the right hand of the Majesty on high. Having finished the work of redemption in behalf of his people, all power is put into his hands, to bestow eternal life on as many as the Father hath given him, and to reign in and over them as his faithful subjects; whilst his enemies, as vanquished, must bow before him, and whether they are devils or wicked men, will shortly receive from his lips their eternal doom.

2. We see them going forth according to their Master's orders, preaching the gospel in defiance of all opposition from earth and hell, the Lord supporting them against all their persecutors, giving the most amazing success to their labours; by wondrous miracles attesting their mission to be divine; and by the power of the Holy Ghost making their word powerfully effectual to the conversion of the hearts of innumerable multitudes. And this sign will ever follow the gospel to the end of time; wherever it is preached in spirit and in truth, it will be found the power of God unto salvation: and as the Evangelist adds his Amen hereunto, so are we also bound to do, assured that thus it will be, and praying that thus it may be; that the word may daily run and be glorified, till the ends of the earth shall remember themselves, and be turned to the Lord, and all flesh shall see the salvation of our God. Amen. So come, Lord Jesus!

A PRACTICAL COMMENT UPON THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO St LUKE.

Introduction.

The penman of this Epistle is Luke; of what country is uncertain: I incline to their opinion who suppose him a native Israelite. He was, it seems, a Physician, Col. iv. 14. and though Religio Medici is used as a proverb, we find an Evangelist of that profession. He is mentioned with honour as the companion of the blessed Apostle Paul in his prison, 2 Tim. iv. 11. and is supposed to be that brother so esteemed in the churches, 2 Cor. viii. 18. The date of his gospel is not fixed, some regarding him as the first of the Evangelists; others say, he wrote during his travels with Paul in Achaia, about seventeen years after Christ's ascension; and many conclude it was written at Rome, during Paul's imprisonment, and just before the history of the Acts of the Apostles; and then it will be fixed about the twenty-seventh year after Christ, and the fourth of the reign of Nero; but whenever or wherever he composed it, it is generally received as genuine, and written by divine inspiration, and, as such, stands among the records of our holy religion.

CHAP. I.—YEAR OF THE WORLD, 4000.

In this chapter we have, 1. Luke's preface to his gospel, ver. 1—4. 2. The prophecy and history of the conception of John Baptist, who was Christ's forerunner, ver. 5—25. 3. The annunciation of the virgin Mary, ver. 26—38. 4. The interview between Mary the mother of Jesus, and Elizabeth the mother of John, ver. 39—56. 5. The birth and circumcision of John Baptist, six months before the birth of Christ, ver. 57—66. 6. Zacharias's song of praise, in thankfulness for the birth of John, and in prospect of the birth of Jesus, ver. 67—69. 7. A short account of John Baptist's infancy, ver. 80.

a John 1. 14. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Acts 1. 1—3, 21, 22. & 4. 20. 1 John 1. 1—3. 2 Pet. 1. 16—18. b Ch. 24. 48. Acts 1. 3, 8, 21. & 4. 20. & 10. 41. Heb. 2. 3. 2 Pet. 1. 16. 1 John 1. 1—3. c Acts 15. 19, 25, 28. 1 Cor. 7. 40. Heb. 2. 3. 1 Thes. 1. 5. & 2. 13. d Acts 1. 1. 1 Sam. 2. 30.

1. FORASMUCH as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of [a] those things which are most surely believed among us, 2. Even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were [b] eye-witnesses, and ministers of the word; 3. [c] It seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write unto thee in order, [d] most excellent Theophilus, 4. [e] That thou mightest know the certainty of those things wherein thou hast been instructed.

e John 20. 31. 1 Pet. 1. 10. 2 Pet. 1. 15, 19. 1 Thes. 1. 5. & 2. 13.

Verses 1—4. Dedications are usually but the feather with which flattery tickles the pride of the great: but here is one, whose simplicity bespeaks the Christian spirit of the author, and recommends the book not to the patronage of his noble friend, as needing his countenance, but to the consideration of his pupil, in order to instruct his conscience, and direct his practice.

The evangelist opens with his reason for writing. Because many had undertaken to publish narratives of the birth, life, doctrines, miracles, sufferings, death, and resurrection of Jesus, who, though probably well-meaning disciples, wrote under no infallible guidance of the Spirit; it appeared therefore to be the will of God, and highly proper, that he should compose a connected history, and particular account of all things from the beginning, to prevent the errors and mistakes which might arise from uninspired writings.

1. He professes to confine himself to the things most surely believed among the faithful: not matters of doubtful disputation, but facts established by the most indubitable evidence of those who from the beginning were eye-witnesses, and ministers of the word; heard the doctrines, and saw the miracles of Jesus, were divinely commissioned by him to go forth and preach the gospel he had delivered to them.

2. He was fully qualified for the work he undertook, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first; and this not merely received by tradition from the best attested reports, but as the words (παρηκολουθηκοτι ανωθεν) may be rendered, having attained to the exact understanding of all things from above; which inspiration he had diligently sought, and sacredly followed.

3. The end he proposed was, that Theophilus, whom he addressed with the respectable title of most excellent, being, it seems, a man of rank and fashion, might know the certainty of those things, wherein he had been instructed, or catechised. Probably Luke had been the means of his conversion, and had taught him by word of mouth the great principles of the Christian religion; and therefore, that his memory might be assisted, his knowledge increased, and his faith more firmly established in the truths of the gospel, he drew up the following history. Note, (1.) The gospel of Jesus Christ is not a cunningly devised fable, but contains facts supported by the most incontestable evidence, and truths, the most sure and certain, wherein our faith may stand unshaken. (2.) Catechising was the ancient method of communicating to the youth, and newly-converted persons, the knowledge of the great doctrines of religion; and perhaps our present deplorable ignorance is owing to no one cause more than to the perfunctory discharge or total neglect of this most useful method of instruction. (3.) Christianity, though it forbids to give flattering titles, enjoins us to pay honour to whom honour is due; it teaches us politeness without falsehood; simplicity without rudeness; respect without servility; and courtesy without cringing.

Before the common account called Anno Domini, the 4th year.

5. ¶ THERE was [f] in the days of Herod, the king of Judea, a certain priest named Zacharias, [g] of the course of Abia: and his wife was of the daughters of Aaron, and her name was Elisabeth. 6. [h] And they were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless. 7. [i] And they had no child, because that Elisabeth was barren; and they both were now well stricken in years. 8. And it came to pass, that, while [k] he executed the priest's office before God in the order of his course, 9. [l] According to the custom of the priest's office, his lot was to burn incense when he went into the temple of the Lord. 10. [m] And the whole multitude of the people were praying without at the time of incense. 11. [n] And there appeared unto him an angel of the Lord standing on the right side of [o] the altar of incense. 12. And when Zacharias saw him, [p] he was troubled, and fear fell upon him. 13. But the angel said unto him, [q] Fear not, Zacharias: [r] for thy prayer is heard; and thy wife Elisabeth shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John. 14. And [s] thou shalt have joy and gladness, and many shall rejoice at his birth. 15. For he shall be [t] great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink; and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb. 16. [u] And many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God. 17. And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient * to the wisdom of the just, to make ready a people prepared for [x] the Lord. 18. ¶ And Zacharias said unto the angel, [y] Whereby shall I know this? for I am an old man, and my wife well stricken in years. 19. And the angel answering, said unto him, [z] I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God; and am sent to speak unto thee, and to shew thee these glad tidings. 20. And, behold, [a] thou shalt be dumb, and not able to speak, until the day that these things shall be performed, [b] because thou believest not my words, which shall be fulfilled in their season. 21. And the people [c] waited for Zacharias, and marvelled that he tarried so long in the temple. 22. And when he came out, he could not speak unto them: and they perceived that he had seen a vision in the temple: for he beckoned unto them, and remained speechless. 23. And it came to pass that, as soon as the [d] days of his administration were accomplished, he departed to his own house. 24. ¶ And after those days his wife Elisabeth [e] conceived, and hid herself five months, saying, 25. Thus hath the Lord dealt with me in the days wherein [f] he looked on me, to take away my reproach among men.

f Mat. 2. 1.

g 1 Chr. 24. 5, 10, 19. Neh. 12. 4, 17. This was one of the sacerdotal families into which the whole order was divided by David.

h Gen. 6. 9. & 5. 24. & 17. 1. Job 1. 1, 8. & 1. 2. Ps. 119. 6. 2 Kin. 20. 3. Phil. 3. 6. Acts 24. 16. 2 Cor. 1. 12.

i Gen. 18. 11, 12. & 25. 21. Judg. 13. 3. Josh. 13. 1. 1 Kin. 4. 1.

k 1 Chr. 24. 19. Heb. 9. 6.

l Exod. 30. 7. 1 Chr. 6. 49. & 28. 21. Heb. 9. 6.

m Exod. 30. 7. Lev. 16. 17.

n Heb. 1. 14. Dan. 8. 16. & 9. 21. Zech. 2. 1. & 3. 1. ver. 19, 26. ch. 2. 10.

o See Exod. 30. 1.

p Judg. 13. 20, 22. Dan. 10. 8. Mark 16. 5.

q Judg. 6. 23. Dan. 10. 12. & 12. 23. Rev. 1. 17. ver. 30. ch. 2. 10. Mark 16. 6.

r Gen. 25. 21. 1 Sam. 1. 19. ver. 24, 57—69.

s Gen. 17. 19. ver. 58. John 5. 35. Prov. 15. 20.

t Mat. 11. 9, 18. Num. 6. 3. Judg. 13. 4, 5. Lev. 10. 9. Jer. 1. 5. Gal. 1. 15. ver. 16, 17.

u Mal. 3. 1. & 4. 5, 6. Is. 40. 3—Mat. iii. ch. 3. 1—23. John 1. 6—36. & 3. 23—36. & 5. 33—35. Mat. 11. 14. Mark 9. 12. ver. 76—79.

* Or by. Campbell renders the passage thus: And by the wisdom of the righteous, to render the disobedient a people well disposed for the Lord.

x Mat. 3. 2. Is. 40. 3, 9—11. & 9. 6, 7. John 1. 14, 29. Rom. 9. 5. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Tit. 2. 13.

y Gen. 15. 8. & 17. 17. Judg. 6. 36—40. & 13. 19. Is. 7. 11. & 38. 22.

z Dan. 9. 21—26. & 8. 16. ver. 26. Mat. 18. 10. Heb. 1. 14.

a Ezek. 3. 26. & 24. 27.

b Gen. 18. 10, 12, 13. Num. 20. 12. Is. 7. 9. Rom. 3. 3. Num. 23. 19. Heb. 6. 18. Tit. 1. 2.

c For the blessing. Num. 6. 23—26.

d That is, his week, for it lasted no longer at one turn. 2 Kin. 11. 5. 1 Chr. 9. 25. Heb. 9. 6. & 5. 1.

e Gen. 21. 1, 2. & 25. 21. & 30. 22, 23. 1 Sam. 1. 19, 20. Judg. 13. 5.

f Gen. 21. 1, 2. & 30. 23. 1 Sam. 1. 6. Is. 4. 1. & 54. 1, 4.

Verses 5—25. The other evangelists commenced their history from the conception and birth of Jesus; Luke begins farther back, with that of John the Baptist, his forerunner, which was attended with extraordinary circumstances well deserving our regard.

1. We have an account of his parents. They lived in the reign of Herod, an Idumean, who held his kingdom under the Roman emperor. Both Zacharias and Elisabeth were of the sacerdotal family; he was of the course of Abia, the eighth of those four and twenty into which the priests were divided, 1 Chron. xxiv. 7—19. To the honour of this aged pair it is recorded, that their piety was most exemplary; they approved themselves to God in a holy blameless conversation, living by faith in the expected Messiah, whom they regarded in the use of all the divine institutions, and were sincerely observant of all the ordinances of worship, and duties of morality. But notwithstanding the distinguished excellence of their characters, it was their infelicity to be destitute of children, Elisabeth being barren, and both of them now so advanced in years, as in the common course of nature to deprive them of the hope of issue. Note, (1.) In the worst of times God preserves some faithful ones, as eminent instances of his grace, and reprovers of the world which lieth in wickedness. (2.) Our mercies are often long deferred to make them at last the more welcome.

2. An angel appeared to Zacharias as he was discharging his ministry in the temple. The services to be performed by the course in waiting were determined by lot; his office was to burn incense in the sanctuary; and whilst this was performing, the holy worshippers without in silent aspirations lifted up their prayers to God, expecting acceptance through the intercession of Christ, which the smoke of the incense offered by the priests represented, see Rev. 1—4. And whilst Zacharias was thus employed, an angel of the Lord appeared to him on the right side of the altar of incense; and, struck with the glorious sight and unusual appearance, Zacharias trembled, and feared greatly what such a vision might portend. Note, (1.) Visits from another world may well fill even good men with terror, not only through the weakness of the humanity, but also from the consciousness of their guilt and sinfulness. (2.) Prayer is the service God's people never neglect; and herein their care is to lift up their hearts unto God, not so solicitous about the choice of words, as that internal fervent desires may speak the language of their souls. (3.) All our services and prayers must be offered through the mediation of Jesus, for then only they can be acceptable unto God.

3. The angel delivers to him the message with which he was sent. Having first kindly quieted his fears, he assures him of gracious acceptance with God, and an answer to his prayers. Probably at that time he had particularly been crying for the coming of the promised Messiah, as he had formerly often asked for a son, and both are now granted him; the latter first, in order to introduce the former. Thy wife Elisabeth, so long barren, and now aged, shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John, which signifies gracious, and was most admirably suited for him who should be so great in spiritual gifts and graces, and the harbinger of the Messiah and his kingdom. And thou shalt have joy and gladness; not only in him, as a welcome child given after so long waiting, but in the view of the high character and office he is ordained to bear: and many shall rejoice at his birth: congratulating his parents on such an unexpected blessing. And it will afford yet farther cause of joy to multitudes, who afterwards shall be blessed with his ministry and labours; for he shall be great in the sight of the Lord; highly honoured of God, and blessed with singular endowments from him; and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink; a Nazarite from his birth; for it becomes those designed for eminent services, to live a life of eminent self-denial, and deadness to sensual delights. He shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb; sanctified, set apart, and qualified fully for the ministry to which he was appointed; and many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God, the Messiah, their incarnate God, then ready to appear; and he shall go before him, as his messenger and harbinger, the morning star that ushers in the rising sun; in the spirit and power of Elias; endued with the zeal of that eminent reformer, and in austerity of manners nearly resembling him: to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children; either the Jews to the Gentiles, removing their prejudices and enmity against them; or with the children, converting young and old by his preaching; and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just, convincing the most rebellious sinners, and leading them to Christ for justification, even to the wisdom that maketh wise unto salvation: and thus to make ready a people prepared for the Lord; raising their expectations of him, removing their prejudices, and pointing him personally out to them as their Lord and Saviour; or prepared by the Lord, according to his eternal counsels ordained to life and glory, and now by John's ministry to be called to faith in the Son of God. Note, (1.) Though our requests are long delayed, they are not therefore denied; and the mercy at last comes enhanced in value, as the answer of many prayers. (2.) True greatness is not to be estimated by outward grandeur or wealth; God's favour, and the possession of the gifts and graces of his Spirit, these alone make a man great in his eyes who is the fountain of honour. (3.) The great end of a zealous minister of God's word is to convert the souls of men, and turn them to the Lord Jesus: nor need they despair of the most disobedient sinners: almighty grace can bend the most stubborn heart.

4. Zacharias, looking at human probabilities, staggered at the promise through unbelief, and wanted some further sign to remove his doubts. He and his wife being now grown old, the age as well as barrenness of Elisabeth made him regard the event as incredible: very unlike a son of Abraham, Rom. iv. 19, 20.

5. The angel gives him the sign he asked, and therewith the just punishment of his unbelief. I am Gabriel; my very appearance to you should have been sufficient to beget confidence in my word; because that I stand in the presence of God, attentive to his orders, and employed in his service; and am sent expressly to thee with this message, and to show thee these glad tidings, which should have been received with thankfulness and joy: but since thou askest a sign, behold, thou shalt be dumb, and no more able to object to the truth of what I say, and not able to speak, until the day that these things shall be performed, as a punishment upon thee, because thou hast not believed my words, which, notwithstanding all obstacles unbelief suggests, shall be fulfilled in their season. Note, (1.) Our unbelief is very dishonourable and displeasing to God. (2.) God's promises will take effect, notwithstanding our unbelief: and though we suffer for our distrusts of him, he will not cast us off from him.

6. Zacharias returns to the people, who wondered at the length of his stay in the temple, and were waiting for the usual benediction before they retired. And their wonder increased, when coming forth he was unable to speak a word, and by his signs they perceived he had seen a vision in the temple, and for a time continued deaf and dumb, see ver. 62. The Aaronical priesthood was now about to be silenced, and the dumb signs of typical institutions to be set aside by the clear voice of gospel grace.

7. The angelic message quickly received its accomplishment. Having stayed out the days of his ministration in the temple, he returned home with his wife, who immediately conceived by him: and thereupon, as she was to bring forth a Nazarite, kept herself for five months close retired from all company, that she might contract no ceremonial uncleanness; spending the time in thankfulness, praise, and devotion; blessing God for the singular mercy, in removing the reproach of barrenness from her, under which she had so long laboured, and at last bestowing on her, in so extraordinary a way, that son who should be the harbinger of the Messiah. Note, In all our mercies God is ever to be acknowledged; and particularly we are assured, that children and the fruit of the womb are the heritage and gift that cometh from the Lord.

26. ¶ And in the [g] sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto [h] a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, 27. [i] To a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary. 28. And the angel came in unto her, and said, [k] Hail, thou that art [l] highly favoured, [m] the Lord is with thee: [n] blessed g Ver. 24, 30.

h John 7. 41, 52. & 1. 46. Mat. 2. 23.
i Is. 7. 14. Jer. 31. 22. Gen. 3. 15. Mat. 1. 18. ch. 2. 4, 5. k Ver. 30, 42. Judg. 5. 24. & 6. 12. Ruth 2. 4. & 3. 10. Prov. 11. 16. Eph. 1. 6.
l Or graciously accepted, or much graced; see ver. 30.
m Gen. 18. 15. Is. 41. 10, 14. Rom. 8. 31. 2 Tim. 4. 22.
n Judg. 5. 24. ch. 11. 27, 28.

art thou among women. 29. And when she saw him, [o] she was troubled at his saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be. 30. And the angel said unto her, [p] Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favour with God. 31. [q] And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS. 32. [r] He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him [s] the throne of his father David: 33. [t] And he shall reign over the house of [u] Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end. 34. Then said Mary unto the angel, [x] How shall this be, seeing I know not a man? 35. And the angel answered and said unto her, [y] The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called [z] the Son of God. 36. [a] And, behold, thy cousin Elisabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age: and this is the sixth month with her, who was called barren. 37. For [b] with God nothing shall be impossible. 38. And Mary said, [c] Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word. And the angel departed from her.

o See ver. 12.
p See ver. 13. Is. 41. 10, 14. Rev. 1. 17. ch. 2. 10. & 9. 50. Mat. 28. 5.
q Is. 7. 14. Mat. 1. 21. Gen. 3. 15. Jer. 31. 22. Gal. 4. 4. ch. 2. 21.
r Is. 9. 6, 7. Mat. 28. 18. Tit. 2. 13. Phil. 2. 9—11. Is. 9. 6. s 2 Sam. 7. 12. Ps. 132. 11. Is. 16. 5.
t Dan. 7. 14. & 2. 44. Mic. 4. 7. Ps. 72. 8. & 89. 36, 37. Is. 9. 6, 7. & 54. 5. Amos 9. 11. 1 Tim. 6. 15. 1 Pet. 1. 11. 1 Cor. 15. 24. John 12. 34. Heb. 1. 8. & 12. 28. Obad. 21. Eph. 1. 22. u Gal. 6. 16. Rom. 9. 6.
x Mat. 13. 36.
y Gen. 3. 15. Is. 7. 14. Dan. 2. 34. Jer. 31. 22. Mat. 1. 20. Dan. 9. 24.
z Is. 7. 14. & 9. 6. Rom. 1. 3, 4. & 9. 5. & 8. 3. Gal. 4. 4. John 1. 14. & 3. 16. & 10. 30. Gal. 2. 20.
a Ver. 24—26. Mal. 3. 1. Is. 40. 3. b Gen. 17. 1. & 18. 14. Jer. 32. 17, 27. Zech. 8. 6. ch. 18. 27. Mat. 19. 26. Job 9. 10. & 42. 2. Rom. 8. 31. c 2 Sam. 7. 25, 29. Mark 9. 24. 2 Chr. 20. 20. Jer. 11. 5. Mat. 15. 28.

Verses 26—38. Six months after the former miraculous conception of Elisabeth, the same angel Gabriel is sent on a more important message, to foretell the conception and birth of the Lord's Christ. We have here,

1. The person from whom the human nature of the Son of God was to be taken. Her name was Mary; of the royal race of David, but now reduced to very mean circumstances: a virgin unspotted, espoused to Joseph of the same royal line; dwelling in a remote corner of the land, and in a place despicable almost to a proverb, see John i. 46.

2. The angel's address and salutation. Hail, thou that art highly favoured, &c. He wishes her all peace, prosperity, and joy; assures her of the favour of the Most High; that his gracious presence was with her; and that she of all others was singled out to be distinguished with peculiar honour, and to be called blessed in all generations, as the mother of the adored Messiah. The popish plea for the adoration of the Virgin Mary, taken from hence, is absurd, and utterly unsupported; these words in no wise implying prayer, or worship, but merely a friendly salutation.

3. Mary's surprise on the angel's appearance and address. She was greatly astonished at such an unexpected visit, and the respect paid to her, a woman so unknown and unnoticed; and much perplexed, reasoned with herself what this blessedness should mean, which was pronounced with such solemnity.

4. The angel, to remove the perplexity and confusion under which she appeared, proceeds with his message. Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found favour with God; and when this is the case, all disquieting fears are groundless: and, behold, astonishing as the tidings are, yet true, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, though a virgin immaculate, (Isa. vii. 14.) and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name Jesus, the same as Joshua, or Saviour, of whom the former deliverers of Israel were types and figures. He shall be great, in dignity, person, offices, and works; and shall be called the Son of the Highest; shall really be so, partaking of the same divine nature; and the Lord shall give unto him, as the Messiah, the throne of David his father, from whom, as man he descended, and whose kingdom was typical of that spiritual dominion which Jesus should erect in the hearts of his people, sitting as a king upon his holy hill of Sion, the church of his redeemed; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob, the true Israel of God, whether Jews or Gentiles, brought to the obedience of the faith; and his throne shall be established for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end, enduring as the days of time, and subject to none of the vicissitudes and changes which attend earthly sovereignty; and, when time shall end, this kingdom shall be continued in a more glorious form, coeval with the ages of eternity.

5. The virgin, not distrusting the truth, or questioning the possibility of what he said, humbly desires to be informed by what means this should be brought to pass, seeing she was conscious of her own virginity.

6. He vouchsafes to inform her as much as she need wish to know. The Holy Ghost, the power of the Highest, exerting his almighty influence, will by his immediate agency, as he moved upon the face of the water in the first creation, enable her to conceive: and therefore, because in this miraculous manner the body of the child Jesus should be formed, he shall be a holy thing, from his conception not partaking of the taint of human corruption, as all flesh do in the ordinary course of generation; and shall be called the Son of God, being as such now manifested in the human nature: and that which he conceived, henceforward indissolubly subsisting in personal union with the second person of the sacred Trinity, should henceforth bear his name. And he adds as an encouragement to strengthen her faith in his word, that her cousin Elisabeth, who was by one of her parents allied, it seems, to the house of David, as by the other descended from Aaron, was now with child, though so stricken in years, and in the sixth month of her pregnancy, who had before been barren. The same power therefore which had wrought this miracle, would work this greater one, of which he assured her; for with God nothing is impossible, however it exceeds human power or conception, what he promises he can and will surely perform.

7. Mary, with deep humility and submission, yields herself up to the Lord, as his handmaid, desiring him to do with her whatever he pleased: utterly unworthy so great an honour, yet, since such was his promise, begging it might be fulfilled, and faithfully depending upon the Lord's almighty power and grace. Hereupon the angel departed, having finished the work the Lord had given him to do. Note, (1.) However wonderful and surpassing God's great promises are, it becomes us to credit his word, and rest our everlasting hopes thereon; then we glorify him. (2.) Angelic visions here below were always transient; shortly these blessed spirits will be our companions to eternity.

39. ¶ And Mary arose in those days, and went into the [d] hill country with haste, into a [e] city of Juda; 40. And entered into the house of Zacharias, and saluted Elisabeth. 41. And it came to pass, that, when Elisabeth heard the salutation of Mary, the [f] babe leaped in her womb; and Elisabeth was [g] filled with d Josh. 15. 48—59.

e Probably Hebron. Josh. 15. 54. & 21. 11.
f Jer. 1. 5. Ps. 22. 10.
g Rev. 1. 10. Acts 6. 3.

the Holy Ghost: 42. And she spake out with a loud voice, and said, [h] Blessed art thou among women, and [i] blessed is the fruit of thy womb. 43. [k] And whence is this to me, that the mother of [l] my Lord should come to me? 44. For, lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy. 45. [m] And blessed is she † that believed: for there shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord. 46. ¶ And Mary said, [n] My soul doth magnify the Lord, 47. And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour. 48. [o] For he hath regarded the [p] low estate of his handmaiden: for, behold, from henceforth all generations [q] shall call me blessed. 49. [r] For he that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is his name. 50. [s] And his mercy is on them that fear him from generation to generation. 51. [t] He hath shewed strength with his arm; [u] he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts. 52. [x] He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree. 53. [y] He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich he hath sent empty away. 54. [z] He hath holpen his servant Israel, in remembrance of his mercy; 55. [a] As he spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed for ever. 56. And Mary abode with her about three months, and returned to her own house.

h Ver. 28. Judg. 5. 24.
i Gen. 12. 3. & 22. 17, 18. Ps. 21. 6. & 45. 2. & 72. 17, 19. Rom. 9. 5. 1 Tim. 6. 15.
k Judg. 6. 15 Ruth 2. 10. 2 Sam. 9. 8.
l John 20. 28. Phil. 3. 8, 9. Gal. 2. 20.
m Ch. 11. 28. John 20. 29. 2 Cor. 20. 20. 1 Pet. 1. 8.
† Or which believed that there.
n Ps. 103. 1—6. & 34. 2. & 35. 9, 10. 1 Sam. 2. 1. Is. 24. 16. & 45. 25. & 61. 10. Hab. 3. 17, 18. 2 Cor. 2. 14. Rom. 5. 11. Phil. 3. 3, 4. 1 Tim. 1. 1. Tit. 2. 13.
o 1 Sam. 2. 8. Ps. 113. 6, 7. & 138. 6. 2 Kin. 14. 26. Ps. 25. 18. & 102. 17.
p Or lowliness. Is. 66. 2. 1 Pet. 5. 5.
q Gen. 30. 13. ch. 11. 27. Judg. 5. 24.
r Ps. 71. 19. & 111. 9. & 126. 2, 3.
s Gen. 17. 7. Exod. 20. 6. Ps. 103. 17. & cxxxvi, cxlv. t Is. 59. 1. & 51. 9. & 52. 10. & 40. 10. Ps. 89. 13. & 99. 1.
u Ps. 33. 10. & 89. 10. Is. 29. 16. Exod. 15. 9. Esth. 6. 6. Dan 4. 34. ch. 12. 19, 20. 1 Pet. 5. 5.
x Job 12. 19, 21. 1 Sam. 2. 6—8. Job 5. 11. Ps. 113. 6, 7. Is. 66. 2.
y 1 Sam. 2. 5. Ps. 34. 10. 1 Cor. 1. 26. z Is. 41. 8, 10. & 46. 4. & 30. 18. & 65. 7. Jer. 31. 3, 20. Ps. 98. 3. Mic. 7. 18—20. a Gen. 17. 9, 10. & 22. 18. Ps. 132. 11. Rom. 11. 28, 29. Ps. 103. 17.

Verses 39—56. Quickly after the angel's departure we are informed,

1. Of Mary's visit to her cousin Elisabeth in haste, to confer with her on these strange events, that they might confirm each other's faith, and rejoice in these singular mercies. The journey was long from Galilee to the hill-country of Judea, probably to Hebron, a city of priests; but the converse of such a friend as Elisabeth would repay all her pains. Note, Nothing is more encouraging, comforting, and quickening, than when the faithful communicate their mutual experiences.

2. Their meeting was accompanied with circumstances very remarkable. No sooner had Mary entered the house of Zacharias, and saluted Elisabeth, than the babe, as under a divine impulse, leaped in her womb, seeming to congratulate the blessed Virgin's arrival; and Elisabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost; with the extraordinary afflatus of the divine Spirit, revealing to her mind the Messiah's conception, the message of the angel to Mary, her faith therein, and the sure performance of what was then promised: and addressing her welcome and highly honoured guest, she spoke aloud, with a transport of holy joy, as the Spirit gave her utterance, saying, Blessed art thou among women; distinguished above all others with peculiar marks of divine favour; and, far from envying, Elisabeth warmly congratulated her on the honour; and blessed is the fruit of thy womb, that divine Messiah being there conceived, in whom all nations of the world should be blessed, and who is in himself, in the glory of the divine nature, God over all blessed for ever. And whence is this to me? how great the condescension, that the mother of my Lord should come to me? that she should honour me with her company, from whom a body is preparing for the great Lord of all to appear in the human nature. For lo! with wonder hear what wonder I relate; as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy, as if conscious of the nearness of his Lord, and welcoming her who should bring forth that Messiah, whose harbinger he is appointed to be. And blessed is she that believed; not staggering at the promise, but acquiescing in the divine word, which shall infallibly be accomplished: for there shall be a performance of those things which are told her from the Lord. Note, (1.) True grace makes us thankful for our own mercies, and to rejoice without envy in others' greater attainments. (2.) When the gospel's joyful sound reaches our ears, and the sweet name of Jesus is proclaimed, then should our hearts leap as this babe, and bless the God of our salvation. (3.) Believing souls must be blessed; Christ is now formed in their hearts the hope of glory, and they shall assuredly see the eternal performance of all the great and precious promises which the faithful God hath given them.

3. Mary, deeply affected with the words of Elisabeth, and moved with the same divine inspiration, echoes back her praises, and foresees and foretells the great salvation of the Messiah now in her womb.

[1.] She rejoices in God for the distinguished honour he conferred upon her. My soul doth magnify the Lord, exalting his great and glorious name, and admiring and adoring the wonders of his goodness; and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour; and justly was it a greater cause of joy to her, that she knew herself interested in his salvation, than that after the flesh she should be honoured as his mother; for without the former, the latter could have profited her nothing. For he hath regarded the low state of his handmaiden; though in outward circumstances contemptible and mean, and as a poor sinner, vile and unworthy; he hath been pleased to honour me so highly: for, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed; as distinguished with this singular mark of his favour; as interested through faith in the salvation of Jesus; and as the happy instrument chosen to bring forth that Redeemer, who should be the great blessing of mankind. For he that is mighty hath done to me great things, displaying his power beyond all conception, in the incarnation of his Son, and his sovereign grace to me, appointed to bring him forth; and holy is his name, as all his works and ways declare; therefore from men and angels to him all praise is due; and may it be for ever ascribed to him by all the hosts of earth and heaven! Note, (1.) When Christ is known as our God and Saviour, then shall we rejoice in him, and magnify his name. (2.) The lower we are in our own eyes, the more admiring thoughts shall we have of the distinguishing grace of our Lord.

[2.] She praises him for the wonders he doth for his people in the ways of his providence and grace. His mercy is on them that fear him, from generation to generation; not to me only, but to all who with filial reverence and godly fear worship and serve him. His mercy to such is rich and gracious; and now more eminently displayed than ever, in the incarnation of his Son, given to bring in an everlasting righteousness, and work out an everlasting salvation, in which whosoever trusts, from generation to generation, will find mercy for ever. He hath showed strength with his arm; choosing the weak things of the world to confound the mighty; raising up so glorious a Redeemer from a birth so obscure: he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts; disappointing their schemes, and humbling them in the dust. Both in the dispensations of his providence and grace, he hath put down the mighty from their seats; the proud oppressors of his people of old, as Pharaoh, Sennacherib, &c. and the spiritually proud, the lofty Pharisees, and all self-righteous sinners; these he hurls from their fancied dignity, destroys their vain confidences, and casts them down as contemptible and vile; and exalted them of low degree, he hath done so, and continues so to do, raising up by his providence the oppressed, as Joseph from the prison to sit among the princes; and by his grace reviving the hearts of poor and contrite sinners, exalting them to his favour, and delighting to honour them. He hath filled the hungry, those that hunger after righteousness, and feel their utter need of Jesus, with good things, satisfying their souls out of his fulness; and the rich, who, admiring their own excellencies, see no want of a better righteousness; those he hath sent empty away, destitute of all true grace, without the least mark of his favour, and given up to their own delusions. He hath holpen his servant Israel, in all past ages, by extraordinary interpositions on their behalf: and now more eminently, in raising them up a Saviour from their most dangerous spiritual enemies; in remembrance of his mercy, which from eternity dwelt in his mind towards them, and which at sundry times he revealed to them; as he spoke to our fathers, Abraham and his seed for ever; to whom he had promised, that in his seed all nations of the world should be blessed, which promise God was now about to fulfil. Note, (1.) Pride will surely have a fall. No height of station or self-confidence can protect those whom God abhors. (2.) There is help laid on one mighty to save; and all the poor, the weak, and helpless of God's Israel, may come to him, and be holpen. (3.) All God's promises will, sooner or later, receive their accomplishment, and blessed are they who wait for him.

4. Mary, after a visit of three months, returned to Nazareth, satisfied now of her own conception, and thereby assured of the truth of the angel's and Elisabeth's predictions.

57. ¶ Now Elisabeth's full time came that she should be delivered; and [b] she brought forth a son. 58. And her neighbours and her cousins heard how the Lord had shewed [c] great mercy upon her; and [d] they rejoiced with her. 59. And it came to pass, that [e] on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child; and they called him Zacharias, after the name of his father. 60. And his mother answered and said, Not so; [f] but he shall be called John. 61. And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name. 62. And they made signs to his father, how he would have him called. 63. And he asked for a writing-table, and wrote, saying, His name is John. And they marvelled all. 64. [g] And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed, and he spake, and praised God. 65. [h] And fear came on all that dwelt round about them: and all these ‡ sayings were noised abroad throughout all the hill country of Judea. 66. And all they that heard them [i] laid them up in their hearts, saying, [k] What manner of child shall this be! [l] And the hand of the Lord was with him.

b Ver. 13. Num. 23. 19.

c Ver. 25, 76—79. Mal. 4. 5. Ps. 113. 9.

d Ver. 14. Rom. 12. 15. Gen. 22. 6. Is. 66. 10.

e Gen. 17. 9—14. Lev. 21. 3. Phil. 3. 5. Col. 2. 11. John 7. 22.

f Ver. 13. Gen. 24. 3. Mat. 1. 21, 25. Gen. 17. 21. Lev. 12. 3. ch. 2. 21. Gen. 18. 19. Is. 8. 3. Hos. 1. 4—9. 2 Sam. 12. 25.

g Ver. 20. Ps. 51. 15. & 103. 1—6. & 116. 12—18. & 145. 21.

h Mat. 9. 33. & 15. 31. Acts 5. 5, 11.

‡ Or things.

i Ch. 2. 19, 51. & 9. 44.

k Ch. 2. 25—38. Gen. 21. 6.

l Ver. 80. 1 Kin. 18. 46. Judg. 13. 24, 25. Jer. 1. 5. Is. 41. 10.

Verses 57—66. Elisabeth's full time being come, we have here,

1. The birth of her son, and the great joy attending it. Tidings of so extraordinary an event were soon spread among her relations and neighbours, and they could not but magnify the Lord for so signal a mercy vouchsafed to her, who was both barren and aged: and they came to congratulate her on the occasion, and rejoice with her. Note, A gracious heart takes pleasure in the comforts which others enjoy, and rejoices with those that rejoice.

2. On the eighth day, when the child was to be circumcised, as it was usual at that time to give a name after some of his ancestors, the friends and relations, who met on that occasion, would have called him Zacharias, after his father; but Elisabeth, informed by writing from her husband, or by revelation, objected, insisting that the child should be called John. They who were present expressed their surprise at this, and objected against what was so unusual, none of her kindred bearing that name: the matter therefore was referred to the father for his decision, who, being deaf and dumb, they made signs to him that he would fix the child's name; and he making signs for a writing-table, to the astonishment of the company, wrote, His name is John. Note, (1.) The first concern we owe our children is, early to dedicate them to God. (2.) Every John should remember the import of his name, and show himself truly gracious.

3. Zacharias immediately thereupon recovered his speech, and as the first and best use of his tongue, offered up his praises and thanksgiving to the God of his mercies.

4. These extraordinary events, which now were spread, and in every body's mouth, filled the people with astonishment and reverential fear, in awful expectation of what would be their issue, treasuring up in their memories, and often pondering in their mind the wonderful circumstances attending the birth of this extraordinary child; and from his earliest infancy something amazingly great and gracious was seen in him, which farther engaged their attention, it evidently appearing that the hand of the Lord was with him, and that he was taken under the care and guidance of his peculiar providence and grace. Note, God has ways we know not of, to communicate his grace to the souls of infants, and make them partakers of the Holy Ghost, even before they are partakers of reason: who then can say, why such should not be baptized?

67. ¶ And his father Zacharias was [m] filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying, 68. [n] Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath [o] visited and redeemed his people, 69. [p] And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David; 70. [q] As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began; 71. [r] That we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us: 72. [s] To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and [t] to remember his holy covenant; 73. The oath which he sware to our father Abraham, 74. That he would grant unto us, [u] that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear, 75. [x] In holi-m Num. 11. 25. 2 Sam. 23. 2. 2 Chr. 20. 14. Rev. 1. 10. 2 Pet. 1. 21.

n Gen. 9. 27. 1 Chr. 29. 10. Ps. 72. 17—19. & 106. 48. & cvii.

o Exod. 3. 16, 17. & 4. 31. ch. 7. 16. Mat. 1. 21. Eph. 1. 7.

p Ps. 132. 17, 18. Jer. 23. 5, 6. Ezek. 17. 22, 23. & 34. 23, 20. Acts 2. 30. 1 Sam. 2. 10.

q Jer. 23. 5, 6. & 33. 15, 16. & 30. 9, 21. Gen. 3. 15. & 49. 10. Is. 7. 13, 14. & 11. 1—5. Ps. 72. 1—9. Dan. 9. 24, 26. Zech. 9. 9.

r Ps. 106. 10, 47. Is 45. 17, 22. & 49. 24—26. & 53. 10, 11. & 55. 7. Mat. 1. 21. Gal. 1. 4. 1 John 3. 8.

s Exod. 20. 6. Lev. 26. 42. Mic. 7. 18—20. Mat. 10. 6. & 15. 24. ver. 54. Acts 3. 25, 26. Rom. 11. 28.

t Gen. 12. 3. & 17. 4, 7. & 22. 16—18. Ps. 105. 8, 9. Jer. 31. 3. Heb. 6. 13—18.

u Gen. 22. 17. Lev. 25. 18. Deut. 12. 10, 18. Is. 45. 17. Jer. 23. 6. Rom. 6. 18, 22. & 8. 15. Heb. 2. 15. & 4. 14. & 12. 28, 29.

x Jer. 32. 39, 40. Eph. 4. 24. 1 Pet. 1. 15. Tit. 2. 12.

ness and righteousness before him all the days of our life. 76. And thou, child, shalt [y] be called the prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways; 77. [z] To give knowledge of salvation unto his people * by the remission of their sins, 78. Through the [a] tender mercy of our God: whereby the [b] day-spring from on high hath visited us, 79. [c] To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace. 80. And [d] the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was [e] in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel.

y Ver. 15—17. Is. 40. 3. Mal. 3. 1. & 4. 5, 6. Mat. 11. 9—14. Mark 1. 2, 3. John 1. 23, 27. & 3. 28. Acts 13. 24, 25.
z Ver. 15—17. ch. 3. 3—18. Mat. 3. 1—12. John 1. 6. —36. & 5. 32—36.
* Or for.
a Or bowels of the mercy. Is. 63. 7. Eph. 2. 4—7.
b Or sunrising, or branch. Num. 24. 17. Is. 11. 1. Zech. 3. 8. & 6. 12. Mal. 4. 2. c Is. 9. 2. & 42. 7. & 49. 6. & 60. 1. & 43. 8. Mal. 4. 2. Mat. 4. 16. John 8. 12. & 1. 9. 1 Sam. 2. 9. d Ch. 2. 40, 52. Judg. 13. 25. 1 Sam. 3. 19, 20.
e Mat. 3. 1. & 11. 7. Mark 1. 3, 4. John 1. 31.

Verses 67—80. Zacharias, filled with the Holy Ghost, among his other ascriptions of praise to the Lord, when his tongue was loosed, uttered the following prophetic song relative to the Messiah's incarnation and redemption, and the fulfilment of the everlasting covenant of grace to his people.

1. He blesses, adores, and praises the God of his Israel for the salvation to be obtained by the Messiah, who hath visited and redeemed his people; hath often done it before, but now more signally than ever, by that eternal redemption which his incarnate Son was about to obtain for his elect; and hath raised up a horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David: one able to save to the uttermost, and before whom all his foes must fall: sprung from the royal race of David according to his faithful promises, as he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began; from the promise made to fallen man in paradise had this Saviour been the constant subject of the prophetic word, as the seed of the woman, the descendant of Abraham, of the tribe of Judah, and the family of David; and, lo, the event verifies all the predictions. The expected Saviour is now incarnate, and ready to appear, that we should be saved from our enemies, the worst of enemies, sin, Satan, death, and hell; and from the hand of all that hate us; from this present evil world, and all the wicked who inhabit it: not a temporal, but, what is infinitely better, a spiritual salvation from all the powers of darkness and corruption; to perform the mercy promised to our fathers; that mercy of all mercies, the sending the Messiah; and to remember his holy covenant, which from eternity was established, and is now about to be fulfilled by the obedience and death of Jesus in behalf of his people, whereby all our forfeited mercies might be restored, and our title to glory be recovered, according to the oath which he sware to our father Abraham, the father of all the faithful, both Jews and Gentiles, that he would grant unto us, in virtue of our divine Redeemer's undertaking, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, those spiritual enemies by whom we were enslaved, and must have for ever continued under the bondage of corruption, unless the Son had made us free: but, blessed be his name! he hath brought us by his blood, his righteousness, and grace, into the glorious liberty of the sons of God, that we might serve him without fear; no longer in the spirit of a slave, but under the influence of that free spirit of adoption, where love casteth out servile fear and enables us to walk willingly and cheerfully, in holiness and righteousness before him; in the universal discharge of the duties of piety towards God, and justice towards men; at least under a prevailing desire to do so with ceaseless prayer for divine assistance, all the days of our life, faithful and persevering until death in his blessed service: and they who have found this fulfilled to them, have reason indeed to praise God without ceasing.

2. He blesses God for the particular mercy shown to himself in giving him such a son, whose office and dignity he in spirit foresees. And thou child shalt be called the prophet of the Highest; of that divine Emmanuel, who is God over all blessed for ever: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord, as the harbinger of the King of Glory, to prepare his ways, by preaching repentance, and directing sinners to him, as the only Saviour of lost souls: to give knowledge of salvation unto his people, of a spiritual and eternal salvation wrought out by Jesus, which he declared to them: a salvation not obtained by any personal righteousness of their own, as a matter of desert, but freely bestowed on them by the remission of their sins through the tender mercy of our God, the original fountain from whence all the great salvation flows, whereby the day-spring, or rising Sun of Righteousness, from on high hath visited us, with his reviving and refreshing beams of grace, to give light to them that sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death: to those who before through a veil darkly in types and figures caught the glimmering day; to diffuse his bright influences amidst the heathen world, covered with thickest darkness of idolatry and ignorance; and to shine into the minds of blind, stupid, and hardened sinners, dispelling the mists of error, and chasing the clouds of sin away, enlightening the conscience, and softening the heart, in order to guide our feet into the way of peace; to peace with God through the atoning blood; to peace within, through the application of it to our souls; to peace with men, through the spirit of universal love; to eternal peace, the consummation of our felicity.

3. The younger years of the Baptist strongly corroborated this prediction concerning him. He grew, and waxed strong in spirit; his parts and capacity increased wonderfully with his stature, and his soul was filled with uncommon wisdom, fortitude, and grace; and he was in the deserts till the day of his showing unto Israel; living in solitude, retirement, and devotion, till the time appointed for his entering upon his prophetic office. Note, They who most carefully improve their younger days in the school of true wisdom, will be best qualified to appear, and most likely to be successful, when they are called forth to minister in public.

CHAP. II. year of the world, 4000.

In this chapter we have, 1. The birth of Christ at Bethlehem. 2. The notifying of his birth to the shepherds in that neighbourhood by an angel, the song of praise which the angels sung upon that occasion, and the spreading of the report of it by the shepherds, ver. 8—20. 3. The circumcision of Christ, and the naming of him, ver. 21. 4. The presenting of him in the temple, ver. 22—24. 5. The testimonies of Simeon and Anna the prophetess concerning him, ver. 25—39. 6. Christ's growth and pregnancy of parts, ver. 40—52. 7. His observing the passover at twelve years old, and his discourse with the doctors in the temple, ver 41—51.

Before the account called Anno Domini, the 4th year.

1. AND it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cesar Augustus, that all the world should be * taxed. 2. (And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of† Syria.†) 3. And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city. 4. And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto [a] the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was [b] of the house and lineage of David;) 5. To be taxed with Mary [c] his espoused wife, being great

* Or enrolled in the registers of the empire, in order to be taxed.
† Or, This first register took effect when Cyrenius was president of Syria: for at this time Quintilius Varus was governor of Syria. The enrolment was now made preparatory to the taxing, but the tax itself was not levied till Cyrenius was president some years afterwards.

a 1 Sam. 16. 4. & 17. 12. Mic. 5. 2. Mat. 2. 4, 5. John 7. 42. b Mat. 1. 1—16. ch. 3. 23—31. c Ch. 1. 27. Mat. 1. 18—20. Thus God protected her reputation.

with child. 6. ¶ And so it was, that, [d] while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered, 7. And [e] she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and [f] laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

d Mic. 5. 2. Mat. 2. 1, 4—6, 8, 16.

e Gen. 3. 15. Is. 7. 14. Jer. 31. 22. Zech. 3. 8. & 6. 12. John 1. 14. Gal. 4. 4. Mat. 1. 24, 25.

f Ps. 22. 6. Mat. 8. 20. ver. 12. 2 Cor. 8. 9.

Verses 1—7. The morning star being arisen, the Sun of Righteousness cannot be far behind; in the fulness of time God sends forth his Son, born of a woman. We have here,

1. The time of Christ's birth; in the reign of Augustus Cesar. When he had extended the Roman monarchy to the greater part of the known world, and was now in perfect peace throughout this vast empire, he orders a general enrolment to be made through the provinces, that every man, according to his ability, might pay a suitable tax; and this was done under the inspection of Cyrenius, the governor of Syria, with which Judea was joined as one province; so that it evidently appeared the sceptre was departed from Judah, by this badge of servitude, Gen. xlix. 10. the fourth monarchy was now risen to its glory, Dan. ii. 44. and therefore in this time of peace was the proper and appointed period fixed by the ancient prophecies for the appearing of the Prince of peace, the Messiah.

2. The place where Jesus was born; at Bethlehem: whither his parents were obliged to travel on account of this enrolment, they being of the lineage of David, and therefore called to appear at the seat of their ancestors. Augustus only meant his own glory and advantage in this matter, but God had designs to serve by him, he knew not; it was thus evident that our Lord sprung from David, and the Scripture was fulfilled which fixed his going forth from Bethlehem, Micah v. 2. By such mysterious ways doth God work, accomplishing the purposes of his own will, and making those who least intend it, subservient to his own designs.

3. The wretched circumstances in which Christ came into the world. Though a first-born son, and of royal extraction, not to mention his divine honours, yet was he born in the stable of an inn, and his cradle a manger: his parents being so poor as to be unable to procure better accommodations. Thus did the everlasting Father become an infant of days; He who bound up the deep in swaddling bands, was himself swathed as a babe; He whom the heaven, and the heaven of heavens cannot contain, was hid in a manger; He who, in uncreated glory on his eternal throne, was the object of adoration to all the angelic hosts, is thrust into a stable to dwell among the beasts of the earth: so low did he humble himself when he became man for us men and for our salvation, and took the form of a servant, as a prelude to his submitting to the death of a slave.

8. ¶ And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping [g] watch over their flock by night. 9. And, lo, [h] the angel of the Lord came [i] upon them, and the [k] glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid. 10. And the angel said unto them, [l] Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. 11. [m] For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. 12. And this shall be a sign unto you; [n] Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger. 13. And suddenly there was with the angel [o] a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, 14. [p] Glory to God in the highest, and on earth [q] peace, good will toward men. 15. ¶ And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, [r] Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass which the Lord hath made known unto us. 16. And they came [s] with haste and found Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger. 17. And when they had seen it, [t] they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child. 18. And all they that heard it [u] wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds. 19. But [x] Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart. 20. And the shepherds returned, [y] glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

g Or the night watches. It seems therefore it was not in the winter. Exod. 3. 1, 2. Prov. 27. 25.

h Ch. 1. 11, 26. Mat. 1. 20. & 2. 13, 19. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Ps. 91. 11.

i 1 Cor. 1. 17. Mat. 11. 25.

k Exod. 20. 18. Num. 16. 19, 22. ch. 9. 28—34. Rev. 18. 1.

l Judg. 13. 23. Dan. 10. 12. ch. 1. 13, 30. Rev. 1. 17.

m Gen. 3. 15. & 49. 10. Deut. 18. 15. Is. 7. 14. & 9. 6. & 11. 1. & 4. 2. Jer. 23. 5, 6. & 30. 9, 21. Ezek. 34. 23, 29. Dan. 9. 24, 26. Zech. 9. 9. Mat. 1. 21. ch. 1. 54. 68, 69. Acts 2. 36.

n Is. 53. 2, 3. Ps. 22. 6. Mat. 8. 20. ver. 7.

o Gen. 28. 12. & 32. 1, 2. 1 Kings 22. 19. Job 38. 7. Ps. 91. 11. & 68. 17. Dan. 7. 10. Rev. 3. 11.

p Ch. 19. 38. Rev. 5. 12, 13. Is. 44. 23. & 24. 15, 16. & 49. 3. Eph. 3. 6. & 2. 7. & 3. 21. 1 Pet. 4. 11. John 17. 4. & 12. 28.

q Ch. 19. 38. & 1. 79. Is. 49. 13. & 57. 19. & 2. 4. Rom. 5. 1. Eph. 1. 5. & 2. 14, 17. Mat. 11. 26.

r Exod. 3. 3. Ps. 11. 2.

s Ch. 1. 39. Eccl. 9. 10. Ps. 119. 60. & 19. 1.

t ver. 38. Ch. 8. 39. Ps. 11. 9, 10. & 66. 16. & 71. 17, 18. John 4. 28, 29. Mark 1. 46. & 5. 20. Gal. 1. 15, 16.

u Is. 8. 18. & 9. 6. ver. 33, 47.

x Ver. 51. ch. 1. 29, 66. Gen. 37. 11. 1 Sam. 21. 11, 12.

y Gen. 9. 27. 1 Kin. 8. 15. 1 Chr. 29. 10, 11. Ps. 34. 2. & 72. 18, 19. & 106. 48. & 107. 8, 15. & cxiv, cxlviii.

Verses 8—20. Amidst the deepest humiliations of Jesus, some bright displays of his uncreated glory still broke forth, that we might not stumble at the meanness of his appearing in the flesh, but be made to confess, truly this is the Son of God. We have here,

1. The appearance of an angelic minister to notify the birth of the Prince of peace; not to the mighty monarchs of the earth, that they should come and pay their homage before the King of kings, and Lord of lords, but to poor shepherds, who were by night watching their flocks. The things that are despised, from the beginning hath God chosen. They were employed in their honest calling, and then were favoured with this unexpected visit from above: God will put this honour upon industry. The angel stood over them in the air, and the earth shone with his brightness: a divine glory compassed him about, and fear seized their minds at the presence of this celestial messenger. Visits from the unseen world to men, conscious how ill they have deserved at God's hand, may well alarm us, and make even gracious souls afraid.

2. The heavenly visitant soon quieted their troubled minds, saying, Fear not, no danger is near, no evil portended, but the very contrary; for behold (with wonder and delight attend my message) I bring you good tidings of great joy; the happiest news that ever reached the sinful souls of men, and which shall be to all people; not to the Jews only but to the Gentiles also, alike interested in this message. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord, the long expected Messiah, the Lord of life and glory, the Saviour to the uttermost, to you, and all those who come to God by him, and that without him must have been for ever undone. And this shall be a sign unto you, whereby you may assuredly know him, and a strange sign indeed it was; ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes lying in a manger, the last place surely where they would ever have sought the Messiah, after such a glorious herald had proclaimed his birth and titles; but the most eminent distinction of God incarnate was his deep humiliation. Note, (1.) If there be a Saviour born we must seek him for ourselves, that we may obtain an interest in him. (2.) None perish in their sins, but they who will not come to him that they may have life; for he is able to save to the uttermost all who come to God by him, seeing he is Christ the Lord.

3. Suddenly a multitude of the angelic host joined this celestial messenger, to celebrate the divine glory, and to congratulate the sons of men on this auspicious occasion. The morning stars that sang together, and all those sons of God who shouted for joy to see the world's foundation laid, now join with greater transport to adore this more transcendent display of the divine benignity in the redemption of sinners by the incarnation of Jehovah. (1.) They ascribe to God glory in the highest; all his divine perfections are to the uttermost exalted: his infinite mercy that moved him to pity sinners: his surpassing wisdom that contrived, and his almighty power and grace that accomplished the wondrous means of man's salvation; his adorable justice; his matchless love; his unchangeable faithfulness to his promises, all shine with peculiar lustre in the redemption which is by Jesus Christ. (2.) They congratulate the sinful sons of Adam on the peace sent down from heaven to earth. Peace with God, as reconciled through his Son; peace in the sinner's conscience now undisturbed with fears of guilt; peace between the discordant sons of men; and all these blessings in time and eternity purely flowing from God's good will; not for the sake of any thing in us, but according to his good pleasure, and to the praise of the glory of his grace. If angels sing shall men be silent? How ought we to echo back the sound; for us, and not for them, is this salvation wrought; to us this mercy is extended; most bounden therefore are we for ever to bless and praise the God of all grace for this inestimable gift, the Son of his love.

4. No sooner had these angelic ministers finished the heavenly song, and returned to their shining realms of bliss, than instantly the shepherds resolved to go and see this wondrous child, fully persuaded of the truth of what they had heard, and acknowledging the distinguishing mercy of God in having thus revealed it unto them: hasting therefore to Bethlehem, they found every circumstance as it had been told them, and the babe lying in the manger. Note, When God sends us on his errands, we should make no delay: all must be left to go where he calls.

5. Fully confirmed in the persuasion that this was the promised Saviour, they failed not to spread the glad tidings, relating all they had seen and heard from the angel, or Mary, concerning this child. And as they were plain and undesigning men, concurred in the same report, were eye and ear witnesses of the facts they asserted, it exceedingly amazed all those to whom they told the story; they knew not how to question the truth, and yet that the Messiah should be born in a stable; that his parents should be persons so obscure; that poor shepherds only should be favoured with the notice of his birth, and not the chief priests and rulers of the nation; all these circumstances staggered them. Thus the report was the wonder of a day, and soon died away, and was forgotten; but Mary kept all these things and pondered them in her heart, comparing them with what had before passed; confirmed thereby in her faith and hope, and silently storing up every circumstance in her memory against some future occasion. Meantime the shepherds returned to their former occupation, blessing and praising God for what they had heard and seen, so exactly corresponding with all that the angels had told them; and waiting, no doubt, in hope for the day when this child should come to manhood, and publicly appear as Israel's Saviour.

[z] Gen. 17. 12. Lev. 12. 3. ch. 1. 59. Phil. 3. 5.

21. ¶ [z] And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the child, his name was called [a] JESUS, which was so named of the angel before he was conceived in the womb. 22. ¶ And when the days of her purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord; 23. (As it is written in the law of the Lord, [b] Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord;) 24. And to offer a sacrifice according to [c] that which is said in the law of the Lord, A pair of turtle doves, or two young pigeons. †

[a] Mat. 1. 21. ch. 1. 31. ver. 10, 11. Is. 43. 17. Before the account called Anno Domini the 3d or 4th year.

[b] Exod. 13. 2. & 22. 29. & 34. 19. Num. 18. 15. & 3. 13. & 8. 16, 17.

[c] Lev. 12. 2, 6.

† This was the offering required from the poor. Those in better circumstances were commanded to bring a lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering, and a turtle dove, or a young pigeon, for a sin-offering.—Campbell.

Verses 21—24. He who was made under the law for us, submitted not only to all the moral precepts, but to the ceremonial institutions.

1. He was circumcised the eighth day, binding himself thereby to the observance of the law; humbling himself to this painful rite, as born in the likeness of sinful flesh; owning himself of the seed of Abraham, and wearing this badge of the children of God, as under the instituted seal of the covenant devoted to him. At this time, as usual, his name was also given him, and he was called Jesus, having been so named of the angel before his conception, to signify his glorious character as a Saviour from sin, Satan, death, and hell.

2. He was, at the end of the time appointed for his mother's purification, or forty days, their purification, as some copies read, Lev. xii. 4. presented in the temple as holy to the Lord, Exod. xiii. 12. God having reserved to himself the first-born of Israel, in commemoration of his sparing them when he slew the Egyptians, and they were to be redeemed at the price of five shekels, about twelve shillings and sixpence, Num. xviii. 16. whilst his mother also brought an offering for herself, according to the prescription of the same law, a pair of turtle doves, or young pigeons, which in case of poverty were accepted instead of a lamb and a dove, Lev. xii. 6—8. the one as a sin-offering or atonement, in testimony of her unworthiness of the mercy she had received: the other as a burnt-offering, expressive of her thankfulness.

25. ¶ And, behold, there was a man in Jerusalem whose name was Simeon; and the same man was [d] just and devout, [e] waiting for the consolation of Israel: and [f] the Holy Ghost was upon him. 26. [g] And it was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death, before he had seen [h] the Lord's Christ. 27. And he came [i] by the Spirit into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, [k] to do for him after the custom of the law, 28. Then [l] took he him up in his arms, and [m] blessed God, and said, 29. Lord, [n] now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word: 30. For mine eyes have seen [o] thy salvation, 31. Which thou hast [p] prepared before the face of all people: 32. [q] A light to [d] Ch. 1. 6. Gen. 6. 9. Acts 24. 16. & 10. 2.

[e] Ver. 38. Mark 15. 43. Tit. 2. 13. 2 Pet. 3. 12. Is. 25. 9. & 40. 10. ch. 19. 10, 11. Acts 1. 6.

[f] Num. 11. 25. 2 Sam. 23. 2. 2 Chr. 20. 14. Rev. 1. 10. 2 Pet. 1. 21.

[g] Ps. 25. 14. Amos 3. 7.

[h] Dan. 9. 24, 26. Is. 61. 1. Acts 10. 38.

[i] Acts. 16. 6, 7. Ps. 48. 14. & 73. 24. & 143. 10. Prov. 3. 5, 6.

[k] See ver. 22.

[l] Mark 10. 16.

[m] See ver. 14, 20, ch. 1. 46—55, 64—79. Ps. 103. 1.

[n] Gen. 15. 15. & 46. 30. Num. 20. 29. 1 Cor. 15. 54, 55. Phil. 1. 23. Rev. 14. 13. Ps. 37. 37.

[o] Ch. 3. 6. Ps. 98. 2. Is. 52. 10. Mat. 1. 21. ver. 10, 11. Acts 4. 10, 12. & 49. 6. Acts 13. 47. & 28. 28. Rom. 15. 8. Is. 60. 19.

[p] Prov. 8. 23. 1 Pet. 1. 20. Eph. 2. 14.

[q] Is. 42. 6.

lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel. 33. [r] And Joseph and his mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of him. 34. And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the [s] fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for [t] a sign which shall be spoken against; 35. (Yea, [u] a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also; *) that [x] the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed. 36. ¶ And there was one [y] Anna, a prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Aser: [z] she was of a great age, and had lived with an husband seven years from her virginity; 37. And she was a widow of about fourscore and four years; which [a] departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day. 38. And she, coming in that instant, [b] gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spake of him to all them that [c] looked for redemption in Jerusalem.

r Is. 8. 18. & 9. 6. Ps. 35. 10. s Is. 8. 14. Mat. 21. 44. Rom. 9. 32. 1 Cor. 1. 23, 24. 2 Cor. 2. 16. 1 Pet. 2. 7, 8. John 3. 20. & 9. 39.
t Acts 28. 22. Is. 8. 18. John 7. 7. & 15. 18, 24.
u John 19. 25.
* Some have inferred from these words that the mother of our Lord suffered martyrdom, and perished with the sword; but they probably allude, as our commentator understands them, simply to that excessive grief which pierces like a sword, and which Mary especially endured, when she stood by the cross of her expiring Son.
x 1 Cor. 11. 19. 1 John 2. 19.
y Exod. 15. 20. Judg. 4. 4. 2 Kin. 22. 14.
z Ps. 91. 16. & 92. 14. Job 5. 26.
a Exod. 38. 8. 1 Sam. 1. 22. 1 Tim. 5. 5. 2 Chr. 22. 11. b Ver. 28—32. ch. 1. 46—55, 64—79. 2 Cor. 9. 15. Ps. 107. 8. c Ver. 25. Mark 15. 43.

Verses 25—38. Amidst all the meanness and poverty of Jesus, very glorious were the testimonies borne to him from heaven and upon earth. We have here,

1. The public declarations of Simeon; a man it seems, of distinguished note in Jerusalem, who just then came, by divine direction, into the temple.

[1.] The account here given concerning him is greatly to his honour. He was just, towards men, and devout, eminently religious towards God, waiting in faith and patience for the consolation of Israel, the promised Messiah; whose coming in the flesh was to be the great joy of all his people, Gentiles as well as Jews, the time of whose appearing fixed in the prophetic writings was now at hand: and the Holy Ghost was upon him, not only as a spirit of holiness, but as a spirit of prophecy. And it was revealed unto him by the secret inspirations of the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death before he had seen the Lord's Christ, whom his eyes should behold before they were closed in the dust. And accordingly just at that instant, he came by the Spirit into the temple, under some divine warning of what was doing there: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law, to present him to the Lord, and pay the price of redemption, then took he him up in his arms, in a transport of joy, as having found him whom he had so long and so earnestly expected; and blessed God, and broke forth into the following prophetic song of praise. Note, (1.) We must not be weary of waiting; though the Lord may for a while exercise our patience, all his promises are sure. (2.) Christ is the consolation of his Israel, he makes all those happy who by faith embrace him. (3.) They who have Jesus in their arms, in their hearts, can look death in the face with confidence.

[2.] His discourse on this occasion was solemn and joyful. He said, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word, farewell life, welcome death! He is now content to be gone, since God hath thus graciously fulfilled his promise to him, and cheerfully resigns his soul in confidence of exchanging a perishing world for an eternity of glory: For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, that Messiah, who is come to be the author of eternal salvation to his redeemed; which thou hast prepared before the face of all people, provided according to the eternal counsels, and now manifested in the flesh to accomplish the glorious work; A light to lighten the Gentiles, who have long sat in darkness, ignorance, and idolatry, but now shall be made partakers, of the light of truth and the grace of the gospel, and the glory of thy people Israel, among whom his personal ministry was employed; who were spectators of his miracles; from whom he descended after the flesh; by whom, as his apostles and evangelists, he first propagated the knowledge of his salvation; and in him all the spiritual Israel are justified, and shall glory, Isa. xlv. 25. Note, (1.) A believing sight of Christ, and of the great things he hath prepared for his people, will not only enable us to overcome the terrors of death, but to triumph in its approach. (2.) We may not leave our posts till the Lord grants us our dismission, our time is in his hand; whilst he hath work for us to do, we must be content to be here, till he calls us to depart, and be with Christ, which is far better. (3.) Christ is the Sun of Righteousness; there is nothing but darkness and death in the spiritual world, till he arises with healing in his wings.

[3.] Simeon concludes with his benediction on the parents of Jesus, and a prediction for their notice. They marvelled at these transcendently glorious testimonies which were borne to their infant son, whilst Simeon congratulated them on their distinguished felicity, and prayed that the best of blessings might descend upon them. He blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, as more especially the parent of Jesus, and interested in what he was about to say; behold, with wonder and confidence of the truth which I declare, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; he will be to many native Jews a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence, Isa. viii. 14—18. whilst by his power and grace others shall be raised up to newness of life, even many who at first were offended at him: and he shall quicken all his spiritual Israel throughout the world, and bring them to a state of happiness and glory: and for a sign which shall be spoken against; his humiliation and sufferings will give a handle to his persecutors to blaspheme and revile him; yea, and so bitter will the enmity be against him, that it will extend to all his relations and friends, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also, such anguish and pain you will endure from the view of his insults and sufferings, and those you may be called to endure for the profession of your faith in him, that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed, these times of persecution most effectually serving to discover the faithful disciples from the hypocrites and apostates. Note, (1.) The same gospel is to some the savour of death unto death, which to others is the savour of life unto life. (2.) They whom Jesus raises, must first be laid low in the dust of humiliation. (3.) All our comforts in this world have some bitterness annexed to them; we must look only for perfect happiness in a better.

2. Anna the prophetess confirms, just at the same instant, what Simeon had spoken concerning the glory of the child Jesus.

[1.] Her person and character are described. Her name was Anna, whom the Lord had endued with a spirit of prophecy. She was the daughter of Phanuel, a person probably of some note, and of the tribe of Aser; a very aged woman, having lived seven years with a husband, and ever since continued a widow of about eighty-four years; a great age, if comprehending the whole of her life: but if reckoned as her years of widowhood, will carry her age at lowest to above a hundred years. Yet though so old, she constantly attended the stated worship of the temple morning and evening, and on all solemn occasions; and was much in fasting and prayer, a singular instance of piety and devotion.

[2.] Her testimony concerning Jesus is recorded. Just at the instant that Simeon was discoursing concerning him, she came in: and with thanksgiving and praise to the Lord, confirmed what he had spoken concerning the child. And among all her religious acquaintance, who were expecting the Messiah's appearing, and looking for his redemption, she spoke of the Son of Mary, as the person raised up of God for this great design. Note, (1.) They who are constant at the temple, and careful to keep up communion with God, will find many a blessed and happy visit from him which they perhaps little expected. (2.) They who know Jesus themselves, are in duty bound to spread that knowledge far and wide, and to endeavour to bring others to an acquaintance with his salvation.

39. ¶ And when they had [d] performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they [e] returned into Galilee, to their own city Nazareth. 40 [f] And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom; and the grace of God was upon him. * 41. ¶ Now his parents went to Jerusalem [g] every year at the feast of the passover. 42. And when he was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem, after the custom of the feast. 43. And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem; and Joseph and his mother knew not of it. 44. But they, supposing him to have been in [h] the company, went a day's journey; and they sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance. 45. And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking him. 46. And it came to pass, that after three days they found him † in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, both [i] hearing them, and asking them questions. ‡ 47. And all that heard him [k] were astonished at his understanding and answers. 48. And when they saw him, they were amazed: and his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing. 49. And he said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that [l] I must be about my Father's business? 50. And they [m] understood not the saying which he spake unto them. 51. ¶ And he went down with them, and [n] came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them: but his mother [o] kept all these sayings in her heart. 52. And [p] Jesus increased in wisdom and || stature, and in favour with God and man.

d Ch. 1. 6. Deut. 12. 32. ver. 21—24.
e Mat. 2. 22, 23. ver. 4.
f Ch. 1. 80. Is. 4. 2. & 11. 1—4. & 61. 1.
* The thing to which, in my judgment, the historian here particularly points, is that graceful dignity in our Lord's manner, which at once engaged the love, and commanded the respect of all who heard him. See Mat. 7. 28, 29. Mark 1. 22. Luke 4. 22, 32. John 7. 46. All these passages put together, indicate an authority in his manner superior to human, blended with the most condescending sweetness. With this distinguishing quality the evangelist here acquaints us that Jesus was attended from his childhood.—Campbell.
g Deut. 16. 1, 16. Exod. 23. 15, 17. & 24. 13. Lev. 23. 5. Num. 28. 16. cir. 9.
h Ps. 42. 4. & 84. 6, 7.
† In some chamber of the court.
i Is. 50. 4. & 11. 2—4. & 61. 1. & 49. 1, 2.
‡ It was both lawful and customary for the disciples, or any who were present, publicly to inquire, either of the doctor who was then reading, or of any in the synagogue, respecting any doubtful matter in which he was not well satisfied.—Lightfoot.
k Mat. 7. 28. Mark 1. 22. ch. 4. 22, 32. John 7. 15, 46. l Mal. 3. 1, 2. Ps. 40. 8. John 4. 34. & 8. 29. & 2. 16.
m Ch. 9. 45. & 18. 34.
n Ver. 39. Mat. 2. 22, 23. Mark 6. 3. Mat. 3. 15.
o Ver. 19. Gen. 37. 11. Dan. 7. 28. Ps. 119. 11. p 1 Sam. 2. 26. ch. 1. 80. ver. 40.
|| Or age.

Verses 39—52. Our curiosity might have tempted us to wish for some more large and particular accounts of the infancy and childhood of Jesus; but as till his public appearance in the character of the Messiah we had no particular need of it, all that the Holy Ghost hath been pleased to record of the first twenty-nine years of his life, is contained in these few verses; where some beams of his glory, even from the earliest days, are seen to break forth, as presages of his future greatness.

1. After he was presented in the temple, till twelve years of age, he for the most part lived with his parents at Nazareth, whither they were directed to go, after their return from Egypt, Matt. ii. There he grew up as other children do; and as his stature increased, and reason began to dawn, he displayed the most uncommon natural abilities; was endued with wisdom far beyond his years; and instead of that foolishness which is bound up in the heart of all other children, and immediately begins to discover itself with the first dawnings of sense, in him nothing was seen of folly or perverseness. The grace of God eminently governed his spirit and conduct from his tenderest years, and the favour of God towards him appeared most evident and singular.

2. At the age of twelve, he gave some amazing evidences of his extraordinary wisdom, and some intimations of the great work he had in view.

[1.] At this time he went up to Jerusalem with his parents to the passover, where all the males, from that age, were commanded to appear to celebrate this solemnity. Note, It is highly incumbent on parents to acquaint their children betimes with their covenant relation to God, and to endeavour to engage them early, with their own free choice, to surrender themselves up to him as his willing servants.

[2.] When they had stayed during the seven days of the feast, and then set out on their return for Nazareth, the child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem; probably when they went up to worship, on the morning before they proceeded on their journey, he left them in the temple; as the men and women travelled in different companies, each of his parents supposed he had been with the other, or with some of their kinsfolk; great numbers of which travelled together, till at even, when they met, to their surprise they missed their Son; and after a fruitless search among all their kinsfolk and acquaintance, they turned back to Jerusalem in the morning to seek for him. Note, (1.) They who have lost the presence of Jesus, after having ever tasted the blessedness of his company, cannot but be solicitous to find him again, and will inquire earnestly, Saw ye him whom my soul loveth? (2.) Our kinsfolk and acquaintance are too often unable to direct us to Jesus, we must go farther for our information.

[3.] At last they found him on the third day in the temple, in one of the chambers, probably where the Sanhedrim sat, or where the wise men instructed their catechumens; there Jesus was, among other young persons, hearing their discourses, answering their questions with the most amazing acuteness, and proposing others to them, which showed uncommon wisdom and penetration, insomuch that they were all astonished at the sagacity of his replies, and the depth of his understanding, so exceedingly beyond his years; and such as made him appear worthy a place among the highest rabbins, instead of a seat at their feet as a catechumen.

[4.] Having found him, they were amazed to see him thus admired and esteemed by the doctors; and his mother began tenderly to expostulate with him on his stay, which had given them such anxiety and grief; but he gently rebukes her solicitude, who, after all that had passed, ought not to be surprised at finding him there. Where should he be so properly as in the courts of his Father's house, and what so fit an employment for him, as to be thus about his Father's business? But they understood not his meaning: his regal office, as the Messiah, the Son of David, they believed; but his prophetical character, and the nature of his spiritual kingdom, they seem not yet to have known.

3. He returned to Nazareth, submitting to his parents in every instance of filial duty, and his mother stored up his sayings in her mind; expecting, that though she now understood them not, hereafter they would be explained more fully. Till he was near thirty years of age, he continued in this obscure abode, and under the government of his parents, probably working as a carpenter for their maintenance and his own: and as he advanced to manhood, his attainments in wisdom and understanding were amazing, his faculties most enlarged, and his soul filled with all those gifts and graces which the human nature, by its union with the divine, was prepared to receive. Thus he grew highly in God's favour, and admired and esteemed by all who were acquainted with his singular excellences. Note, (1.) Let children, when grown up, learn of Jesus subjection to their parents: that is a duty we must ever pay. (2.) Though the truths of God which we are taught may not at first be understood by us, yet the knowledge of them will prove highly useful, when afterwards God gives the spiritual understanding. (3.) Those children are indeed their parents' glory and joy, whose wisdom and graces increase with their years, and exceed them.

CHAP. III.—ANNO DOMINI, 27.

In this chapter we have, 1. The beginning of John's baptism, and the scope and intention of it, ver. 1—6. His exhortation to the multitude, ver. 7—9. And the particular instructions he gave to those who desired to be told of their duty, ver. 10—14. 2. The notice he gave them of the approach of the Messiah, ver. 15—18. to which is added (though it happened after what follows) the mention of his imprisonment, ver. 19, 20. 3. Christ coming to be baptized of John, and his entrance therein upon the execution of his prophetical office, ver. 21, 22. 4. His pedigree and genealogy recorded up to Adam, ver. 23—38.

1. NOW in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberias Cesar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judea, and Herod being * tetrarch of Galilee, and his brother Philip tetrarch of Iturea and of the region of Trachonitis, and Lysanias the * tetrarch of Abilene, 2. [a] Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests, [b] the word of God came unto John, the son of Zacharias, in the [c] wilderness. 3. [d] And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins; 4. As it is written in the book of the words of Esaias the prophet, saying, [e] The voice of one crying in the wilderness, [f] Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. 5. [g] Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways shall be made smooth; 6. And [h] all flesh shall see the salvation of God. 7. Then said he to the multitude that came forth to be baptized of him, [i] O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from [k] the wrath to come? 8. [l] Bring forth therefore fruits † worthy of repentance; and begin not to say within yourselves, [m] We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of [n] these stones to raise up children unto Abraham. 9. [o] And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: every tree therefore which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. 10. And the people asked him, saying, [p] What shall we do then? 11. He answereth and saith unto them, [q] He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat, let him do likewise. 12. [r] Then came also publicans to be baptized, and said unto him, Master, what shall we do? 13. And he said unto them, [s] Exact no more than that which is appointed you. 14. And the [t] soldiers likewise demanded of him, saying, And what shall we do? And he said unto them, [u] ‡ Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely; and be content with your ‖ wages.

* Governor of a fourth part of the country.

a John 11. 49, 51. & 18. 13. Acts 4. 6.

b Jer. 1. 2, 4. & 2. 1. & 7. 1. Ezek. 1. 3. Hos. 1. 1, 2. Mat. iii. Mark 1. 2—11.

c Ch. 1. 80. Josh. 15 61. i. e. a country thinly inhabited.

d Mat. 3. 1, 2. Mark 1. 4. John 1. 31. Acts 19. 4. & 13. 24, 25. Ezek. 18. 30.

e Is. 40. 3—5. Mark 1. 3. Mat. 3. 3. John 1. 23. Mal. 3. 1. & 4. 5, 6.

f Mal. 4. 6. ch. 1. 16, 17, 76—79. John 1. 7, 26—36. & 3. 27—36. & 5. 33. Acts 13. 24, 25. & 19. 4.

g Is. 2. 14. & 62. 10. Zech. 4. 6, 7.

h Ch. 2. 11, 30—32. Ps. 98. 2. Is. 52. 10. Mark 16. 15, 16.

i Mat. 3. 7—10. & 12. 34. & 23. 33. ch. 10. 9, 11. Acts 23 8.

k 1 Thes. 1. 10. 2 Thes. 1. 9. Rom. 5. 10.

l Acts 26. 20. Gal. 5. 22, 23. 2 Pet. 1. 4—10. 2 Cor. 7. 11. Is. 1. 16, 17.

† Or meet for.

m John 8. 33, 39. Acts 13. 26. Jer. 7. 4.

n Josh. 4. 3, 8. Mat. 8. 11, 12. & 21. 43. ch. 19. 40.

o Mat. 3. 10. & 7. 19. ch. 19. 42. & 23. 31. John 15. 2, 6. & 12. 35. 1 Pet. 4. 17, 18. Ezek. xv. Heb. 2. 1, 3. & 4. 1. & 6. 8.

p Acts 2. 37. & 16. 30. John 6. 28.

q Jam. 2. 15, 16. & 1. 27. 1 John 3. 17. & 4. 20. 1 Pet. 4. 8. 2 Cor. 8. 14. ch. 11. 41. 1 Tim. 6. 18.

r Mat. 21. 31, 32. & 8. 10. ch. 7. 29 30. & 15. 1, 2. & 5. 27—32.

s Ch. 19. 8. Mic. 6. 8. Mat. 7. 12 1 Tim. 6. 8.

t Mat. 8. 5. & 27. 54. Acts x.

u Lev. 19. 11, 13. 1 Tim. 6. 8—10.

‡ Or put no man in fear.

‖ Or allowance.

Verses 1—14. Great expectations had been raised concerning the son of Zacharias from his infancy, and now he appears to answer them.

1. The time of his entering publicly on his ministry, is here observed. It was in the reign of Tiberias, when Pontius Pilate was governor of Judea, Herod tetrarch of Galilee, his brother Philip of Iturea, and Lysanias of Abilene. They were called tetrarchs, either as having each the fourth part of what was under the dominion of Herod the Great, or as standing in the fourth rank of governors, which are reckoned thus; the emperor, proconsuls, kings, tetrarchs. They were all foreigners, a mark of the sad subjection of the Jewish people, now reduced entirely under the Roman yoke, the sceptre being finally departed from Judah, and the very kingly office abolished in Judea. Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests, not that they both bore that office at the same time, but Annas had been, and Caiaphas was now, in that station; or as some suppose, Annas was the sagan, or chief of the priests, who stood next to the high priest in rank and honour.

2. The origin and tendency of his ministry is declared. The word of God came to him in the wilderness, he was inwardly moved by the Holy Ghost to go forth, being endued with extraordinary gifts and graces, and possessed of the spirit of prophecy, and hereupon leaving the solitude where he had hitherto abode, he came into a more populous part of the country near to Jordan, preaching publicly the necessity of repentance, and admitting to his baptism those who made profession of it, as the sign and seal of the remission of their sins. Note, All who by faith turn to Jesus, and repent them truly of their sins, are assured of their pardon.

3. John herein eminently fulfilled the prophecy of Isaiah, chap. xl. 3—5. He was the voice of one crying in the wilderness, loud and vehement, prepare ye the way of the Lord into your hearts, by a deep and humbling sense of your sins make his paths straight; let every obstruction from pride and ignorance be removed, as the harbinger clears the way for the entry of the king. Every valley shall be filled, the lowly and depressed with sin shall be raised up by pardoning grace and divine consolations; and every mountain and hill shall be brought low, the proud and self-righteous shall be humbled into the dust of humiliation, or sunk into the belly of hell; and the crooked shall be made straight, the perverse disposition and conduct of sinners shall, by divine grace, be rectified; and the rough ways shall be made smooth, the most untractable spirits softened and subdued, or every difficulty in the way of men's receiving the Messiah shall be removed. And all flesh, not of the Jews only, but of the Gentiles also, shall see the salvation of God; many of all nations, ranks, and ages shall embrace the gospel of Jesus, and partake of his eternal redemption.

4. He addressed himself with very awakening language to the multitude who came to him. He charges them as a generation of vipers, full of venom, hypocrisy, and Satanical subtilty; and asks, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? from the national judgments ready to descend upon them, or the more terrible and eternal vengeance hanging over every guilty sinner's head. He warns them therefore of the necessity of a speedy and real change of heart and life, evident in the fruits of all holy conversation and godliness; without which, their boasted privileges as Abraham's descendants would profit them nothing, but rather aggravate their guilt. God wanted them not; he could, and would, from stones, from Gentiles, raise up a more illustrious and numerous race, the heirs of Abraham's faith, his spiritual children, who should supply their place, if they continued hypocritical and impenitent; now therefore the call of mercy was sent to them, that they might prevent their impending doom, before the axe of divine vengeance was laid to their roots; and they, as barren trees, cut down and cast into the fire, utterly destroyed as a nation; and as the sinners of old, suffering also the vengeance of eternal fire. Note, (1.) The sinner hath no moment to lose, death and judgment are at his heels. (2.) No outward privilege can profit those, whose hearts remain unrenewed and unholy. (3.) True repentance will be seen by its fruits; the change will be internal, universal, evident, abiding. (4.) It is a fearful thing for an impenitent soul to fall into the hands of the living God.

5. The Pharisees and Sadducees were probably disgusted at these hard sayings, and left him; but the people, the publicans and soldiers, were deeply affected, and earnestly solicitous to know what those fruits of repentance were, which they were required to produce: and a blessed symptom it is of real conversion, when we are thus diligent to inquire what is the mind of God, and really disposed through grace to follow it. To these, therefore, John directs his instructions suited to their several circumstances and temptations.

[1.] To the people in general he recommends a liberal distribution to the necessities of their brethren; supplying them, according to their ability, with food and raiment: and where the call was urgent, straitening themselves rather than suffer their neighbours to perish with cold, or be famished with hunger; and a truly charitable soul is not only to his power, but sometimes above his power willing.

[2.] To the publicans, the collectors of the public taxes, many of whom were Jews, he gave in charge that they should use no exaction, nor levy more than the government demanded. Their employment, though in general odious to the people, was not in itself unlawful, whilst they demeaned themselves in it with justice and integrity.

[3.] To the soldiers, who seem to have been also Hebrews, perhaps the guards of Philip or Herod, he said do violence to no man, extort nothing from the people by threatening, behave not insolently, nor outrageously in your quarters; when employed in war, use no unnecessary devastations, nor wanton cruelty; neither accuse any falsely, neither their comrades to their officers, or the people where they might be stationed, through malice, or for the sake of money; and be content with your wages, neither increasing them by plunder, nor seeking to advance them by mutiny; a caution well deserving the notice of all servants, who, if once they give way to discontent, will soon be tempted to use unlawful means to gratify their covetousness.

15. ¶ And as the people were [x] in expectation, and all men [*] mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ, or not; 16. John, answered, saying unto them all, [y] I indeed baptize you with water; but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose: [z] he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire; 17. [a] Whose fan is in his hand, and he will throughly purge his floor, and will gather the wheat into his garner; but the chaff he will burn with fire unquenchable. 18. And many other things in his exhortation preached he unto the people.[*] 19. ¶ [b] But Herod the tetrarch, being reproved by him for Herodias his brother Philip's wife,[†] and for all the evils which Herod had done. 20. Added yet this above all, that he shut up John in prison.

[x] Or in suspense. John 1. 19—24.

[*] Or reasoned, or debated.

[y] Mat. 3. 11, 12. Mark 1. 7, 8. John 1. 15, 26, 33. Acts 13. 24, 25. & 19. 4. & 1. 5. & 11. 16.

[z] Is. 44. 3, 4. Joel 2 28. Mal. 3. 2, 3. John 7. 38. Acts 1. 5. & 2. 4, 17. & 10. 45. & 11. 16. 1 Cor. 12. 13. Prov. 1. 23.

[a] Mat. 3. 12. & 13. 30. Mic. 4. 12. Mal. 3. 3. & 4. 1. Ps. i, xxi, cx.

[*] Or, And with many other exhortations, he published the good tidings unto the people.

[b] Mat. 14. 3, 4. & 11. 2. Mark 6. 17, 18.

cir. 30.

[†] Not the Philip mentioned ver. 1.

Verses 15—20. We have here,

1. The general expectations which the people were in of the Messiah. The sceptre was departed from Judah, and the prophecies of Daniel concerning him now required his coming; which made many turn their eyes to John, who appeared with marks of such singular distinction, and spoke with such authority and zeal, that they began to suspect this might be the long expected Messiah.

2. John immediately undeceived them, disclaiming all pretensions to that honour, and directs them to expect shortly the Great Prophet, whose forerunner he was. The meanest office under him he acknowledges himself unworthy to discharge; and his baptism was not worthy to be compared with the more powerful and efficacious influences of the Holy Ghost, that under the ministry of Jesus, should be abundantly dispensed, and act, like fire, with resistless energy upon the souls of men. By his gospel he would make a thorough separation between the faithful and the hypocrites, and by his judgments on the Jewish people sweep them away as the chaff before the fan; and, when he hath gathered in his chosen, the wheat, into his garner; the wicked, the self-righteous, and the apostate, will be cast into the everlasting burnings. An awful declaration, which deserves the most awakened attention.

These and many other things did John with great freedom and fidelity, deliver, preaching the glad tidings of the gospel (ευηγγελιζετο) to the people, and urging upon their consciences the importance of the truths he declared. Such ought all ministers, who are put in trust with the gospel, to be; warm, zealous, indefatigable, free, copious, evangelical. Then may we expect to reap the fruit of our labours, in a harvest of immortal souls.

3. After a short but glorious course of about a year and a half, a sudden stop is put to the Baptist's ministry by a most unjust imprisonment. Unable to flatter, yea, zealous to reprove the most exalted sinners, Herod the tetrarch escaped not his sharp rebukes for the complicated crime of taking his brother Philip's wife, and marrying her even during his life, and though she had children by him; thus joining incest to adultery; and for all the other evils which Herod had done, which were many and notorious. Exasperated at this plain and faithful dealing, he added this to all his other wickedness, that he shut up John in prison, and after a while was prevailed upon to take away his life. Note, (1.) When God's ministers are thus compelled to an involuntary silence, their sufferings speak as loud as their sermons. (2.) Mysterious are the ways of Providence. The excellent of the earth become a prey to persecutors, who triumph at their fall. Where, will some say, is the God of judgment? Wait a moment. The mystery will soon be unfolded.

cir. 29.

21. ¶ Now, when all the people were baptized, [c] it came to pass, that Jesus also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened, 22. And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him; and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art [d] my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased.

23. ¶ And Jesus himself began to be about [e] thirty years of age,* being (as was supposed,†) [f] the son of Joseph, which was the [g] son of Heli,‡ 24. Which was the son of Matthat, which was the son of Levi, which was the son of Melchi, which was the son of Janna, which was the son of Joseph, 25. Which was the son of Mattathias, which was the son of Amos, which was the son of Naum, which was the son of Esli, which was the son of Nagge, 26. Which was the son of Maath, which was the son of Mattathias, which was the son of Semei, which was the son of Joseph, which was the son of Juda, 27. Which was the son of Joanna, which was the son of Rhesa, which was the son of Zorobabel, which was the son of Salathiel, which was the son of Neri, 28. Which was the son of Melchi, which was the son of Addi, which was the son of Cosam, which was the son of Elmodam, which was the son of Er, 29. Which was the son of Jose, which was the son of Eliezer, which was the son of Jorim, which was the son of Matthat, which was the son of Levi, 30. Which was the son of Simeon, which was the son of Juda, which was the son of Joseph, which was the son of Jonan, which was the son of Eliakim, 31. Which was the son of Melea, which was the son of Menan, which was the son of Mattatha, which was the son of [i] Nathan, which was the son of David, 32. [k] Which was the son of Jesse, which was the son of Obed, which was the son of Booz, which was the son of Salmon, which was the son of Naasson, 33. Which was the son of Amminadab; which was the son of Aram, which was the son of Esrom, which was the son of Phares, which was the son of Juda, 34. [l] Which was the son of Jacob, which was the son of Isaac, which was the son of Abraham, [m] which was the son of Thara, which was the son of Nachor, 35. Which was the † son of Saruch, which was the son of Ragau, which was the son of Phalec, which was the son of Heber, which was the son [n] of Sala, 36. Which was the son of † Cainan, which was the son of Arphaxad, which was the son of Sem, [n] which was the son of Noe, which was the son of Lamech, 36. Which was the son of Mathusala, which was the son of Enoch, which * was the son of Jared, which was the son of Maleleel, which was the son of Cainan, 38. Which was the son of Enos, which was the son of Seth, which was the son of Adam,* [o] which was the son of God.

c Mat. 3. 13—17. Mark 1. 9—11. John 1. 29—34. Mat. 7. 7, 11. Is. 11. 2. & 61. 1. John 12. 28.

d Ps. 2. 7. Is. 42. 1. Mat. 3. 17. & 16. 16. & 17. 5. & 12. 18. ch. 9. 35. 2 Pet. 1. 17. Col. 1. 13.

e Gen. 41. 46. Num. 4. 3, 35.

* Or rather, Now Jesus was himself about thirty years in subjection.

† For Jesus was not really the son of Joseph, as St Luke had before explained in his account of the miraculous conception.—Campbell.

f Mat. 13. 55. Mark 6. 3. John 6. 42. ch. 4. 22.

g Son-in-law. The 40 men here mentioned from Joseph to David, were Christ's natural progenitors by his mother: whereas those mentioned by Matthew, ch. 1. 6—16. were ancestors in office, and progenitors of Joseph his supposed father.

‡ It appears that Luke, composing his gospel for the use of the Gentiles, and intending to prove that Christ was 'the seed of the woman,' necessarily reckoned by the line of his mother, Mary the daughter of Heli. Matthew, on the other hand, intending to deduce his legal descent from David and Abraham, reckoned by the line of Joseph, the espoused husband of Mary, through whom the legal descent was to be carried.—Lightfoot.

h Whether Zorobabel and Salathiel are the same as those in Mat. 1. 12, 13. 1 Chr. 3. 17, 19. Ezra 3. 2. is uncertain.

i 1 Chr. 3. 5. & 14. 4. 2 Sam. 5. 14. Zec. 12. 12.

k 1 Chr. 2. 4, 5, 9—15. Mat. 1. 3—6. Ruth 4. 18—22.

l Mat. 1. 2. 1 Chr. 2. 1. & 1. 34. Gen. 21. 3. & 25. 26. & 29. 35. Acts 7. 8. Heb. 11. 8—21.

m Gen. 11. 10—26 1 Chr. 1. 24—28.

† This name ought to be thrown out, as it is not found in the correspondent lists.

n Gen. v. 1 Chr. 1. 1—4.

o Gen. 1. 26, 27. & 2. 7. & 5. 1, 2. Acts 17. 26. 1 Cor. 15. 45. 1 Tim. 2. 14. Is. 64. 8. Gen. 3. 15.

* In thus tracing our Lord's lineage up to Adam, Luke intimates that he is 'the Seed of the woman,' promised to our first parents, and the common Saviour of Jew and Gentile, bond and free.

Verses 21—38. The Evangelist finishes the history of John's ministry, which continued near a year after Christ's baptism, before he enters upon the public appearance of Jesus.

1. After a multitude of others had been baptized, at last Jesus also comes to John, and is baptized of him in Jordan; when, looking up in prayer to his Father, instantly the heavens were opened, and the Holy Ghost in a bodily shape descended upon him, both to qualify him for his mediatorial work, and to be a sign to John that he was the Messiah; which was further confirmed by an audible voice from heaven, God the Father testifying his delight in this Son of his love, and his perfect satisfaction in his undertaking. Note, (1.) Christ prayed, to set us the example. In this way the communion between earth and heaven is to be maintained. (2.) If God be well pleased in his Son, then may we confidently rest our souls on him as our Saviour, and never doubt of the fulness of the redemption he hath obtained for us.

2. The age and pedigree of Jesus are recorded by the Evangelist. He was about thirty years of age when he entered upon the mediatorial office. Descended from David by his mother's side, whose genealogy is here given, as well as by Joseph's his reputed father. Some difficulties occur, in comparing the genealogies. Joseph, said in Matthew to be the son of Jacob, is here said to be the son of Heli, which some avoid by reading the words (as was supposed the son of Joseph) in a parenthesis, intimating that in reality Jesus was the son of Heli, Mary's father. Or Joseph, being her husband, might be called, in right of his wife, Heli's son.

Some have observed also, that the words (ὡς ἐνομίζετο) as it was supposed, may be rendered, as it was found in the record of the genealogy, which the Evangelist copied, and none at that time ever contradicted.

The inserting the name of Cainan between Sala and Arphaxad is of more difficult solution, it not agreeing with the Hebrew copies, nor any ancient version except the Septuagint, and is thought not to have been there originally; but that some early transcriber of Luke's gospel inserting this name by mistake, it afterwards crept into that translation. The matter indeed is of little moment, and doth not in the least affect our salvation.

Some, to whose sentiments I accede, choose to carry the name of Jesus through all his ancestors, instead of connecting each with his immediate predecessor. As thus, Jesus, the son of Heli, of Matthat, &c. till we come to the top of the line, as the son of Adam in his human, the son of God in his divine, nature; uniting both in his own person, and yet not two but one Christ.

CHAP. IV.—ANNO DOMINI, 31.

We left Christ newly baptized, and owned by a voice from heaven, and the descent of the Holy Ghost upon him. Now in this chapter we have, 1. A further preparation of him for his public ministry by his being tempted in the wilderness. 2. His entrance upon his public work in Galilee, ver. 14, 15. particularly, (1.) At Nazareth, the city where he had been brought up, ver. 16—30. which we had no account of before in Matthew. (2.) At Capernaum, where having preached to admiration, ver. 31, 32. he cast a devil out of a man that was possessed, ver. 33—37. Cured Peter's mother-in-law of a fever, ver. 38, 39. And many others that were sick and possessed, ver. 40, 41. And then went and did the same in other cities of Galilee, ver. 42—44.

1. AND [a] Jesus, being [b] full of the Holy Ghost, returned from Jordan, and was [c] led by the Spirit into the [d] wilderness, 2. Being forty days [e] tempted of the devil. And [f] in those days he did eat nothing: and when they were ended, he afterward [g] hungered. 3. And the devil said unto him, [h] If thou be the Son of God, [i] command this stone that it be made bread. 4. And Jesus answered him, saying, [k] It is written, that man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God. 5. [l] And the devil, taking him up into an high mountain, shewed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time. 6. And the devil said unto him, [m] All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them, for that is delivered unto me; and to whomsoever I will I give it. 7. If thou therefore wilt * worship me, all shall be thine. 8. And Jesus answered and said unto him, [n] Get thee behind me, Satan: for it is written, [o] Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve. 9. [p] And he brought him to Jerusalem, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said unto him, [q] If thou be the Son of God, [r] cast thyself down from hence: 10. [s] For it is written, He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee; 11. And in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone. 12. And Jesus answering, said unto him, [t] It is said, [u] Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. 13. And [x] when the devil had ended all the temptation, he departed from him for a season.

a Mat. 4. 1—11. Mark 1. 12, 13.
b Ch. 3. 22. Mat. 3. 16. Mark 1. 10. John 1. 32. & 3. 34. Is. 61. 1. & 11. 2—4. c 1 Kin. 18. 12. Ezek. 3. 14. & 8. 3. & 11. 1, 24. & 40. 2. & 43. 5. Acts 8. 39.
d Ch. 1. 80. & 3. 2. Josh. 15. 61.
e Heb. 2. 18. & 4. 15. Gen. 3. 15.
f Exod. 34. 28. Deut. 9. 9, 18. 1 Kin. 19. 8.
g Mark 1. 13. Mat. 4. 2 & 21. 18. John 4. 6.
h Mat. 4. 3. & 3. 17.
i Ch. 3. 8. Gen. 18. 14.
k Deut. 8. 3. Exod. 23. 25. ch. 12. 15. 1 Tim. 4. 5. Prov. 10. 22. & 30. 8.
l Mat 4. 8, 9. 2 Cor. 4. 4. 1 Cor. 7. 31. 1 John 2. 15, 16. Eph. 6. 12.
m John 8. 44. 2 Cor. 11. 14. Rev. 20. 2, 3. & 13. 2, 7.
* Or fall down before me. n Mat. 16. 23. Jam. 4. 7. 1 Pet. 5. 9.
o Deut. 6. 13. & 10. 20. 1 Sam. 7. 3. Mat. 4. 10. p Job. 1. 11—19. & 2. 6.
q Mat. 3. 17. & 8. 29. Heb. 4. 15. & 2. 17, 18.
r John 8. 44. 1 Pet. 5. 8.
s Ps. 91. 11, 12. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Heb. 1. 14.
t Ver. 3, 8. Rom. 15. 4. Eph. 6. 17.
u Deut. 6. 16. Mat. 4. 7. 1 Cor. 10. 9. Heb. 3. 8, 9.
x Mat. 4. 11. Mark 1. 13. Jam. 4. 7. John 14. 30

Verses 1—13. As the great enemy of souls had foiled the first man in the midst of a paradise of delights, the second man, the Lord from heaven, who came to destroy the works of the devil, that he might render his victory more illustrious, gives the tempter every advantage. Though deep retired in a dreary desert, without human converse, without food, during forty days, to satisfy his hunger, he stood like a rock in the midst of the sea, defying the impotent attacks of the raging fiend of darkness. Being full of the Holy Ghost, and just then anointed for his mediatorial office, and furnished with the fulness of divine grace, Satan, to his bitter shame and vexation, found him immoveable, and every attack he made but signalized his own defeat.

1. He tempted him to distrust his Father's care, and insinuated his suspicions of the character he assumed as the Son of God; seeking to shake the faith of the Redeemer, and challenging him to give a proof of it by working so needful a miracle for his own supply. But Jesus refused to gratify him; and by the sword of the Spirit, the word of God, foiled his assault, testifying his confidence in his Father's provision for him; refusing to take the matter out of his hands, and persuaded that he could by other means than by bread alone preserve his life and satisfy his hunger, hereby teaching us, (1.) Under every temptation to have recourse to the word and promises of God. (2.) Not to give place to the devil, by harbouring for a moment his suggestions. (3.) Never to desire to be our own carvers, or think by our own contrivance and wisdom, exclusive of God, to extricate ourselves from our own difficulties, or gain our own ends, but quietly to resign ourselves to him, submissive to his providences, and constantly depending upon his blessing and support. (4.) That we should not estimate God's favour by his outward dispensations, nor call in question our adoption of him, though never so severely exercised. Many of God's dearest children have known the pinchings of hunger, to prove their faith and try their patience.

2. He tempted him with the enticing offers of temporal grandeur. This St Matthew places the last, and such it seems to have been; though Luke inverts the order. Taking him up into a mountain, the devil in a moment caused all the kingdoms of the world in their greatest glory, to pass in review before our Lord, as if to dazzle and charm him with their united splendour: then boldly challenging them as his own, as if delivered to him, either by the Most High, which was false; or by the willing subjection of these nations and their kings, who yielded themselves up to the devil's power; and, as Lord of all, he pretends therefore a right to dispose of them at his pleasure; on one condition he proffers to lay them all at the feet of Jesus, and constitute him the universal sovereign, If thou wilt worship me, all shall be thine. With indignation and abhorrence at such insolence and impiety, he rejects the tempter's offer; and, still drawing his weapons from the sacred magazine of Scripture, condemns the daring attempt of this hateful spirit thus to invade the divine prerogative, and confounds him with producing that eternal and invariable rule of worship, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve. Note, All adoration of saints, angels, and the Virgin, is in fact but the worship of Satan, and as much a sacrifice to devils, 1 Cor. x. 20. as the religious services of Paganism.

3. Once more the devil returns to the charge, and, since Christ is unmoved with grandeur, and unshaken with distrust, he tries to fill him with unwarrantable presumption; and, setting him on a pinnacle of the temple, bids him cast himself down into the court of worshippers below; and, if he was really the Son of God, to prove it by such a sign from heaven as the Jews sought, which, he suggests, would not fail of engaging them to receive him as the Messiah; nor could there be danger in the experiment, since God hath given him an express promise of protection, and he was under angelic care, Psalm xci. 11, 12. Christ seemed to lay such stress upon the Scripture, therefore Satan quotes it too to support his cause. The word of God in the hands of wicked men, is thus often perverted and wrested to serve the vilest purposes. But Jesus detects Satan's fallacy. God is to be trusted, not to be tempted, as it is written, Deut.

vi. 16. In the way of duty he will hold us up: if, without any warrant from him, we expose ourselves to needless danger, we have not the least ground to hope for preservation.

Utterly defeated now, the devil quits the field, covered with shame; in malice still inveterate. Waiting therefore for a more favourable season, he departed, resolving to seize the first occasion of returning with sharpened malignity; see Luke xxii. 53.

14. ¶ [y] And Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee: and there went out a fame of him through all the region round about. 15. And [z] he taught in their synagogues, being glorified of all. 16. ¶ And he came to [a] Nazareth, where he had been brought up: and as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, and [b] stood up for to read.* 17. And there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet Esaias. And when he had opened the book, he found the place where it was written, 18. [c] The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised; 19. To preach the [d] acceptable year of the Lord. 20. And he closed the book, and he gave it again to the minister, † and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on him. 21. And he began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears. 22. And all bare him witness, ‡ and wondered at the [e] gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And they said, [f] Is not this Joseph's son? 23. And he said unto them, Ye will surely say unto me this proverb, Physician, heal thyself: whatsoever we have heard done in Capernaum, do also here in thy country. 24. And he said, Verily I say unto you, No [h] prophet is accepted in his own country. 25. But I tell you of a truth, [i] many widows were in Israel in the days of Elias, when the heaven was shut up three years and six months, when great famine was throughout all the land; 26. But unto none of them was Elias sent, save unto Sarepta, § a city of Sidon, unto a woman that was a widow. 27. [k] And many lepers were in Israel in the time of Eliseus the prophet; and none of them [l] was cleansed, saving Naaman the Syrian. 28. And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, [m] were filled with wrath, 29. [n] And rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him unto the * brow of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him down headlong. 30. [o] But he, passing through the midst of them, went his way, y Mat. 4. 12. Mark 1. 14. John 4. 43. Mat 4. 23—25. Acts 10. 37, 38.

z Is. 61. 1—3. & 25. 13. & 54 13. & 48. 17. & 50. 4. cir. 30.

a Mat. 13. 54. ch. 1. 26, 27. & 2. 39, 51. Mat. 2. 23. Mark 6. 1.

b Neh. 8. 5, 6. Acts 13. 15, 16. & 17. 2.

* The service of the synagogue consisted of prayer, reading fixed portions of Scripture, of expositions of Scripture, and addresses similar to our sermons. It was customary for the different members of the synagogue to take a part in these services, according to their age or reputation, and the portion of Scripture which our Lord read was that which occurred in the establishedorder of the sections. It was also usual for the person who read the lesson, to stand while reading it, and to sit while addressing the assembly in his own words. —Stebbing.

c Is. 61. 1—3. & 42. 1—7. & 50. 4. Ps. 45. 2, 7. Dan. 9. 24. Acts 10. 38. Mat. 11. 5. John 3. 16, 17. & 5. 24, 25. & 6. 27, 40. Is. 42. 6, 7. & 49. 6, 8, 24—26

d Lev. 25. 8. 2 Cor. 6. 2. Is. 63. 4. & 49. 8. ch. 19. 42.

† To the person whose office it was to carry the book, as he was directed by the ruler of the synagogue.—Pearce.

‡ Or rather, all extolled him.

e Mark 6. 2, 3. Mat. 13. 54. Ps. 45. 2, 4. Prov. 10. 32. Is. 50. 4. ch. 46. 47. John 7. 46. & 1. 14.

f Mark 6. 3. Mat. 13. 55. John 6. 42.

g Mat 4. 13. & 13. 54. John 7. 3, 4.

h Mat. 13. 57. Mark 6. 4, 5. John 4. 4. & 6. 42.

i 1 Kin. 17. 9. & 18. 1. Jam. 5. 17, 18.

§ Sarepta, a city of Phœnicia, on the coast of the Mediterranean.

k 2 Kin. 5. 14.

l Elisha. 1 Kin. 19. 19—21, 2 Kin. ii—viii, xiii.

m 2 Chr. 16. 10. Acts 7. 54. & 22. 22.

n John 15. 24, 25. & 10. 32. & 8. 37, 40, 59.

* Or edge.

o John 8. 59. & 7. 30. & 10. 39. Ps 31. 15.

Verses 14—30. Having vanquished his infernal foe in the wilderness, Jesus enters upon his ministerial office, and publicly appears, destroying, by his doctrine and miracles, the power of Satan over the bodies and souls of men.

1. In the power of the Spirit he returned into Galilee, strengthened with might in the inner man for the arduous work which he had undertaken; and immediately he set himself to discharge his high commission, preaching in their synagogues the gospel of the kingdom; and such power accompanied his word, and such miracles confirmed his doctrine, that the people in general admired and extolled him, and his fame quickly spread through all that country.

2. After passing through other parts of Galilee he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up; and, as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, and stood up to read some section of Scripture, as was usually done on that day: and a most laudable custom is this, in every worshipping assembly to read the word of God. The volume, which was delivered to him for this purpose by the minister of the synagogue, contained the prophecy of Isaiah; and, unrolling the parchment on which it was written, he found the place, Isa. lxi. 1, 2. which spoke so evidently of himself. Whether it was the portion of Scripture for the day, or that he chose it as the properest introduction to his discourse, is uncertain; but, whichever was the case, it gave him the fairest opportunity to describe his own office and character, and left them inexcusable who should reject him, notwithstanding the voice of the prophets read every sabbath-day.

(1.) The text gave a full account of the Redeemer's undertaking. 1. He was eminently qualified for his arduous work by that plenitude of gifts and graces conferred upon him by the Spirit of the Lord; and fully commissioned by this unction from the Holy One for the discharge of his mediatorial office. 2. The great end of his mission is set forth. (1.) To preach the gospel to the poor, to evangelize them; not only to speak to their ears, but to make his work effectual, to convert their hearts. And by the poor are meant not merely the indigent and common people, though of such were Christ's disciples chiefly taken, but the poor in spirit, who, convinced of their spiritual wants and wretchedness, would gladly embrace that free pardon, righteousness, and salvation, which the gospel revealed to them. (2.) To heal the broken-hearted, whose sins pierced their souls with sorrow, and whose troubled consciences and corrupted hearts nothing but the balm of his blood and grace could relieve and cure. (3.) To preach deliverance to the captives, to sinful souls enslaved by Satan's power. Their chains of guilt are broken through the atonement of Jesus, and by his Spirit they are delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God. (4.) To preach recovering of sight to the blind, to open the darkened understanding of fallen man, and to shine into his heart, communicating the knowledge of the salvation which is by grace. (5.) To set at liberty them that are bruised, to break off the galling yoke of the law from the necks of those who, under a spirit of bondage, continued miserable and unhappy; and, in its stead, to give them the spirit of adoption, and liberty from every slavish fear. (6.) To preach the acceptable year of the Lord, that joyful year of gospel jubilee, when insolvent sinners shall obtain free remission of all their sins, deliverance from their miseries, restoration to the divine favour, and their forfeited inheritance in the heavenly Canaan.

(2.) Having read this text, and delivered the roll again to the minister, he sat down, as was the custom of the Jewish doctors, and began to discourse at large on all the various particulars; showing how the words referred to the Messiah and his office, and were that very day fulfilled in himself.

3. The audience hung with attention on his lips, their eyes eagerly fastened on him, and admiration seized every hearer; such eminent wisdom, such energy of diction, such majesty and grace, appeared in all his words and his address, that they were astonished above measure, especially considering the meanness of his birth and education. Is not this Joseph's son, the carpenter? Which, though it increased their wonder at his discourse, prejudiced them against his person, and would not suffer them to admit the application to himself of this high office of the Messiah. Note, (1.) To have our eyes directed to the minister serves often to fix the attention to his discourse. (2.) Many admire the preaching, and are pleased with the orator, whose hearts are never truly converted by what they hear.

4. He anticipates and answers the objection he saw rising in the hearts of many against him. Ye will surely say to me this proverb, Physician, Heal thyself: if thou art the wondrous Personage, as reported, show it, by working the same miracles at home which we have heard done in Capernaum. But in answer hereunto, he assures them, that if he did the same or greater wonders amongst them, he knew their prejudices against him were such, they would notwithstanding reject him, no prophet being accepted in his own country: they would still think meanly of him who had known his parentage and education, and been used for so long a time to regard him as vastly their inferior. But he shows them, that though he withheld his favours from them it would be no proof against him, since he had the examples of former prophets to plead, and God was the sovereign disposer of his own gifts, and bestows them not on those whom men judge most fit, but on such as he pleases. Thus Elijah supported miraculously a widow of Sarepta, a Gentile city, during the famine which raged, whilst many as necessitous remained in Israel without any such relief; and Elisha also, passing by the multitude of his own leprous countrymen, cleansed only Naaman the Syrian, a Gentile, a hereditary enemy of Israel. As great, or greater objections would therefore lie against these prophets than they suggested against him.

5. The people were highly exasperated at the reproach which they apprehended was couched under these instances, as if they of Nazareth were as wicked as the Israelites in the days of Ahab, and that even Gentiles would be preferred before them in the divine regard. Though so lately they admired his gracious words, this application cut them to the heart: and, rising in a popular tumult, they cast him out of the synagogue, hurried him through the city, and, dragging him to the brow of the hill on which their city was built, intended to hurl him headlong down, and dash him to pieces. Note, It is a mercy that even the madness of the people is under a divine restraint: else how many of God's faithful ministers had met an untimely death.

6. Jesus disappoints their malice. His time to suffer was not yet come, and therefore by his divine power, either holding their eyes, or rendering himself invisible, or striking them to the earth, as the guard who afterwards came to arrest him, he passed safe through the midst of them, leaving them to their impenitence and ruin. Note, They who reject Jesus and his gospel are justly given up to a reprobate mind.

[p] Mat. 4. 13. Mark 1. 21.

[q] Mat. 7. 28, 29. Mark 1. 22. ch. 5 17. John 6. 63. Tit. 2. 15. 1 Thes. 1. 5.

31. [p] And came down to Capernaum, a city of Galilee, and taught them on the sabbath days. 32. And they were astonished at his doctrine: [q] for his word was with power. 33. ¶ [r] And in the synagogue there was a man which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice, 34. Saying, ‡ Let us alone; [s] what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art; [t] the Holy One of God. 35. And [u] Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the devil had [x] thrown him in the midst, he came out of him, and hurt him not. 36. [y] And they were all amazed, and spake among themselves, saying, What a word is this! for with authority and power he commandeth ‖ the unclean spirits, and they come out. 37. [z] And the fame of him went out into every place of the country round about. 38. ¶ [a] And he arose out of the synagogue, and entered into Simon's house. And Simon's wife's mother was taken with a great fever; and they besought him for her. 39. [b] And he stood over her, and rebuked the fever; and it left her: [c] and immediately she arose and ministered unto them. 40. ¶ [d] Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick § with divers diseases brought them unto him: and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them. 41. ¶ [e] And devils also came out of many, crying out, and saying, Thou art Christ the Son of God. And he, rebuking them, suffered them not to * speak: for they knew that he was Christ. 42. ¶ [f] And when it was day, he departed and went into a desert place. [g] And the people sought him, and came unto him, and stayed him, that he should not depart from them. † 43. And he said unto them, [h] I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also: for therefore am I sent. 44. [i] And he preached in the synagogues of Galilee.

[r] Mark 1. 23—28. I Pet. 5. 8.

‡ Or away.

[s] Mark 1. 24, 34. & 5. 7. Mat. 8. 29. ver. 41.

[t] Ps. 16. 10. Dan. 9. 24. ch. 1. 35. Acts 4. 27. & 2. 31.

[u] Ver. 14. Mark 1. 25, 34. & 3. 11, 12. Acts 16. 17, 18. Ps. 50. 16.

[x] Mark 1. 26. & 9. 26. ch. 9. 39, 42. & 11. 22.

[y] Mat. 12. 23. & 9. 33. Mark 1. 27. & 7. 37. & 9. 25.

‖ Or, What meaneth this? that with authority and power he commandeth, &c.

[z] Mat. 4. 23—25. & 9. 31. Song 1. 3. Mic. 5. 4. Is. 52. 13.

[a] Mark 1. 29—31. Mat. 8. 14, 15.

[b] Exod. 15. 26. Rev. 16. 9. Ps. 103. 3. & 147. 3. & 107. 20.

[c] Ps. 103. 1, 2. & 116. 12. 2 Cor. 5. 14. ch. 8. 3.

[d] Mat. 8. 16, 17. Mark 1. 32—34. with 21. 1. & 3. 2. Luke 14. 1. Gen. 49. 10. Mat. 11. 5. & 4. 23.

§ After sunset all they who had any sick,—because then the sabbath was ended, and the people were at liberty to carry their sick.—Campbell.

[e] Mark 1. 34. & 3. 11, 12. see ver. 34, 35. Acts 16. 17, 18.

* Or, to say that they knew him to be Christ.

[f] Mark 1. 35. Eccl. 3. 10. John 4. 34.

[g] Mark 1. 45. John 6. 24. ch. 24. 29.

† More simply, urged him not to leave him.

[h] Mark 1. 14, 15. 2 Tim. 4. 2. Acts 10. 38. Rom. 15. 8. Is. 61. 1—3. & 42. 1—7. & 49. 1—8. & 50. 4.

[i] Mark 1. 39. Mat. 4. 15, 17, 23.

Verses 31—44. When Jesus departed from Nazareth he returned to Capernaum, and, as usual, on the sabbath-day he taught the people in their synagogues, to the astonishment of all who heard him; such divine authority and commanding energy accompanied his word. In proof of the doctrine he advanced, we have here,

1. A notable miracle performed in the presence of the congregation where he preached; see Mark i. 23. A man with the spirit of an unclean devil was in the synagogue. Filled with enmity against Christ and his gospel, and terrified with just fears that Jesus would dispossess him, the devil, using the man's organs of speech, cried out, Let us alone, &c. These wicked spirits dread their doom, and fearfully look forward to their terrible judgment. They know the power of Jesus of Nazareth, for they have proved it in the wilderness; and fully satisfied concerning his mission, they confess him to be the Holy One of God, though with no kind intention; malice dictated here the language of truth, and they would fain fix upon him the suspicion of a confederacy with them, by bearing such an honourable testimony to him. But Jesus in a moment silences this foul fiend, and with a word rescued the miserable sinner from his power. With rage, compelled to depart, the devil vented his last efforts, throwing the man down with violent convulsions, as if he would have torn him in pieces; but his power was broken, he was unable to hurt him, and the cure was complete. Amazed, the whole congregation beheld and questioned with each other concerning a miracle so wondrous and incontestable. Never had such power and authority appeared before, that with a word the infernal spirits should be thus dispossessed, without the least ability to make resistance. And immediately the fame of the cure spread far and wide. Note, The power of Satan, as an unclean spirit, over the souls of men is still exceeding great, and nothing but the powerful word of gospel grace can cast him out.

2. No sooner was he returned from the synagogue than Peter's wife's mother, who lay ill of a fever, experienced his healing grace. At the request of some of the company, who mentioned her disorder, he arose, stood by her bedside, rebuked the fever with a word, and instantly she was so perfectly restored to health as to be able to wait on the guests who were in the house. Note, (1.) When they who are near and dear to us are sick, we must beseech Jesus on their behalf; and the prayer of faith still availeth much. (2.) They who are restored to spiritual health by the Saviour's grace, will be ready to discharge every kind office of love and service to the least of his people.

3. A multitude of other cures were performed by him the same day at even. All who had friends or relations diseased applied to him, and, whatever was their malady, he with a touch healed them all: even devils, unable to stand before his word, came out of those that were possessed, confessing him to be the Messiah: but he silenced them, refusing to receive any testimony from such as they were. Note, When they who we know bear enmity towards us speak us most respectfully, their civilities are to be most suspected of design.

4. Early next morning he departed from Capernaum to a solitude for retirement. Thither the people followed him, and entreated him to return to their city: but he chose to diffuse the savour of his gospel, and dispense his miracles of mercy in the country around; for this was the design of his mission, to be a general blessing. Note, (1.) They who have much public work have especial need of seasonable retirement also. To be alone with God is the best preparative for the pulpit. (2.) They who have found Christ's presence so desirable, naturally wish for its continuance. And though he refused his bodily presence to them, he hath engaged to his people who seek him, that he will abide with them for ever.

CHAP. V.—ANNO DOMINI, 30.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's preaching to the people out of Peter's ship, ver. 1—3. 2. The miraculous draught of fishes, ver. 4—11. 3. His cleansing the leper, ver. 12—15. 4. A short account of his private devotion and public ministry, ver. 16, 17. 5. His cure of the man sick of the palsy, ver. 18—26. 6. His calling Levi the publican, and conversing with publicans on that occasion, ver. 27—32. 7. His justifying his disciples in not fasting so frequently as the disciples of John and the Pharisees did, ver. 33. ad finem.

1. AND [a] it came to pass, that, as the people [b] pressed upon him to hear the word of God, he [c] stood by the lake of Gennesaret, 2. And saw two ships standing by the lake: * but the fishermen were gone out of them, and were washing their nets. 3. And he entered into one of the ships, which was Simon's, and prayed him that he would thrust out a little from the land. And he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship. 4. ¶ Now, when he had left speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and [d] let down your nets for a draught. 5. And Simon answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all the night, and [e] have taken nothing: nevertheless, at thy word I will let down the net. 6. And when they had this done, they inclosed a great multitude of fishes; and [f] their net brake. 7. And they beckoned unto their partners, which were in the other ship, that they should come and [g] help them. And they came, and filled both the ships, so that they began to sink. † 8. When Simon Peter saw it, [h] he fell down at Jesus' knees, saying, Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord. 9. [i] For he was astonished, ‡ and all that were with him, at the draught of the fishes which they had taken: 10. And so was also [k] James and John, the sons of Zebedee, which were partners with Simon. And Jesus said unto Simon, Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt [l] catch men. 11. And when they had brought their ships to land, they [m] forsook all, and followed him.

[a] Mat. 4. 18—22. Mark 1. 1, 16—20.

[b] 1 Sam. 3. 1. Mat. 9. 36. & 11. 12. & 13. 2.

[c] Acts 16. 13. ch. 8. 4. Mark 4. 1. Chinnereth, Josh. 12. 3. Chinneroth, Mat. 14. 34.

* Aground, or at anchor near the edge.

[d] John 21. 6.

[e] John 21. 3. Hag. 1. 6. Ps. 127. 1. Eccl. 9. 11.

[f] John 21. 11.

[g] Acts 16. 9. Phil. 4. 3. Gal. 6. 2. Heb. 13. 1.

† So that they were near sinking.

[h] 1 Sam. 6. 9. 1 Kin. 17. 18. Mat. 8. 8. Job 42. 5, 6. Is. 6. 1—5. Dan. 8. 17. & 10. 8, 16, 17.

[i] Ch. 4. 32, 36.

‡ The word signifies a degree of astonishment, amounting to terror. Peter discovered in his Master, on this occasion, something so much superior to human, that he was quite overwhelmed with awe and fear.

[k] Ch. 6. 14. & 5. 51. & 9. 28. Mat. 26. 37.

[l] Mat. 4. 19, 20. Mark 1. 17, 18. Ezek. 47. 9, 10. Mat. 13. 47. 2 Tim. 2. 26. 1 Tim. 4. 16.

[m] Mat. 19. 27. & 16. 24. Phil. 3. 7, 8 ch. 18. 28 29. & 14. 33. Mat. 10. 37. Ps. 73. 25.

Verses 1—11. Vast was the concourse that attended the preaching of Jesus; and whilst the Scribes and Pharisees, the wise doctors of the law, despised him, the common people were eager to hear him, and pressed through the crowd to get nearer. Hereupon,

1. Christ desired the use of a fisherman's boat, for the greater convenience of being heard, and to be less incommoded with the throng; and there he sat down and taught the people who stood before him on the shore.

2. When he had done preaching he desired Simon, in whose boat he was, to launch out farther into the lake, and let down their nets. Simon told him the ill success they had met with; but, though they had wearied themselves all night, and washed their nets, if he bid them they would cheerfully make another trial. Note, (1.) The most diligent and laborious sometimes meet with disappointments, and are apt to be discouraged by the little fruit they see of their labours; but they must persist in the way of duty, and leave the event to God. (2.) If our bread be easily earned, and our rest sweet to us, we should remember charitably those who labour hard for little gain, and wake at their toils when they are sleeping.

3. Most amazing was the quantity of fishes they inclosed: their net began to give way with the weight; and, unable to draw them up themselves, they beckoned to their partners to come to their assistance, and loaded both their boats so deep that they were in danger of sinking. Peter was now abundantly repaid for the loan of his boat; and in this display his Master's power in the sea, as well as on the land, might be confirmed in his faith of the doctrine which he delivered.

4. Peter, deeply affected with what he saw, and perceiving the danger they were in, fell down at Jesus' knees, and under the deepest sense of his own unworthiness, cried out, saying, Depart, from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord. Conscious of his guilt and sinfulness, he trembled, lest the Lord was come to punish instead of blessing him; and was afraid of his very mercies: for he was astonished, and all that were with him at the draught of fishes they had taken; though brought up to the business from their youth, they had never seen any thing at all to be compared with this in their whole lives. Note, (1.) The best of men are sinful men, and need continually to fall at Jesus' feet in deepest self-abasement. (2.) Though we have grievously offended our Lord, we may not say, Depart from me, but, Stay with me, or, Return to me in mercy; for nothing but his presence and grace can keep us from sinking.

5. Jesus quiets their fears. He is not come to them in anger, but in mercy: and he hath still greater kindness in store for them than this cargo of fishes: therefore he said unto Simon, Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt catch men, and be more successful in casting the gospel-net, and drawing greater multitudes out of the depths of sin and misery to life and salvation. Which was eminently fulfilled, Acts ii. 41.

6. No sooner were they come to land than Simon and Andrew, and the sons of Zebedee, their partners, obeying his call, immediately left their boats, and all they had, quitting their employment at the time when it appeared most successful, and commenced thenceforward constant attendants on the Lord Jesus. Note, They who know the blessedness of Christ's service will count nothing too much to part with for his sake.

12. ¶ [n] And it came to pass, when he was in a certain city, behold a man full of leprosy; who, seeing Jesus, fell on his face, and [o] besought him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou [p] canst make me clean. 13. And he put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, [q] I will; be thou clean. And [r] immediately the leprosy departed from him. 14. And he charged him to [s] tell no man: but go, and [t] shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing, according as Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them. 15. [u] But so much the more went there a fame abroad of him: and great multitudes came together to hear, and to be healed by him of their infirmities. 16. ¶ [x] And he withdrew himself into the wilderness, and prayed.

n When he came down from the mount, (Mat. 8. 1.) and was about to enter Capernaum. Mark 1. 40—45. 2 Chr. 26. 21. Lev. xiii. 2 Kin. 5. 25.

o Ch. 18. 1—14. Mat. 7. 7, 11. Ps. 50. 15. & 91. 15.

p Gen. 18. 14. Jer. 32. 17, 27. Heb. 7. 25. Is. 63. 1.

q Hos. 13. 9. Is. 46. 12, 13.

r Ch. 4. 39. & 8. 55. Mat. 15. 28. John 4. 50, 54. Ps. 33. 9.

s Mat. 8. 4. & 9. 30. & 12. 16. Mark 1. 44. & 5. 43. & 7. 36. & 8. 26.

t Lev. xiii, xiv.

u Mat. 4. 23—25. & 9. 26. & 14. 35. & 17. 14. Is. 52. 13. & 35. 5, 6. Mark 2. 1, 2. cir. 31.

x Mark 1. 35, 45. Mat. 6. 6. ch. 6. 12.

Verses 12—16. We have here,

1. The cleansing of the leper. This story both the former evangelists have recorded. It affords us,

(1.) A striking emblem of our true state. So corrupt is our nature; so spotted are our souls; so loathsome in the eyes of God; and by all human means so utterly incurable is the disease of sin.

(2.) It directs us where our only hope lies, even in Jesus, the great physician. To him with deep humiliation and confusion of face in the sight of our own vileness, should we make application; crying earnestly for his healing grace; depending on his power to save to the uttermost; and casting ourselves wholly on his mercy.

(3.) Christ appears a gracious Saviour ready to hear the prayer of the destitute poor, and able to save to the uttermost all who come to him; both to pardon the sinner's guilt, however aggravated; and to deliver him from the power of his corruptions, however inveterate.

(4.) Every cleansed sinner will immediately follow the commands of Jesus; will offer up himself a living sacrifice to God; and in the blessed, evident, and universal change wrought upon him, will leave those without excuse, who will not acknowledge the divine power and grace magnified in such a conversion.

2. Great multitudes resorted to him from every quarter to hear him and to be healed. The more he sought to be hid the more his fame spread. The gratitude and transport of joy this poor man felt on his cure would not permit him to hold his tongue and conceal the glory of his great benefactor. Modest worth, that wishes to be concealed, shines the brighter.

3. He withdrew, after the labours of the day, from the crowd, and, retiring into a solitary place, spent some time alone in prayer; to teach us this necessary duty, which nothing should entrench upon or interrupt.

17. ¶ And it came to pass on a certain day, as he was teaching, that there were [y] Pharisees and doctors of the law sitting by, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judea, and Jerusalem; and [z] the power of the Lord was present to heal them. 18. [a] And, behold, men brought in a bed a man which was taken with a palsy: and they sought means to bring him in, and to lay him before him. 19. And when they could not find by what way they might bring him in because of the multitude, they went upon the [b] house top, and let him down through the tiling with his couch into the midst before Jesus. 20. And when he [c] saw their faith, he said unto him, Man, [d] thy sins are forgiven thee. 21. And the scribes and the Pharisees began to reason, saying, [e] Who is this which speaketh blasphemies? [f] Who can forgive sins, but God alone? 22. But when Jesus [g] perceived their thoughts, he, answering, said unto them, What reason ye in your hearts? 23. Whether is easier to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Rise up and walk? 24. But that ye may know that the [h] Son of man hath [i] power upon earth to forgive sins, (he said unto the sick of the palsy,) [k] I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy couch, and go unto thine house. 25. And im-y Ver. 21, 30. ch. 7. 30. & 11. 53, 54. & 15. 2.

z Ver. 15. Jer. 18. 18. Mat. 11. 5. & 4. 23, 24. & 9. 35. & 12. 15. Heb. 7. 25.

a Mat. 9. 2—8. Mark 2. 3—12. Acts 9. 33. John 5. 3, 5. Deut. 28. 22. 1 Cor. 11. 30. Jam. 5. 15, 16.

b Deut. 22. 8. 2 Sam. 11. 2. Jer. 19. 13. Mat. 10. 27. Acts 10. 9. Mark 2. 4.

c Gen. 22. 12. John 2. 25. & 21. 17. Heb. 4. 13. Rev. 2. 23.

d Mat. 9. 2. Mark 3. 5. Acts 5. 31. Is. 38. 17. & 44. 22. & 53. 11. Eph. 1. 7. John 5. 14. Ps. 103. 3.

e Mat. 9. 3. & 26. 65. John 5. 13. & 10. 33, 36.

f Ps. 32. 5. Is. 43. 25. & 44. 22. & 1. 18. Ps. 103. 3. Rom. 8. 33. Job 14. 4.

g 1 Sam. 16. 7. 1 Chr. 29. 17. Ps. 7. 9. & 139. 1—4. Jer. 17. 10. John 2. 25. & 21. 17. & 6. 64. Heb. 4. 13. Rev. 2. 23.

h Dan. 7. 13. Ps. 80. 17. Zech. 7. Mat. 16. 13. Rev. 1. 13. 1 Tim. 2. 5, 6. & 3. 16.

i John 5. 22, 23. Is. 53. 11. 1 Tim. 1. 13—16. John 17. 2. Acts 5. 31. Mat. 28. 18.

k Ver. 13, 17. Gen. 1. 3. Ps. 33. 9. John 6. 63. & 5. 8, 9. Ps. 107. 20.

Ps. 103. 1—3. & 107. 1, 8, 15, 32. & 115. 1. ch. 18. 43.

immediately he rose up before them, and took up that whereon he lay, and departm Ch. 7. 16. & 17. 15, 18. Mat. 9. 8, 33. & 15. 23. Mark 2. 12. & 1. 27. & 5. 26. ch. 7. 16. Acts 5. 5, 11.

ed to his own house, [l] glorifying God. 26. [m] And they were all amazed, and they glorified God, and were filled with fear, saying, We have seen strange things* to-day.

* Incredible things.

Verses 17—26. Christ ceased not his indefatigable labours.

1. He preached in a house on a week-day at Capernaum, for no day, no place, is unsuitable or unseasonable when an opportunity offers to speak a word for God, and for the good of men's souls. Among others of his audience, were a large number of Scribes and Pharisees; who, with no good intention, were come from the distant places, not to hear and learn, but to sit by, to make remarks and cavil; and the power of the Lord was present to heal them, not the Pharisees, but many of the multitude who came to him with their several diseases; thus at least to leave without excuse those who refused the evidence of such incontestable miracles. Note, (1.) When persons come to hear the word of God, not to profit themselves, but to prejudice others against it, great is their guilt. (2.) Though we know the malice of those who watch for our halting, we must not be discouraged from persevering in the way of duty. (3.) The power of the Lord is present to heal wherever his gospel is preached, but they who reject the counsel of God against their own souls, have only themselves to blame for their destruction.

2. Just at that time a paralytic man was brought to Jesus. Unable to gain access by the door, because of the multitude, his friends carried him to the top of the house, and let him down through the roof into the room where Jesus was. Beholding their faith, he pronounces the pardon of his sins; and notwithstanding all the cavils of the Pharisees which he knew, Jesus confirms the divine authority he assumed, by the immediate cure of the paralytic man; proving thereby that he who could thus sovereignly, by his own power, remove the effects of sin, had an undoubted right to pardon it. The cure was instantaneous and perfect to the amazement of all, who were struck with sacred reverence and awe, when they saw him, who the moment before lay stretched so helpless, now rise with full strength and vigour, take up his own bed, and go away glorifying God for the astonishing mercy; and the people in general acknowledged, that no such strange miracles were ever before seen or heard of. Note, (1.) All our diseases are the fruit of sin, and that should ever humble us under them before God. (2.) Jesus hath power to forgive sins, and they who by faith come to him, shall know it by blessed experience. (3.) If our sins be pardoned, the bitterness of sickness and death is passed away: a soul rejoicing in God, as his Saviour, hath nothing to complain of. (4.) When we have received mercy at God's hand, we are bound to ascribe to him the glory due unto his name, and to speak to his praise.

n Called also Matthew the Evangelist. Mat. 9. 9—13. Mark 2. 13—17.

o Mat. 4. 19, 21. & 16. 24. & 11. 28—30.

p See ver. 11. John 6. 63. 1 Kin. 19. 19—21.

q Mat. 9. 10. Mark 2. 15. 1 Kin. 19. 21. ch. 15. 1, 2.

r Ver. 17, 21. ch. 7. 29, 30. & 11. 53, 54. & 14. 1, 3. & 15. 2. & 19. 7. & 16. 14. Mark 7. 2. Mat. 23. 23.

* That is, the scribes or lawyers of the Jews, who inhabited that place. —Hammond.

27. ¶ And after these things he went forth, and saw a publican named [n] Levi, sitting at the receipt of custom: and he said unto him, [o] Follow me. 28. [p] And he left all, rose up, and followed him. 29. ¶ [q] And Levi made him a great feast in his own house; and there was a great company of publicans and of others that sat down with them. 30. But [r] their scribes and Pharisees * murmured against his disciples, saying, Why do ye eat and drink with publicans and sinners? 31. And Jesus answering, said unto them, s Mat. 9. 12, 13. Mark 2. 17. 1 Tim. 1. 15, 16. Is. 1. 18. & 55. 7. & 45. 22. Hos. 13. 9. ch. 19. 10. Acts 5. 31. ch. 18. 10—14. Rom. 5. 6, 8, 20, 21.

[s] They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick. 32. I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. 33. ¶ And they said unto him, [t] Why do the disciples of John fast often, and make prayers, and likewise the disciples of the Pharisees; but thine eat and drink? 34. And he said unto them, Can ye make [u] the children of the bride-chamber fast while the [x] bridegroom is with them? 35. But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be [y] taken away from them, and then [z] shall they fast in those days. 36. ¶ And he spake also a parable unto them; [a] No man putteth a piece of a new garment upon an old: if otherwise, then both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new agreeth not with the old. 37. And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles, and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish. 38. But new wine must be put into new bottles; and both are preserved. 39. No man also having drunk old wine [b] straightway desireth new; for he saith, [c] The old is better.

t Mat. 9. 14—17. Mark 2. 18—22. ch. 18. 12. John 3. 25. Mat. 6. 5, 16. Rom. 10. 2, 3. & 9. 31. & 2. 17—24.

u Song 1. 4, 17. & 2. 3—6. & 3. 10, 11. Mat. 22. 1—12. & 25. 1—10. Rev. 19. 7, 9.

x Christ. Mat. 22. 2. & 25. 1, 5, 6, 10. Rev. 19. 7, 9. Song 3. 4, 11. & 7. 5. & 8. 5, 6. Is. 62. 5. Zeph. 3. 17.

y Dan. 9. 26. Zech. 13. 7. John 7. 33, 34. & 12. 8, 32. & 13. 33. & 14. 2, 12. & 16, 7. & 17. 11, 13. Acts 1. 9. & 3. 21.

z Acts 1. 14. & 13. 2, 3. & 14. 23. 1 Cor. 7. 5. 2 Cor. 11, 27. Zech. 12. 10—14.

a Mat. 9. 16, 17. Mark 2. 21, 22. Deut. 33. 25. 1 Cor. 10. 13. Ps. 103. 9—13. Is. 63. 9, 15.

b But. Job 17. 9. Prov. 4. 18. 2 Pet. 3. 18. & 1. 4—10.

c Col. 2. 23. 1 Tim. 4. 8.

Verses 27—39. The conversion of a sinner's heart to God is equally a matter of wonder, and as great an evidence of divine power, as cleansing the leper, or raising the dead. We have here,

1. The calling of Matthew, or Levi, the publican, and his ready obedience to the command of Jesus; instantly leaving all, he followed him. The vilest sinners, and those who have the greatest obstacles lying in the way of their salvation, are; when Jesus speaks to the heart, effectually wrought upon. Nothing is above his almighty grace.

2. The gracious condescension of the Lord to the publicans, whom Matthew invited to his house. Our Lord disdained not to sit down with them; and vindicates his conduct from the envious, malicious, and censorious suggestions of the Pharisees. He associated not with them as approving their ways, or countenancing them in evil, but as a physician visits the diseased; the whole, at least they who fancy themselves so, need not his care. The business of the Saviour in the world was not with the righteous, or those who were vainly puffed up with a conceit of their own excellence, as was the case of the Pharisees, he came to call poor sinners, as the publicans were, to repentance; and would kindly receive them, when, sensible of their guilt and sinfulness, they turned to him. And he is still the same gracious Lord; no miserable sinner need despair; let him look unto Jesus and be saved; only those perish who know not their need of him, or proudly fancy they are righteous.

3. He vindicates his disciples from the censures of the Pharisees, respecting their fasting. It was not fit they should fast whilst their Master was with them; they were not prepared to endure this discipline. Such austerities might tempt them to draw back, as new fermenting wine would burst old bottles; their exercises must be proportioned to their strength. At present they could not bear it; but hereafter the time would come when losing their Master, and called out to labour in his cause, they would learn to fast, 1 Cor. iv. 11. Not that the Pharisees need lay such a stress upon their own bodily services: though, like new fermenting wine that sparkles high, they made a fair show in the flesh, their form of godliness was not to be compared with the life and power of religion, the old wine, which the disciples possessed, and which every spiritual person, who hath a true relish for the things of God, far prefers.

CHAP. VI.—ANNO DOMINI, 31.

In this chapter we have, 1. A proof of the lawfulness of works of necessity and mercy on the sabbath-day, ver. 1—11. 2. Christ's retirement for secret prayer, ver. 12. 3. His calling his twelve apostles, ver. 13—16. 4. His curing the multitudes of those under various diseases who made their applications to him, ver. 17—19. 5. The sermon that he preached to his disciples and the multitude, instructing them in their duty both to God and man, ver. 20—49.

1. AND [a] it came to pass on the * second sabbath after the first, that he went through the corn fields: and his disciples plucked the ears of corn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands. 2. And certain of the Pharisees said unto them, [b] Why do ye that which is not lawful to do on the sabbath days? 3. And Jesus answering them said, Have ye not read so much as this, [c] what David did, when himself was an hungered, and they which were with him; 4. How he went into the house of God, and did take and eat the shew-bread, and gave also to them that were with him; [d] which it is not lawful to eat, but for the priests alone? 5. And he said unto them, [e] That the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath. 6. ¶ [f] And it came to pass also on another sabbath, that he entered into the synagogue, and taught: and there was a man whose [g] right hand was withered. 7. And the scribes and Pharisees [h] watched him, whether he would heal on the sabbath day; that they might find an accusation against him. 8. [i] But he knew their thoughts, and said to the man which had the withered hand, [k] Rise up, and stand forth in the midst. And he arose and stood forth. 9. Then said Jesus unto them, I will ask you one thing; [l] Is it lawful on the sabbath days to do good, or to do evil? to save life, or to destroy it? 10. And, looking round about upon them all, he said unto the man, [m] Stretch forth thy hand. And he did so: and his hand was restored whole as the other. 11. [n] And they were filled with madness; and communed one with another what they might do to Jesus.

[a] Mat. 12. 1—8. Mark 2. 23—28. Deut. 23. 25.

* Commentators are divided as to the precise meaning of the second Sabbath after the first, or more literally, the Sabbath called second-prime. The explanation subjoined in the body of the present commentary is probably the correct one.

[b] Mat. 12. 2. & 15. 2. Mark 2. 24. & 7. 2. ch. 5. 33. & 13 14. & 15. 2. Mat. 7. 5. & 23. 23, 24. with Exod. 20. 10. & 31. 15. & 35. 2. Num. 15. 32, 35.

[c] 1 Sam. 21. 3—6. Mark 2. 25, 26. Mat. 12. 3, 4.

[d] Exod. 25. 30. & 29. 23, 32, 33. Lev. 8. 13. & 24. 5—9.

[e] Mat. 12. 8. Mark 2. 28. Exod. 20. 10. ver. 9. ch. 13. 16. John 5. 9. & 9. 14.

[f] Mat. 12. 9—14. Mark 3. 1—6.

[g] Judg. 3. 15. 1 Kin. 13. 4.

[h] Ps. 37. 32. & 38. 12 ch. 13. 14. & 11. 53, 54. & 14. 1, 2. & 20. 20. John 9. 16, 26.

[i] See ch. 5. 22. 1 Sam. 16. 7. 1 Chr. 28. 17. Ps. 7. 9. & 139. 1—4. Heb. 4. 3. Rev. 2. 23. John 21. 17.

[k] Dan. 6. 10. Phil. 1. 14.

[l] Mark 2. 27. ch. 13. 14—17. & 14. 3—6. John 7. 23.

[m] Mark 3. 5. Mat. 12. 13. 1 Kin. 13. 6. Ps. 107. 20.

[n] Ps. 2. 1, 2. ch. 4. 28. Acts 7. 54. Mat. 12. 14. & 22. 15. John 5. 16. & 7. 1. & 8. 59. & 10. 32. & 11. 47. & 12. 53. & 15. 24, 25. Prov. 4. 16.

Verses 1—11. These passages we had before in the other evangelists. The time when the first of these events happened is said to be the second sabbath after the first, or rather the first sabbath after the second day of the Passover, from whence were reckoned the seven weeks of the feast of Pentecost.

1. Our Lord vindicates his disciples from the censure of the Pharisees; and proves, by the example of David, the lawfulness of rubbing out the ears of corn, and eating them on the sabbath, when hunger called for food. Note, (1.) Works of necessity are always allowable. (2.) The greatest censurers of the innocent actions of others are often most indulgent to their own iniquities.

2. He vindicates himself from the same malignant cavillers. As he preached in the synagogue on another sabbath, there was a man present who had a withered hand. Jesus bid him stand forth in the midst of the congregation; and, knowing the malicious purposes of his watchful enemies, who, from such a gracious work as he was about to do, intended to ground an accusation against him as if he was a sabbath-breaker, he appeals to themselves whether they thought the fourth commandment could possibly forbid the doing good, or saving a man's life on the sabbath-day. Unable to reply, yet resolved to find fault, they were silent. On which he, with a word, restored the withered hand. And thereat his enemies were so enraged, that, with fury rising to madness, they consulted how they might destroy him. Note, (1.) They who would be cured of their spiritual infirmities must be found in the assembly of the faithful, where Christ usually dispenses his healing grace. (2.) Man's perverseness and wickedness must not deter nor discourage us from the work in which the Lord would have us employed. (3.) All passion is temporary madness: during its fury neither reason nor conscience are regarded.

12. ¶ And it came to pass in those days, that [o] he went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God. 13. And [p] when it was day, he called unto him his disciples: and of them he chose twelve, whom also he named apostles; 14. [q] Simon, (whom he also named Peter,) and Andrew his brother, James and John, Philip and Bartholomew, 15. Matthew and Thomas, James the son of Alpheus, and Simon called Zelotes,† 16. And [r] Judas the brother of James, and [s] Judas Iscariot, which was also the traitor. 17. ¶ And he came down with them, and stood [t] in the plain, and the company of his disciples, and [u] a great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jerusalem, and from the sea coast of Tyre and Sidon, which came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases; 18. And they that were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed. 19. And the whole multitude sought to touch him: for there went virtue out of him, and healed them all.

[o] Ps. 109. 4. & 22. 2. Heb. 5. 7. Mat. 14. 23. Acts 14. 23. & 1. 24. & 13. 3.

[p] Mat. 10. 1—4. Mark 3. 13—19. John 15. 16. Acts 1. 24. & 14. 23. Gal. 1. 1. Heb. 5. 4. This calling was some time before their mission. Mat. x. Mark 6. 7. ch. 9. 1. with Heb. 5. 4.

[q] See on Mat. 10. 2—4. Mark 3. 16—19. Acts 1. 13.

† There was about this time a party in Palestine distinguished by the title of Zealots. Probably Simon had belonged formerly to this particular sect.

[r] Jude 1. Acts 1. 13. John 14. 22.

[s] See Mark 3. 19. Mat. 10. 4. John 6. 70, 71.

[t] Not as Mat. 5. 1

[u] Mat. 4. 23—25. & 12. 15. & 9. 35. & 14. 35, 36. & 15. 30. Mark 3. 30. Mat. 11. 5. Is. 35. 5, 6. Ps. 147. 3. Exod 15. 26. Gen. 49. 10. Is. 61. 1—3.

Verses 12—19. We have here,

1. Our Lord's retirement. He went out to a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God, (εν τη προσευχη του Θεου) which may signify the object to whom his prayer was directed, or the fervency of his requests, or, as some suppose, the house of prayer, or proseucha, to which he retired, such oratories, it seems, being common in that country. The length of the time he spent there bespoke the importance of the occasion: he being about to choose and ordain his twelve apostles. Note, When matters of deep concern lie upon our souls, we are especially called to spread the case before God for his direction and blessing.

2. The calling and appointment of the twelve apostles. These he ordained to be his chief ministers in that kingdom which he was come to establish, putting them in trust with his gospel, and empowering them to work miracles in confirmation of their mission. The names of the apostles are the same as before; only he who was called Lebbeus, and surnamed Thaddeus, is here called Judas the brother of James, these names belonging to the same person; and Simon the Canaanite is here named Simon Zelotes, being probably, before his conversion, of the sect of the Zealots.

3. Having finished this work, he came down with the twelve to the plain, where great multitudes attended from the most distant parts of the country, to hear his discourses and to partake of his wondrous cures. Nor were they disappointed: he graciously taught them, and richly dispensed his favours, healing all the diseased, and casting out the unclean spirits from such as were possessed; yea, such virtue went out of him, that the whole multitude of miserable patients, who came to him sought but to touch him, fully persuaded that this would be effectual to heal them; and found according to their faith, that their cure was instantly effected.

x Mat. 5. 2—12. Ps. 80. 19.
y Mat. 5. 3. Ps. 51. 17. Is. 35. 3, 4. & 42. 3. & 57. 15, 16. & 61. 1. & 66. 2. Prov. 16. 19. & 29. 23. ch. 14. 21, 33. John 7. 48. 1 Cor. 1. 26—31. Jam. 2. 5. Mat. 11. 5. Ps. 113. 7, 8.
z Ch. 1. 53. Ps. 42. 1, 2. & 63. 1, 2. & 27. 4. & 84. 2. & 17. 15. & 65. 4. John 14. 14. & 6. 35. & 7. 37, 38. 1 Cor. 4. 11. Is. 44. 3, 4. & 65. 13. & 66. 10. & 25. 6.
a Ezek. 7. 16. & 9. 4. Rev. 11. 3. Is. 61. 3. & 57. 18. & 30. 19. & 51. 11, 12. & 35. 10. Eccl. 7. 2, 3. ch. 16. 25. John 6. 20. 2 Cor. 1. 4, 7. Jam. 1. 12. 1 Pet. 1. 8. Rev. 7. 14—17. & 21. 3, 4. b Mat. 5. 10, 11. John 9. 22. & 12. 42. & 16. 2. 1 Pet. 2. 19. & 3. 14. & 4. 13, 14. 2 Tim. 2. 12. 2 Cor. 4. 8—17. 2 Thes. 1. 6, 7, 10. c Acts 5. 41. Rom. 5. 3. Jam. 1. 2. 1 Pet. 4. 13. Rev. 2. 7, 26—28. & 3. 5, 21. & 7. 14—17. 2 Tim. 2. 12. & 4. 7, 8.
d Neh. 9. 26. Mat. 23. 31, 34. Acts. 7. 51. 2 Chr. 36. 16. Mark 12. 3—5. Jer. xx, xxvi, &c. Heb. 11. 36—38.
e Job. 21. 7, 13. Amos 6. 1. & 4. 1. Jam. 5. 1. ch. 12. 15—21. Mat. 19. 23, 24.
f Mat. 6. 2, 5, 16. ch. 16. 25. & 12. 15—21.
g Is. 65. 13. Jam. 5. 5. & 4. 9. Prov. 14. 13. Eccl. 2. 2. & 7, 3.
h Is. 30. 10. Mic. 2. 11. John 7. 7. 1 John 4. 5.

20. ¶ [x] And he lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said, [y] Blessed be ye poor; for yours is the kingdom of God. 21. [z] Blessed are ye that hunger now; for ye shall be filled. [a] Blessed are ye that weep now; for ye shall laugh. 22. [b] Blessed are ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake: 23. Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy; for, behold, [c] your reward is great in heaven: [d] for in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets. 24. [e] But woe unto you that are rich! [f] for ye have received your consolation. 25. [g] Woe unto you that are full! for ye shall hunger. Woe unto you that laugh now! for ye shall mourn and weep. 26. [h] Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets.

Verses 20—26. Some have supposed this is an abridgment of the same discourse preached Mat. v—vii. others that it was delivered at a different time and place, though the matter be similar. And this seems most probable, as there it is said he went up into a mountain and sat; here, that he came down and stood in the plain.

As the disciples of Jesus would, for their attachment to him, be called to endure many hardships and sufferings, he here, fixing his eyes upon them, addresses them for their encouragement.

1. He pronounces those blessed whom the world in general counts to be of all men most miserable. (1.) Blessed are ye poor, destitute of all earthly substance, or who have left all to follow me, and whose spirits are humbled into the dust under the sense of your sinfulness and spiritual poverty: yours is the kingdom of God; the present riches of grace are your treasure, and the eternal inheritance above is reserved for you as your exceeding great reward. (2.) Blessed are ye that hunger now, either wanting necessary food for the sake of Christ and his gospel, or so earnest after spiritual blessings as the hungry crave for meat; for ye shall be filled with food to satisfy the cravings of hunger, or better, with that supply of righteousness and grace which the soul desires. (3.) Blessed are ye that weep now, under afflictions for Christ's sake, or mourning over sin in yourselves and others: for ye shall laugh, filled with eternal consolations in that kingdom where every tear shall be wiped away from your eyes. (4.) Blessed are ye when men shall hate you for your attachment to Christ and his gospel, and when they shall separate you from their company, counting it infamous to associate with a person so obnoxious, as well as from their religious assemblies; and shall reproach you, branding you with every malicious slander, and treating you with insult and contempt as the vilest of mankind; and cast out your name as evil, never mentioning you but with malignity, obloquy, and virulence, abusing you wherever they go; and all this for the Son of man's sake, because you espouse his interests, profess your faith in him, and live to his glory; which is indeed the cause of all their enmity at the bottom, with whatever specious pretences they cloak their malevolence. Notwithstanding their curses, ye are truly blessed. Rejoice ye in that day, therefore, and leap for joy; such reproach is your highest honour, and will prove your eternal advantage; for behold your reward is great in heaven; and this reward in glory will infinitely overpay all your losses and sufferings; for in like manner did their fathers unto the prophets. In every age, the faithful, from the beginning have met the same treatment from the world of the ungodly. It is your honour to be made vile in such company; and to partake of the same cross they endured is the way to the crown they have won. Let us weigh well these things and we shall say, welcome reproach, welcome every opprobrious name, welcome enmity, reviling, insolence. This is the way to glory.

2. He pronounces fearful woes on those whom the world calls happy; so different are God's thoughts from man's thoughts. (1.) Wo unto you that are rich, who, possessed of affluence, idolize the creature, seek your happiness from worldly enjoyments, and trust in these vanities; for ye have received your consolation; you have your all in hand, and have nothing to hope for in eternity. (2.) Wo unto you that are full, living in all fleshly gratifications, and faring sumptuously every day; for ye shall hunger, emptied of all your present abundance, and left to the rage of craving appetite, that can never be satisfied, and to raging thirst, where not a drop of water is granted to cool a flaming tongue. (3.) Wo unto you that laugh now, spending your days in mirth, pleasure, and sensual joy; for ye shall mourn and weep, where the sorrow will be as unavailing as the torment which occasions it will be intolerable and eternal. (4.) Wo unto you when all men shall speak well of you, a sure sign that you do nothing to reprove them, either by your profession or Christian conversation, flattering them in their sin, and never offending them by your fidelity to their souls; then you will gain their approbation; for so did their fathers to the false prophets, whose smooth and deceitful prophecies obtained them the caresses of their countrymen, whilst the faithful prophets, who knew not how to flatter, were abhorred and persecuted. All these things are eminently verified and verifying every day.

27. ¶ [i] But I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you, 28. Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you. 29. [k] And unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek offer also the other; and him that taketh away thy cloak forbid not to take thy coat also. 30. [l] Give to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again. 31. [m] And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise. 32. [n] For if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for sinners also love those that love them. 33. And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? for sinners also do even the same. 34. [o] And if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye? for sinners also lend to sinners, to receive as much again. 35. [p] But love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again;* and your reward shall be great, and [q] ye shall be the children of the Highest: for he [r] is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil. 36. [s] Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful.

i Mat. 5. 44. Exod. 23. 4. Prov. 25. 21. Rom. 12. 11, 19, 20. 1 Cor. 4. 12. 1 Pet. 3. 9. ch. 23. 34. Acts 7. 60.

k Mat. 5. 39, 40. Is. 50. 6. 1 Cor. 6. 7. Rom. 12. 17, 20. Lam. 3. 30.

l Deut. 15. 7—10. Ps. 41. 1. & 112. 9. Prov. 3. 27, 28. & 11. 24, 25. & 21. 26. & 22. 9.

m Mat. 7. 12. & 22. 39, 40. Rom. xii, xiii. Gal. 5. 14, 22, 23. Col. 3. 8—15. Eph. 4. 25—32. Phil. 4. 8.

n See Mat. 5. 46, 47.

o Mat. 5. 42. Deut. 15. 8—11.

p Ver. 27—31. Deut. 15. 8—11. Lev. 25. 35—37. Ps. 37. 26. Prov. 19. 17. & 22. 9. Heb. 6. 10.

* That is, Do good not only to those from whom you expect a temporal recompense, but to those also who will never return you any kindness, as your enemies, and those who never can make any recompense, as the poor and needy. —Dr S. Clarke.

q Mat 5. 45. John 13. 35. 1 John 3 1, 14.

r Acts 14. 17. Ps. 145. 9.

s Eph. 5. 1, 2. & 4. 31, 32. Col. 3. 8—15. Exod. 34. 6, 7. Ps. 68. 15. Mat. 5. 48.

Verses 27—36. The same truths are here delivered as Matt. v. 38—44. Our Lord inculcates that universal charity which is the eminent characteristic of his religion. Our love must extend even to our bitterest enemies, and make us ready to every good word and work for their service, rendering to them blessings for curses. Love will make us return prayer for despiteful usage. Christian charity must lead us to put up with affronts without resentment, and to suffer wrongs without avenging them, or seeking litigious redress, ver. 29. Charity must open our hearts to feel the distresses of the indigent, and our hand liberally, according to our ability, to relieve them; often lending without the hope of repayment, and willing to cancel the debts of the insolvent, whom unforeseen providences have disabled from the power of discharging, ver. 30. Charity teaches us to put ourselves in the place of others, and act towards them in such a manner as, in their circumstances, we could with reason have expected from them, ver. 31. And there are three reasons urged for this gracious conversation.

1. That this is the distinguished badge of our profession. To love, serve, and to lend to those who make us a return in kind, is no more than the most self-interested worldling doth: and the faith which worketh by love must carry us much farther than these.

2. Our reward will be great in heaven, whatever ungrateful returns we may meet from men on earth.

3. As we shall herein most strikingly resemble the Father of mercies, who is good to the evil and unthankful. He will acknowledge us as his children, which is the most exalted honour and dignity.

37. [t] Judge not, and ye shall not be judged: condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned: [u] forgive, and ye shall be forgiven: 38. [x] Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. [y] For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again. 39. And he spake a parable unto them; [z] Can the blind lead the blind? shall they not both fall into the ditch? 40. [a] The disciple is not above his master; but every one† that is perfect shall be as his master. 41. [b] And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but perceivest not the beam that is in thine own eye? 42. Either how canst thou say to thy brother, Brother, [c] let me pull out the mote that is in thine eye, when thou thyself beholdest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother's eye. 43. [d] For a good tree bringeth not forth corrupt fruit; neither doth a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. 44. For every tree is known by his own fruit: for of thorns men do not gather figs, nor of a bramble bush gather they grapes. 45. [e] A good man, out of the good treasure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is good; and an evil man, out of the evil treasure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is evil: for of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh. 46. ¶ [f] And why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say? 47. [g] Whosoever cometh to me, and heareth my sayings, and doeth them, I will shew you to whom he is like: 48. He is like a man which [h] built an house, and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a rock: and when [i] the flood arose, the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and [k] could not shake it; for it was founded upon a rock. 49. But [l] he that heareth, and doeth not, is like a man that without a foundation built an house upon the earth; against which the stream did beat vehemently, and [m] immediately it fell; and the ruin of that house was great.†

t Is. 65. 5. Mat. 7. 1—5. Rom. 2. 1, 2. & 14. 3, 4, 10, 13. 1 Cor. 4. 3—5. Jam. 4. 11, 12. & 2. 13 Gal. 6. 1, 2.

u Mat. 6. 14. & 18. 35. Prov. 10. 12. 1 Cor. 13. 7.

x Prov. 10. 22. & 19. 17. & 22. 9. Eccl. 11. 1.

y Judg. 1. 7. Ps. 18. 25, 26. & 41. 2. Mat. 7. 2. Mark 4. 24. 2 Cor. 9. 6. Jam. 2. 13.

z Mat. 15. 14. Jer. 6. 15. & 5. 31. Is. 56. 10, 11. & 9. 16. & 42. 19, 20, 25. 2 Thes. 2. 10—12. 2 Tim. 3. 13.

a Mat. 10. 24, 25. John 13. 16. & 15. 20.

† Or shall be perfected as his master.

b Mat. 7. 3—5. Lam. 3. 40. 2 Cor. 13. 5.

c Prov. 18. 17. Mat. 7. 4, 5. & 6. 22. 23.

d Mat. 7. 16—23. & 12. 33—35. & 3. 10. 1 John 4. 1—5. 2 Pet. i, ii. Gal. 5. 19—23. Rom. 2. 7—10. Jude 1—20. 2 Tim. 3. 1—9. Tit. 2. 11—14.

e Ps. 37. 30. Prov. 10. 20, 21. Mat. 7. 17, 20. & 12. 34, 35. & 13. 32. Rom. 8. 5—8.

f Mat. 7. 21—23. & 25. 11. Mal. 1. 6. Rom. 2. 13. Jam. 1. 22. ch. 13, 25. Mark 3. 35. John 13. 17. & 14. 15. & 15. 14.

g Mat. 7. 24—27. Ps. xv. & 24. 3—6. ch. 11. 28. 1 John 3. 7. Rev. 22. 14. Jam. 1. 27.

h John 3. 3, 5. Is. 28. 16. 1 Pet. 2. 4—6. 1 Cor. 10. 4. & 3. 11. Mat. 16. 18.

i Acts 14. 22. John 16. 33. 1 Cor. 4. 10, 11. 2 Cor. 11. 25—27. Col. 1. 24. 2 Tim. 3. 12.

k Ps. 34. 19. & 125. 1, 2. 2 Tim. 2. 19. 1 Pet. 1. 5. Jude 1. Rev. 7. 14.

l Mat. 23. 3. Jam. 2. 21—24. ch. 8. 5—7. ver. 46.

m Mat. 13. 18—22. & 11. 20—26. Heb. 10. 28—31. & 6. 4—8. 2 Pet. 2. 20—22. Mat. 12. 43—45.

† The rains in Judea being often extremely violent, and the country very hilly, considerable inundations frequently occur, which are dangerous to buildings that happen to be placed within their reach, by washing away the soil from under them, and thus occasioning their fall.—Harmer.

Verses 37—49. These wise sayings we have considered before, Matt. vii. and in other places. They give us the most noble directions whereon to form our judgment and conduct; happy they who observe them.

1. In judging we must ever be candid, and lean to the most favourable side; interpreting the words and actions of others with those allowances which we wish and need for our own: and then we shall find the same candour from others which we exercise towards them.

2. We must give and forgive, ready to relieve the necessitous, and to pass by the offences of our brethren: charitable and merciful, as we ourselves expect mercy from God and live pensioners on his bounty. And this will engage others the more readily to forgive us, and even in this life we shall often reap the fruits of our liberality.

3. As we deal with others, we may expect to be dealt with ourselves. Our rigour and severity to others, will provoke men to treat us with the same, when we fall into their power, Judg. i. 7. whilst our known benevolence will usually engage a like return.

4. Ignorant and blind guides, who know not the way of salvation themselves, can never lead others aright; they who follow such, will perish with them. It is hardly possible they should teach others the bitterness and burden of sin who have never felt either, nor acquaint them with the unsearchable riches of Christ, who have not experimentally found him precious to their own souls.

5. Christ's followers may not expect kinder treatment from the world than their master met. The highest perfection of the disciple lies in conformity to his example; and when, like his Lord, he is enabled to lead a life of self-denial and deadness to the world, then will he be prepared to suffer whatever for his sake he may be called to.

6. They who set up for reformers of others, need first look well to their own souls; to be quick sighted to others' faults, and blind to our own, must make our rebukes absurd, and they would be justly retorted. When we are enabled to keep our own conscience void of offence, then our reproofs will come commended by the weight of example, and be doubly weighty.

7. Men's actions will be good, or evil, according to their inward principles. As a tree may be known by its fruit, so may a man by his conduct and conversation: according to the good or evil treasure in the heart, such will be the produce. A good man, by divine grace, truly renewed in the spirit of his mind, brings forth the genuine fruits of righteousness and true holiness: an evil man, whose heart is unchanged, and under the power of native corruption, can do nothing truly pleasing to God; his words and ways are all corrupt before God, either grossly vicious, or he habitually forgets God; or if he pretends to serve him, pride and hypocrisy stamp his duties as an abomination.

8. It is not pompous professions, but real fidelity, which makes a man a true disciple of Jesus. They who call him Lord, must give a proof of their sincerity by their obedience; it is not merely hearing, but doing, which he requires. They who believe indeed to the saving of their souls, whose practice evidences their faith unfeigned, are like the wise builder, whose house, founded on a rock, defied the floods and storm. They stand fast in the hour of temptation, and are not moved away from the hope of the gospel; they persevere in God's holy ways, and are kept by his power unto salvation. But the careless hearer, on whose soul the word of Jesus doth not take effect, builds his hopes of heaven on a sandy foundation, and flatters himself to his ruin. The hour of temptation here often proves him an apostate, or at least in death the hope of the hypocrite perisheth. Let us look well then to the ground on which we stand, that we may not too late perceive our irretrievable error.

CHAP. VII.—ANNO DOMINI, 31.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's curing the centurion's servant, ver 7—10. and raising one to life that was dead, the widow's son at Nain, ver. 11—18. 2. Christ's answer to John's question, ver. 19—23. To which he adds an honourable testimony concerning John, and a just reproof to the men of that generation for the contempt they put upon him and his doctrine, ver. 24—35. 3. Christ comforting and pardoning a poor penitent, and justifying himself in the favour he showed her, against the cavils of a proud Pharisee, ver. 36—50.

1. NOW, when he had ended all his sayings in the audience of the people, [a] he entered into Capernaum. 2. And a certain [b] centurion's servant, who [c] was dear unto him, was sick, and ready to die. 3. And when he heard of Jesus, [d] he sent unto him the elders of the Jews,* beseeching him that he would come and heal his servant. 4. And when they came to Jesus, they besought him instantly, saying, That he was worthy for whom he should do this: 5. For he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue.† 6. Then Jesus went with them. And when he was now not far from the house, the centurion sent [e] friends to him, saying unto him, Lord, trouble not thyself; for [f] I am not worthy that thou shouldest enter under my roof: 7. Wherefore neither thought I myself worthy to come unto thee: [g] but say in a word, and my servant shall be healed. 8. For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers; and I say unto * one, [h] Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it. 9. When Jesus heard these things, he [i] marvelled at him, and turned him about, and said unto the people that followed him, I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not [k] in Israel. 10. [l] And they that were sent, returning to the house, found the servant whole that had been sick.

[a] Mat. 8. 5—13.
[b] Mat. 8. 5. & 27. 54. Acts 10. 1. & 27. 1.
[c] Eph. 4. 31, 35. Job 31. 13. Rom. 12. 15, 16. Heb. 13. 3.
[d] Gen. 49. 10. Is. 11. 10. Rom. 10. 15—17.
* Probably the elders of the synagogue, which he had built, ver. 5. It is stated by Matthew, (ch. 8. 5.) that the centurion came to Jesus, but it is a very usual and common form of expression with the sacred writers, to represent a person as doing that himself, which he does by means of others. See examples of this, Exod. 18. 6. 1 Kin. 5. 7. Mark 10. 35. compared with Mat. 20. 20.
† More emphatically, it was he who built our synagogue.
[e] He first sent some of the Jewish elders, and then some of his own friends. Mat. viii.
[f] Gen. 32. 10. Mat. 3. 11. & 15. 27. ch. 15. 19, 21. ver. 4. Prov. 27. 2.
[g] Ps. 33. 9. & 41. 4. & 107. 20. & 147. 3. Exod. 15. 26. Rev. 16. 9. Deut. 7. 15.
* Gr. this man.
[h] Deut. 7. 15. 1 Sam. 2. 6. Deut. 32. 39.
[i] Or, admired him. Mat. 15. 28. & 8. 10. & 9. 2.
[k] Ps. 147. 19, 20. Rom. 3. 1—3. & 9. 4, 5.
[l] Mat. 8. 13. & 15. 28. Mark 9. 23. John 4. 50, 54.

Verses 1—10. When Jesus had finished his discourse in the audience of the people, an occasion offers to confirm by a miracle, the truths he had been declaring. The same story we had, Matt. viii. 5. different circumstances are here inserted, such as the sending of the elders of the Jews, and afterwards his friends, before the centurion came himself, as it seems probable he did at last; but his application by them was in fact the same as if he had come in person at last.

1. Hearing the fame of Jesus, and having faith in him, he greatly desired his help in behalf of a sick servant, whose fidelity and diligence had endeared him to his master; and supposing that he, who was a Gentile and a Roman officer, might not so easily obtain the favour, he engaged the elders of the Jews to be advocates for him, who readily undertook to serve him, as being under great obligations to him. They earnestly therefore besought Jesus for him, as one worthy his regard, having ever testified a great respect for the Jewish nation and religion, and at his own expense built them a synagogue for divine worship. Note, (1.) A servant truly faithful and industrious deserves that esteem he thus studies to engage. (2.) It is good having an interest in their prayers whom the Lord Jesus respects.

2. As Christ was in the way to the centurion's house, he no sooner heard of his condescension, than, in great humility, he sent other friends in his name, as unwilling to give the Lord this trouble, and counting himself unworthy of such a guest, and himself undeserving of his honoured presence, which was indeed the reason he did not in person at first make the application. He professes his faith to be such in Christ's power, that all diseases would obey his orders, more readily even than the soldiers the word of their commanding officer; and that he need not be present to perform the cure; if he spoke, he believed it would instantly be done.

3. Christ expresses his admiration and approbation of such uncommon faith; even among all the Jewish people had never yet appeared so remarkable an instance of humble assured faith, as in this Gentile; therefore he puts honour upon him, and with pleasure grants his request. The disease immediately departed, and the persons who had been sent from the centurion's house, on their return found the servant perfectly restored to health. Note, True humility, and firm trust in his power and love, above all things commend us to the Saviour's regard.

11. ¶ And it came to pass the day after, that he went into a city called Nain: and many of his disciples went with him, and much people. 12. Now, when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, * the [m] only son of his mother, and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her. 13. And when the Lord saw her, he [n] had compassion on her, and said unto her, [o] Weep not. 14. And he came and touched the † bier; and they that bare him stood still. And he said, Young man, [p] I say unto thee, Arise. 15. And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother. 16. [q] And there came a fear on all: and they glorified God, saying, That [r] a great prophet is risen up among us; and, That God hath [s] visited his people. 17. And this rumour of him went forth throughout all Judea, and throughout all the region round about. 18. ¶ [t] And the disciples of John shewed him of all these things.

* Carried out of the city. As all dead bodies were unclean by the Jewish law, it was not permitted to bury within cities.

m Zech. 12. 10. 1 Kin. 17. 18. 2 Kin. 4. 27. 2 Sam. 14. 7.

n Is. 63. 7, 9. 15. Ps. 86. 5, 15. Judg. 10. 16. Hos. 11. 8. Jer. 31. 20. Heb. 2. 17. & 4. 15. Mat. 9. 36. John 11. 33, 35. Lam. 3. 32, 33.

o 1 Thes. 4. 13. Mark 5. 39. John 11. 4, 23, 25.

† Or coffin.

p Ps. 33. 9. Rom. 4. 17. John 6. 63. & 5. 21. ch. 9. 54, 55. John 11. 43, 44. Mat. 27. 52, 53. & 11. 5. 1 Kin. 17. 17—23. 2 Kin. 4. 20—30. & 13. 21. Acts 9. 40, 41. & 20. 9—11. Ezek. 37. 5, 9, Eph. 5. 14.

q See ch. 5. 26. Acts 5. 5, 11. Gal. 1. 24.

r John 4. 19. & 6. 14. & 9. 17. ch. 24. 19.

s Ch. 1. 68. Ps. 106. 4.

t Mat. 11. 2—15.

Verses 11—18. Another notable miracle wrought the day after the former, is here recorded.

1. The place where it was done was in the gate of the city, in the presence of all the multitude who followed Jesus, and of the company who attended the funeral, so that there was no want of evidences to attest the certainty of the fact.

2. The subject of the miracle was the dead corpse of a young man then carrying to his grave, the only son of an afflicted widow, and all the circumstances of the case rendered it peculiarly affecting. (1.) He was a son, an only son, probably the staff of her old age, and the support and comfort of her widowhood. (2.) He was a young man cut down in the flower of his age; a warning to every one who looked on his bier not to promise themselves continuance here, for childhood and youth are vanity. (3.) His mother was a widow; one terrible stroke of death had separated her from the partner of her bosom. This son alone remained to cheer her solitude, the staff of her age, and now he too is taken away; so numerous, so repeated, are our troubles in this vale of misery and tears: like Job's messengers of evil, scarce the sound of one is out of our ears, before another more grievous follows. May every pang we feel, but disengage us from the world, and teach us to seek more earnestly our rest above; then shall our severest losses prove our truest gain.

3. Compassion moved the Saviour's bosom. He ever tenderly felt for human wo, and unasked he brings relief. It was kind in those who attended this poor disconsolate widow, to condole with her, and endeavour to alleviate her sorrows. They could but weep with her, Jesus alone was able to say unto her, weep not; and by removing the cause, to wipe away the tears from her eyes. Approaching the bier whereon the corpse lay, the bearers halted, and with a word of power, in all the majesty of essential deity, he said, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise; instantly the spirit returned; he that was dead sat up on the bier where he was stretched out, all his senses were perfectly restored, and he began to speak: when with delight Jesus delivered him back to his transported mother. Note, (1.) The bowels of Jesus yearn over the miserable, and in all the afflictions of his people he is afflicted. Let the mourners remember, that Jesus compassionates their sorrows; and if he doth not appear to restore those dear pledges which are gone from our arms, he will bring us together at a resurrection day. (2) Power accompanies the word of Jesus. Though dead sinners cannot of themselves hear or arise, the gospel call is not therefore in vain; but by the Redeemer's grace is made effectual to quicken the soul, and raise it from the death of sin unto the life of righteousness. (3.) Though Jesus might justly have claimed a right in him whom he had thus restored to life, he delivered him to his mother, intimating to us the great obligation lying on children to be dutiful to their parents, and a comfort and support to them in their old age.

4. Amazement and fear seized on the beholders. Astonished at this evidence of divine power, they glorified God for such an eminent instance of his goodness, and more especially that at last he had sent the Great Prophet, the expected Messiah, and in mercy visited his people, for these works of wonder proclaimed aloud, that this was he that should come. Swift the fame of Jesus spread through Judea, and the country around; this amazing miracle bespoke his character, and among the rest John's disciples carried the report to their master, now bound in prison for his zeal and fidelity. Note, When dead souls are raised up to newness of life, we must give the glory to God of his great work: and these miracles, blessed be his name, are not yet ceased.

19. And John, calling unto him [u] two of his disciples, sent them to Jesus, saying, Art thou [x] he that should come? or look we for another? 20. When the men were come unto him, they said, John Baptist hath sent us unto thee, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another? 21. And in that same hour he cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits; and unto many that were blind he gave sight. 22. Then Jesus answering, said unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things u Eccl. 4. 8. 2 Cor. 13. 1. Rev. 11. 3.

x Gen. 3. 15. & 22. 17. & 49. 10. Deut. 18. 15—18. Is. 7. 14. & 9. 6, 7. & 11. 1. & 35. 4. & 53. 2—12. & 52. 13—15. Jer. 23. 5, 6. & 30. 21. & 31. 22. Ezek. 21. 27. & 17. 22—24. & 34. 23, 29. Dan. 9. 24—26. Mic. 5. 2. Hag. 2. 7. Zech. 9. 9. Mal. 3. 1—3. with John i. & 6. 14.

ye have seen and heard; [y] how that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, to the poor the gospel is preached. 23. And blessed is he, whosoever shall not [z] be offended in me. 24. ¶ And when the messengers of John were departed, he began to speak unto the people concerning John, What went ye out into the [a] wilderness for to see? [b] A reed shaken with the wind? 25. But what went ye out for to see? [c] A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they which are gorgeously apparelled, and live delicately, are in kings' courts. 26. But what went ye out for to see? [d] A prophet? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet. 27. This is he of whom it is written, [e] Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee. 28. For I say unto you, [f] Among those that are born of women there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptist: but he that is least in the kingdom of God is [g] greater than he. 29. * And [h] all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John. 30. [i] But the Pharisees and lawyers † rejected the counsel of God ‡ against themselves, being not baptized of him. 31. ¶ And the Lord said, [k] Whereunto then shall I liken the men of this generation? and to what are they like? 32. They are like unto children sitting in the market-place, and calling one to another, and saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned to you, and ye have not wept. 33. For John the Baptist came [l] neither eating bread nor drinking wine; and ye say, He hath a devil. 34. The Son of man is come [m] eating and drinking; and ye say, Behold a glutton-ous man, and a wine-bibber, a friend of publicans and sinners! 35. But wisdom is [n] justified of all her children.

y Ver. 21. Mat. 11. 5. ch. 4. 38—44. & 5. 12—25. & 6. 17—19. ver. 10, 15, 21. with Is. 35. 5, 6. & 29. 18. & 42. 6, 7. & 51. 1—3. & 66. 2. Ps. 146. 8. Zeph. 3. 12. Zech. 11. 7. Jam. 2. 5.

z Is. 8. 14, 15. Rom. 9. 32, 33. 1 Pet. 2. 7, 8. 1 Cor. 1. 23, 24. & 2. 14. ch. 2. 34. John 6. 60—66.

a Ch. 1. 80. & 3. 2.

b An unstable man? No. Eph. 4. 14. Tit. 1. 10. Col. 2. 4, 8. 2 Pet. 2. 3, 17. & 3. 17.

c A complaisant gentleman? No. Gal. 1. 10. 1 Cor. 1. 26.

d Ch. i, iii. John 1. 6—36. & 3. 26—36. & 5. 35.

e Mal. 3. 1. & 4. 5, 6. Is. 40. 3. Mat. 3. 3. & 11. 10. Mark 1. 2.

f Ver. 26. ch. 1. 15—17. & 3. 16. John 1. 15—27. & 5. 35. Mat. 3. 2—17. & 13. 17.

g Eph. 3. 8, 9. & 1. 9. Col. 1. 26, 27. Rom. 16. 25, 26. 2 Tim. 1. 1, 10. 1 Pet. 1. 10, 12.

* This and the following verses are the words of Jesus. This is evident from the fact that John was then in prison, (Mat. 11. 2.) where he remained till his death, and so had it no longer in his power to baptize any.—Campbell.

h Mat. 11. 12. & 21. 31, 32. ver. 35. Rom. 3. 4. Mat. 3. 5.

i Ch. 10. 16. Mat. 21. 31, 32. John 12. 48. Acts 20. 27.

† Or frustrated.

‡ Or within themselves.

k Mat. 11. 16—19. Rev. 3. 15—17. Is. 28. 9—13. Jer. 5. 1—5. They rejected every form of instruction.

l Mat. 3. 4. ch. 1. 15. † Cor. 9. 27. 1 Pet. 5. 2. 2 Tim. 2. 10. with John 10. 10. Mat. 10. 25.

m Mat. 11. 19. & 9. 11. ch. 5. 29. ver. 36. ch. 11. 37. & 14. 1. & 15. 2. & 19. 7.

n Phil. 2. 15, 16. & 3. 7—14. 1 Cor. 1. 23, 24. ver. 29. Rom. 3. 4.

Verses 19—35. This passage of history was before recorded. It contains,

1. The message sent by John from his prison, ver. 19. not so much for his own satisfaction, as for the sake of his disciples, whose faith needed every confirmation, when combated by all the national prejudices so early imbibed. They found nothing of that grandeur and earthly greatness about Jesus, which they expected in the Messiah.

2. The answer of Jesus. His works as well as words, sufficiently bespoke his real character. In the presence of the messengers from John, he performed a multitude of miraculous cures, and dispossessed many evil spirits: then bid them report to their master what they had heard and seen, that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the dead are raised, evidences incontestable of his mission as the Messiah, and figures of the more beneficial works which he came to perform on the souls of men; opening the eyes of the understanding, strengthening the impotent, curing the most inveterate habits of sin, and the desperate wickedness of the heart, and quickening the dead in trespasses and sins; for which end, to the poor the gospel is preached, wherein were fulfilled the prophecies which had gone before concerning him, Isa. lxi. 1. xxxv. 5, 6. Psalm lxxii. 13. and lest, notwithstanding, they should be in danger of stumbling at the meanness of his appearance, and the enmity wherewith he was treated by the most respected characters of the Jewish people, the chief priests, Scribes, and Pharisees, he cautions them against being offended at these things; since he alone was happy and blessed, who through all this cloud of prejudice, received him as the Christ, and believed in his word.

3. When the disciples of John were departed, Jesus began to give him just and high commendations. He was a man of unshaken fortitude and unwavering fidelity, uniformly bearing testimony to Christ, and not plying like a reed under the contradiction of sinners, but boldly testifying against their iniquities: dead to the delights of sense and the glory of the world, he affected not soft raiment as a courtier, but as a mortified prophet lived what he preached: greater in one sense than any of the former prophets, as the immediate forerunner of the Messiah, and as seeing him appear of whom they spoke. His success also was great; multitudes who heard him, and many of the vilest sinners, even publicans, affected by his discourses, glorified God; acknowledging their own sins, and the just punishment due to them; and in humble penitence sought for pardon, submitting to John's baptism, and professing thereby for the future to devote themselves to God's service. But the proud and self-righteous Pharisees, puffed up with the vain conceit of their own excellence, fancied they were just persons who needed no repentance; therefore in general they rejected his preaching, and refused to submit to his baptism, thereby sealing themselves up under wrath; and the case is much the same to this day. Those who are converted by the ministry of the word, are chiefly of the common people, and many whom the relf-righteous despise as vile and abandoned; whilst the rulers pay little regard to the gospel-word, the wise men of this world disregard it as foolishness, and the persons of most admired goodness cannot bear to be set on a level with the chief of sinners, cannot stoop to receive the grace of Jesus freely, and thus perish in their pride.

4. Christ upbraids the perverseness of the men of that generation. No similitude could sufficiently describe their wilfulness and obstinacy; like froward and surly children, they neither would join their companions when in their play they imitated a feast or a funeral. Thus the austerities of John, his life of self-denial, and doctrine of repentance disgusted them, and they reproached him as melancholy, or demoniac. The Son of man, on the other hand, more familiarly associated with others, refused not an invitation to a wedding, or a feast, and they reviled him as a glutton, a drunkard, and a loose companion. But wisdom is justified of all her children; those who are truly made wise unto salvation, justify God in those methods he uses for their conversion, and approve and honour the Lord Jesus who is the wisdom of God in all his works and ways. Note, (1.) They who resolve to cavil, will never want a handle. (2.) Different men and ministers have different tempers and manners; some are naturally more austere and reserved, others more free and open; some more powerfully urge the thunders of Sinai upon the sinner's conscience, others dwell upon the softer accents of gospel grace. And this diversity of dispensations in which men are led is beautiful, though malice will find a like manner of objection against both. (3.) We must take care not to judge of others by ourselves; not branding on the one hand the reserved, as morose; nor on the other, charging innocent freedom as licentiousness; but ever put the most candid constructions on men's tempers and manners.

36. ¶ [o] And one of the Pharisees desired him that he would eat with him. [p] And he went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat. 37. And, behold, a [q] woman in the city, which was a sinner, when she knew that Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an [r] alabaster-box of ointment, 38. And [s] stood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment. 39. Now, when the Pharisee which had bidden him saw it, he spake within himself, saying, [t] This man, if he were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that [u] toucheth him: for she is a [x] sinner. 40. [y] And Jesus answering, said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, [z] Master, say on. 41. There was a certain creditor which had two [a] debtors: the one owed [b] five hundred [c] pence, and the other fifty. 42. And when they [d] had nothing to pay, he [e] frankly forgave them both. Tell me therefore which of them will love him most? 43. Simon answered and said, I suppose that he [f] to whom he forgave most. And he said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged. 44. And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou [g] gavest me no water for my feet: but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head. 45. Thou gavest me no [h] kiss: but this woman since the time I came in * hath not ceased to kiss my feet. 46. [i] My head with oil thou didst not anoint: but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment. 47. Wherefore I say unto thee, [k] Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; [l] for she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little. 48. And he said unto her, [m] Thy sins are forgiven. 49. And they that sat at meat with him began to say within themselves, [n] Who is this that forgiveth sins also? 50. And he said to the woman, [o] Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace.

o Not that Mark 14. 3. Mat. 26. 6.
p Ch. 11. 37. & 24. 1.
q Perhaps Mary Magdalene. Ch. 8. 2. & 24. 10.
r Not that John 12. 3. Mat. 26. 7. Mark 14. 3. s Zech. 12. 10. 2 Cor. 7. 11. 1 Tim. 5. 10. Gen. 18. 4. & 19. 2. Judg. 19. 21. 1 Sam. 25. 41.
t Ch. 15. 2. & 23. 2. John 7. 12. Mat. 16. 14.
u Lev. xv. Num. xix.
x Ver. 37. Gen. 13. 13. 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. Gal. 5. 19—21.
y Ch. 5. 22, 31. & 6. 8.
z John 13. 13. & 11. 4, 28. & 3. 2. Mat. 7. 21.
a Mat. 6. 13. ch. 11. 4.
b 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. 1 Tim. 1. 13—16. c See Mat. 18. 28.
d Ps. 49. 7, 8. Rom. 3. 23. 2 Cor. 3. 5. Eph. 2. 1. Tit. 3. 3.
e Hos. 14. 2. Is. 1. 18. & 43. 25. & 44. 22. Rom. 3. 4. & 5. 20, 21. Eph. 1. 7. Col. 1. 14. 1 Tim. 1. 13—16. Rev. 1. 5. Ps. 103. 3.
f Ver. 47. 2 Cor. 5. 14. Phil. 3. 7—9. with 1 Tim. 1. 13.
g Gen. 18. 4 & 19. 2. 1 Tim. 5. 10.
h Rom. 16. 16. 1 Cor. 16. 20. 2 Cor. 13. 12. 1 Thes. 5. 26. 1 Pet. 5. 14.
* The reading supported by several MSS. since she entered, agrees better with the context, which represents the woman as coming to Simon's house, (ver. 37.) after she had learned that Jesus was there.
i Ps. 23. 5. & 104. 15. Eccl. 9. 8. Mat. 6 17.
k Ver. 37, 39, 43. 1 Tim. 1. 13—16. 1 Cor. 6. 9—11. Eph. 1. 7. Exod. 34. 6, 7. Mic. 7. 18, 19. 1 Tim. 1. 15, 16.
l Or therefore. Ps. 103. 1—3. & 116. 12—19. 2 Cor. 5. 14. Ps. 119. 32. ver. 43.
m Mat. 9. 2. Is. 43. 25. & 44. 22. & 55. 7. & 1. 18. Col. 1. 14. Acts 5. 31. Eph. 1. 7.
n Ch. 5. 21. Mat. 9. 3. Mark 2. 7. with ver. 23, 39. Is. 53 3.
o Mat. 9. 22. Mark 5. 34. & 10. 52. ch. 8. 48. & 18. 42.

Verses 36—50. Our Lord behaved himself courteously to all, and though the Pharisees had shown themselves his bitter enemies, he refused not the invitation of one of them, and readily went to eat at his house. And we are told,

1. A singular circumstance which happened on that occasion. A woman, whose character had been notoriously infamous, but by the preaching and grace of the Redeemer was become a real penitent, and true believer, came in, urged by her deep affection for our Lord, and standing behind him as he lay along (which was their custom at meals) with penitential tears she bedewed his feet, wiped them with her once braided, but now dishevelled hair, and kissing them in humble adoration, anointed them as a token of her high respect, with precious ointment from an alabaster box. Note, (1.) They who truly draw near to Jesus, cannot but feel their hearts bleed, and their eyes overflow, in the remembrance of past gratitude. (2.) A soul that loves the Lord Jesus counts nothing too good to employ in his service. (3.) When the eyes full of adultery, become fountains of tears, and all the ornaments of pride, the lures of lust, are laid aside, these are blessed symptoms of a happy change.

2. The Pharisee was highly offended at Christ, for suffering such a woman to approach him, and thought within himself, if Jesus were the prophet he pretended to be, he must have known, and spurned from his feet a creature so infamous. Thus whilst persons of a proud and self-righteous spirit are looking with contempt on a poor harlot, and saying, Stand by thyself, come not near me, I am holier than thou, they are not aware that this high conceit of themselves and despising others, is in God's sight an abomination far greater even than those outward evils which they condemn in others.

3. Christ justifies the woman from Simon's censures. The Pharisee questioned Christ's prophetical character; therefore the Lord, by answering his thoughts, will give him an evidence of it, and draw the poor woman's vindication from his own lips; and this he doth by an apposite parable; having informed Simon he had something of importance to say to him, to which he professes himself all attention.

(1.) The parable respected two debtors, the one of whom owed ten times more than the other; but being both insolvent, the creditor freely forgave them. Christ thereupon appeals to Simon for an answer, which of the two will love their gracious benefactor most? The reply was evident, he to whom most was forgiven. The debt is sin, and sinners are deep in arrear to God; they have never paid him the obedience they owe, and are become liable to the arrests of judgment. All are guilty; but some are more notorious offenders, and have sinned with greater aggravations than others; yet the least transgressor is an insolvent debtor, he can never make God a compensation for the least of his iniquities, and must perish eternally with the vilest, unless he is convinced of his sinfulness, and flies to the free grace of God in Jesus Christ. In him there is plenteous redemption, the chief of sinners are sure of finding pardon through the ransom he hath paid, and none who come to him shall be in any wise cast out. A sense of this abounding grace will not fail to engage the believing sinner's heart; and in proportion to the discovery he hath of his own guilt, should his gratitude be for the rich mercy vouchsafed to him. The chief of sinners are bound to become the chief of saints; to love much because the Lord hath forgiven them much.

(2.) Christ applies the parable to the case before him. This woman was the debtor who owed the five hundred pence, and she had been forgiven; no marvel, therefore, her expressions of gratitude were singular; for which, so far from being condemned, she rather deserved to be commended. All she had done flowed from this source, and herein she had exceeded Simon in her returns of love, as much as she hath done in the offensiveness and notoriety of her transgression. 1. Instead of the water, which he had neglected to bring, she had with penitential tears, bedewed his feet and wiped them with her hair. 2. The kiss of peace and salutation Simon had not given to his sacred guest, but this poor sinner had not ceased to express her humble gratitude of love, by repeatedly kissing even his feet. 3. The common civility of oil to anoint his head the Pharisee had withheld, but she had poured this costly ointment on his feet, the expression of her faith in him as the Messiah, and of that unfeigned regard which made her account the greatest cost well employed in his service; therefore he seals afresh the pardon which he had bestowed upon her, on account of which she loved him so greatly, whilst such as Simon, who were less acquainted with their own guilt and sinfulness, and did not see their great need of a pardon, would feel themselves less obliged to the Saviour's grace, and testify, as Simon had done, less regard for him.

(3.) He particularly addresses himself to the poor woman, to silence her fears, and encourage her under the Pharisees' frowns. He repeats his assurances, Thy sins are forgiven thee; and though he knew the murmurs this raised, and the offence it gave among the Pharisaical tribe who were at the table, as if his arrogating such a power was impious, nay, blasphemous, he, so far from receding, confirms her salvation; to which, through faith in him, she was now assuredly entitled, and therefore he bids her go in peace; every fear of guilt removed, her conscience at ease, regardless of the reproaches of the proud, and waiting confidently for the eternal rest that remaineth for the people of God. Note, (1.) As nothing renders us so fearful as the consciousness of guilt, we need promise upon promise to encourage our trust and hope. (2.) Faith alone can pacify the conscience, and produce that genuine love and evangelical sorrow, which worketh repentance unto salvation never to be repented of.

CHAP. VIII.—anno domini, 31.

Here is, 1. Christ's preaching, and subsistence by the charitable contributions of good people, ver. 1—3. 2. The parable of the sower, ver. 4—18. 3. The preference which Christ gave to his obedient disciples, before his nearest relations according to the flesh, ver. 19—21. 4. His stilling a storm at sea with a word's speaking, ver. 22—25. 5. His casting a legion of devils out of a man that was possessed by them, ver. 26—40. 6. His healing a woman that had a bloody issue, and raising Jairus' daughter to life, ver. 41—56.

1. AND it came to pass afterward, [a] that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God: and the [b] twelve were with him, 2. And [c] certain women, which had been healed of evil spirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene, * out of whom went seven [d] devils, 3. And Joanna the wife of Chuza, [d] Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, which [c] ministered unto him of their substance.

a Mat. 4. 17, 23. ch. 4. 14. 15, 43, 44. & 6. 17. Mark 1. 14, 15. Acts 10. 38. Is. 63. 1. & 61. 1—3. & 48. 17.

b Ch. 6. 14—16. Mat. 10. 2—4. Mark 3. 16—19. Acts 1. 13.

c Mat. 27. 55, 56. John 19. 25. Mark 16. 9.

* That is, from the town or district of Magdala.

d Ch. 3. 19, 20. & 9. 7—9. Mark 6. 14—28. Mat. 14. 1—11. ch. 13. 31, 32. & 23. 7—12.

e Mark 15. 40, 41. 1 Cor. 9. 11, 14.

Verses 1—3. With unwearied labours the divine Redeemer went about doing good.

1. He visited round all the cities and villages in Galilee, preached the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and opened the nature, blessings, and privileges, of that gospel church which he came to erect. His twelve apostles attended him to be witnesses of his miracles, and to learn from his lips the doctrines they were afterwards appointed to preach.

2. His support arose from the contributions of some pious women who followed him, who had experienced his healing grace both in their bodies and their souls. Among many others, three are particularly mentioned: Mary Magdalene, out of whom Jesus had cast seven devils; Joanna, the wife, perhaps now the widow, of Chuza, Herod's steward, probably a person of considerable rank and fortune; and Susanna. These with many others, furnished him with a subsistence; and he in great humility, condescended to be thus supported, rather than by exerting his own miraculous power. Note, (1.) Christ lived upon alms, to teach us never to despise the poor; nor, if we are reduced, proudly to scorn being obliged to others for a maintenance. (2.) They who love the gospel, cannot but delight to contribute liberally for the support of it. (3.) If we have been truly healed by the grace of Jesus, we shall commence thenceforward his inseparable followers in all holy conversation and godliness.

4. ¶ [f] And when much people were gathered together, and were come to [g] him out of every city, he spake by a parable: 5. [g] A sower went out to sow his seed: and, as he sowed, some fell [h] by the way-side and it was trodden down, and the fowls of the air devoured it. 6. And some fell upon [i] a rock; and as soon as it was sprung up, it withered away, because it lacked moisture. 7. And some fell among [k] thorns; and the thorns sprang up with it, and choked it. 8. And other fell on [l] good ground, and sprang up, and bare fruit an hundredfold. And when he had said these things, he [m] cried, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. 9. ¶ And his disciples asked him, saying, [n] What might this parable be? 10. And he said, [o] Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God: but to others in parables; that [p] seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not understand. 11. ¶ [q] Now the parable is this; The [r] seed is the word of God. 12. Those by the way-side are [s] they that hear; then cometh the devil, and taketh [r] away the word [t] out of their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved. 13. [u] They on the rock are they which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away. 14. And [x] that which fell among thorns are they which, when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with cares, and riches, and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection. 15. [y] But that on the good ground are they

f Mat. 13. 2—23. Mark 4. 1—20.

g Mat. 13. 3, 19, 37. Mark 1. 14, 15. Heb. 2. 3.

h Ver. 12. Jam. 1. 23, 24.

i Ezek. 11. 19. & 36. 26. ch. 14. 28—30. 2 Pet. 2. 20—22. Heb. 6. 4—8. Hos. 6. 4. ver 13.

k Jer. 4. 3. ch. 21. 34. 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10. ver. 14.

l 2 Cor. 5. 11. Eph. 2. 10. John 15. 4. Rom. 7. 4. Col. 1. 10. Phil. 1. 11. Gal. 5. 22, 23. with Gen. 26. 12.

m Prov. 1. 20—23. & 8. 1, 4. Jer. 6. 21. Deut. 29. 4. Mat. 11. 15. & 13. 9. ch. 9. 44. 1 Kin. 22. 28. Rev. 2. 7, 11, &c.

n Mat. 7. 7. Mark 4. 10, 34. Mat. 13. 36. Prov. 3. 5, 6. Hos. 6. 3.

o Mat. 11. 25. & 13. 11. & 16. 17. Ps. 25. 8, 9. 14. Is. 29. 14. 1 Cor. 4. 7. & 2. 7—16. Eph. 3. 9. 1 Cor. 1. 26. 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11. 1 John 2. 20, 27.

p Ps. 6. 9, 10. & 44. 18. Jer. 5. 21. John 12. 40. Acts 28. 26. Rom. 11. 8. see Mat. 13. 14. Deut. 29. 4.

q Mat. 13. 18—23. Mark 4. 14—20.

r 1 Pet. 1. 23. 2 Pet. 2. 4. Acts 20. 27. Mark 1. 14, 15. & 16. 15. Is. 8. 20. Mat. 23. 19, 20. Jam. 1. 18, 21.

s Jam. 1. 22—24. 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. & 2. 11. 1 Pet. 5. 8.

t Rom. 10. 8. 2 Thes. 2. 10.

u Is. 58. 2. Ezek. 33. 31. Hos. 6. 4. John 5. 35. 2 Tim. 1. 15. Mat. 13. 20, 21 2 Pet. 2. 20—22. Mark 6. 20.

x Ver. 7. ch. 18. 24. & 21. 34. & 16. 13. Mat. 6. 24. 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10, 17. 2 Tim. 4. 10, 16. Jer. 4. 3.

y Eph. 2. 19, 20. Rom. 7. 4. Gal. 5. 21—24. 2 Pet. 1. 5—10. Ps. 1. 3. & 92. 14. John 15. 4. Col. 1. 6. Mat. 24. 13.

† Persevere in bringing forth fruit. The original denotes something more than a virtue merely passive, namely, constancy in purpose and practice.

which, in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with patience.† 16. ¶ [z] No man, when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a vessel, or putteth it under a bed; but setteth it on a candlestick, that they which enter in may see the light. 17. [a] For nothing is secret, that shall not be made manifest; neither any thing hid, that shall not be known and come abroad. 18. [b] Take heed therefore how ye hear: [c] for whosoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have. 19. ¶ [d] Then came to him his mother and his brethren, and could not come at him for the press. 20. And it was told him by certain which said, Thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to see thee. 21. And he answered and said unto them, [e] My mother and my brethren are these which hear the word of God, and do it.

z Mat. 5. 15. Mark 4. 21—23. ch. 11. 33. with Mat. 5. 15. Phil. 2. 15, 16.

a Job 12. 22. Mat. 10. 26, 27. ch. 12. 2, 3. Mark 16. 15. Eph. 3. 8.

b Ch. 9. 44. Is. 42. 23. Jer. 9. 12.

c Mat. 13. 12 & 25. 29. ch. 19. 26. Mark 4. 25. & 10. 42. John 15. 2. 1 Cor. 10. 12. & 14. 37, 38. Rev. 22. 11.

d Mat. 12. 46—50. Mark 3. 31—36. Mat. 13. 55. John 2. 11. & 7. 3. Acts 1. 14. 1 Cor. 9. 5. Gal. 1. 19.

e Ch. 11. 27, 28. Mat. 7. 21. & 12. 49, 50. Gal. 5. 6. & 6. 15. Col. 3. 11. Ps. xv. & 24. 3—6. John 13. 17. & 14. 15. & 15. 14. Rom. 2. 13. Jam. 1. 22. 1 Pet. 1. 15, 16. 2 Pet. 1. 4—10. 2 Cor. 5. 14—17.

Verses 4—21. Great multitudes being collected together from all the neighbouring cities and villages, he took occasion to represent the nature of the gospel dispensation by the parable of the sower, which he had, Matt. xiii. 3. the explication of which, he vouchsafes to give to his inquisitive disciples in private; it being their peculiar mercy, that what was left mysterious to others, should be explained to them. And a singular favour is this, if, whilst others are left in darkness, we are brought into the marvellous light of gospel truth.

1. Concerning the parable we may observe, (1.) How vigilant is our adversary the devil, in every place where the word of God is dispensed, to harden the heart against receiving it, lest we should believe and be saved; and this he doth, by distracting the attention, by suggesting some vain or worldly thoughts immediately after we have heard God's word preached, by instilling prejudices against the sower, or doubts about the Scripture itself; and thus preventing the admission or abidance of the truth in the minds of the hearers: the consequence of which is, that men neglect and despise the great salvation of God. (2.) Among the multitudes who appear from time to time to be affected with the gospel, and make some profession, the greater number fall short of the kingdom; discouraged by the frowns, or seduced by the smiles of this present evil world, they grow cold and careless; the love of pleasure and ease, anxious cares, or inordinate love of riches, destroy and choke the word; and they either openly apostatize, or in their hearts at least, depart from the living God. Hence out of many who are called, few are chosen. (3.) There is a remnant, according to the election of grace, to whom the seed of the gospel word becomes the power of God unto salvation. They seriously hear, sedately weigh, and faithfully embrace the truth, as it is in Jesus: their hearts, by divine grace, are made honest and sincere; and patiently persevering in well-doing, they hold the beginning of their confidence steadfast unto the end; not seduced by any enticements, nor deterred by any persecutions, which for the word's sake may arise. Thus their fruit abides and abounds, and they stand ready for the harvest of eternal glory.

2. By another parable of a lighted candle, Christ teaches his disciples, and others, what was expected from them, even to shine as lights in the world, holding forth the word of life. This being the great design of all the private instructions he gave them, that they should afterwards plainly and fully declare to the world, the great truths couched under these similitudes. As therefore they must give a solemn account for the particular advantages they enjoyed, they must take heed how they hear, when so much was hereby intrusted to them, and expected from them; which, if they improved, farther assistances of spiritual light, and greater gifts should be given them; but if they neglected to profit by these means of wisdom and grace vouchsafed to them, the consequence would be, that the gifts and knowledge which they seemed to have, would decay, and be taken from them, and darkness and error succeed.

3. Christ acknowledges those who truly hear the word of God, and do it, as his nearest and dearest relations. His mother and his brethren desired to see and speak with him; but unable to approach him, because of the crowd, some of those who stood around him, informed him of their request; and he being otherwise engaged in his Father's work, took occasion hence to encourage those who were his diligent attendants, assuring them they shared his regards above the nearest relatives after the flesh.

22. ¶ [f] Now it came to pass on a certain day, that he went into a ship with his disciples; and he said unto them, Let us go over unto the other side of the lake. And they launched forth. 23. But as they sailed, he [g] fell asleep: and [h] there came down a storm of wind on the lake; and they were filled *with water, and were in jeopardy. 24. And they came to him, and awoke him, saying, [i] Master, Master, we perish! [k] Then he arose, and rebuked the wind and the raging of the water: and they ceased, and there was a calm. 25. And he said unto them, [l] Where is your faith? and they, [m] being afraid, wondered, saying one to another, What manner of man is this! for he commandeth even the winds and water, and they obey him. 26. ¶ [n] And they arrived at the country of the Gadarenes, which is over against Galilee. 27. And when he went forth to land, [o] there met him out of the city† a certain man which had devils long time, and ware no clothes, neither abode in any house, but in the tombs. 28. When he saw Jesus, [p] he cried out, and fell down before him, and with a loud voice said, [q] What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God most high? I beseech thee, torment me not. 29. [r] (For he had commanded the unclean spirit to come out of the man. [s] For oftentimes it had caught him: and he was kept bound with chains and in fetters; and he brake the bands, and was driven of the devil into the wilderness.)

f Mat. 8. 23—27. Mark 4. 36—40.

g Ps. 44. 22, 23. & 10. 1. Is. 45. 15. John 11. 14, 15. 1 Sam. 23. 26.

h Mat. 14. 24. Mark 4. 37. Ps. cxxiv. Is. 34. 11.

* The ship was filled with water, Mat. 8. 24.

i 2 Chr. 14. 11. & 20. 12. Ps. 63. 4. & 69. 1.

k Ps. 46. 1. & 116. 4—6. & 102. 13. & 104. 7. & 65. 7. & 89. 9. & 107. 25, 28, 29. Nah. 1. 4. Is. 5. 2.

l Mat. 6. 30. & 8. 26. & 17. 17, 19, 20. & 14. 31. ch. 9. 50. John 11. 40. ver. 50. Mark 4. 40.

m Mat. 8. 27. Mark 4. 41. & 6. 51. Ps. 89. 9. & 65. 7. & 107. 29. & 46. 2—4. & 29. 10. & 93. 4.

n Mat. 8. 28—34. Mark 5. 1—20.

o Mark 5. 2. 1 John 3. 8. Rom. 16. 20. 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude 6. Rev. 20. 1, 2. 1 Kin. 18. 28. 1 Pet. 5. 8. John 8. 44. Is. 65. 4.

† The import is evidently here, a man belonging to the city, not a man coming from the city.—Campbell.

p Acts 16. 16, 17. Phil. 2. 10, 11. Ps. 72. 4, 12—14.

q Mat. 8. 29. Mark 5. 7. & 1. 24.

r Mark 5. 8. & 1. 25. & 9. 25. & 7. 29.

s Mark 5. 4. & 9. 18, 20, 22. ch. 9. 39, 42. 1 Pet. 5. 8. John 8. 44.

30. And Jesus asked him, saying, What is thy name? And he said,* Legion: because many devils were entered into him. 31. [t] And they besought him that he would not command them to go out into the deep.† 32. And there was there an herd of many swine feeding on the mountain: and they besought him that he would suffer them to enter into them. [x] And he suffered them. 33. Then went the devils out of the man, and entered into the swine: and [y] the herd ran violently down a steep place into the lake, and were choked. 34. When they that fed them saw what was done, they [z] fled, and went and told it in the city and in the country. 35. Then they went out to see what was done; and came to Jesus, and [a] found the man, out of whom the devils were departed, sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid. 36. They also which saw it told them by what means he that was possessed of the devils was healed. 37. Then the whole multitude of the country of the Gadarenes round about [b] besought him to depart from them: for they were taken with great fear: and he went up into the ship, and returned back again. 38. Now the man out of whom the devils were departed [c] besought him that he might be with him: but Jesus sent him away, saying, 39. [d] Return to thine own house, and shew how great things God hath done unto thee. [e] And he went his way, and published throughout the whole city how great things Jesus had done unto him.

* i. e. six or seven thousand.

t Ver. 30. Mark 5. 10. Phil. 2. 9—11. Ps. 72. 9. Job 1. 11. & 2. 5. ver. 28, 32. 1 Kin. 22. 22.

† The abyss. The meaning of the word the deep in u English, is invariably the sea. In this sense it occurs often in Scripture. But that the sea is not meant here is evident, for to it the demons went of themselves, when permitted, at their own request, to enter into the swine. —Campbell.

u Mat. 8. 30. Mark 5. 11. Lev. 11. 7. Deut. 14. 8. Is. 65. 4. & 66. 3.

x 1 Kin. 22. 22. Job 1. 12. & 2. 6. Rev. 20. 7.

y John 8. 44. 1 Pet. 5. 8.

z Mat. 8. 33. Mark 5. 14. John 10. 12, 13. Mat. 28. 11.

a 1 John 3. 8. Rom. 16. 20. & 12. 29. Is. 49. 24—26. Ps. 72. 2, 12—14.

b Mark 5. 17. Mat. 8. 34. 1 Kin. 17. 18. ch. 5. 8. Gen. 25. 34. Acts 16. 39. Job 21. 14, 15. 1 Cor. 2. 14. Deut. 5. 25. with ver. 28. Mark 1. 24. ch. 4. 34.

c Mark 5. 18. ch. 18. 43. Ps. 116. 12. & 104. 1—6.

d Ps. 50. 14. & 105. 1, 2. & 66. 16. & ciii—cviii, cxlvi, cxvi, xviii. Is. 63. 7—13. John 2. 1—10. & 4. 29.

e John 4. 29. Mark 1. 45. Mat. 4. 24. & 9. 26. & 14. 35. & 17. 14. Ps. 66. 16.

Verses 22—39. We had before an account of these two illustrious miracles, Mat. viii. We see,

1. Christ's wonders in the deep. He, at whose word the stormy waves arise, can in a moment also restrain their rage, and silence their roaring. Christ sent his disciples by sea, on purpose to give them this fresh evidence of his omnipotence. They embarked at his word, and little expected danger; but oftentimes, when we are lulled into security, our peril is most imminent: they had him with them however, and therefore need not fear: but he was asleep; for so regardless he sometimes appears towards his people in their distress; and their danger staggered their faith, and filled their hearts with fears, as their boat was filled with water. The strongest believers are sometimes shaken; prayer was now their resource; to Christ they fly, and awaken him with their cries. He slept with this design, to quicken their desires after him, to affect them with a deeper sense of their want of him, and testify towards them more abundantly his power and his love. When we feel ourselves undone and perishing, then is Christ truly precious to us; none ever perished who thus fled to him. He arose, and with a word stilled the raging sea, and quieted their fears. He delights to speak peace to the troubled conscience, and they who wait on him shall not be ashamed of their confidence. Their only shame will arise from their dishonourable distrusts of him; for these he justly reproves them, Where is your faith? Faith they had in habit, but not in exercise; their jeopardy for a moment suppressed its vigorous actings; their sudden deliverance amazed them; and filled with a reverential fear at such a display of divine power, they could not but conclude he must be more than man, whom winds and waves obeyed.

2. Christ's dominion over the powers of darkness; raging devils can no more resist his power, than raging winds; and this is an unspeakable comfort to all God's people, that Satan is a vanquished foe, and cannot harm even a swine, without permission. A legion here possessed one man; how numberless then these malignant spirits; how unequal a match must we be for them, if left to ourselves! No chains could hold this poor demoniac; in cold and nakedness, without clothes or covering, he was driven to the tombs; so ungovernable are we when under the influence of satanical tempers, a terror to others, a burden to ourselves. At the feet of Jesus he fell, whilst the foul spirit within cried out in terror, dreading to be dispossessed, and sent to the abyss, the place of torment. A slavish fear of hell sometimes drives men thus to their knees: they dread the punishment, but do not loath their sins; they cry for release from their pains, not for deliverance from their corruptions. When the devil is compelled to quit his hold of the man, he fain would be doing mischief, if but among the swine: and in correction to some, and as a warning to others, Christ permits this visitation on their property. But when they heard from the affrighted keepers, the loss they had sustained, they desired him to depart out of their coast, dreading the consequences of his stay; and he departed. The visitations which should humble, often serve but to harden the souls of sinners; instead of coming to Christ, they would get as far from him as possible. The poor man, however, who was now restored to his right mind, and sitting at Jesus' feet, would fain have followed him; but he is sent back to proclaim the mercy he hath experienced. When by divine grace a right mind is restored to us, and the power of sin and Satan is broken, we are called upon to acknowledge the mercy to the praise of Jesus, and to tell what great things he hath done for our souls, inviting others to come and taste how gracious the Lord is.

40. And it came to pass, that [f] when Jesus was returning, the people gladly received him: for they were all waiting for him. 41. ¶ [g] And, behold, there came a man named Jairus, and he was [h] a ruler of the synagogue: and he fell down at Jesus' feet, and [i] besought him that he would come into his house; 42. For he had one only daughter, about twelve years of age, and she [k] lay a dying. But as he went the people thronged him. 43. ¶ [l] And a woman, having an issue of blood twelve years, which had spent all her living upon physicians, [m] neither could be healed of any, 44. [n] Came behind him, and [o] touched the border of his garment: [p] and immediately her issue of blood stanched. 45. And Jesus said, Who touched me? When all denied, Peter, and they that were with him, said, Master, the multitude throng thee, and

f Mat. 9. 1. Mark 5. 21. & 1. 45. ch. 5. 1, 17. & 6. 17.

g Mat. 9. 18—25. Mark 5. 22—43.

h To wit, of Capernaum. ch. 13. 14. Acts 13. 15.

i Mat. 8. 15. John 4. 47—50. & 11. 6, 7. Mat. 8. 13. & 15. 28.

k Rom. 6. 23. Ezek. 18. 4. Job 30. 23. Heb. 9. 27. Eccl. 3. 2. & 12. 1, 7. & 11. 9. Rom. 5. 12.

l Mark 5. 25—34. Mat. 9. 20—22. Lev. 15. 25. John 5. 5.

m John 1. 13. Ps. 108. 12.

n Gen. 32. 10. Ruth 2. 10, 11. Ezra 9. 5.

o Mark 5. 27, 28. Acts 5. 15. & 19. 12.

p Exod. 15. 26. Ps. 147. 3. Mal. 4. 2. 2 Kin. 13. 21. ch. 13. 13. & 14. 4.

press thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me? 46. And Jesus said, Somebody hath touched me: for I perceive that [q] virtue is gone out of me. 47. And when the woman saw that she was not hid, she came trembling; and [r] falling down before him, she declared unto him before all the people for what cause she had touched him, and how she was healed immediately. 48. And he said unto her, [s] Daughter, be of good comfort: thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace. 49. ¶ [t] While he yet spake, there cometh one from the ruler of the synagogue's house, saying to him, Thy daughter is dead; trouble not the Master. 50. But when Jesus heard it, he answered him, saying, [u] Fear not: believe only, and she shall be made whole. 51. And when he came into the house, [x] he suffered no man to go in, [y] save Peter and James, and John, and the father and the mother of the maiden. 52. [z] And all wept, and bewailed her: but he said, Weep not; [a] she is not dead, but sleepeth. 53. And they [b] laughed him to scorn, knowing that she was dead. 54. And [c] he put them all out, and took her by the hand, and [d] called, saying, Maid, arise. 55. And [f] her spirit came again, and she arose straightway: and he commanded to give her meat. 56. And [f] her parents were astonished: but he charged them that they should tell no man what was done.

q Mark 5. 30. John 1. 16. ch. 5. 17. & 6. 19. Heb. 7. 25. Is. 63. 1.

r Mark 5. 33 & 4. 31. Ps. 89. 7. Josh. 7. 19. Ps. 116. 12. & 66. 16. ch. 17. 15, 16. Ps. 103. 1—4.

s Ch. 7. 47—50. & 17. 19. & 18. 42. Mat. 15. 28. & 8. 13. Acts 14. 9.

t Mat. 9. 23—26. Mark 5. 35—43. ver. 41, 42.

u 2 Chr. 20. 20. Is. 7. 9. & 41. 10. & 43. 1, 2. & 50. 10. Mark 9. 23. & 5. 23, 31, 36. & 11. 22—24. John 11. 25, 40. Rom. 4. 17—20.

x Is. 42. 2. 1 Kin. 17. 19—23. 2 Kin. 4. 33—35. Mat. 7. 6.

y Mark 3. 16, 17. & 5. 2. & 14. 33. ch. 6. 14. & 9. 28.

z Gen. 23. 2. 1 Sam. 25. 1. 2 Chr. 35. 25. Jer. 9. 17. Acts 9. 39.

a John 11. 4, 11, 13, 33. Acts 20. 10.

b Acts 17. 32. Gen. 19. 14.

c Mat. 7. 6. Acts 9. 40. see ver. 51.

d John 6. 63. Rom. 4. 17. see ch. 7. 14. John 11. 43. & 5. 21. Ps. 107. 20. Exod. 15. 26.

e John 5. 22. Ps. 35. 9. 1 Kin. 17. 23. 2 Kin. 4. 35. John 11. 44. Acts 9. 40.

f See Mark 5. 42, 43. ch. 7. 16. & 5. 14. Mat. 8. 4. & 9. 30.

Verses 40—56. Though the Gadarenes were glad to get rid of Jesus, the men of Galilee with open arms received him, eagerly waiting for his return. If in one place the gospel be despised and expelled, another door of utterance shall be opened, and some will be glad to welcome the ejected ministers of Christ.

No sooner was Jesus arrived, than we find an application made to him by a ruler in behalf of his daughter at the point of death; and whilst he goes to perform one miracle, by the way he works another.

1. A poor diseased woman, who was ashamed to make a public application to him, persuaded that a touch of his garment would effect that which all her physicians had attempted in vain, came in secret among the crowd; and touching his garment, found, according to her faith, a perfect cure. But it was neither possible nor proper that it should be hid: for the glory of Jesus, and the comfort of her own soul, she is called upon to make an acknowledgement of the mercy. Persuaded, that he who felt virtue go out of him, and wrought the cure, could not be at a loss to find out the patient, no sooner did she hear his inquiries, than she fell trembling at his feet, acknowledges her boldness, and owned the blessing she had received. Far from being displeased, he who healed her body now comforts her soul: and commending her faith, dismisses her in peace. Note, (1.) There is that fulness of grace in Christ, that whoever comes to him, shall be holpen. (2.) We cannot be hid from the eye of Jesus, and a gracious soul desires it not; he would tell him of all his wretchedness, and pour out his heart in simplicity before him. (3.) Christ delights to raise up the trembling sinner, and speaks comfort to his poor in spirit: such need not fear, the language of Jesus to them shall be the voice of peace and love.

2. The ruler's daughter had now closed her eyes in death, and therefore his friends imagined it useless to trouble Jesus farther. In lesser trials many thus pretend to trust him, who, in greater, are ready to despair; but he, who by a word can heal the diseased, can by the same power raise the dead; he encourages, therefore, the ruler's faith: not only whilst there is life there is hope, but even in death the case is not desperate, when he who is the resurrection and the life is the physician. With three of his disciples, and the parents of the child, he went into the room where she lay, sending forth those as unworthy to be spectators of his power, who, when he would dry up their tears with good words and comfortable, laughed at his saying that she only slept, because they knew that she was dead; but knew not that to him it was as easy to call her from the arms of death, as to awaken her from sleep. The bed of death is the place of repose for those who fall asleep in Jesus; there they sweetly rest, till they are awakened in the resurrection morn to rise in that eternal day, when sleep and death will be no more. At his word the damsel arose; his hand of grace, his word of power, communicated life, and brought back the spirit which had fled; in perfect health her astonished parents beheld her restored to their longing arms. He commanded them hereupon to give her some food, and charged them to conceal the miracle; he wanted not men to spread his fame, his works were sufficient heralds. By the effectual word of Jesus is the sinner, dead in trespasses, thus quickened to spiritual life; and when the union between the body and the soul is dissolved, he takes care of both in their state of separation, and will bring the spirit again in the resurrection day, and prepare for it a body glorified like his own.

CHAP. IX.—ANNO DOMINI, 31.

In this chapter we have, 1. The commission Christ gave his twelve apostles to preach the gospel, and confirm it by miracles, ver. 1—6. 2. Herod's terror at the growing greatness of our Lord Jesus, ver. 7—9. 3. The apostles return to Christ, his retirement with them into a place of solitude; the great resort of people to them notwithstanding, and his feeding five thousand men with five loaves and two fishes, ver. 10—17. 4. His discourse with his disciples concerning himself, and his own sufferings for them, and theirs for him, ver. 18—27. 5. Christ's transfiguration, ver. 28—36. 6. The cure of a lunatic child, ver. 37—42. The repeated notice Christ gave his disciples of his approaching sufferings, ver. 43—45. 8. His check to the ambition of his disciples, ver. 46—48. and to their monopolizing of the power over devils to themselves, ver. 49, 50. 9. The rebuke he gave them for their resentment of an affront given him by a village of the Samaritans, ver. 51—56. 10. The answers he gave to several that were inclined to follow him, but not considerately or not zealously and heartily so inclined, ver. 57—62.

1. THEN [a] he called his twelve disciples together, and [b] gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. 2. And he sent them to [c] preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick. 3. And he said unto them, a Mat. 10. 1—42. Mark 6. 7—13. ch. 6. 13—16.

b Ch. 10. 17, 19. Mark 16. 17, 18. John 14. 12. Acts 3. 6—8. & 9. 31.

c Mark 16. 15. & 6. 11, 12. & 1. 14, 15. Tit. 1. 3, 14. & 2. 10—14. Heb. 2. 3, 4. Rom. 1. 16, 17. Col. 1. 23. 25—28. Ezek. 34. 3.

d Mat. 10. 9, 10. Mark 6. 8, 9. ch. 10 4. & 22. 35. 2 Tim. 2. 4. Ps. 37. 3, 5. Is. 33. 16.

[d] Take nothing for your journey, neither staves, nor scrip, neither bread, neither money; neither have two coats apiece. 4. [e] And whatsoever house ye enter into, there abide, and thence depart.* 5. [f] And whosoever will not receive you, when ye go out of that city, shake off the very dust from your feet for a testimony against them. 6. [g] And they departed, and went through the towns, preaching the gospel, and healing every where. 7. ¶ [h] Now Herod the tetrarch heard of all that was done by him: and he was perplexed, because that it was said of some, that John was risen from the dead: 8. [i] And of some, that Elias had appeared; and of others, that one of the old prophets was risen again. 9. And Herod said, [k] John have I beheaded; but who is this, of whom I hear such things? [l] And he desired to see him.

e Mat. 10. 11—13. Mark 6. 8. ch. 10. 5, 6.

* More intelligibly, continue in whatever house ye are received into, until ye leave the place.

f Mat. 10. 14, 15. Mark 6. 11. ch. 10. 10—12. Acts 13. 51. & 18. 6. Neh. 5. 13.

g Mat. 11. 1, 5. Mark 6. 12, 13. ver. 1, 2. John 14. 12.

cir. 32.

h Mat. 14. 1—12. Mark 6. 14—28. Ps. 14. 5. & 53. 5. Job 18. 11, 12.

i Ch. 3. 1, 19. Mat. 16. 14. & 17. 10. Mark 6. 15. John 1. 21. ver. 19. Mark 8. 28.

k Mat. 14. 1—12. Mark 6. 14—28. see ver. 7.

l Ch. 13. 31, 32. & 23. 8.

Verses 1—9. Our Lord having called his twelve apostles to closer attendance upon himself that they might be qualified for the work in which he designed to employ them, now sends them forth in his name, and invests them with miraculous powers, as a proof of their divine mission.

1. He directs them what to say and do. The subject of their preaching must be the gospel of the kingdom; and by their beneficent acts of healing men's bodies, they would not only confirm, but recommend also their doctrine to men's souls.

2. He directs them how to go on this errand. They must make no preparation for their journey: but in their fishers' garments, without change of raiment, without money, or provision, they must go forth, trusting entirely on divine providence for the supply of all their wants; taking up their quarters with the first family who should receive them, and abiding in the same house during their stay, to avoid all appearance of fickleness or nicety. But if any refused them a welcome entertainment, leaving that city to its fate, they need only shake off the dust of their feet, and that should stand as an eternal testimony against them for rejecting the gospel, and insure their destruction.

3. They immediately obeyed, and executed their commission; for every gracious soul delights to be employed for Christ, and runs at his command.

4. Herod the tetrarch was exceedingly perplexed and terrified at the reports, which on this occasion reached his ears. The country rang with the miracles performed by Jesus and his apostles, and people offered various conjectures concerning this great personage; who not only wrought such wonders himself, but was able to communicate this extraordinary power to others. Some said it was John revived: others that Elias was come, the expected forerunner of the Messiah; others, that one of the old prophets was risen again. Herod's guilty conscience smote him, justly fearing that the murdered Baptist was indeed risen or some more mighty instrument of God to avenge his quarrel, and he desired to see him.

m Mark 6. 30. ch. 10. 17.

n Mat. 14. 13—21. Mark 6. 31—44. & 1. 45. & 3. 7, 20. John 6. 16. Is. 42. 2.

o John 1. 44. Mat. 11. 21.

10. ¶ [m] And the apostles, when they were returned, told him all that they had done. [n] And he took them, and went aside privately into a desert place belonging to the city called [o] Bethsaida. 11. And the people, when they knew it, followed him: and [p] he received them, and spake unto them of the kingdom of God, and healed them that had need of healing. 12. ¶ [q] And when the day began to wear away, then came the twelve, and said unto him, Send the multitude away, that they may go into the towns and country round about, and lodge, and get victuals: for we are here in a desert place. 13. But he said unto them, [r] Give ye them to eat. And they said, We have no more but five loaves and two fishes; except we should go and buy meat for all this people. 14. For they were about five thousand men. And he said to his disciples, [s] Make them sit down by fifties in a company. 15. And they did so, and made them all sit down. 16. Then he took the five loaves and the two fishes, and, looking up to heaven, he blessed them, and brake, and gave to the disciples to set before the multitude. 17. [u] And they did eat, and were all filled: and [x] there was taken up of fragments that remained to them twelve baskets.

p John 6. 37. ch. 15. 2. Is. 48. 17 & 61. 1. Mark 1. 14, 15. Acts 10. 38. Rom. 15. 8. Exod. 15. 26. Ps. 107. 20. & 147. 3.

q Mat. 14. 15—21. Mark 6. 35—44. John 6. 5—14. Ps. 78. 19, 20.

r 2 Kin. 4. 42, 43. Mark 6. 37. John 6. 6—10. Mat. 6. 33. Num. 11. 22.

s 1 Cor. 14. 33, 40. 1 Kin. 10. 5. Mark 6. 39, 40. & 7. 6.

t Ps. 121. 1, 2. Mat. 14. 19. & 15. 36. & 26. 26. & 24. 45. Rom. 14. 6. 1 Sam. 9. 13. Deut. 8. 10. 1 Tim. 4. 4, 5. John 6. 11. Mark 6. 41. Exod. 23. 25.

u Ps. 37. 16. & 23. 1. & 145. 18. Prov. 13. 25.

x Prov. 6. 6. Mat. 16. 9. & 14. 20, 21. John 6. 12—14. Phil. 4. 8.

Verses 10—17. When they had finished their work, they returned to give their master an account. He is the chief shepherd to whom we are all responsible. The remembrance that we must appear before him shortly to answer for our own ministry, should quicken our diligence. Christ took them for a while into a retirement; he is a good master and desires not to weary out his servants: rest after labour is needful. But the people, eager to hear and be healed, broke in upon their retirement; and Jesus, unwearied in labours of love, preached to them, as usual, the gospel of the kingdom, and healed their diseases. He is so gracious, that none who come to him with their complaints, shall be in any ways cast out. Yea, he not only feeds their souls with heavenly manna, but their bodies with miraculous food: five thousand men, besides women and children, are made to feast on five loaves and two small fishes. This miracle is recorded by all the evangelists, and affords us still food for our faith. (1.) In times of want and distress, our care must be cast on the Lord; he feedeth the hungry. (2.) If we have but little, yet let us not fear to divide our morsel with the poor; like the widow's cruse, it shall not be diminished hereby. (3.) When we look up to heaven for a blessing from God, though we by our sins have forfeited all title to our creature-comforts, in Christ Jesus they will be restored to us; and then when we eat and drink, it will be to the glory of God.

18. ¶ [y] And it came to pass, as he was * alone praying, his disciples were with him: and he asked them, saying, Whom say the people that I am? 19. They answering said, [z] John the Baptist; but some say, Elias; and others say that one of the old prophets is risen again. 20. He said unto them, But [a] whom say ye that I am? Peter answering said, [b] The y Mat. 16. 13—23. Mark 8. 27—33.

* Privately.

z Ver. 8. Mark 8. 28. Mat. 16. 14. John 1. 21.

a Mat. 23. 42. & 16. 15.

b Mat. 16. 16. John 1. 29, 41, 49. & 6. 69. & 11. 27. & 4. 29, 42. 1 John 4. 14, 15. & 5. 5. Acts 8. 37. & 9. 20. Mat. 26. 63.

Christ of God. 21. [c] And he straitly charged them, and commanded them to tell no man that thing; 22. Saying, [d] The Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and chief priests, and scribes, and be slain, and be raised the third day. 23. ¶ [e] And he said to them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me. 24. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it. 25. [f] For what is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world, and lose himself, or be cast away? 26. [g] For whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels. 27. [h] But I tell you of a truth, there be some standing here which shall not taste of death, till they see the kingdom of God.

c Mark 8. 26, 30. & 7. 36. 1 Cor. 2. 8. d Mat 17. 22, 23. & 16. 21. 22 & 20. 17, 18. Mark 8. 31. & 9. 31. & 10. 33. ch. 18. 31. & 24. 7, 26. Ps. 118. 22. Is. 52. 14, 15. & 53. 2—12. John 16. 1, 7. 1 Cor. 15. 4. Ps. xxii, lxix.
e Mat. 10. 38, 39. & 16. 24, 25. Mark 8. 34—36. ch. 14. 27. Phil. 3. 7—9. Acts 14. 22. 2 Tim. 3. 12. John 16. 33. 1 Thes. 3. 3. Rom. 2. 7—10. ch. 17. 33. John 12. 25. Gal. 6. 12. Rev. 12. 11. Heb. 11. 35.
f Job 2. 4. Mat. 16. 26. ch. 12. 19, 20. Mark 8. 36. & 9. 43—48. ch. 16. 25, 26.
g Mat. 10. 33. Mark 8. 38. ch. 12. 8, 9. 2 Tim. 2. 12. 1 John 2. 22, 23. Rev. 3. 5. Mat. 24. 30. & 25. 31. 2 Thes. 1. 8—10. Dan. 7. 10. Jude 14. h Mat. 16. 28. & 24. 30, 34. & 26. 64. Mark 9. 1. & 13. 26. ch. 22. 18. & 17. 20, 21.

Verses 18—27. Christ having dismissed the multitude whom he had fed, retired with his disciples, to pray with them and for them, as the master of this little family, and to teach us in our houses to follow his example. And when he had finished, we are told,

1. The inquiries he made concerning the general opinion formed of him. The disciples informed him the people were divided in sentiment: some said he was John, revived; others, Elias; others, one of the old prophets risen again. On putting the question to them, what they thought of him, Peter, the spokesman for his brethren, declared their faith in him as the Christ of God. He said the truth; but it was not proper that this should be publicly and expressly urged; lest tumults should ensue among the people who expected a temporal Messiah, he at present enjoined them silence on this head, till the great day of his resurrection should manifest the glory of his character.

2. The warning he gave them of his own sufferings and death, and this he immediately adds after the confession they had made of him as the Messiah, in order to prepare them for what might stagger them if it came upon them unawares, and to correct the common prejudices concerning the Messiah's temporal kingdom, which they as well as their countrymen had imbibed.

3. The admonitions he gave them of the sufferings they must expect to endure for his sake. Instead of the ambitious hopes they entertained, they must prepare by a course of habitual self-denial for the hardness and persecutions they would be called to endure in his service, and be ready to take up every cross which in the way of their duty was laid upon them; even if need be, of martyrdom itself. They might be tempted, indeed, by the terrors of suffering, or the allurements of the world, to save their lives by base compliances, but this was the way assuredly in eternity to lose what they meant to preserve; whilst a bold and faithful profession, though it exposed them even to death, would be recompensed with a better life in the eternal world. If they were unfaithful and apostatized, nothing could balance their loss; the gain of the whole world would be no compensation for the perdition of an immortal soul; and if they were ashamed of, and disowned him, their Master, the consequence would inevitably be, that they must be disowned by him, when in his own glory, as Mediator, and in his Father's glory, as having all power in heaven and earth delegated to him, and in the glory of his holy angels, the attendants of his triumphs, and the spirits that minister before his throne, he shall appear to judge the world. Note, The realizing views of a judgment-day are powerfully effectual to engage the believer to take up every cross, to hesitate at no loss, shame, or suffering for Christ's sake. He knows that these shall finally prove his eternal gain, his immortal honour.

4. The encouragement he suggests for his disciples' support; some of them then present shall live to see the kingdom of the Messiah erected, in defiance of all opposition: his gospel spread through the earth, and condign vengeance executed on the Jewish people their persecutors and his murderers. It is a comfort to every suffering saint of God, that the time is short; in a moment he shall be triumphant over every foe.

28. ¶ [i] And it came to pass about an eight days after these * sayings, he took [k] Peter and John and James, and went up into a mountain [l] to pray. 29. And, as he prayed, [m] the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistering. 30. And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were [n] Moses and Elias: 31. [o] Who appeared in glory, † and [p] spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem. 32. But Peter, and they that were with him, [q] were heavy with sleep: and when they were awake, [r] they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him. 33. And it came to pass, as they departed from him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, [s] it is good for us to be here: and let us make three [t] tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias: not knowing what he said. 34. While he thus spake, there came a [u] cloud, and overshadowed them: and they [u] feared as they entered into the cloud. 25. And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, [x] This is my beloved Son: [y] hear him. 36. And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone. [z] And they kept it close, and told no man in those days any of those things which they had seen.

i Mat. 17. 1—13. Mark 9. 2—10.
* Or things.
k Ch. 6. 14. & 8. 51.
l Ch. 6. 12. Ps. 109. 4. Heb. 5. 7.
m Exod. 34. 29, 35. Is. 33. 17. John 1. 14. 2 Pet. 1. 16, 17. Dan. 7. 9.
n Exod. xi. to Deut. xxxiv. 1Kin. xvii—xix. 2 Kin. i, ii. Acts 10. 43. Rom. 3. 21.
o Mat. 28. 3. Col. 3. 4. Phil. 3. 21.
† In a glorious form.
p 1 Cor. 2. 2. Phil. 3. 8—10. Col. 2. 15. with ver. 22. ch. xxii, xxiii. Mat. xxvi, xxvii. John xviii, xix.
q Dan. 8. 18. & 10. 9. ch. 22. 45, 46.
r John 1. 14. 2 Pet. 1. 16, 17.
s Ps. 30. 6. Mark 9. 5, 6. Mat. 17. 4.
t Ps. 18. 9, 11. & 97. 2. Is. 19. 1. Rev. 10. 1.
u Rev. 1. 17. Dan. 8. 18. & 10. 10. Exod. 33. 20. Judg. 6. 22. & 13. 22. Ps. 53. 5.
x 2 Pet. 1. 17. Mat. 3. 17. & 17. 5. Mark 9. 7. Is. 42. 1. Ps. 2. 7. John 1. 14. & 3. 16. Rom. 8. 3. Gal. 4. 4. Col. 1. 13. Zech. 13. 7. ch. 3. 17.
y Exod. 23. 21. Deut. 18. 15—18. Acts. 3. 22, 23. Heb. 2. 3. & 1. 1. & 12. 25, 26. & 3. 15.
z Mat. 17. 9. Mark 9. 9, 10. Eccl. 3. 7.

Verses 28—36. The story of the transfiguration was recorded in the other evangelists. Some circumstances are here added,

1. Christ went up into this mountain to pray, and then his glory broke forth, which should be an engagement and encouragement to us to maintain communion with God in prayer; since by such approach to him the glory of transforming grace is derived from him, and we become changed into his image.

2. Moses and Elias appeared in glory, as all Christ's saints shall shortly do. They spoke of his departure, (ἔξοδον,) his Exodus, in allusion to the departure of Israel from Egypt; so happy an exit was Jesus shortly to make from this miserable world to the land of eternal rest and blessedness. The prophets had foretold his sufferings, and they talk with him on this subject; the time being at hand, and Jerusalem the place where he must be put to death. The way to glory lies through the grave; in our happiest days on earth this should be ever in our view; and this will reconcile us to all the horrors of death, when we consider it as opening the door to eternal life.

3. The disciples were heavy with sleep; probably it was night, and they had been wearied with the labours of the day: but when they were awake, they beheld their Master and his two attendants beaming with irradiation, and bright as the light. Note, By our drowsy frame of spirit we are ready to lose many of those glorious visits from above, which the watchful and praying saints of God are favoured with; and it is a mercy that recovering grace suffers us not to sleep the sleep of death.

4. Peter charmed with the vision, is for taking up his abode there, and proposes erecting three tabernacles, not knowing what he said. The saints of God who have once quitted this miserable abode, wish not again to take up their dwelling here; they have an infinitely nobler place, a house not made with hands eternal in the heavens.

5. Fear seized them, as the bright cloud, the emblem of the divine presence, overspread them, and separated Moses and Elias from their view; but the voice of God silenced their fears, enjoining them with solemn attention to hear and obey his well beloved Son. If he be with us, and we are following his revealed word, we need not be dismayed with any cloud which may come over us; he will bring us safely through.

6. The apostles kept the vision close, and told no man in those days, as Jesus had commanded them. The relation would meet with readier credence after his resurrection, for which time it was reserved.

37. ¶ [a] And it came to pass, that on the next day, when they were come down from the hill, much people met him. 38. And, behold, a man of the company cried out, saying, Master, [b] I beseech thee, look upon my son; for he is mine only child. 39. And, lo, [c] a spirit taketh him and he suddenly crieth out; and it teareth him that he foameth again, and, bruising him, hardly departeth from him. 40. And I besought thy disciples to cast him out; and [d] they could not. 41. And Jesus answering said, O [e] faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you, and suffer you? [f] Bring thy son hither. 42. And as he was yet a coming, [g] the devil threw him down, and tare him. And Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit, and healed the child, and delivered him again to his father.

a Mat. 17. 14—21. Mark 9. 14—29.
b Ch. 7. 8. & 8. 41. John 4. 47, 49. Mark 2. 3. & 6. 56. & 8. 22. & 10. 14. & 7. 26.
c 1 Pet. 5. 8. John 8. 44. Mat. 15. 22. Mark 9. 18. 20, 22, 26.
d 1 Kin. 4. 31. Mat. 17. 16. & 13. 58.
e Mat. 17. 16 & 6. 30. & 8. 26. & 14. 31. & 16. 8. & 13. 58. Heb. 3. 19. & 4. 2.
f Mark 10. 14. Mat. 11. 28. Prov. 8. 17. ch. 18. 27. Heb. 7. 25. Gen. 18. 14. Jer. 32. 17, 27
g Mark 9. 20. & 18. 22, 26. & 1. 26. see ver. 39. Gen. 3. 15. 1 Pet. 5. 8. Rev. 12. 12.

Verses 37—42. It seems that Jesus and his three disciples continued all night on the mountain. The next day, descending to the multitude, he found his presence greatly needed. The people eagerly ran to him, and the father of a poor lunatic child earnestly besought that help from him, which his disciples had in vain attempted to give. The case was very afflictive: he was an only child; and so fearfully torn by the malicious spirit. What a mercy we are not left to his power; what an invaluable privilege that we have the almighty Jesus near, to whom we can apply, and who is able to save to the uttermost. Rebuking the unbelief of that perverse generation, particularly of the Scribes and Pharisees, who began to insult over the disciples, he gives them a convincing proof that his arm is not shortened, nor his power abated. With a word the raging devil is dispossessed, and the child is delivered to his father perfectly cured.

43. ¶ [h] And they were all amazed at the mighty power of God. But, while they wondered every one at all things which Jesus did, he said unto his disciples, 44. [i] Let these sayings sink down into your ears: for the Son of man shall be delivered into the hands of men. 45. [k] But they understood not this saying, and it was hid from them that they perceived it not: and they feared to ask him of that saying. 46. ¶ [l] Then there arose a reasoning among them, which of them should be greatest. 47. And Jesus, [m] perceiving the thought of their heart, took [n] a child, and set him by him, 48. And said unto them, [o] Whosoever shall receive this child in my name receiveth me; and whosoever shall receive me receiveth him that sent me: for he that is least among you all, the same shall be great. 49. ¶ [p] And John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us. 50. And Jesus said unto him, [q] Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is for us.

h Ch. 4. 36. & 7. 9, 26. & 7. 16. & 8. 25.
i Mat. 17. 22, 23. & 16. 21. & 20. 18, 19, 28. & 26. 2. & 21. 38, 39. ch. 18. 31. & 24. 6, 26. ver. 22. John 2. 19. & 3. 14. & 10. 18. & 12. 32, 33. & 19. 11. Acts 2. 23. & 4. 27, 28. ch. xxii, xxiii.
k Ch. 5. 20. & 18. 34. Is. 42. 19, 20. John 12. 16. & 16. 16—18. & 12. 16. & 14. 5, 8, 22. Mark 9. 32.
l Ch. 22. 24—30. Mat. 18. 1—6. Mark 9. 33—37.
m Ps. 139. 1—4. & 7. 9. Jer. 17. 10. Heb 4. 13. John 21. 17. Rev. 2. 23.
n Mark 10. 14. Ps. 34. 11. & 45. 10. Prov. 8. 17.
o Mat. 18. 5. & 10. 40—42. & 25. 40, 45. ch. 10. 16. John 10. 30. & 5. 22, 23. & 12. 44. & 13. 20. & 14. 21. 1 Thes. 4. 8.
p Mark 9. 38.—40. ch. 11. 19. Num. 11. 27, 28. Job 5. 2. Eccl. 4. 4. Gal. 5. 26.
q 1 Cor. 12. 3. ch. 9. 50. & 11. 23. Mat. 12. 30. Phil. 1. 18. Num. 11. 29.

Verses 43—50. The words of the Lord are great, and worthy our admiration.

1. This miracle filled the people with amazement at the mighty power of God. His hand herein evidently appeared. Is any soul recovered from Satan's power, much more may we say, This is the finger of God.

2. Christ informs the disciples of his approaching sufferings They were very backward to receive what was so contrary to their ideas of the Messiah's kingdom, and so destructive of the ambitious hopes they had entertained. Therefore he prefaces his discourse with a solemn warning of them deeply to consider and carefully to remember what he said; but they understood not his meaning, blinded by their prejudices, and afraid to ask him, lest they should be reproached with their dulness, or meet the same reproof as Peter had before received, if they presumed to raise objections. Note, The plainest truths, when we are under the power of prejudice, are mistaken or perverted.

3. All that they heard had no effect upon them to cure their aspiring views. They disputed among themselves, as they travelled, who should have the first post of honour in that temporal kingdom which they expected. Jesus knew the subject of their reasoning, and, by a most apposite emblem of a little child, teaches them the only spirit and temper which would make a soul truly great in the eyes of God. So meek, so lowly, so free from ambition, envy and malice, should they be; delighting in and receiving with warmest affection, all who showed such a childlike temper; and every kindness shown to such persons, he tells them, he would receive as done to himself: yea, God the Father would regard it with highest approbation, and reward them. Note, (1.) Jesus is the searcher of our hearts, our hearts are known to him; we need keep a strict guard over them. (2.) Nothing is more contrary to the spirit of a disciple of the lowly Jesus, than the affectation of earthly grandeur and the pride of life.

4. Christ checks the narrow party spirit which appeared in John and others of his disciples. They had forbade one whom he saw casting out devils in the name of Jesus, because he followed not with them; and for this probably expected his Master's approbation: but Christ said, Forbid him not; for he that is not against us is for us. Though he may not join us, if he concurs in carrying on the same design, he is to be encouraged rather than silenced. Note, Though others follow not exactly our mode of worship, or refuse to join in our communion, let us not therefore stamp them as heretical or schismatic, and oppress or silence them. Do they labour to pull down Satan's kingdom, and spread the savour of the Redeemer's name? then, however Christ is preached, it becomes us therein to rejoice.

r Mark 16. 19. Acts 1. 2. John 13. 1. & 17. 11, 13. & 16. 5, 28. & 14. 2, 3. Heb. 1. 3.

* Or, as the time of his removal approached.

s Ezek. 4. 3. Acts 21. 13. Phil. 3. 14.

t Mat. 10. 5. John 4. 4—42. Ezra iv, v. Neh. iv, vi.

u John 4. 4, 9.

x See ver. 28. Mark 10. 35—37.

y 2 Kin. 1. 10—12. 2 Sam. 21. 2. Gal. 4. 17, 18.

z Prov. 9. 8. & 27. 5. Mat. 16. 23.

a Mat. 26. 35. Rom. 10. 2. Jam. 3. 14—16.

b John 3. 17, 18. & 12. 47. Mat. 1. 21. & 20. 28. 1 Tim. 1. 15. ch. 19. 10. Heb. 7. 25.

51. And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be [r] received up, * he [s] stedfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem, 52. And sent messengers before his face: and they went, and entered into a village of the [t] Samaritans, to make ready for him. 53. And [u] they did not receive him, because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem. 54. And when his disciples [x] James and John saw this, they said, Lord, wilt thou that [y] we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did? 55. But he turned, [z] and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not [a] what manner of spirit ye are of. 56. For the Son of man [b] is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. And they went to another village.

Verses 51—56. Nothing is more contrary to the spirit of Christianity, which breathes universal love, than the fury of bigotry and the flames of persecution. We have here,

1. Our Lord steadfastly setting his face to Jerusalem, which was shortly to be the scene of his sufferings. The time fixed in the divine decree was come, when he should go up from Galilee, to return thither no more till after his resurrection; or this may refer to his ascension, when he should be received up into glory; and, knowing what sorrows awaited him, with unshaken courage and confidence he went forth to meet them. Note, (1.) When sufferings for Christ's sake stand in the way of duty, like him we should steadfastly set our face to meet them, and neither fail nor be discouraged. (2.) It is a comfort to look forward to the day when all our present troubles shall have an end, and we shall be received up to the place where Jesus is gone before.

2. As Samaria lay in his way, he sent some of his disciples forward to prepare some refreshment in one of the villages, that he might not be delayed in his journey. But as there was the most deadly feud between the Jews and Samaritans about the proper place for worship, each preferring their own, when they perceived that Christ and his disciples were bent for Jerusalem, probably to celebrate the feast of tabernacles there, they were incensed against him for thus preferring the temple in mount Zion to theirs on mount Gerizim, and therefore refused to grant him or his followers any entertainment among them. Note, If we are treated with rudeness and incivility, our Master was thus used before us.

3. John and James, fired at this indignity put on their Master, would instantly, with their Lord's permission, have poured vengeance on the place, consuming them with fire from heaven as Elias did, 2 Kings i. 9—12. They knew if Christ gave them leave one word would complete the overthrow of the city, and make it as Sodom and Gomorrah. But he rebukes their fiery spirit, and said, Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. They seemed to be actuated by zeal for his glory, but really were under the influence of pride, passion, and revenge. How different from that spirit of peace, love, patience, and forbearance, which his gospel breathed! for the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, by making his enemies monuments of vengeance, but to save them; not only by miracles of healing to cure their bodies, but by all meekness and long-suffering, and every mild and endearing method of grace to work upon their hearts, and melt them with these coals of love heaped upon them. Note, (1.) Even good men are sometimes carried away, and do not see the malignity and selfish passions which lurk under the guise of zeal for God. (2.) The examples of former saints are not placed as precedents, unless the cases be parallel, and we have the same warrant and authority under which they acted. (3.) The religion of Jesus is never to be propagated by fire and sword, but by means of persuasion, and every work and labour of love. Force may make men hypocrites; choice alone can make them Christians.

4. Christ hereupon patiently put up the affront, and quietly went with his disciples to another village, where they met a more hospitable reception. Note, To conquer our own spirit is a greater victory than to lay our bitterest enemy at our feet.

57. ¶ [c] And it came to pass, that, as they went in the way, a certain man said unto him, Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest. 58. And Jesus said unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests, [d] but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head. 59. And he said unto another, [e] Follow me. But he said, [f] Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father. 60. Jesus said unto him, [g] Let the dead bury their dead; [h] but go thou and preach the kingdom of God. 61. And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but [i] let me first go bid them farewell who are at home at my house. 62. And Jesus said unto him, [k] No man having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

c Mat. 8. 19—22. & 13. 20—22. John 6. 26. 1 Tim. 6. 3. Exod. 19. 8. & 24. 3.

d Mat. 8. 20. 2 Cor. 8. 9. Ps. 22. 6. & 109. 22. & 40. 17. & 69. 29. Phil. 2. 7, 8. Mat. 11. 29.

e Mat. 4. 19, 21. & 16. 24. & 9. 9.

f Mat. 8. 21. Heg. 1. 2 with 1 Kin. 19. 20. ch. 4. 22. & 19. 29.

g Mat. 8. 22. ch. 15. 32. Eph. 2. 1. 1 Tim. 5. 6. Lev. 21. 10—12. Num. 6. 6, 7.

h 2 Tim. 4. 2. Mark 16. 15. ver. 2. 1 Cor. 15. 10.

i 1 Kin. 19. 20. Mat. 22. 5. ch. 14. 20, 26. John 21. 16.

k Phil. 3. 14. Heb. 10. 38. 2 Tim. 4. 10. & 1. 15. Heb. 6. 8. 2 Pet. 2. 20—22. 1 John 2. 19.

Verses 57—62. They who would follow Christ must count the cost, and be ready without hesitation, to part with all for his sake We have here,

1. The offer of one who, expecting the Messiah was about to set up his kingdom, professes his zeal to serve him, in hopes he shall be well rewarded for it. But Christ undeceives him. He would meet with none of the honours he expected, and innumerable hardships of which he seemed not to be aware. The Son of man, so far from providing for his followers, was more destitute than the foxes of the desert or the fowls of heaven, having neither house nor home. So poor, for our sakes, he became, to teach us contentment in the lowest station of life; never to aspire at this world's greatness; patiently to submit to every want we may be called to endure; to expect tribulations; and look for no rest below, till the day comes that we shall rest in the dust, and then enter into our kingdom.

2. Another called to follow Christ, wanted to make excuse, and solicits a delay, pretending piety towards an aged parent, and desiring to perform the last offices to him before he commenced Christ's constant follower. But Christ denies his request: a more urgent duty lay upon him: there were enough dead sinners to bury the dead corpse; whilst he as a living soul, was needed to preach the everlasting gospel. Note, (1.) Delays are dangerous: many a soul hath been lost by plausible excuses for withdrawing from present duty, and putting off the concerns of eternity to a more convenient season. (2.) Religion teaches us to show piety at home, and to requite our parents; but, if the dearest relations in life would divert us from the service of Jesus and his gospel, then we must leave father and mother to follow the Master's call, and show our obedience to his commands.

3. A third person makes a voluntary tender of his service to Christ, and only begs that he may first bid adieu to his friends, and settle his worldly affairs. But Christ, who saw that his heart was entangled with worldly things, lets him know the impossibility of uniting the incompatible services of God and Mammon. No man, having laid his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God. Whilst he hankers after the world, and parts from it with reluctance, he will not heartily discharge the gospel ministry. Note, (1.) Worldly things are the most dangerous snares to draw the heart from Christ: even those that we may lawfully mind are apt to engage unlawful and inordinate affections after them. (2.) When we have once set our faces heavenward, let us never look back. Remember Lot's wife.

CHAP. X.—ANNO DOMINI, 32.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's commission to the seventy disciples, ver. 1—16. 2. The reports which the seventy disciples made to their Master, of the success of their negotiation, and his discourse thereon, ver. 17—24. 3. Christ's discourse with a lawyer concerning the way to heaven, and the instructions Christ gave him by a parable to look upon every one as his neighbour, ver. 25—37. 4. Christ's entertainment at Martha's house, the reproof he gave to her for her care about the world, and his commendation of Mary for her care about her soul, ver. 38—42.

1. AFTER [a] these things the Lord appointed other [b] seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place whither he himself would come. 2. Therefore said he unto them, [c] The harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few: pray ye therefore the [d] Lord of the harvest that [e] he would send forth labourers into his harvest. 3. [f] Go your ways: [g] behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves. 4. [h] Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes: and salute no man by the way. 5. [i] And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house. 6. And if the son of peace be there, your peace shall rest upon it: if not, it shall turn to you again. 7. [k] And in the same house remain, eating and drinking such things as they give: for the labourer is worthy of his hire. [l] Go not from house to house. 8. And into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you, eat such things as are set before you: 9. And [m] heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, [n] The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. 10. But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say, 11. [o] Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you: [p] notwithstanding, be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. 12. But I say unto you, that [q] it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city. 13. ¶ [r] Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works had been done in Tyre and Sidon which have been done in you, they had a great while ago [s] repented, sitting in sackcloth and ashes. 14. [t] But it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the judgment than for you. 15. And thou Capernaum, [u] which art exalted to heaven, shall be thrust down to hell. 16. [x] He that heareth you heareth me; and he that despiseth you despiseth me; and he that despiseth me despiseth him that sent me.

a Mat. 10. 1. Mark 6. 2.
b Exod. 1. 5. Num. 11. 16. Mark 6. 7. Mat. 10. 6. c Mat. 9. 37, 38. John 4. 35. Zech. 10. 2. & 11. 4, 7, 11. Acts 16. 9, 10. & 18. 10. d 1 Cor. 12. 28. Acts 20. 28. & 13. 2. & 16. 6, 7.
e Jer. 3. 15. Eph. 4. 11—13. Acts ii—xix. 2 Thes. 3. 1.
f Mat. 10. 5—42. Mark 6. 7—13. ch. 9. 1—6.
g Mat. 10. 16. & 7. 15. Acts 20. 29, 30. Song 2. 15. Ezek. 2. 3.
h Mat. 10. 9, 10. Mark 6. 8. ch. 9. 3. Mat. 6. 31. Phil. 4. 6. 2 Tim. 4. 2. 2 Kin. 4. 29.
i Mat. 10. 11, 12. 1 Sam. 25. 6. Acts 13. 46. Ps. 35. 13. Is. 55. 11. 2 Cor. 2. 16.
k Mat. 10. 10, 11. 1 Cor. 10. 27. & 4—17. Gal. 6. 6—9. 1 Tim. 5. 18. Lev. 19. 13. Deut. 24. 14. & 25. 4.
l Phil. 4. 8. Eph. 5. 15. ch. 9. 4. Mark 6. 8.
m Ch. 9. 1. John 14. 12.
n Mat. 3. 2. & 4. 17. Tit. 2. 11. Rom. 10. 8. Is. 9. 7. & 2. 2—4. Dan. 2. 44.
o Mat. 10. 14. Mark 6. 11. ch. 9. 5. Acts 13. 51. & 18. 6. & 20. 26. & 22. 18. Neh. 5. 13. p Acts 2. 36. & 3. 26. Rom. 10. 8. Tit. 2. 11. ver. 9.
q Mark 6. 11. Mat. 10. 15. & 11. 20—24. John 15. 22—24. Heb. 6. 4—8. & 10. 26—31. 1. Thes. 2. 16.
r Mat. 11. 20—24. Ezek. 3. 6, 7. with Is. xxiii. Ezek. xxvi—xxviii.
s 1 Kin. 21. 27, 29. Jon. 3. 10. t Ch. 12. 47, 48. Amos 3. 2. Heb. 6. 4—8. & 10. 26—31. 2 Pet. 2. 20—22.
u Gen. 11. 4. Deut. 1. 28. Is. 14. 13. Ezek. 26. 20. & 32. 18, 23. Jer. 51. 53. Lam. 4. 6. Mat. 11. 23, 24. ch. 12. 48. x Ch. 9. 48. Mat. 10. 40. & 18. 5. Exod. 16. 18. Num. 14. 2, 11, 17. & 16. 11. Mark 9. 37. John 5. 22, 23. & 12. 44. & 13. 20. & 14. 21. 1 Thes. 4. 8.

Verses 1—16. The harvest was plenteous, but hitherto the labourers had been few. We have here seventy disciples ordained to the ministry, invested with miraculous powers, and sent as harbingers to prepare the way of Christ in all the adjacent country, whither he was preparing to go. Their number corresponds with the elders of Israel on whom the Spirit of the Lord rested in the wilderness; and they were sent two and two for their mutual comfort and encouragement.

1. They must address themselves in prayer to God for success upon their own labours, and that he will raise up and qualify many more to go forth and preach the gospel. And this must be still the constant subject of our requests to God: the more we look round on the world, and see immortal souls perishing for lack of knowledge, the more zealously should we labour, and the more fervently pray that the Lord would send forth labourers into his harvest.

2. He tells them what they may expect to meet. Though they were ever so harmless and inoffensive, and their discourses breathed nothing but peace and love, they would have enemies to encounter fierce and savage as wolves: but he who sent them would afford them protection, and minister strength and courage to them in their work. And, if God be with us, we need not fear who are against us.

3. He orders them to make no provision for their journey, but trust on providence for the supply of their wants: and, as their work required despatch, they must not lose any time in unnecessary discourse or civilities with any person whom they met. Not that Christ enjoined rudeness and incivility; but there was now no time for compliments, when the service was urgent.

4. Wherever they entered into a house, and were hospitably received, there he orders them to say, Peace be to this house, praying that all blessings, spiritual, temporal, and eternal, might rest upon those who dwelt there. And if the son of peace be there, any into whose hearts the Son of God hath put a desire to hear and receive the gospel of peace, then an answer of peace should be given to their prayers, your peace shall rest upon it; but if not, if there be no chosen vessels in the family, whose hearts are open to embrace the truth, it shall return unto you again, and your prayers for them shall be answered in blessings on your own souls. Note, (1.) They who preach the gospel of peace cannot but fervently desire, for all those among whom they minister, that God would speak peace by them to the consciences of their hearers. (2.) Some receive, but more reject, our preaching and prayers; yet even to those that perish our labours and prayers are not in vain: we are still a sweet savour of Christ; and, though they reject the salvation we bring, Christ will approve and reward our fidelity.

5. In whatever house they were first received, there they must abide; thankfully and cheerfully making use of the provision set before them, and not doubting but their labours would procure them that welcome they deserved. They must be content with the meanest fare, and never affecting nicety, change their lodgings for better accommodations, lest they should incur the suspicion of fickleness, or flesh-pleasers. Note, (1.) Christ's ministers have a right to a maintenance. (2.) When the love of souls, not of filthy lucre, draws men to labour in the gospel, they will learn in whatsoever state they are, therewith to be content, and put up with the poorest accommodations.

6. He directs them what must be the subject of their preaching. They must say, The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you; the kingdom of the Messiah, with all its inestimable blessings and privileges, is now ready to appear: prepare to receive him; and he empowers them to heal the sick, in confirmation of their preaching, as well as in return for the kind civilities which they received. Note, Nothing is ever lost by kindness shown to Jesus and his servants.

7. In case their ministry is rejected, and they are driven from their work, they are to leave the devoted city, publicly declaring the doom ready to light upon the place, and shaking off the dust of their feet for a testimony against its inhabitants, assuring them of the nearness of the Messiah's kingdom, and the dreadful consequences which must unavoidably ensue from their obstinacy and impenitence. And in a day of judgment it shall be more tolerable for Sodom than for that city, because they have rejected greater means of grace than were vouchsafed to that abandoned city. Note, (1.) None sink under such aggravated guilt as those who despise and reject the gospel. (2.) The day is near when these despisers will wonder and perish.

8. On this occasion our Lord turns his discourse to those cities where such multitudes of his miracles had been wrought, and who notwithstanding continued impenitent. Chorazin, Bethsaida, have their fearful doom read. Had the most wicked cities of the Gentiles enjoyed their blessings and privileges, and calls to repentance, even Tyre and Sidon had long ago been brought into the dust of humiliation. Therefore the judgment of the heathen in the day of vengeance, shall be more tolerable than theirs; and Capernaum, exalted to heaven in privileges, shall sink as low in hell under the wrath of God, provoked by their hardened infidelity. Let the lands and places that enjoy the gospel light hear and tremble at the denunciations.

9. He encourages the seventy to go forth. They are his ambassadors: he will reckon the treatment they meet with as shown to himself. Those who heard and respected them he would regard, as if they showed this attention and kindness to his own person; whilst they who despised their persons, and rejected their ministry, insulted him, and put contempt on God who sent him. Note, Many ill use, slight, and contemn Christ's ministers, and treat them as mean and despicable; but they will shortly feel, to their cost, that the King of glory will fearfully avenge the insults shown to his ambassadors.

17. ¶ And the [y] seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name. 18. And he said unto them, I beheld [z] Satan as lightning fall from heaven. 17. Behold, [a] I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy: and nothing shall by any means hurt you. 20. Notwithstanding, in this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you; but rather rejoice because [b] your names are written in heaven.* 21. ¶ In that hour Jesus [c] rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, [d] Lord of heaven and earth, that thou [e] hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes: even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight. 22.† [f] All things are delivered to me of my Father: and no man knoweth who the Son is, but the Father; and who the Father is, but the Son, and he† to whom the Son will reveal him. 23. ¶ And he turned him unto his disciples, and said privately, [g] Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see: 24. For I tell you that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

[y] Ver. 9. ch. 9. 1. Rom. 16. 20. 1 John 3. 8.

[z] John 12. 31. & 16. 11. Heb. 2. 14. Rev. 12. 8, 9. & 20. 10. 1 John 3. 8.

[a] Ps. 91. 13. Is. 11. 8. Mark 16. 18. Acts 28. 5. Rom. 16. 20.

[b] Exod. 32. 32. Is. 4. 3. Heb. 12. 23. Dan. 12. 1. Phil. 4. 3. Rev. 13. 8. & 21. 27.

* Allusion is here made to the custom of writing in a register the names of the inhabitants of a district or city.

[c] Ch. 15. 6, 9, 24, 32. Is. 62. 5. Zeph. 3. 17.

[d] Ps. 24. 1. Is. 66. 1.

[e] See Mat. 11. 25. & 13. 13. Ps. 25. 8, 9, 14. Is. 29. 14. & 32. 4. & 44. 18. 1 Cor. 1. 19, 21. 26. & 2. 6, 7. 2 Cor. 3. 14. & 4. 3.

† Many ancient copies add these words: And turning to his disciples, he said.

[f] Mat. 11. 27. & 28. 18 Ps. 8. 8. Heb. 2. 8. John 1. 18. & 3. 35. & 5 27. & 6. 46. & 10 15. & 13. 3. & 14. 8, 9 & 17. 2. 1 Cor. 15. 27. Eph. 1. 21, 22. Phil. 2. 9—11.

[g] Mat. 13. 16, 17. & 16. 16, 17. ch. 2. 30. John 20. 29.

Verses 17—24. Having finished their ministry, we have here,

1. The return of the disciples to their Master, transported to find that even the devils were subject unto them, and ascribing the glory to him, in whose name they were enabled to work such stupendous miracles. Note, All our victories over Satan must be ascribed to the grace and power of the great Captain of our salvation, and in him we may and ought to rejoice greatly.

2. He received them very graciously.

(1.) He informs them it was no news to him that the devils were subject unto them. I saw, when I sent you forth to preach the gospel and work miracles, Satan falling as lightning from heaven; his power and kingdom began now to be shaken and totter; and this was the presage of his more irrecoverable ruin, when in the Gentile world the gospel should quickly spread, and, rooting up idolatry and spiritual darkness, turn the hearts of sinners from the power of Satan unto God.

(2.) He enlarges their powers, as the reward of their fidelity, and an encouragement to persevere. They shall tread upon serpents and scorpions unhurt; and the old serpent and his venomous associates, whether men or devils, should be bruised under their feet. And nothing shall by any means hurt you. Under almighty protection you may defy every danger. Note, They have nothing to fear who have Christ for their Master, and execute his commission.

(3.) He checks their joy on this singular distinction with which he endued them, and directs them to a nobler cause for it; rather rejoice that your names are written in heaven; else, though they had cast out devils, they might themselves finally perish, and become companions with them. It is not gifts, but graces, that evidence our adoption of God, which should afford us most joy. Note, (1.) God knoweth those that are his; their names are registered in the records of eternity. (2.) The eternal predestination of God is matter of most comfortable meditation to those who, by faith embracing the promises, feel in their hearts the working of God's Spirit sealing them unto the day of redemption.

(4.) Christ expresses his delight and thankfulness for the blessings conferred on those his poor disciples: and to this hour nothing rejoices the hearts of his people so greatly as beholding the progress of his gospel, the fall of Satan, and the conversion of men's souls. He said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, the great Disposer of all things, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes, leaving the proud scribes and doctors of the law under the darkness of pretended science, prejudiced against, and strangers to the mysteries of grace; whilst poor illiterate men, of low capacities, and contemptible in the eyes of the worldly wise, are put in trust with the gospel, and enlightened with the Spirit of truth. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight; such was the pleasure of infinite wisdom who sovereignly dispenses his gifts, the more to manifest his own glory. All things are delivered to me of my Father, all power and authority, all wisdom and grace to communicate to his chosen. In Jesus are all the treasures laid up, and out of his fulness we must receive. And no man knoweth who the Son is but the Father, and who the Father is but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him: the perfections of the divine nature are only fully known by the divine persons themselves; and we can only be acquainted with them, and their eternal purposes of infinite wisdom and grace, so far as the Son of God is pleased to reveal them to us.

(5.) Turning to his disciples, privately, he pronounces them truly blessed, favoured with a sight of the Lord's Christ, and enjoying the clearest discoveries of that kingdom of grace which the Messiah was now come to erect in the world. Prophets and kings in former ages desired in vain to see and hear what they, more highly favoured, saw and heard. Note, The distinguishing mercies we enjoy should excite our thankfulness, and quicken our diligence to improve them.

h Mat. 19. 16. & 22. 35. Mark 10. 17. & 12. 28.
Is. 8. 20. John 5. 39. Gal. 4. 21.
k Deut. 6. 5. & 10. 12. & 30. 6. Prov. i 23. 26. Mat. 22 37, 39. Mark 12. 30, 31. 1 Tim. 1. 5. 1 Cor. xiii. Lev. 19. 18. Rom. 13. 9. Gal. 5. 14. Jam. 2. 8. 1 John 3. 18.
l Lev. 18. 5. Ezek. 20. 11. Mat. 19. 17 Gal. 3. 12. Rom. 10 5. & 3. 19, 20. Neh. 9 29.
m Ch. 16. 15. & 18. 9—11. Rom. 10. 3. Mat. 5. 42. n Gen. 3. 1—6. John 8. 44. Eccl. 7. 29. Rom. 3. 23.
o Ps. 142. 4. Acts 4. 12. Jer. 3. 23, 24. Rom. 3. 19, 20. & 8. 3. & 9. 31, 32. & 10. 3. Gal. 3. 21, 22, & 4. 24. Heb. 10. 1, 2. & 7. 19. & 9. 9.

25. ¶ And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, h Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life? 26. He said unto him, i What is written in the law? how readest thou? 27. And he answering said, k Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself. 28. And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: l this do, and thou shalt live. 29. But he m willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, And who is my neighbour? 30. And Jesus answering, said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and n fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead. 31. ° And by chance there came down a certain priest that way: and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side. 32. And likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side.* 33. But a certain p Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he saw him, he had compassion on him, 34. And went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an q inn, and took care of him. 35. And on the morrow, when he departed, he took out two r pence, and gave them to s the host, and said unto him, Take care of him; and t whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee. 36. Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves? 37. And he said, u He that shewed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, x Go, and do thou likewise.

* More exactly, Likewise a Levite on the road, when he came near the place and saw him, passed by on the further side.

p Acts 10. 28. ch. 9. 52, 53. John 4. 9. & 8. 48 with Heb. 2. 17, 18. & 4. 15. Mat. 1. 21. & 18. 11. & 20. 28.
q Is. 11. 10. Prov. 9. 1—5. Mat. 16. 18. Heb. 12. 22—24.
r Fifteen pence sterling. Mat. 20. 2. s 1 Cor. 12. 28. & 4. 1, 2. Eph. 4. 11.
t 2 Cor. 3. 5. 1 Cor. 15. 58. 2 Tim. 4. 7, 8.
u Heb. 2. 10—16. 2 Cor. 8. 9. Mat. 20. 28. Eph. 5. 2. Rev. 1. 5, 6.
x Mat. 5. 42—48. Rom. 12. 17—21.

Verses 25—37. We have the same question proposed by one of the scribes as was put by the young ruler, Mark x. 17. not so much with the view to be informed, as with the intention to entangle our Lord in his talk.

1. In answer to his question Christ turns over to the law in which he fancied himself deeply conversant, and bids him say what he read there, as the way of obtaining the eternal life he sought: and when the scribe replied, the conditions there prescribed were the perfect love of God and our neighbour, Christ approves the answer, and assures him, Do this, and thou shalt live. Such perfection of obedience will entitle those who can plead it to the reward. But where, alas! is this to be found? The more we read the tenor of the covenant of works, the more, if our minds are enlightened, shall we be driven to despair of ourselves, conscious how far we have been from continuing in all things written in the book of the law to do them. But with this view had not the lawyer read. For,

2. He, willing to justify himself, as if he had kept the whole law, desired to know who was to be reckoned his neighbour; conceiting, probably, his justice and charity had been so extensive to the whole house of Israel, that he might justly claim the reward of perfect obedience.

Christ, by an apposite case in point, lets him see his ignorance of the divine law, and the defectiveness of his charity; correcting at the same time the corrupt notions of the Jewish teachers, who reckoned themselves not at all obliged to show the least kindness to those who were out of the pale of their communion. The story here represented is very beautiful and affecting.

1. A Jew, as he travelled from Jerusalem to Jericho, fell among thieves, with which the road was greatly infested, and these, not satisfied with having plundered and stripped him of his raiment, inhumanly wounded him, and departed, leaving him weltering in his blood, half dead, and ready to expire. This case may fitly represent the state of mankind, waylaid by Satan the great enemy of souls, robbed of the garments of innocence, wounded and dying in their sins, without power or strength to help themselves.

2. In this disastrous condition, in which the poor wounded traveller lay, by chance, so Providence ordered it, there came down a certain priest that way, whose office and character should have engaged him to exercise his humanity and compassion towards an object so pitiable, especially to one of his own nation and religion; but his unfeeling heart was steeled against his brother, and, turning to the other side of the road, he pursued his journey unconcerned. A Levite quickly followed, as callous to every humane sensation; he just came and looked on; and, not caring to be at the trouble or expense of providing for a dying man, he kept on his way, and left him to perish there. Hardhearted monsters! cries every tongue. But, alas! such Levites and priests are found in every age, who not only withhold their hand from relieving the wants of the miserable, but leave the more precious souls of men, unconcerned what becomes of them. Some suppose that these represent the law of Moses, from which no mercy is to be expected; it makes no provision for man a sinner, nor speaks one word of comfort to the guilty; but leaves the soul under a curse, which extends to eternal death.

3. A Samaritan, one of that despised and detested nation, travelling that way, saw the miserable object, and compassion instantly melted his heart. Without waiting to know of what country he was, he went to him, and pouring oil and wine into his wounds, he bound them carefully up, perhaps with the very linen garments he wore, and, gently setting him on his own beast, he carried him to the nearest inn, and saw every accommodation provided for him which the place could afford. And, on the morrow, having waited that night to see the poor patient well provided for, he gave the host, on parting, two-pence, about fifteen-pence of our money, with a charge to take all possible care of the wounded man, and engaged to defray, on his return, whatever expense might be farther incurred. A noble instance indeed of humanity and generosity. We cannot be at a loss to whom this character of the good Samaritan eminently belongs. Jesus is come down from heaven: he sees his people lying in their blood, helpless and desperate; his compassions are kindled towards them: he binds up the wounds of the guilty sinner's soul: his own blood is the healing balm he pours into them: he brings them into his church, where they are fed with the provision of his ordinances; he clothes them with his righteousness, revives them with the cordials of his love, and bears their charges through the inn of this world, supporting them with the riches of his grace; he commends them to the care of his ministers, and at his second coming will not fail to reward their care and diligence.

4. Christ proposes to the lawyer the question, Which of these was the neighbour to the wounded traveller? and the case was too clear to admit of hesitation; he could not but answer, He that showed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, Go, and do thou likewise. Think not you have kept the law, or even understood the extent of the command, before you feel the same compassionate spirit, the same readiness to relieve even a Samaritan, as he showed towards this Jew. An extent of charity to which he had been hitherto an utter stranger: and therefore his self-justification was but self-delusion.

38. ¶ Now it came to pass, as they y Bethany. John 11. 1. & 12. 1—3.
went, that he entered into [y] a certain z John 11. 1—45. & 12. 1—3. Mat. 26. 6, 7.
village: and a certain woman named [z] Martha received him into her house.
39. And she had a sister called Mary, a As was customary for disciples. Ch. 8. 35. Acts 22. 3. Deut. 33. 3. Prov. 8. 34. 1 Cor. 7. 32, &c. which also [a] sat at Jesus' feet, and heard b Mat. 8. 15. & 6. 31. Exod. 48. 18. Ps. 89. 21. his word. 40. But Martha was [b] cumbered about much serving, and came to him, and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone?
bid her therefore that she help me. 41.
And Jesus answered and said unto her,
c Ch. 21. 34. & 8. 14. Mat. 6. 26—34. Phil. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 7.
Martha, Martha, thou art [c] careful and troubled about many things: 42. But d Ps. 27. 4. & 73. 25. & 142. 5. John 3. 3, 5. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Gal. 6. 15. & 5. 6. Mat. 16. 16.
[d] one thing is needful: and Mary hath e Ps. 16. 5, 6. Is. 45. 17. & 55. 3. John 17. 3. Ps. 73. 24—26. & 142. 5. 1 John 5. 18 chosen that [e] good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

Verses 38—42. We have here,

1. The hospitable entertainment given to her blessed Lord by a good woman who lived at Bethany, named Martha. Though his character was obnoxious, and his retinue numerous and poor, yet she was not ashamed of owning her respect for him, and was happy to furnish him with the best her house afforded. A gracious heart makes an open hand. We should grudge no expense when Christ's cause demands our support.

2 Mary, the sister of Martha, sat at Jesus' feet, attentive to his divine instructions! and as, according to his usual custom, he began to discourse about the glad tidings of his salvation, she listened with eagerness to the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. Note, (1.) Ministers, not only in public, but from house to house, should delight to dispense the gospel-word. They are profitable visits when a gracious discourse seasons the entertainment. (2.) They who would be wise unto salvation must sit at Jesus' feet. We cannot hear his voice indeed: but in his blessed word he yet speaketh.

3. Martha, desirous to show her respect for her honoured guest, was very busy in providing the entertainment. Her diligence was commendable; but she was too much taken up, cumbered with much serving; she wanted to make the feast splendid, and was so distracted with these worldly engagements, that she could not find leisure to attend the heavenly discourse of the Redeemer. Note, (1.) Family cares inordinately engaging the mind are a great snare to our souls. (2.) Christ's servants should not cumber themselves with much serving. They who eat and drink to the glory of God will not affect danties.

4. Displeased that Mary came not to her assistance, Martha brings her complaint to Christ: Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? She seems not only to blame Mary's backwardness to assist her, but to reflect upon Jesus, that he should suffer her to sit there, when she wanted her help in the family: and therefore suggests that it was but reasonable, that he should bid her go and assist in providing for the guests. Note, (1.) They who have their own hearts much set upon the world are ready to find fault with those as negligent who show not the same anxiety after it. (2.) Too many, like Martha, are apt to think, that the exercises of religion encroach upon the duties of our station; but, usually speaking, the fault is, as here, far on the other side.

5. Christ reproves her inordinate carefulness. Martha, Martha; he speaks with earnestness and pity, thou art careful and troubled about many things: giving herself unnecessary anxiety, when Christ required no such sumptuous entertainment. But one thing is needful, to know Christ and partake of his salvation. Compared with this, every thing beside is unimportant; therefore should this engage our first and chief concern: and we are highly culpable when other things divert us from attending to the interests of our immortal souls. Note, (1.) Faithful rebukes are the truest marks of genuine love. (2.) They who are full of inordinate care are sure to involve themselves in many troubles. (3.) Christ's disciples have need deeply to remember this reproof and caution; for Martha's anxiety is a besetting evil.

6. Instead of blaming Mary, as her sister expected, Christ commends her choice, and approves her conduct; She hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken from her. Note, (1.) However serious godliness may provoke the censures of the luke warm, Jesus will commend what they condemn. (2.) They who have chosen Christ as their portion, and his word as their rule, have wisely determined, and shall never repent of their choice. (3.) If we have by faith embraced the Saviour, and truly been made partakers of his grace, then we have an interest in that eternal blessedness, of which none of the powers of earth or hell can deprive us.

CHAP. XI.—ANNO DOMINI, 32.

In this chapter, 1. Christ teacheth his disciples to pray, ver. 1—13. 2. He fully answereth the blasphemous imputation of the Pharisees, ver. 14—26. 3. He shows the honour of obedient disciples to be greater than that of his own mother, ver. 27 28. 4. He upbraids the men of that generation for their infidelity and obstinacy, ver. 29—36. 5. He severely reproves the Pharisees and lawyers for their hypocrisy, pride, and their oppressing the consciences of those that submitted to them, and their hating and persecuting those that witnessed against their wickedness, ver. 37—54.

1. AND it came to pass, that, as he was [a] praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, [b] Lord, [c] teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples. 2. And he said unto them, When ye pray, [d] say, [e] Our Father which art in heaven, [f] hallowed be thy name. [g] Thy kingdom come. [h] Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth. 3. [i] Give us * day by day our daily bread. 4. [k] And forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us. And [l] lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil. 5. And he said unto them, [m] Which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight, and say unto him, Friend, lend me three loaves; 6. For a friend of mine † in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him: 7. And he from within shall answer and say, Trouble me not: the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed; I cannot rise and give thee. 8. I say unto you, though he will not rise and give him, because he is his friend, yet because of his [n] importunity he will rise and give him as many as he needeth. 9. [o] And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. 10. For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall he opened. 11. [p] If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent? 12. Or if he shall ask an egg, will he offer him a scorpion? 13. [q] If ye then being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children; how much more shall your [r] heavenly Father [s] give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?

a Ps. 109. 4. Heb. 5 7. ch. 6. 12. & 9. 28.
b John 13. 13. & 20. 28. Phil. 3. 8.
c Rom. 8. 26. 2 Cor. 3. 5. Ps. 119. 26, 27, &c. d Hos. 14. 2, 3. Mat. 6. 9—13.
e Mat. 6. 9. Is. 63. 16. & 57. 15. & 66. 1. Ps. 8. 1. & 11. 4. & 115. 3. Heb. 8. 1.
f Ps. 8. 1, 9. & 72. 17—19. & 113. 2—5. & cxlv—cl, cv, cvii.
g Mat. 4. 17. & 3. 2. ch. 9. 2. & 10. 9, 11. Is. 2. 2, 5. & liv, lx. & 9. 6. 7. Mat. 28. 18. & 16. 18.
h Mat. 26. 42. Acts 21. 14. 2 Thes. 3. 1. 2 Sam. 7. 25. Ps. 119. 5. & 103. 20.
i Prov. 30. 8. 1 Tim. 6. 8. John 6. 33. Is. 33. 16.
* Or for the day.
k Is. 1. 18. & 43. 25. & 44. 22. Mic. 7. 18, 19. Hos. 14. 2. Mat. 6. 12, 14. & 18. 35. Eph. 4. 31, 32.
l Mat. 26. 41. John 17. 15. 1 Cor. 10. 13. 2 Cor. 12. 7, 8. 1 Pet. 5. 8. Rev. 3. 10.
m Ch. 18. 1—8.
† Or out of his way.
n Gr. impudence. Gen. 32. 26. Mat. 15. 23—28. ch. 8. 1—8. Rom. 15. 30. 2 Cor. 12. 7, 8.
o Mat. 7. 7—11. & 21. 22. & 17. 21. Gen. 32. 26—29. Ps 118. 5. & 123. 2. Is. 45. 11. & 62. 1, 7. Mark 11. 24. John 14. 13. & 15. 7. & 16. 23, 24. 2 Cor. 12. 8. Heb. 4. 16. Jam. 1. 5, 6. & 5. 16—18. 1 John 3. 22. & 5. 14, 15. Ps. 34. 15, 17. p Mat. 7. 9, 10. Is. 49. 15.
q Is. 49. 15. Heb. 12. 10. Mat. 7. 11.
r Ver. 2. Is. 63. 16. & 66. 1. s Prov. 1. 23. Is. 44. 3, 4. Ezek. 36. 27. Joel 2. 28.

Verses 1—13. Prayer is the great instituted means of maintaining communion with God: it is as the breath of every spiritually living soul. There can be no surer proof of our being dead in trespasses and sins than the habitual neglect of it. The prayerless lives without God, and must die without hope. Our Lord himself was much in prayer, to set us an example: and his disciples, desirous to follow him, are represented here as preferring their request to him, that he would instruct them both concerning the matter and manner of their prayers, and give them a form or directory, as John had done for his disciples. Note, Unless the Lord teach us to pray, and pour out upon us the spirit of prayer and supplication, we can offer no acceptable service.

1. Christ condescends to grant their request, and gives them the following short but most comprehensive form of prayer:

Our Father which art in heaven: thou great Creator and universal Lord, whose throne is in the heavens, and to whom ten thousand times ten thousand angels and archangels pay their ceaseless adorations; to thee do we sinful worms and dust of the earth address our prayer, regarding thee not only as our common Parent and Maker of all things, but in the more endeared relation of our reconciled God and Father in Jesus Christ. Hallowed be thy name: may I and every other creature exalt thy glory; and, according to the displays of thy glorious perfections made in thy works and word, may we ever admire, adore, honour, love, and serve thee. Thy kingdom come: erect the throne of thy grace in our hearts; O visit us with thy salvation; give us the light of thy truth, and the effectual influences of thy Spirit, that we may become thy faithful subjects and servants. Send forth thy gospel into the world: accompany it with thy mighty power, and make it effectual to the conversion of sinners' souls; build us up together in thy faith, fear, and love, and prepare us daily, in the exercise of all holy conversation and godliness, for thy eternal presence; then come and take us to thy throne above, where, day and night for ever, we may serve thee in thy temple, and go out no more. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth: may we emulate the lively, constant, universal obedience paid by the celestial hosts. Let thy revealed word be our invariable rule; and may we, without partiality and without hypocrisy, desire to know, and with delight fulfil, what thou dost command: and in every dispensation of thy providence may our spirits be resigned, submissive, satisfied, content to wait thy leisure, and meekly casting our care upon thee. Give us day by day our daily bread: on thee, O Lord, we depend for the needful provision of our bodies during the days of our pilgrimage; let us, as thy children, be supplied by thy bounty: enable us to live in a constant dependence upon thee, content with the portion thou art pleased to assign us, and confident thou wilt not leave us to want any manner of thing which is good for us: and, whilst our bodies are fed by thy providence, let our souls be nourished with the better bread of life which cometh down from heaven. And forgive us our sins, many, great, and aggravated as they have been: blot them out through the Redeemer's blood, speak peace and pardon to our guilty souls, and glorify thyself in mercy. And we are emboldened, Lord, to hope for an answer of peace; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us; readily passing by their offences and trespasses against us, as we hope to be forgiven ourselves, and pleading thy promise, that, when we are enabled thus to do, we shall assuredly find mercy with thee our most highly and justly offended God. Remember therefore the word wherein thou hast caused us to put our trust

And lead us not into temptation; keep us from every snare laid for our souls, and suffer us not to fall under the trials we may be called to endure: but deliver us from evil, from the evil one, the evil world, and that greatest enemy our own evil hearts, deceitful above all things and desperately wicked. Save us with thine uttermost salvation, and bring us at last to that eternal kingdom where no temptation nor evil can enter.

2. Christ directs them as to the manner of their prayers: to be fervent, persevering, and importunate; the effects of which he instances in the case of a man, who having a sudden visit from a friend on his journey, and nothing for him to eat, should run to his neighbour's house at midnight, and desire to borrow three loaves. At that unseasonable hour his neighbour would be apt to make many excuses, and endeavour to put him off, rather than disturb his family; yet, if he is very importunate, that will usually prevail, and, if but to be rid of his importunity, he will lend him what he asks. Now if one, who shows so much reluctance to yield, is overcome by entreaty, much more will our gracious God, who is ever more willing to hear than we to pray, and wont to give more than we desire or deserve, answer the supplications of his people, if they faint not. Let them ask in faith, nothing doubting; let them seek with diligence unwearied; let them knock aloud with cries fervent and reiterated; and then they will surely find an answer of peace; their prayers shall be heard, their requests granted, and the door of mercy be opened.

3. Our Lord suggests yet farther encouragement to prayer from the consideration of our relation to God as our father. If the bowels of earthly parents yearn over their children's wants, and none are found so inhuman as, instead of bread and meat which they crave, to give them things noxious and poisonous. If men, by nature sinful, feel such tenderness towards their offspring, how infinitely surpassing are the compassions of our Father in heaven; and, as his power is equal to his love, much more will he supply all the spiritual necessities of our souls, and give his Holy Spirit, which comprises all blessedness, to them that ask him.

14. ¶ [t] And he was casting out a devil, and it was dumb. And it came to pass, when the devil was gone out, the dumb spake; and the people wondered. 15. But some of them said, [u] He casteth out devils through Beelzebub the chief of the devils. 16. And others, [x] tempting him, sought of him a sign from heaven. 17. But he, [y] knowing their thoughts, said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and a house divided against a house falleth. 18. If Satan also be divided against himself, how shall his kingdom stand? because ye say that I cast out devils through [z] Beelzebub. 19. And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do [a] your sons cast them out? [b] therefore shall they be your judges. 20. But if I with the [c] finger of God cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you. 21. When a [d] strong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace: 22. But when [e] a stronger than he * shall [f] come upon him, and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armour wherein he trusted, and divideth his spoils. 23. [g] He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth. 24. [h] When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest; and finding none, he saith, I will return unto my house whence I came out. 25. And when he cometh, [i] he findeth it swept and garnished. 26. [k] Then goeth he and taketh to him seven other spirits more wicked than himself; and they enter in, and dwell there: and the last state of that man is worse than the first.

t Mat. 9. 32—34. & 12. 22—30.
u Mat. 9. 34. & 10. 25. & 12. 24. Mark 3. 22—30. John 7. 30. & 8. 48, 52. & 10. 20.
x Mat. 12. 38. & 16. 1. Mark 8. 11. ver. 29. 1 Cor. 1. 22. Heb. 3. 9, 19.
y Mat. 9. 4. & 12. 25. Mark 3. 24. John 2. 25. Rev. 2. 23.
z Gr. Beelzebul. As ver. 15, 19, &c. a Ch. 9. 49. Mark 9. 38.
b Ch. 19. 22. 2 Sam. 1. 16. Job 15. 6. c Mat. 12. 28. Exod. 8. 19. Dan. 2. 44. & 4. 34. & 7. 14, 22. ch. 1. 35, 38. Heb. 12. 28.
d 1 Pet. 5. 8. Eph. 6. 12. & 2. 2. Is. 49. 24, 25. Mat. 12. 29. Mark 3. 27.
e Is. 9. 6. & 53. 1. Heb. 7. 25. Mat. 28. 18.
f Gen. 3. 15. Is. 33. 12. & 49. 24—26. & 53. 1—4. Col. 2. 15. 1 John 3. 8.
* Or, he who is stronger.
g Mat. 12. 30. Rev. 3. 15, 16. with ch. 9. 50.
h Mat. 12. 43—45. Acts 8. 13. Job 1. 7. & 2. 2. 1 Pet. 5. 8. Is. 35. 1. ch. 4. 5, 6. Acts 17. 30, 31. Eph. 2. 2.
i Ps. 81. 11, 12. Gal. 5. 19—21. Eph. 2. 1—3. Tit. 3. 3. 2 Pet. 2. 12—19. k Ps. 81. 12. Is. 66. 3, 4. Heb. 6. 4—8. & 10. 26—31. 2 Pet. 2. 20—22. John 5. 14.

Verses 14—26. The most amazing manifestations of Christ's power and glory, and his noble acts of beneficence towards men's bodies and souls, could not prevent the envenomed tongue of malice from casting upon him the most malignant aspersions. We have here,

1. The wicked inference drawn by the Pharisees, on seeing a most astonishing instance of Christ's power in the dispossessing a devil from a man that was dumb, who immediately recovered his speech to the amazement of the spectators. To counteract the effects of this miraculous cure among the people, some of them, who could not deny the fact, suggested that it was performed by a confederacy between Jesus and the prince of the devils: whilst others challenged him to give a sign from heaven of his divine mission, as if all besides was unsatisfactory. So perverse and absurd are usually the objections of obstinate infidelity.

2. Christ knew their thoughts, and what suggestions they were labouring to instil into the minds of the people, and confutes them with the most unanswerable arguments. It was as absurd to suppose so subtle an enemy as Satan would ever concur in establishing that doctrine which radically overthrew his empire over the souls of men, as that any community or family should propose their establishment by division between the members that compose it, which must evidently tend to their mutual destruction. Besides, they condemned themselves herein, when they admitted that many of their own kindred and followers, and exorcists, were, in the name of God, enabled to cast out devils; and never supposed any diabolical combination in their case. This malignant opposition to him therefore tended most effectually to their own ruin and destruction; for, since the finger of God was evident in these miraculous works, and proved the kingdom of God was come, which the Messiah should erect in the world; in rejecting the evidence of his misson they excluded themselves from all the blessings and privileges of his kingdom. And to show farther the real destruction of Satan's power by his miracles and doctrine, he illustrates the matter by a smilitude, ver. 21, 22. As a strong man will not quit his palace, which he holds with an armed force, unless he be vanquished by a superior foe, no more will Satan quit his hold of men's bodies and souls till compelled by the power of the almighty Saviour. When the prey therefore is taken from this mighty one, it is a sure proof that his power is broken, and his interest ruined. Nor can there be any neutrality between Christ and Belial. They who halt between two opinions, who do not join Christ's cause, admit the evidence of his mission, and profess discipleship, must expect to be treated by him as enemies, and to be scattered in his wrath.

The Redeemer's victories over Satan are still daily seen; yea, we are bound to experience them in our own souls, or it had been good for us we had never been born. For by nature we are children of wrath, born slaves of corruption, and under the power of this wicked one. Our desperately wicked hearts are the palace where he sits enthroned, and there his despotic orders are obeyed; by every prejudice, every allurement, every temptation, he strengthens his interest against Christ and his truth; and flatters with visions of peace the sinner's soul, filling him with false confidence, keeping him in darkness with respect to his danger, lulling him asleep in security, suffering him to entertain no doubt of the goodness of his heart and the safety of his state, and turning him away from whatever tends to disturb this deceitful repose. But, when Christ comes by his word and Spirit the conflict begins, unusual distress and terror seize the soul, the enemy struggles hard to keep his hold, but the stronger grace and power of the Saviour prevail, the strongholds of Satan are laid low, the sinner's proud imaginations humbled, his false confidence, his own righteousness and self-sufficiency, levelled with the dust: Christ comes and takes possession of the heart; by his enlightening, sanctifying grace, dispels the darkness of ignorance and error, and looses the bonds of sin and corruption, taking the prey from the mighty, and employing to his own glory the body, soul, spirit, and all the faculties of the redeemed sinner.

3. Christ intimates to them their truly deplorable condition, under another similitude. They were like a man out of whom the evil spirit departed for a while, seeking a settlement elsewhere; but, finding none to his mind, he returned to his former house, and found it ready prepared for his reception; where, entering with seven worse spirits, he took up his abode: and the case of that man was more desperate than ever. Thus now that Satan's kingdom was shaken in Judea, he had retired for a while into the Gentile world: but when, after the resurrection of Jesus, and the preaching of his gospel among the heathen, he could find no rest there, his idols being demolished, and his votaries converted, then would he return again to the Jewish people, who had rejected their Messiah, and find them ready to welcome him into their hearts: with sevenfold greater influence over them he shall take possession of them for his own, and, by hurrying them on to fill up the measure of their iniquities, will hasten the destruction of their country, and effectually ruin both body and soul in hell.

This also represents the state of every hypocrite and apostate. An outward reformation may be wrought, and Satan's power for a time suspended; the house may be swept from grosser immoralities, and garnished with the form of godliness, with common gifts of speculative knowledge, or a fair show of profession, whilst the heart remains unchanged, unhumbled, and unholy: for a while they endure: but when the hour of temptation comes, Satan finds a ready access, and enters with greater power than ever into the heart; the sins which were before hid under the veil of hypocrisy break forth; apostasy ensues: and these usually prove the vilest and most abandoned of all sinners, and will receive the greater damnation.

27. ¶ And it came to pass, as he spake these things, a certain woman of the company lifted up her voice, and said unto him, [l] Blessed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked. 28. But he said, Yea, [m] rather blessed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it.

l Ch. 1. 24, 30, 48. with 23. 29.

m Ch. 6. 47, 48. & 8. 21. Ps. 1. 1—3. & 112. 1. & 119. 1—6. & 128. 1. Is. 48. 17, 18. Mat. 7. 21. & 12. 49. ch. 8. 21. Rom. 2. 13. Jam. 1. 22—25.

Verses 27, 28. Struck with the miracle which she had seen, and deeply affected with the convincing force of evidence which appeared in our Lord's discourse, a gracious woman of the company could not restrain the glowing rapture of her heart, and burst forth into expressions of wonder and admiration at what she heard and saw, counting her inexpressibly blessed and happy who was the mother of such a son. But Christ took occasion to point her to an unspeakably greater honour and happiness, of which she herself might become possessed: to hear the word of God and keep it, so to receive the love of the truth as to be saved thereby, was a far greater blessedness than, after the flesh, to have been found among his near relatives.

29. ¶ [n] And when the people were gathered thick together, he began to say, This is [o] an evil generation: they seek a sign; [*] and there shall no sign be given it, but the sign of Jonas the prophet. 30. For as [p] Jonas was a sign unto the Ninevites, so also shall the Son of man be to this generation. 31. [q] The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and condemn them: for she came from the utmost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, [r] a greater than Solomon is here. 32. [s] The men of Nineve shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a [t] greater than Jonas is here. 33. [u] No man, when he hath lighted a candle, putteth it in a secret place, neither under a [x] bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light. 34. [y] The light of the body is the eye: therefore, when thine eye is single, thy whole body also is full of light: [z] but when thine eye is evil, thy body also is full of darkness. 35. Take heed therefore [a] that the light which is in thee be not darkness. 36. [b] If thy whole body therefore be full of light, having no part dark, the whole shall be full of light, as when the bright shining of a candle doth give thee light.

n Mat. 12. 38—42. Mark 8. 11, 12.

o Is. 57. 3. Mat. 16. 4. & 23. 33. Mark 8. 38. John 4. 48. & 2. 18.

* Matthew informs us, it was the Pharisees in particular who demanded a sign of our Lord.

p John 1. 17. & 2. 2. & iii, iv. Is. 8. 18. ch. 2. 34. & 9. 22, 24.

q 1 Kin. 10. 1, 2. 2 Chr. 9. 1. Mat. 12. 42.

r Ch. 3. 22. & 9. 35. Is. 9. 6. & 42. 1. & 49. 3. John 1. 14, 29. Mat. 12. 5, 42. Col. 2. 3, 9.

s Jon. 3. 5—10. Jer. 3. 11. Ezek. 3. 6, 7. & 16. 51. Rom. 2. 27, 29.

t John 1. 14. & 3. 16, 31. & 10. 30. Rom. 9. 5. Tit. 2. 13. Acts 7. 2.

u Mat. 5. 15. Mark 4. 21. ch. 8. 16.

x See Mat. 5. 15.

y Mat. 6. 22, 23. Rom. 12. 8. 1 Cor. 10. 31. Ps. 119. 5, 6, 105.

z Ps. 81. 12. Is. 66. 4. 2 Thes. 2. 10—12.

a Is. 6. 9, 10. & 5. 20. & 29. 14, 15. & 44. 18. & 42. 19, 20. Jer. 5. 21. Mat. 13. 14, ch. 18. 11. Rom. 1. 22. 1 Cor. 1. 19—21.

b Job 17. 9. 2 Pet. 3. 18. 1 John 5. 20. 1 Pet. 2. 9. Acts 26. 18. Mat. 5. 16. Phil. 2. 15, 16. Eph. 5. 8.

Verses 29—36. As they were so obstinate in rejecting the signs he had given them, and still demand one from heaven, as a subterfuge for their unbelief, Christ rejects their petition, and, before the people, who were gathered thick around him, assures them,

1. That no sign shall be given them from heaven but only that of which Jonas was the type and figure, even the resurrection of the Son of man from the dead; and their rejection of that would seal them up under final impenitence.

2. He warns them of the dreadfulness of their guilt, and the aggravated ruin which must be the consequence of rejecting him and his gospel. As he was far greater than Solomon or Jonah, the queen of Sheba, who came so far to hear the wisdom of the one, and the Ninevites, who repented at the preaching of the other, would rise up in a judgment-day to upbraid and condemn their perverseness and unbelief.

3. They had yet the light of truth among them; they were therefore inexcusable if they abode in darkness, and wilfully shut their eyes against conviction. They who embraced the gospel, receiving it in the light and the love of it, would be infinitely blessed and benefited thereby; those who rejected it would be given up justly to the blindness of their heart, and left to fall into eternal darkness. Note, (1.) The gospel is the lighted candle, set up on the candlestick of the public ministry, to guide benighted souls into the paths of everlasting peace. (2.) What the eye is to the body, that faith is to the soul, enabling us to see the great things which pertain unto our eternal life, and to embrace them; and, as the blessed effect thereof, we are enabled to walk in comfort and holiness, growing in grace, till the blessed day comes when no cloud of ignorance, or spot of sin, shall hide the full lustre of the beatific vision. (3.) Whilst the heart remains under the power of native corruption, the understanding is darkened, the judgment corrupted by depraved affections, and all the glories of the gospel-day shine around such in vain: as the sun's brightest beams convey no light to the person whose organs of vision are obstructed by vicious humours. (4.) We have great need to beware how we trifle with the gospel; lest we provoke the Lord to withdraw the light of truth from us, and seal us up under judicial blindness and hardness of heart; and then, how great is that darkness.

37. ¶ And as he spake, [c] a certain Pharisee besought him to dine with him: and he went in, and sat down to meat. 38. And when the Pharisee saw it, he marvelled that [d] he had not first washed before dinner. 39. And the Lord said unto him, [e] Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter; but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness.* 40. Ye [f] fools did not he that [g] made that which is without make that which is within also? 41. But rather [h] give alms of such things as ye have;‡ and, behold, all things are clean unto you. 42. [i] But woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God; these ought ye to have done, and not leave the other undone. 43. [k] Woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye love the uppermost seats in the synagogues and greetings in the markets. 44. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for [l] ye are as graves which appear not, and the men that walk over them are not aware of them. 45. Then answered one of the lawyers, and said unto him, Master, thus saying thou reproachest us also. 46. [m] And he said, Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers. 47. [n] Woe unto you! for ye build the sepulchres of the prophets, and your fathers killed them. 48. Truly [o] ye bear witness that ye allow the deeds of your fathers: for [p] they indeed killed them, and ye build their sepulchres. 49. Therefore also said the [q] wisdom of God, [r] I will send them prophets and apostles, and [s] some of them, they shall slay and persecute: 50. [t] That the blood of all the prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation; 51. From the blood of [u] Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, which perished between the altar and the temple: verily I say unto you, It shall be required of this generation. 52. [x] Woe unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge: ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye ‖ hindered. 53. And as he said these things unto them, [y] the scribes and the Pharisees began to urge him vehemently, and to provoke him to speak of many things; 54. [z] Laying wait for him, and seeking to catch something out of his mouth, that they might accuse him.

c Ch. 7. 36. & 14. 1. & 7. 34. 1 Cor. 9. 19, 20.

d Mat. 13. 1, 2. Mark 7. 1—5.

e Mat. 23. 23, 25. & 7. 15. Mark 7. 4. Tit. 1. 15, 16. 2 Tim. 3, 5.

* Or, malevolence.

f Ps. 14. 1—5. & 92. 5, 6. & 94. 8. Deut. 32. 29.

g Gen. 1. & 2. 2, 7. Num. 16. 22. Zech. 12. 1. Heb. 12. 9. 1 Thes. 5. 23.

h Ch. 12. 33. & 16. 9. Mat. 5. 44. Dan. 4. 27. Is. 58. 7. & 61. 8. ch. 19. 8. 2 Cor. 8. 12. 1 Tim. 4. 4. Tit. 1. 15. Heb. 13. 16. Liberality to the poor is a better way to sanctify your earthly enjoyments.

‡ Or, only give in alms what ye have.

i Mat. 23. 23, 24. & 9. 13. & 12. 7. 1 Sam. 15. 22. Hos. 6. 6. Prov. 21. 3. Mic. 6. 3. Gal. 5. 22—24.

k Ch. 20. 46. & 14. 7. Mat. 23. 6, 7. Mark 12. 38, 39. 3 John 9. Prov. 16. 18. & 29. 23. Hab. 2. 4.

l Mat. 23. 27, 28. Acts 23. 3. Hos. 5. 1. & 9. 8. Ps. 12. 2. & 55. 21. & 5. 9. Tit. 1. 15.

m Mat. 23. 4. Is. 10. 1. Gal. 6. 13. Ps. 94. 20.

n Mat. 23. 29—36.

o Ps. 64. 8. Josh. 24. 22. ch. 19. 22. Job 15. 5, 6.

p Acts 7. 51, 52. 1 Thes. 2. 15. 2 Chr. 36. 16. Mat. 21. 35, 36. Jam. 5. 10. Heb. 11. 36—38.

q Prov. 1. 20. & 8. 1, 12. & 9. 1. 1 Cor. 1. 24. Col. 2. 3.

r Mark 16. 15. 1 Cor. 12. 28. Eph. 4. 11.

s Mat. 22. 6. John 16. 2. 2 Cor. 11. 24, 25. ch. 21. 16, 17. Acts iv—xxv.

t Mat. 23, 35, 36. 1 Thes. 2. 15, 16. Exod. 20. 5. Mic. 6. 16. Rev. 18. 24. Gen. 9. 5, 6. Ps. 9. 12.

u Mat. 23. 35. Gen. 4. 8. Heb. 11. 4. 1 John 3. 12. 2 Chr. 24. 21, 22. Zech. 1. 1.

x Mat. 23. 13. Ezek. 22 25. 2 Tim. 3. 6. Tit. 1. 11. ch. 19. 39. They, by false glosses, kept people ignorant of the scripture, and did all they could to hinder others, as well as themselves, from believing the gospel.

‖ Or, forbade.

y Mat. 23. 2—22. & 12. 38. & 16. 1. & 19. 3. & 22. 18. ver. 16.

z Mat. 22. 15. Jer. 18. 18. & 20. 10. Ps. 37. 32. & 56. 5, 6.

Verses 37—54. We have here,

1. The invitation which one of the Pharisees gave our Lord to dine with him, which he accepted, went to the house, and sat down to meat.

2. The Pharisee observed, and was much offended, that Christ did not wash before he sat down at the table, according to the tradition of the elders, which he and his brethren so scrupulously observed.

3. Christ, who knew this proud Pharisee's thoughts, took occasion freely to reprove their folly and hypocrisy, who had placed the substance of their religion in these useless and superstitious observances, whilst they neglected the great and most important commands of God. He denounces therefore his woes against them, (1.) For their hypocrisy, in showing such solicitude to observe the various washings of their cups and platters, in conformity with the traditions of the elders; whilst they took no pains to cleanse their souls from the deep pollutions of sin, from the inward extortion and covetousness, which rendered them abominable in the sight of God. What egregious folly! If God required outward cleanness, must he not much more expect internal purity? The way to have a sanctified use of their creature-comforts was by charitable distribution to the poor, Deut. xxvi. 12—15. and when this proceeded out of a pure heart, and faith unfeigned, all this would then be clean unto them, Tit. i. 15. but without this, all the water in Jordan would never cleanse them from their filthiness. (2.) For their injustice and irreligion: whilst they pretended the most scrupulous regard to God's service, tithing even the herbs in their garden, they lived in the gross violation of the most weighty precepts of the moral law; passing over judgment, partial as magistrates, extortioners in their dealings, and as void of the love of God, as of charity to their neighbour; duties, which being of the first importance, demanded their chief attention. (3.) For their pride. They were fond of pre-eminence; expected the most honourable seat in places of worship, where humility was especially required; and affected sounding titles of homage to be paid them in public, as if they were beings of a superior rank. (4.) For their inward filthiness. Notwithstanding all the specious appearances of devotion and piety which they wore, their hearts were a sink of uncleanness; and as graves concealed, which men, ere they were aware, walked over, and were defiled by them; so did their principles, practice, and conversation, corrupt those who followed their destructive ways.

4. One of the lawyers, or scribes, whose office it was in general to expound the law to the people, conceived these reproofs on the Pharisees included reproaches on them also; and our Lord, without respect of persons, does not spare them. They were alike culpable, and the same woes and wrath hung over them. (1.) Because they added to the divine precepts an unsupportable load of human traditions; and whilst to themselves they were abundantly indulgent, and made the path of self-denial sufficiently easy, they exacted with rigour a scrupulous conformity from others to their human impositions. (2.) Because they pretended reverence for the memory of the prophets, and erected noble monuments over the graves of those whom their fathers had murdered; but even the care of the prophets' tombs perpetuated the memory of their ancestors' crimes, which they were ready to repeat, being actuated by the same malignant spirit; therefore, also said the wisdom of God, Jesus the divine Logos, in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, I will send them prophets and apostles, and some of them they shall slay and persecute, exceeding all the outrages of their forefathers; more bloody minded and inveterate against the ministers of the gospel; filling up hereby the measure of their iniquities, and bringing upon themselves the vengeance due for all the righteous blood shed from Abel to Zacharias, who, for his fidelity, was stoned in the very courts of the temple, 2 Chron. xxiv. 20—22. At the hands of this generation, saith he, shall it be required; and the prediction was fearfully verified, in the dreadful and utter destruction shortly after poured out upon their city, temple, and nation. (3.) Because they had taken away the key of knowledge; arrogating to themselves the right of expounding the Scriptures, they misled the people by corrupt glosses. They perverted the texts which had the plainest reference to the Messiah, and the clearest accomplishment in Jesus; instilling wrong notions of his temporal kingdom, they prejudiced the people against Christ and his gospel; and refusing to enter themselves into the number of his disciples, they used all their art and influence to prevent others from joining them who were disposed to acknowledge his mission and character.

5. Cut with these sharp rebukes, which unhumbled sinners regard as affronts and reproaches, they began to urge him vehemently, with captious questions, and to provoke him to speak of many things; trying to ruffle his temper, or draw from him some unguarded expression, whereon to ground some accusation against him; either to render him odious to the people, or obnoxious to the government; but his patience and prudence disappointed their malice. Note, Fidelity in reproving men's sins will often procure us inveterate enemies; and we have need to watch over the temper of our hearts, and the door of our lips, when in the midst of those, who we know lie in wait for our halting.

CHAP. XII.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

Christ here, 1. Warns his disciples to take heed of hypocrisy, and of cowardice in professing Christianity and preaching the gospel, ver. 1—12. 2. He gives a caution against covetousness, ver. 13—21. 3. He encourageth his disciples to cast all their care upon God, and engageth them to make religion their main business, ver. 22—34. 4. He stirs them up to watchfulness, ver. 35—48. 5. He bids them expect trouble and persecution, ver. 49—53. 6. He warns the people to observe and improve the day of their opportunities, and to make their peace with God, in time, ver. 54—59.

[a] Gen. 49. 10. ch. 5. 1, 15. & 6. 17. & 9. 11.

1. IN the mean time, [a] when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people, insomuch that they trode one upon another, he began to say unto his disciples first of all, [b] Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees which is hypocrisy. 2. [c] For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known. 3. Therefore whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets shall be proclaimed upon the housetops. 4. And I say unto you, [d] my friends, [e] Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do. 5. But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: Fear him which, after he hath killed, [f] hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him. 6. Are not five [g] sparrows sold for two [g] farthings, and [h] not one of them is forgotten before God? 7. But [i] even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. [k] Fear not therefore: ye are of more value than many sparrows. 8. [l] Also I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God: 9. [m] But he that denieth me before men shall be denied before the angels of God. 10. [n] And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven. 11. [o] And when they bring you unto the synagogues, and unto magistrates, and powers, [p] take ye no thought how or what thing ye shall answer, or what ye shall say: 12. [q] For the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say.

[b] Mat. 16. 6—12. Mark 8. 15—21. 1 Cor. 5. 7, 8.
[c] Mark 4. 22. Mat. 10. 26. Job 12. 22. ch. 8. 17. Eccl. 12. 14. 1 Cor. 4. 5. 2 Cor. 5. 10. Rom. 14. 12. Rev. 20. 11. 12.
[d] John 13. 1. & 15. 9, 14, 15. Eph. 5. 30.
[e] Mat. 10. 28—33. Is. 8. 12 & 51. 7. & 41. 10, 14. Jer. 1. 8, 17. 1 Pet. 3. 14. Rev. 14. 7. Eccl. 12. 13. Prov. 1. 7. & 23. 17.
[f] Ps. 9. 17. Mat. 25. 41. Rev. 1. 18. Is. 51. 3.
[g] See Mat. 10. 29.
[h] Acts 15. 18. Ps. 113. 5. & 50. 10, 11. & 145. 15, 16. & 147. 9.
[i] 1 Sam. 14. 45. 2 Sam. 14. 11. 1 Kin. 1. 52. Acts 27. 34. ch. 21. 18. 1 Pet. 5. 7. Phil. 4. 6.
[k] Mat. 10. 31. & 6. 26. 1 Cor. 9. 9. Ps. 8. 5. Is. 43. 1—3. & 41. 10—16. & 51. 7, 12.
[l] Mat. 10. 32. Rom. 10. 9, 10. 2 Tim. 2. 12. Ps. 119. 46. Acts 4. 19. Rev. 3. 5. 1 Sam. 2. 30. 1 Cor. 15. 58.
[m] Mat. 10. 33. Mark 8. 38. ch. 9. 26. 1 John 2. 23. Mat. 7. 23. & 25. 12, 41.
[n] Mat. 12. 31, 32. Mark 3. 28, 29. 1 Tim. 1. 13, 15. Heb. 7. 25. 1 John 1. 9. Ezek. 33. 11. ch. 23. 34. Acts 5. 31. with 1 John 5. 16. Heb. 6. 4—8. & 10. 26—31. 1 Sam. 2. 25.
[o] Mat. 10. 19. Mark 13. 11. ch. 21. 14, 15. Acts iv—xxv.
[p] Mat. 6. 34. Phil. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 7.
[q] Ps. 46. 1. Gen. 22. 14. Exod. 4. 12, 15. 2 Sam. 23. 2. Is. 43. 1, 2. & 41. 10. & 48. 17. Jer. 1. 7. ch. 21. 14.

Verses 1—12. Our Lord inculcated the same truths on different occasions. We need line upon line and precept upon precept. A vast auditory was now assembled; and, as he was ever ready to speak when they desired to hear, he took occasion,

1. To caution his disciples in public against that hypocrisy of the Pharisees which he had just before so sharply rebuked in private. He calls it the leaven of the Pharisees. Their hearts, lips, and lives were wholly infected thereby: swollen with pride and self-importance, and soured with envy and malice, all their specious pretences to religion were but an abomination. Christ therefore warns his disciples to shun this hateful evil themselves, and not to be imposed upon by the fair professions of those designing men. And he urges, as a powerful argument, the sure detection of hypocrisy, either in this world, or in the day when the secrets of all hearts shall be revealed. Their most retired communications, even the whispers in a closet, must all shortly be proclaimed before the assembled world. How careful then need we be over every thought and word, considering that all-seeing and heart-searching God with whom we have to do.

2. He charges them to be faithful to their trust, and never to suppress, through fear or shame, one tittle of their message; but what they have learned of him in private, that must they boldly and publicly declare in the face of all opposition, and to encourage them to approve their fidelity unshaken, he addresses them, [1.] As his friends, whom he dearly loved, and would not fail to support under every trial. [2.] He lets them know, that the most inveterate malice of their foes can only reach the perishing body; they cannot touch the immortal soul. Better therefore, infinitely better would it be for them, by a steady testimony to the truth, bravely to put their lives in their hands, and meet, if the Lord so permitted, the worst death their enemies could inflict; than by a cowardly silence, or suppression of the offensive doctrines of the gospel, to provoke a jealous God, whose wrath reaches not only to the body but to the soul, sinking both into the flames of hell, and enduring to eternity. The fear of him should swallow up every other fear. [3.] That guardian providence, which watches over and orders the most minute events, would take peculiar care of them. Not a sparrow is forgotten of God, or falls unnoticed; yea, the very hairs of their head are numbered; their most envenomed foes cannot touch one of them without permission; therefore they need not fear what man can do unto them. [4.] According to their fidelity or unfaithfulness, so would they be owned or disowned by him at the last great day. They who, fearless of reproach or suffering, dared make confession of him in the world, shall be with honour acknowledged as his disciples, in the presence of angels at the resurrection of the just; whilst to decline bearing a testimony for him before men, to avoid loss or infamy, would infallibly provoke Jesus to renounce all relation to them, and expose them to everlasting shame and contempt in the dreadful day of judgment. When we are tempted to be ashamed of or to deny our profession, let us seriously remember this warning, and be wise. [5.] Contempt of their testimony, and blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, would expose their persecutors to endless wrath. All the revilings now cast out against the Son of man in his state of humiliation were pardonable; but after his ascension, and the descent of the Holy Ghost upon them, to ascribe the miracles they wrought in confirmation of the resurrection of Jesus to diabolical agency, would be to resist the only means of conviction, and must exclude such blasphemers from the possibility of repentance or forgiveness. [6.] In all emergencies, where they were called to answer before the tribunals of their persecutors, whether Jews or Gentiles, Christ undertakes to furnish them with a tongue and wisdom, which none of their adversaries shall be able to gainsay or resist. They need not take thought a moment what to speak in their own defence; the Holy Ghost should effectually furnish them with every thing proper for the occasion; and with such encouragements before them, they may boldly go forth, and fear not.

13. ¶ And one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, [r] that he divide the inheritance with me. 14. And he said unto him, Man, [s] who made me a judge or a divider over you? 15. And he said unto them, [t] Take heed, and beware of covetousness: [u] for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth. 16. And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man [x] brought forth plentifully: 17. And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do,* because I have no room where to bestow my fruits? 18. [y] And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. 19. And I will say to my soul, [z] Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; [a] take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. 20. [b] But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night † thy soul shall be required of thee: [c] then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided? 21. [d] So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.

r Ps. 17. 14. Phil. 3. 19. John 6. 26. 1 Tim. 6. 5, 9, 10. s Exod. 2. 14. John 18. 36.
t Ch. 21. 34. & 8. 14. 1 Cor. 5. 11. Col. 3. 5. 1 Tim. 6. 7—11, 17—19. Heb. 13. 5. Eph. 5. 3. 1 Thes. 2. 5. Hab. 2. 9. Ps. 119. 36, 37. Prov. 28. 16. u Mat. 6. 25. Eccl. 4. 6. & 5. 10, 12, 13, 17, 19. & 6. 2. Prov. 17. 1. & 15. 16, 17. & 26. 16. Ps. 37. 16.
x Job 12. 6. Mat. 5. 45. Acts 1. 17. Job 21. 7—12. Ps. 73. 3—12.

* 'What shall I do?' Give it to the poor, that shouldst thou do.—Basil.
y Ps. 17. 14. Phil. 3. 19. Jam. 3. 15. & 4. 4.
z Job 14. 1. Prov. 27. 1. a Eccl. 11. 9. Is. 22. 12, 13. 1 Cor. 15. 32. Jam. 5. 5.
b Dan. 4. 31. 1 Thes. 5. 3. Job 21. 13.
† Or do they require thy soul.
c Job 20. 20, 22. & 27. 8. Ps. 39. 6. & 52. 7. Jer. 17. 11. Ps. 49. 7.
d Mat. 6. 20. ver. 33. Hos. 10. 1. 1 Tim. 6. 17, 18.

Verses 13—21. We have here,

1. The application made to Christ by one of the company, desiring him, as a person of authority, to interpose on his behalf with his brother, who either unjustly kept him out of his part of the inheritance, or being the elder, and having by law a double portion, this worldly minded man would fain come in for an equal share.

2. Christ refuses to interpose. The exercise of temporal power and authority did not belong to that kingdom he came to establish; nay, had he interfered, they would have perhaps made it a ground of accusation, and quarrelled with him for daring to make himself a ruler and a judge. (See Exod. ii. 14.)

3. He takes occasion from this unreasonable application, to warn his disciples against the great sin and danger of covetousness, which being a most insinuating evil, they had need carefully guard their hearts against it. Men are apt to fancy, that this world's goods are most essential to happiness; but a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth, they conduce nothing to the spiritual satisfaction of the soul; they cannot prolong our lives a day, an hour; nay, instead of being comforts to us, they often prove a plague and snare here below; besides all the hinderances they put in our way, to obstruct our entrance into the kingdom of heaven. To give the greater force to his admonition, he illustrates it by a striking example.

The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully. (Χωρα a region.) His estate was vast, as the produce of it was abundant. These common gifts of providence the evil and unthankful often enjoy in the largest measure; but we may not judge of God's love or of real felicity from hence. The rich man is far from being usually the happy man. We are told,

[1.] What anxious cares his wealth occasioned. He thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits? He appears as full of perplexity as if he knew not where to get another morsel to satisfy the cravings of hunger. Such is the usual effect of increasing wealth; it brings an increase of cares and disquietude.

[2.] The result of his thoughts was this: I will pull down my barns and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods; a resolution, that spoke great folly, as well as ungodliness. He calls those his fruits, which were really but lent him of the Lord. To hoard up all, when so many empty barns of the poor, and hungry bellies might have charitably eased him of somewhat of his load of plenty, was vilely covetous. To call these his goods, which must perish in the using, proved his utter ignorance of a better portion. Greater barns would only bring greater expense and greater care, besides the plague of building; and his presumptuous I will, showed he left God far above out of his sight. So ready are they who trust in uncertain riches to forget the living God.

[3.] He flatters himself with the most pleasing prospects, when his schemes were completed, of sitting down and enjoying at ease the store he had collected. I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. How absurd the conclusion? Could his soul relish the gratifications of a beast, or feel any satisfaction from the indulgence of appetite? The wealth of the world, and the pleasures of sense, are not a portion at all suited to its wants: these God alone, with a sense of his love and favour, can supply. He promised himself many years to enjoy his affluence, when he knew not what a day might bring forth: and insured the safety of his goods, when in the shortest space fire or tempest might lay his storehouses in ruins: so precarious are all our earthly possessions. But if he saw his barns rise, and brooded over his plenty, ease was what he could no more secure to his body than his soul. All his fruits and his goods could no more alleviate the pains of an aching head, than cure the pangs of an aching heart. One stroke of sickness or disease must embitter all his abundance, and leave him pining in the midst of plenty: one unhappy incident in his family might forbid him to taste the least satisfaction in all his affluence. So poor, so precarious a portion is all sublunary good.

[4.] God suddenly confounds his schemes, and blasts his hopes. He said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided? Death in a moment darkens all the gay prospect, and dashes the gaudy bubble which flattering hope had blown. The day is near, when every carnal worldling, whom men admired as wise, and praised as doing well for himself, (Psal. xliv. 18.) shall feel with terrible conviction his egregious folly, and hear thou fool pronounced upon him by the lips of eternal wisdom. The affluence of the wicked must quickly change its owner, and nothing remain for them but a dreary grave, and a certain fearful looking for of judgment. Death, whenever it comes to them, will be a terrible surprise; a dreadful night of horror will surround them; and, dragged reluctant from the body, their soul, their guilty soul, must go where riches profit not to bribe a verdict in their favour, nor can all their wealth procure one drop of water to cool their tongue in those eternal flames which never shall be quenched.

[5.] Our Lord applies the parable in general to every worldly minded man, that layeth up treasure for himself; sets his heart upon riches; expects his happiness from them; and all whose concerns are engrossed merely about himself, without a regard to God's glory, or care for his neighbour: and is not rich towards God: destitute of the treasures of grace, and without the least title to the eternal inheritance; so is he; so absurd are his schemes, so fruitless his cares, and so miserable will be his end. Let us be warned therefore in time, and not foolishly prefer gold to godliness, the body to the soul, and time to eternity.

22. ¶ And he said unto his disciples, Therefore I say unto you, [c] Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat; neither for the body, what ye shall put on. 23 [f] The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment. 24. [g] Consider the ravens: for they neither sow nor reap; which neither have storehouse nor barn; and God feedeth them; how much more are ye better than the fowls? 25. [h] And which of you with taking thought can add to his stature one cubit? * 26. If ye then be not able to do that thing which is least, why take ye thought for the rest? 27. Consider the lilies how they grow: they toil not, they spin not; and yet I say unto you, that [i] Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. 28. If then God so clothe the grass, [k] which is to-day in the field, and to-morrow is cast into the oven; how much more will he clothe you, [l] O ye of little faith? 29. And [m] seek not ye what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, ‡ neither be ye of doubtful mind. 30. [n] For all these things do the nations of the world seek after: [o] and your Father knoweth that ye have need of these things. 31. [p] But rather seek ye the kingdom of God; and [q] all these things shall be added unto you. 32. [q] Fear not, [r] little flock; for [s] it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. 33. ¶ [t] Sell that ye have, and give alms; [u] provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth. 34. [x] For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. 35. ¶ [y] Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; 36. [z] And ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord when he will return from [a] the wedding; that when [b] he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately. 37. [c] Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching: verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them. 38. And if he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants. 39. [d] And this know, that if the good man of the house had known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have suffered his house to be broken through. 40. [e] Be ye therefore ready also: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not.

e Mat. 6. 25—34. Ps. 55. 22. 1 Cor. 7. 32. Phil. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 7. 1 Tim. 6. 8. Heb. 13. 4.

f Job 2. 4, 6. & 1. 12. Prov. 13. 8. & 6. 26.

g Mat. 6. 26. Job 38. 41. Ps. 104. 27, 28. & 145. 15, 16. & 147. 9.

h Mat. 6. 27. Ps. 75. 6. Eccl. 9. 11.

* The word here rendered stature, signifies also age, or life-time.

i 1 Kin. iv, ix, x. 2 Chr. i, viii, ix.

k Ps. 129. 6. & 102. 4. Is. 40. 6, 7. 1 Pet. 1. 24.

l Is. 50. 10. ch. 14. 31. Mark 9. 24.

m Ver. 22. Mat. 6. 25, 31. Phil. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 7. Ps. 55. 22

‡ Or live not in careful suspense.

n Ps. 4. 6. & 17. 14. Phil. 3. 19. Rom. 8. 5. Mat. 5. 46, 47. & 6. 32.

o 2 Chr. 16. 9. Ps. 23. 1. Phil. 4. 19.

p Mat. 6. 33. John 6. 27. 1 Tim. 4. 8. 1 Kin. 3. 11—13. Ps. 24. 9, 10. & 37. 8, 19, 25, 29. & 84. 11. ch. 10. 42. 1 Cor. 3. 22. Rom. 8. 31, 32.

q Is. 35. 3, 4. & 41. 10, 14. & 43. 1, 2. Rev. 1. 17.

r Mat. 7. 14. & 20. 16. & 22. 14. Is. 40. 11. Ezek. 34. 31.

s Mat. 7. 11. Eph. 1. 3—7. Jer. 5. 19. Heb. 12. 28. 2 Pet. 1. 11. Rom. 6. 23. Mat. 11. 25, 26.

t Mat. 19. 21. Acts 2. 45. & 4. 34. 2 Cor. 8. 2. ch. 16. 9.

u Mat. 6. 19—21. ch. 16. 9. & 18. 22. 1 Tim. 6. 17—19.

x Mat. 6. 21. Col. 3. 1—3. Phil. 3. 20. 2 Cor. 4. 18.

y Eph. 6. 14. 1 Pet. 1. 13. Mat. 5. 16. Prov. 4. 18. & 21. 18.

z Gen. 49. 18. Ps. 62. 1, 5. & 130. 5, 6. & 123. 2

a Mat. 22. 1—13. & 25. 1—12.

b Mat. 24. 42—45. Song 5. 2. Rev. 3. 20. Ps. 24. 7. 9.

c Mat. 24. 46—51. Rev. 16. 15. Lam. 3. 25, 26. 2 Tim. 4. 7, 8.

d Mat. 24. 43. 1 Thes. 5. 2, 3. Rev. 16. 15. & 3. 3. 2 Pet. 3. 10.

e Mat 24. 42, 44. & 25. 10, 13. Rom. 13. 11. 1 Cor. 16. 13. 1 Thes. 5. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 8. Mark 13. 33—37 ch. 21. 34—36. 2. Pet. 3. 12. Rev. 16. 15. & 21. 2. & 19. 7.

Verses 22—40. The foregoing instructions we have considered before in the other Evangelists; but they are of such importance, as to deserve our hearing once, yea twice, that they may be graven on our hearts; for nothing is a more fatal snare to the soul, than inordinate desire after the wealth of this world.

1. Christ enjoins his disciples, to cast their care upon God, and never to disquiet or perplex themselves about a worldly provision, anxious solicitude being as criminal as sensual indulgence. We must take no thought about the necessaries of life, disquieting ourselves with the fears of hunger or nakedness; but in the way of duty cheerfully trust him with our support, who gave us our being, ver. 23. Even the ravens are fed by his providence, and the lily is clothed with beauty, such as Solomon arrayed in all his glory could not vie with: and shall he not much more feed and clothe us, who in excellence, as creatures, are so much better, and as his peculiar people, are so much dearer to him? The cause of all our anxious cares and fears is our unbelief: not that our solicitude will mend our circumstances; it is as useless as it is needless. We cannot add to our stature a cubit, or to our age a day; and if in the least things all our thoughts must be unavailing, why should we distress ourselves about the rest? Dependent therefore on the Divine Providence, we need not be distressed, perplexed, and fluctuating like meteors, about a subsistence; for this would show we had no more confidence in God than heathens, and intimate the most criminal distrust of the power and care of him we call our Father, who knows all our wants, is able to supply them, and hath engaged that we shall want no manner of thing that is truly good for us. We have indeed greater things in view than food and raiment, even the kingdom of God, the blessings of grace and glory: these must engage our first concern, and then we may safely trust the Lord with all our temporal affairs.

2. He encourages them not to fear want, when they are the assured heirs of their eternal King. Fear not, little flock, Christ's children are like a flock, united in love under their kind shepherd's care: a little flock; few compared with the world which lieth in wickedness: yet though compassed with enemies, they need not fear; their Redeemer is mighty as he is gracious. It is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom; a kingdom of glory that fadeth not away; the gift of sovereign grace, bestowed not according to our desert, but the good pleasure of his own will; and if he hath provided a throne in the heavens, we may rest assured he will not leave us to want on earth. Instead therefore of desiring to hoard unnecessary wealth, or being under anxiety about food or raiment, our hearts and hands should be open, according to our abilities, to relieve the necessitous: and, when God's providence calls for it, ready to part with all we possess, sending it before us, as the surest and most abiding portion, which will enrich us in the eternal world, where it will be incorruptible and inexhaustible. This will raise our affections to high and heavenly things, and then where our treasure is, our heart will be.

3. He bids them prepare for the day when he, their Master, shall come to take them with him to the mansions provided for them, and to partake of the pleasures which are at his right hand for evermore. Christ, our Master, is gone up to heaven, to prepare for himself his spouse, the church: we are his servants, appointed to watch till his return, and to be ready to meet him, the oil of grace burning in our lamps, and our souls active in his service. As many as he finds thus expecting him, and welcoming his arrival, he will reward with distinguished blessedness, and entertain them with all the unutterable delights of the eternal world, taking them with him to sit down in the kingdom of God. As the time of Christ's coming is uncertain, like the wise householder, we need be habitually on our guard, and awake with the first alarm, that we may not be unexpectedly surprised, as by a thief in the night; for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not, and wo to those whom he finds sleeping in sin and carnal security.

41. ¶ Then Peter said unto him, Lord, speakest thou this parable [f] unto us, or even to all? 42. And the Lord said, [g] Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his lord shall make ruler over his household, to give them their portion of meat in due season? 43. [h] Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing. 44. Of a truth I say unto you, that he [i] will make him ruler over all that he hath. 45. But [k] and if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin [l] to beat the men-servants and maidens, and to eat and drink, and to be drunken: 46. [m] The lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will * cut him in sunder, and [n] will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers. † 47. [o] And that servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. 48. But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more. 49. ¶ [p] I am come to send fire on the earth; and what will I, if it be already kindled? ‡ 50. But [q] I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I [r] straitened till it be accomplished! 51. [s] Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, nay; but rather division. 52. For from henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three. 53. The father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father; the mother against the daughter, and the daughter against the mother; the mother-in-law against her daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. §

f Mark 13. 37. & 14. 34, 38.
g Mat. 24. 45. & 25. 21, 23. ch. 19. 17, 19. 1 Cor. 4. 2. John 21. 15—17. Acts 20. 28. Gal. 6. 10. Eph. 4. 11—13. Heb. 3. 5. & 13. 17. 2 Tim. 2. 2.
h Rev. 16. 15. 2 Tim. 4. 7, 8. ver. 37.
i See ver. 42. ch. 19. 17, 19. & 22. 29, 30. 1 Pet. 5. 4. Dan. 12. 2, 8.
k Mat. 24. 48. 2 Pet. 2. 3, 4. Ezek. 12. 22—28.
l Is. 65. 5. 3 John 9, 10. 2 Cor. 11. 26. Gal. 4. 17, 18. Phil. 3. 18, 19.
m Mat. 24. 42, 44, 50, 51. 1 Thes. 5. 2, 3. Rev. 16. 15. John 5. 28, 29.
* Or cut him off.
n Job 20. 29. Ps. 11. 6. Mat. 7. 22, 23. & 8. 11, 12. & 13. 42, 50.
† Or with the faithless.
o Mat. 11. 21—24. ch. 10. 12—15. John 9. 41. & 15. 22. Acts 17. 30. Jam. 4. 17. Num. 15. 30. Deut. 25. 2. Lev. 5. 17. p Ver. 51—53. Mat. 10. 34—36. & 16. 24, 25. & 24. 9, 10.
‡ Better thus, what would I, but that it were kindled?
q Mat. 20. 22. & 16. 21. & 17. 22, 23. & 20. 18, 19, 28. & 21. 39. & xxvi, xxvii. John xviii, xix. ch. xxii, xxiii.
r Or pained. Ps. 40. 8. John 18. 11. Acts 21. 13. He desired, and delighted, to suffer unto death for our redemption.
s Mat. 10. 34—36, 21. Mic. 7. 5, 6. Jer. 9. 4. Acts 13. 44, 45. & 28. 24. Ps. 41. 9. & 55. 13, 14. John 13. 18. & 15. 19, 19. & 16. 2. 2 Cor. 11. 26. Acts iv—xxv. John 9. 16. & 10. 19.
§ Infidels have confidently alleged these consequences of the promulgation of Christianity as so many objections to its divine original, wilfully forgetting that 'thus it was written, and 'thus it must be.'—Scott.

Verses 41—53. Peter, the warm-hearted disciple, the ready spokesman, desires to know if our Lord's discourse was directed to the apostles in particular, or to all the disciples in general. Hereupon,

1. Christ replies to his question. What he had spoken had both a general view to all the disciples, and was particularly applicable to them who were advanced to the most honoured posts, as stewards of the Lord's household. (1.) Their duty was, as put in trust with the care of men's souls, to be wise and faithful dispensers of the gospel, and the instituted ordinances of grace; considering the several cases and states of those to whom they ministered, and seasonably and rightly dividing to each the word of truth, for their conviction, edification, or comfort. (2.) The blessedness of fidelity would be great: whosoever shall be found at Christ's appearing thus zealously, diligently, persever-ingly employed, shall be highly advanced by him in glory, and placed, like Joseph in Egypt, at the king's right hand. (3.) As great will be the misery, sin, and danger of those who shall be found unfaithful. It is shocking to think there should be such a character as a minister of Christ in profession, quarrelsome, oppressive, abusive, profane, drunken; yet such there have been, there will be; and the cause of these, and the like enormities, is intimated: such a one saith, My Lord delayeth his coming, and therefore in security goes on; negligent and treacherous to his trust, and insensible to the awful account he must shortly make. But such insensibility retards not the approach of danger, the dreadful hour of reckoning draws near, the judge will suddenly and unexpectedly appear, and pronounce their tremendous doom: according to the light and advantages they have enjoyed, shall be the measure of their punishment. The stripes shall be fewer, where through ignorance men have erred and offended; whilst the heaviest strokes of vengeance shall fall on those who have abused the greatest gift, and, in opposition to knowledge and conscience, have been unfaithful to their trust: and this is agreeable to the strictest rules of equity, that where a greater trust hath been committed, a proportionable improvement should be required; whilst unfaithfulness and negligence in such a case, become more aggravatedly criminal.

2. Christ admonishes them of the fiery trials which he and they must go through. His gospel, though breathing the spirit of peace and love, yet being so opposite to the pride and prejudices of men, would give occasion to the bitterest animosities and persecutions. This fire was already kindled in the rancour shown him by the Scribes and Pharisees; but will he desist from his glorious undertaking, or suppress the offensive truths? No, in no wise. Since by no other means, than the sufferings he foresaw, the salvation of his people could be obtained, he willingly offers himself to the bloody baptism before him, eagerly longing for the time when it should be accomplished in the garden and on the cross. How astonishing his love towards us! He forewarns his disciples, that they must expect their cross also; for from that temporal kingdom of peace and prosperity with which they flattered themselves, war and tumult are before them. The gospel they preached would be opposed with the fiercest rage of men and devils, and the greatest miseries and confusions be the consequence. Even amongst nearer relations it would occasion the most grievous divisions: in families where part should be converted, and part remain in their sins, the bitterest animosities would arise in the bosoms of those who rejected the counsel of God. And such will be their enmity against those who embrace the truth, that it will break through all ties of blood, duty, and friendship; making the father unnatural, the son undutiful; even in the hearts of those whose softer sex should breathe greater mildness, the spirit of superstition and bigotry will quench all natural affection, so that even parents shall persecute their children, and children their parents; exasperated by the reproof of their holy lives, and inflamed with rage at the gentlest remonstrances, and the most endearing persuasions of those who labour for their conversion. And thus it continues to this day, and must to the end of the world; let us not think it strange.

54. ¶ And he said also to the people, [t] When ye see a cloud rise out of the west, straightway ye say, There cometh a shower; and so it is. 55. And [u] when ye see the south wind blow, ye say, There will be heat; and it cometh to pass. 56. [x] Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth; but how is it that ye do not discern [y] this time? 57. [z] Yea and why even of yourselves judge ye not what is right? 58. ¶ [a] When thou goest with thine adversary to the magistrate, as thou art in the way, give diligence that thou mayest be delivered from him; lest he hale thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and the officer cast thee into prison. 59. I tell thee, [b] thou shalt not depart thence, till thou hast paid the very last [c] mite.

t Mat. 16. 2. Job 36. 27—33. 1 Kin. 18. 44. u Job 37. 17.
x Mat. 16. 3. Rom. 1. 21, 22. 1 Cor. 1. 19—24, 26, 27. Mat. 11. 25. & 24. 32. John 4. 35.
y Gal. 4. 4. ch. 19. 42, 44. Is. 63. 4. & 61. 2. Dan. 9. 24—26. Mal. 3. 1. & 4. 2. Hag. 2. 7. ch. 19. 42, 44.
z Deut. 4. 29. & 32. 29. Ps. 94. 9. a Mat. 5. 23—26. Gen. 32. 3—20. 1 Sam. 25. 28. Prov. 25. 8, 9. with Ps. 32. 6. 2 Cor. 6. 2. Heb. 3. 7—13. ch. 14. 31, 42. Is. 55. 6. Job 22. 21. John 5. 22. Mark 13. 41.
b Mat. 5. 26. Prov. 25. 8. with Mat. 25. 41, 46. 2 Thes. 1. c Not quite the tenth part of a farthing. Mark 12. 42.

Verses 54—59. The former discourse was addressed to the disciples, this to the multitude.

1. Christ upbraids them for their stupidity and perverseness in not attending to, or rejecting the evidences of his mission. They judged what weather there would be by the prognostics which experience had taught them; how inexcusable then were they not to discern this time, fixed for the Messiah's appearing; and how hypocritical and false their pretences to wisdom and knowledge of the prophets, when they disregarded or perverted the plainest declarations of the scriptures, concerning the birth, family, life, doctrine, and kingdom of the Messiah, and thus knew not the day of their visitation! Amazing, that they should not, even of themselves, discern what was right, where the evidence was so cogent; and that whilst they showed observation and judgment in matters of less concern, in this of infinitely greater moment to their souls, they should act so strangely infatuated!

2. He admonishes them of the necessity of a speedy accommodation of their matters with an offended God before it be too late. As common prudence would dictate the necessity of seeking an amicable agreement with our adversary, rather than push matters to extremities where the cause must infallibly be carried against us, and a prison be the issue of the trial; much more should we, in the matters of our souls, show greater concern to obtain reconciliation with God, who, by our sins, is become our adversary. To attempt our own justification before him, were folly: as to escape from his sentence, is impossible. Whilst, therefore, we are in the way of life, our wisdom is to cast ourselves at his feet, acknowledging our offences; and through faith in Jesus, our surety, to plead for mercy, lest death should drag us to his dread tribunal in unpardoned guilt, and the ministers of vengeance seize us in consequence of the judgment pronounced, and cast into the prison of hell; where even eternal torments can never satisfy offended justice, or cancel the infinite debt of sin.

CHAP. XIII.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

In this chapter we have, 1. The good improvement Christ made of the massacre of some Galileans, ver. 1—5. 2. The parable of the barren fig-tree, ver. 6—9. 3. Christ's healing a poor infirm woman on the sabbath-day, ver. 10—17. 4. A repetition of the parables of the grain of mustard-seed, and the leaven, ver. 18—22. 5. His answer to the question concerning the number of the saved, ver. 23—30. 6. The slight he put upon Herod's malice and menaces, and the doom of Jerusalem read, ver. 31—35.

1. THERE were present at that season some that told him of the [a] Galileans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices. * 2. And Jesus answering said unto them, [b] Suppose ye that these Galileans were sinners above all the Galileans, a Acts 5. 37.

* Perhaps the story of the Galileans might now be mentioned unto Christ, with the design of leading him into a snare, whether he would justify or condemn the persons that were slain.—Doddridge.
b Job 5. 6, 7. Acts 28. 4. Mat. 7. 1.

because they suffered such things? 3. I tell you, Nay: but, [c] except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish. 4. Or those eighteen, upon whom the tower in Siloam fell, and slew them, think ye that they were [d] sinners above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem? 5. I tell you, [e] Nay: but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.

c Ver. 5. John 3. 3, 5. ch. 19. 27, 42—44. & 21. 24. Mat. 3. 10, 12. & 12. 45. & 21. 41, 44. & 22. 7. & 23. 35—39. & xxiv. Mark xiii. Deut. 28. 52—58.

d Or debtors. Mat. 6. 12. & 18. 24. ch. 7. 41. & 11. 4.

e Exod. 4. 8. Is. 28. 10, 13. Mic. 6. 9 Ezek. 18. 30. & 7. 3, 4.

Verses 1—5. We have here,

1. A tragical story reported to our Lord by some who were present. Probably these Galileans had been followers of Judas of Galilee, Acts v. 37. of whom Pilate having got information, fell upon them when they came up to the temple to worship, and mingled their blood with their sacrifices. Perhaps what our Lord had been speaking of the necessity of always watching, and the importance of securing peace with God, gave occasion to the remark: or, as it seems from the sequel, they meant to insinuate, that these must needs be very wicked persons, who were given up to so dreadful a judgment.

2. Jesus seeks to turn this event to their profiting, and to ground thereon an exhortation to repentance. He reproves the uncharitable censure they seemed to cast on these unhappy men, as if their crimes had brought them to this untimely death, whereas such afflictive visitations were no proof of guilt; the best of men have sometimes suffered most. Nor may we judge of God's love or hatred to any man by the outward dispensations of his providence. If they meant to reflect on them as Galileans, and thereby to throw some reproach on Christ and his disciples, who were their countrymen, Christ instances a recent calamity of as melancholy a nature which lately happened at Jerusalem, when eighteen persons were suddenly crushed to death by the fall of a tower at Siloam; so that these calamities were not singular, or confined to persons in one place more than another; nor were they to conclude, that these men perished because they were greater sinners than others in Galilee or Jerusalem. But he solemnly warns them, that a heavier doom hung over their heads except they repented; when their blood too should be shed by the Roman sword in the midst of their sacred solemnities, and they be buried as the men in the tower of Siloam, under the ruins of their city, and perish temporally and eternally; and this is applicable to every sinner. (1.) His desert is to perish under the wrath of God. (2.) Nothing but repentance can prevent his ruin. (3.) The judgments of God on others are loud warnings to us. (4.) Consciousness of our own sinfulness and provocations, should make us very careful how we censure others. (5.) They who are severe in judging, may expect judgment without mercy.

6. ¶ He spake also this parable: A certain man had [f] a fig-tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none. 7. Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, [g] Behold, these three years I come seeking fruit on this fig-tree, and find none: cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground? 8. And he answering said unto him, Lord, [h] let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it, and dung it: 9. And if it bear fruit, well: and if not, then [i] after that thou shalt cut it down.

f Is. 5. 1—4. Ps. 80. 8—13. Jer. 2. 21. Mat. 21. 19, 20, 33—41. Ezek. xv.

g Rom. 2. 4, 5. 2 Pet. 3. 9. Hos. 10. 1, 2. Is. 5. 4—7. Ezek. xv. John 15. 2, 8.

h Exod. 32. 11. Jer. 18. 20. Joel 2. 17. Heb. 7. 25. ch. 23. 34.

i Jer. 18. 21. & 15. 1. & 7. 16. Ps. 21. 8—12. & 69. 22—28.

Verses 6—9. This parable is designed to enforce the foregoing admonition. It seems primarily to be applicable to the Jewish people, blessed with peculiar advantages, but disappointing God's expectations; yet spared a little longer at the Redeemer's intercession, till having tried them another space, and used in vain the most powerful means for their conversion in the mission of his apostles, at last he devotes them to utter ruin for their unbelief and impenitence, cutting them down as a barren tree, and casting them into the fire. But whatever reference the parable hath to them, it is of more extensive use, as containing a warning to all who enjoy the means of grace; and who, if they are not converted by them, will fall under heavier wrath and condemnation.

1. Great were the advantages this fig-tree enjoyed. It was planted in a vineyard, in the best soil, and under the owner's peculiar care and culture. The church is the vineyard of God, every visible member hath a place there, sitting under the rain of gospel doctrine, and blest with the ministerial labours of Christ's faithful servants.

2. The owner justly expected to find fruit on this tree, as the Lord doth from all who have a place in his church, of whom he requires the fruits of grace and holiness, as well as the leaves of profession.

3. Great was the disappointment: he found none, and therefore complains to the vine-dresser how long he had waited, and how useless was this tree which impoverished the ground, and occupied the room of one that might be profitable. With much more reason may the Lord complain of many professors, who bring him no honour, and continue barren and unfruitful. He comes from year to year, for three, for thirty, yea, sometimes for threescore years together: so wonderful is his patience and forbearance, and finds them still cumberers of the ground, whose ill example is more extensively pernicious the longer they are permitted to stand.

4. He dooms it to fall, cut it down; since the tree bore no fruit, it was only fit for the flames. Such is the awful sentence of God against the impenitent sinner; cut him down, and death is ready to lift the axe, and cast body and soul into the fire of hell. How awful, how alarming the thought!

5. The vine-dresser begs another year; if it be spared, he will take fresh pains it may yet bear, and then all will be well; but if not, he consents to leave the tree to its just doom. Christ is this vine-dresser; at his intercession are sinners spared, and every minister under him fails not in like manner to be an advocate for those among whom he labours. But, (1.) If through the intercession of Jesus our lives are prolonged and we have yet another year granted, we should know and improve the day of our visitation. The time is short, reprieves are not pardons; though we are spared ever so long, if we continue in our sins, we must perish at the last. (2.) Whilst the Lord spares the sinner, ministers must never be weary of labouring, and should try every method; digging up the heart by the terrors of the law, and seeking to dung it with the quickening manure of the gospel. (3.) It is never too late to amend; the most barren and unfruitful, who by grace at last are turned to God, will find mercy with him; the past transgressions shall be forgiven, the present service accepted, and all shall be well. (4.) God's patience, though it bear long, will not bear always; they who provoke and grieve his holy Spirit by their obstinate impenitence, will at last be left to the destruction they have chosen, and every day of his forbearance which they have abused, shall add a treasure of wrath against the day of wrath.

10. ¶ [k] And he was teaching in one of the synagogues on the sabbath. 11. And, behold, there was a woman, who had a [l] spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no

k Ch. 4. 15, 16, 44.

l Ver. 16. Mat. 15. 22. & 17. 15. ch. 14. 2. John 5. 5, 6. & 9. 19—21. Acts 3. 2. & 4. 22. & 14. 8—10.

wise lift up herself. 12. And when Jesus saw her, [m] he called her to him, and [n] said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity. 13. And he [o] laid his hands on her: [p] and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God. 14. And [q] the ruler of the synagogue answered [r] with indignation, because that Jesus had healed on the sabbath day, and said unto the people, [s] There are six days in which men ought to work: in them therefore come and be healed, and not on the sabbath day. 15. The Lord then answered him, and said, [t] Thou hypocrite, [u] doth not each one of you on the sabbath loose his ox or his ass from the stall, and lead him away to watering? 16. And ought not this woman, being [x] a daughter of Abraham, whom [y] Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, [z] be loosed from this bond on the sabbath day? 17. And when he had said these things, [a] all his adversaries were ashamed: [b] and all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him.

m Is. 65. 1. Mat. 11. 28.
n Ps. 107. 20. Rom. 4. 17. ch. 5. 20, 24. & 7. 14. & 6. 10. & 8. 54. & 18. 42.
o Ch. 5. 13. & 6. 19. & 8. 44. Mark 7. 33. & 8. 25. & 16. 18. p Num. 23. 19. Ps. 33. 29. ch. 18. 43. & 7. 15, 16. Ps. 103. 1—5. & 116. 12. & 115. 1, 3.
q Mat. 9. 18. Acts 13. 15.
r Rom. 10. 2. Gal. 4. 17.
s Exod. 20. 9. & 23. 12. Lev. 23. 3. Deut. 5. 13. Ezek. 20. 12. ch. 6. 7. & 14. 3.
t Mat. 7. 5. & 23. 13—27. Is. 29. 13.
u Mat. 12. 10, 11. ch. 14. 3, 5. John 7. 23. Deut. 22. 4.
x Ch. 19. 9. & 3. 8. Gen. 17. 7.
y John 8. 44. Eph. 2. 2. Mark 9. 17, 18, 21, 22, 26. z Is. 49. 24—26. Mark 2. 27. & 3. 4. Mat. 12. 11, 12.
a Ch. 14. 6. Ps. 40. 14.
b Ch. 7. 16. Mat. 9. 33. Acts 3. 9—11.

Verses 10—17. Christ was an unwearied preacher, and, as usual, was now in the synagogue on the sabbath-day. To confirm the doctrine he taught, we are told,

1. The notable miracle he wrought on an infirm woman who was present. Her case was very pitiable; under the power of Satan her body was so convulsed and contracted, that she was bent double, and could not stand erect: and as the disorder had been of so long standing as eighteen years, all hope of a cure was desperate. Yet she made a shift to crawl to the synagogue, and did not as many might have done, make her weakness, or deformity a plea for absenting from God's worship. There the compassionate eye of Jesus remarked her unhappy situation; and, unsolicited, he called and cured her, loosing her from Satan's bonds, and enabling her instantly to stand upright: for which she most heartily expressed her gratitude, glorifying and praising God for this extraordinary and unexpected mercy. Note, (1.) So weak and infirm are our souls by nature, unable to lift up their affections to high and heavenly things, and never bowed down to earthly sensual objects. (2.) Christ seeks us, not we him, and is pleased to call to us in the gospel word, that coming to him we might be cured. (3.) The powerful hand of his grace effectually relieves the soul from the bondage of guilt and corruption; and when at any time we are afterwards bowed down with fear, and go heavily through manifold temptations, he giveth strength to the weak. (4.) It will be the delight and duty of all who experience his healing, to glorify him in their lips and in their lives, walking upright before him.

2. The envious and malicious ruler of the synagogue, instead of glorifying God for the miracle, hardened with bigotry and prejudice, sharply reprimanded the people, as if the sabbath was violated by their coming to be healed on that day. Note, They who resolve to find fault, and not to be convinced, will cavil against the most glaring evidence.

3. Our Lord justifies his own conduct, and upbraids him with his hypocrisy. The zeal he pretended for the sabbath was a mere pretence, to hide that enmity which raged in his heart against Christ and his gospel. His own daily practice condemned and confuted his unreasonable and uncharitable censures. None of those who most rigidly observed the sabbath, thought it any breach of the sacred rest, to loose his beast from the stall, and lead him to water. And if an ox, or an ass might have such pains bestowed on them on the sabbath, with how much greater reason did mercy and charity plead, that a human creature, a daughter of Abraham too, bound by Satan's power, and so long and so grievously afflicted, should be relieved, when without the least labour it could be done by a single word?

4. The argument was most conclusive, and confusion covered his adversaries; whilst all the people, who were struck with wonder at his miracles, and the force of his reasoning, rejoiced at these glorious works of power and grace which they beheld. Note, Sooner or later all the foes of Christ and his people shall be confounded, and all his faithful triumph in his great salvation.

18. ¶ Then said he, Unto what is the [c] kingdom of God like? [d] and whereunto shall I resemble it. 19. It is like a grain of mustard-seed which a man took, and cast into his garden; and it grew, and waxed a great tree; and the fowls of the air lodged in the branches of it. 20. ¶ And again he said, Whereunto shall I liken the kingdom of God? 21. [e] It is like leaven, which a woman took and hid in three [f] measures of meal, till the whole was leavened. 22. [g] And he went through the cities and villages, teaching, and journeying toward Jerusalem.

c Acts 1. 3. ch. 17. 20, 21.
d Mat. 13. 31, 32. Mark 4. 30—32. Job 8. 7. Is. 60. 22. & 2. 2—4. & xlix, liv, lx. Ezek. 47. 1—12. Dan. 2. 44. Zech. 2. 11. & 8. 20—23. & xiv. Acts i—xix. Ps. 80. 8—11. Prov. 4. 18. Job 17. 9.
e Mat. 13. 33. Rom. 1. 14, 16. 1 Cor. 9. 22, 23. Ps. 72. 16—19. & 119. 11. 1 Thes. 5. 23.
f See Mat. 13. 33.
g Mat. 9. 35. ch. 4. 43, 44. Acts 10. 38. Mark 6. 6.

Verses 18—22. We have here,

1. Two parables which were before recorded, Matt. xiii. 31. representing the gradual increase of Christ's church, and the secret, but effectual spreading of the gospel leaven. Though the beginnings were small, as the grain of mustard-seed when sown; yet, in process of time, like a fair spreading tree, the kingdom of the Messiah would be erected throughout all the world; and Gentiles, as well as Jews, flock into it. And like leaven, though no external force be employed, the doctrines of truth would insensibly, but powerfully work, till their influence was diffused through all the earth.

2. Our Lord continued his course towards Jerusalem, preaching and teaching in all the cities and villages as he journeyed. Wherever providence directs our way, we should be glad to improve every opportunity to speak a word for the good of immortal souls.

23. ¶ Then said one unto him, Lord, [h] are there few that be saved? And he said unto them, 24. * [i] Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, [k] will seek to enter in, and shall not be able. 25. [l] When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are: 26. Then shall ye begin to say, [m] We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in

h Mat. 20. 16. & 22. 14. & 19. 25. & 7. 14.
* Gr. Strive as in agony.
i Mat. 7. 13, 14. & 11. 12. John 3. 3, 5. 2 Cor. 6. 1, 2. Heb. 2. 3.
k John 8. 21. & 7. 34. & 13. 33. Rom. 9. 31. & 10. 2, 3.
l Is. 55. 6. Mat. 25. 10, 12. & 7. 21—23. ch. 6. 46. Ps. 32. 6. m Is. 58. 2. Heb. 6. 4, 5. 2 Tim. 3. 5. Tit. 1. 16.

our streets. 27. [n] But he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity. 28. [o] There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out. 29. [p] And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God. 30. [q] And, behold, there are last which shall be first, and there are first which shall be last.

n Mat. 7. 23. & 25. 12, 41. Ps. 1. 6. & 5. 6. & 6. 8. Hos. 11. 12. Hab. 1. 13. with 1 Cor. 8. 2. Gal. 4. 9. 2 Tim. 2. 19.
o Mat. 8. 11, 12. & 13. 42. & 22. 13. & 24. 5. ch. 16. 23. Rev. 21. 8. & 22. 15. p Gen. 28. 14. Ps. 22. 27—31. & lxxii. 1-4. 2—4. & 11. 10. & 42. 6. & 43. 6 & 49. 6. & liv, lx. Mal. i, ii. Rom. 15. 9—19. & 11. 11, 12. Acts x—xix. & 22. 21. & 26. 17—23. & 28. 28. Eph. 3. 6—8. Col. 1. 6, 23. Mark 13. 27.
q Mat. 19. 30. & 20. 16. & 3. 9, 10. & 8. 11, 12.

Verses 23—30. We have here,

1. The question put to our Lord, Are there few that shall be saved? Perhaps the design of it was captious, to represent him as rigid and uncharitable, or it might be mere curiosity; many being more inquisitive who shall be saved, and who not, than about what they must do to secure their own salvation.

2. Our Lord answers the question in a way which seemed most profitable for the inquirer, directing him at least to give diligence to insure the salvation of his own soul.

(1.) His exhortation is, Strive to enter in at the strait gate; the way to heaven is difficult; ten thousand obstructions, both without and within, straiten the passage; great diligence and incessant prayer, therefore, are needful; that strengthened by power from on high, we may be able to hold on, and to hold out, and so to run as to obtain the prize.

(2.) He enforces his exhortation by various motives, [1.] Many will seek to enter in, and shall not be able, willing indeed to go to heaven, but unwilling to use the necessary means; resting in cold formality, or lazy endeavours; bound with the fetters of sloth, or blinded with pride and self-righteousness, and so mistaking the way, or coming short of the kingdom. [2.] If the present moment be neglected, it will shortly be too late. The door of mercy through the gospel, which is now open, will shortly be shut, when Jesus the master of the house, in death or judgment, requires the sinner's soul: and then the most importunate cries will be unavailing: it is now or never that prayer can profit us. [3.] Many who entertained the most confident hopes of heaven, will be found to have a lie in their right hand. They will knock as if they had a right to admission, plead relation to Christ as their Lord, that they were constant attendants on his word, and communicants at his table, yet will Christ utterly disown them in that day, and drive them with indignation from his presence, as workers of iniquity; whatever pretences to religion they made, their hearts were not right with him; their professions were hypocritical, and secret sins were harboured, delighted in, and gratified. Doomed, therefore, to be thrust into the outer darkness, with every dreadful expression of horror and despair, with weeping, and gnashing of teeth, in vain shall they bewail their folly; and pining with envy and vexation, shall behold the patriarchs, prophets, and saints of God, in glory exalted, and enjoying those unutterable delights of the heavenly kingdom, from which themselves must be eternally excluded; the sight of which will aggravate every pang they feel. How awful a scene! what diligence, what carefulness should it beget in us, that we come not into this place of torment! How jealous need we be over our hearts, that we rest not in outward privileges, and deceive not ourselves with vain hopes; thousands have gone out of this world dreaming of heaven, and have awaked in hell.

(3.) Some shall be saved; though few, comparatively speaking, in any one place or age; yet many, when collected into the great congregation: and these, such as seemed the most unlikely, coming from Gentile lands, from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and admitted into the church of the redeemed, whilst the Jewish people, who were first in privileges, shall be last, rejected for their impenitence; and the heathen, who were last in their call, shall be first in the kingdom. Note, When we come to heaven, we shall meet many there whom we least expected, and miss many, of whom we entertained the most confident assurances.

31. ¶ The same day there came certain of the Pharisees, saying unto him, [r] Get thee out and depart hence: for Herod will kill thee. 32 And he said unto them, Go ye, and tell that [s] fox, Behold, [t] I cast out devils, and I do cures to-day and to-morrow, and the third day I shall be [u] perfected. 33. Nevertheless, [x] I must walk to-day and to-morrow, and the day following; [y] for it cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem. 34. [z] O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee: [a] how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and [b] ye would not! 35. [c] Behold, your house is left unto you desolate: and verily I say unto you, [d] ye shall not see me, until the time come when ye shall say, [e] Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

r Neh. 6. 10. Amos 7. 13.
s Song 2. 15. Ezek. 13. 4. Mic. 3. 1—3. Zeph. 3. 3.
t Ps. 93. 4. John 10. 32.
u Heb. 2. 10. & 5. 8. John 17. 4. & 19. 30. x Ps. 31. 15. John 9. 4. & 5. 17.
y Mat. 20. 18. Acts 2. 23. & 4. 27, 28. z Neh. 9. 26. Mat. 23. 37—39. Luke 19. 42. ch. 21. 35, 36. & 22. 6. 2 Chr. 36. 15, 16. & 20. 21, 22. Acts 7. 59.
a Deut. 4. 29. & 32. 29. Ps. 81. 10. & 50. 7. with Deut. 32. 11, 12 Ps. 17. 8. & 91. 4. b Ps. 69. 26. Is. 1. 7. Mic. 3. 12. Ps. 81. 11. Hos. 11. 2, 7. Prov. 1. 24, 25. Acts 3. 14, 15. c Ch. 21. 5, 6, 24. & 19. 44. Mic. 3. 12. Is. 1. 7.
d Prov. 1. 26—30. John 8. 21, 24. & 7. 34. Hos. 3. 4, 5.
e Ps. 118. 26. Mat. 21. 9.

Verses 31—35. Christ's inveterate enemies are ceaseless in their malice, seeking to distress and destroy him.

1. Certain Pharisees pretending regard for his safety, brought him information that his life was in danger from Herod; either this was a contrivance of their own, who wanted to get rid of Christ, whose preaching and practice so reproved and cut them to the heart; or it may be, Herod employed them to drive Christ out of his dominions, being willing enough to have done him a mischief, but fearing the consequences of attempting to seize him, because of his interest in the people. Note, It is no unusual artifice of wicked men to seek, by suggestions of danger to deter the faithful from their duty.

2. Christ defies Herod's menaces. Go tell that fox, saith he, whose craft, treachery, and rapine were notorious, Behold I cast out devils, and do cures to-day and to-morrow; not desisting from his work nor intimidated with these threatenings; and the third day I shall be perfected, shortly my work will be finished, and by my sufferings and death I shall complete the salvation of my people: and till then, it is neither in the power of Herod, or any of the emissaries of hell, to stop me in my work, or take away my life. Nevertheless as my hour is not yet come, I must walk to-day and to-morrow, and the day following, continuing his ministry in Galilee, without fear of interruption: for as my death, and the place of it, are foreordained of God, it cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem, where alone the great council sat, to whom it belonged to judge those who laid claim to the gift of prophecy, and to put those whom they counted impostors to death. Note, (1.) All the powers of earth or hell cannot hurt or destroy us, till the appointed time comes. (2.) The day of death will be the time when the faithful shall be perfected; a consummation devoutly to be wished for.

3. On this occasion, at the mention of Jerusalem, Christ laments over her wickedness, and foretells the wrath ready to descend on that devoted city. Not knowing the day of her visitation, she was abandoned to ruin; and too late would be convinced of his divine mission, and wish for a part in his salvation, when he should come shortly to execute his temporal judgments; or in the great day, to pour the vials of his eternal wrath on those who had rejected him.

CHAP. XIV.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

In this chapter we have, 1. The cure which Christ wrought upon a man that had the dropsy, on the sabbath-day, and his justifying himself therein, against those who were offended at his doing it on that day, ver. 1—6. 2. A lesson of humility given to those who were ambitious of the highest rooms, ver. 7—11. 3. A lesson of charity to those who feasted the rich and did not feed the poor, ver. 12—14. 4. The success of the gospel foretold in the parable of the guests, invited to a feast, ver. 15—24. 5. The great law of discipleship laid down, with a caution to all that will be Christ's disciples, to undertake it deliberately, and with consideration, and particularly to ministers, to retain their savour, ver. 25—35.

1. AND it came to pass, [a] as he went into the house of one of the [b] chief Pharisees* to eat bread on the sabbath day, that they [c] watched him. 2. And, behold there was a certain man before him which had the dropsy. 3. And Jesus answering spake unto [d] the lawyers and Pharisees, saying, [e] Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath day? 4. And [f] they held their peace. And he took him, and healed him, and let him go; 5. And answered them, saying, [g] Which of you shall have an ass or an ox fallen into a pit, and will not straightway pull him out on the sabbath day? 6. [h] And they could not answer him again to these things.

a Ch. 7. 34, 36. & 11. 37. 1 Cor. 9. 19, 20.

b John 3. 1.

* Or, of one of the rulers who was a Pharisee.

c Ch. 11. 53, 54. Mark 3. 2. Ps. 37. 32.

d Ch. 11. 29, 46. Mat. 23. 4.

e Mat. 12. 10. ch. 13. 14. Mat. 2. 24. & 3. 4.

f Mat. 21. 25—27. & 22. 22, 34, 36.

g Exod. 23. 5. Deut. 22. 4. ch. 13. 15. Mat. 12. 11, 12.

h Ch. 13. 17. Acts 6. 10. Mat. 22. 46.

Verses 1—6. Christ refused not the invitations of those he knew were his enemies; and though he was well aware of their malicious intentions, he behaved to them with all kindness and courtesy.

1. He dined with a chief Pharisee on the sabbath-day; and there being present a pitiable object, who was swoln with a dropsy; they watched whether he would heal him: intending, if he did, to accuse him as a sabbath-breaker.

2. Christ, who knew their thoughts, interrogates them on the subject, Whether it was lawful to heal on the sabbath day? But they observed a sullen silence, unwilling to preclude the accusation they meditated, by admitting it to be lawful, and yet not knowing how to maintain the unlawfulness of so good a deed.

3. He took the man aside and healed him, reducing in a moment his distended body, and sending him away perfectly cured. And in his own justification, and to their conviction and confusion urges their own practice, to prove the lawfulness of such a work of charity. If they admitted that an ox or an ass fallen into a pit, should be lifted out on the sabbath-day, lest it should perish there, how much more forcible was the argument for the cure of a diseased person, whose life was in danger? and how evidently did it appear, that their zeal for the sabbath was mere hypocrisy, designed only to cover their malignity against him?

4. They could not answer him again to these things, their own conduct spoke their condemnation. Note, At Christ's bar every mouth shall be stopped.

7. ¶ And he put forth a parable to those which were bidden, when he marked how [i] they chose out the chief rooms; saying unto them, 8. When thou art bidden of any man to a wedding, sit not [k] down in the highest room; lest a more honourable man than thou be bidden of him; 9. And he that bade thee and him come and say to thee, Give this man place; and thou begin with shame to take the lowest room. 10. [k] But when thou art bidden, go and sit down in the lowest room; that when he that bade thee cometh he may say unto thee, † Friend, go up higher: then shalt thou have worship in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee. 11. [l] For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted. 12. ¶ Then said he also to him that bade him, [m] When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbours;† lest they also bid thee again, and a recompense be made thee. 13. But when thou makest a feast, [n] call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind: 14. And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee; [o] for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just.*

i Mat. 23. 6. ch. 20. 46. & 11. 43. Mark 12. 38. 3 John 9.

k Prov. 25. 6, 7. 1 Pet. 5. 5. Prov. 15. 33. James 4. 6.

l Mat. 23. 12. ch. 18. 14. & 2. 51. Job 22. 29. Ps. 18. 27. Prov. 15. 33. ver. 10.

m Prov. 15. 33. & 18. 12. & 29. 23. James 4. 6, 10. 1 Pet. 5. 5.

† Many things are delivered in Scripture in the form of an absolute and universal prohibition, which must not be so understood, of which we have here an instance.

n Neh. 8. 12. Job 31. 17. Prov. 3. 9, 28.

o Prov. 19. 17. Mat. 25. 26. John 5. 29. Acts 24. 15. Dan. 12. 2, 3.

* How clearly does it appear that a future state of retribution was a prominent article of the general or popular creed among the Jews at this time!—Scott.

Verses 7—14. Though our Lord was courteous, he was far above the flattery of compliment. When he saw occasion for rebuke, he would not even in the company of persons most distinguished, refrain from faithful admonition.

1. He rebukes the guests for that affectation of pre-eminence which he observed among them, each coveting the most honourable seat at the table. Such pride would expose them to contempt, whilst humility was the way to honour: for they who assumingly thrust themselves into the seat of precedence which did not belong to them, might expect to be degraded, when a more honourable personage coming in, the master of the house would say, Give this man place; and this could not fail of covering with confusion the conceited intruder, who must go down lower, and expose himself to the contempt of the company. Much more to their honour would it be, humbly to take the lowest place as ready to give the preference to others; for then the master, attentive to place his guests, according to their rank, would respectively desire them to come up higher, and their modesty and humility would gain the regard and esteem of all that sit at table. And as this is the case among men, so it is also before God: whosoever exalteth himself, in a proud conceit of his own excellence above other men, shall be abased, treated with contempt and abhorrence by him who trieth the heart, and knows the true characters of men; and he that humbleth himself, under the deepest sense of his vileness and unworthiness, shall be exalted to the favour of God on earth, and to the enjoyment of his glory in heaven. Note, (1.) Pride is a sin alike odious in the sight of God and man. (2.) Modest diffidence gives a brighter lustre to real worth.

2. He rebukes the master of the house for his inviting the rich and neglecting the poor. It bespeaks the pride, selfishness, and luxury of the heart to make profuse entertainments, and invite only the wealthy, at whose tables we expect to be entertained in return. Such feasting is evil; it is an abuse of the creatures of God, and robbery of the poor; not that we are forbid welcoming our friends or returning their visits; it is the profusion which would render us incapable of relieving the indigent, the vain love of show, the ambition of keeping grand company, and the expectation of a recompense in kind, which our Lord condemns. He bids us, on the contrary, with charitable hospitality feed the poor; not sturdy beggars, for that is no charity, but an encouragement to idleness; but the maimed, the lame, the blind; these cannot indeed return the favour; but we shall be no losers. God will remember and reward these labours of love at the resurrection of the just.

15. ¶ And when one of them that sat at meat with him heard these things, he said unto him, [p] Blessed is he that shall eat bread * in the kingdom of God. 16. [q] Then said he unto him, A certain man made a great supper, and bade many: 17. [r] And sent his servant at supper time to say to them that were bidden, Come; for all things are now ready. 18. And [s] they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused. 19. And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them; I pray thee have me excused. 20. And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore cannot come. 21. So that servant came, and shewed his lord these things. Then the master of the house, [t] being angry, said to his servant, [u] Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind. 22. And the servant said, Lord, [x] it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room. 23. And the Lord said unto the servant, [y] Go out into the highways and hedges, and [z] compel them to come in, that my house may be filled. 24. For I say unto you, that [a] none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper.

p Rev. 19. 9. ch. 13. 29. John 6. 34.

* To eat bread is a well-known Hebrew idiom for, to share in a repast.

q Mat. 22. 2—10. Is. 25. 6. Mark 16. 15. Rev. 19. 9. Is. 55. 1—7.

r Mat. iii, x. Mark i, iii. Luke i, iii, ix, x. Acts i—ix. Prov. 1. 20—24. & 9. 1—5.

s Mat. 22. 3, 5, 6. John 1. 11. & 5. 40. Mal. 13. 22. ch. 8. 14. & 21. 34. Is. 29. 9—12 & 28. 9—13. & 5. 5, 6. 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10. 2 Tim. 4. 10. Phil. 3. 19. Ps. 17. 14.

t Mat. 22. 7, 8. & 21. 41, 43. & 3. 11, 12. see ver. 24.

u Mat. 28. 18, 19. & 11. 5, 28. Mark 16. 15, 16. Acts 13. 46, 47. & 28. 28. Rev. 22. 17. Is. 42. 6, 7. & 45. 22. with John 7. 48, 49. Zech. 11. 7, 11. James 2. 5.

x Acts i—ix.

y Mat. 22. 9, 10 & 28. 18, 19. & 26. 13. Mark 16. 15, 16. Eph. 2. 17—22. & 3. 6—8. Rom. 10. 18. Col. 1. 23. Acts x, xi.

z Prov. 1. 20—23. & 9. 4, 5. 2 Cor. 5. 20 & 10. 3—5. Col. 1. 23, 28, 29. 2 Tim. 4. 2. Ps. 110. 3.

a See Mat. 21 41, 43. & 8. 11, 12. & 23. 38, 39. & 22. 8.

Verses 15—24. Affected with the discourse of Christ, which breathed such humility and charity, one of the guests broke forth as in a transport, looking forward to the days of the Messiah, when they expected that all plenty, piety, and happiness would universally abound, and said, Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God. Christ immediately replied to this observation by a parable, drawn from the feast before them, and containing intimations which they would be very backward to receive; insinuating to them, that however great the Messiah's kingdom might be, the Jews in general would reject it, and the despised Gentiles chiefly partake of the privileges of the gospel.

1. A certain man made a great supper, and bade many. Christ is the master of the feast; all the riches of gospel grace are provided by him for the entertainment of miserable sinners, and his invitation is free and gracious. He bids his servants say, whosoever will, let him come, for all things are now ready; the present moment is the accepted time; there must be no delay; and if we feel our want of pardon, peace, grace, and glory; we shall make none, but press eagerly to be fed with these heavenly provisions.

2. The guests gave the servants a cold reception, and pretended other engagements. The Jewish people in general rejected the gospel, and turned a deaf ear to the apostles, and evangelists; and too many in every age resemble them, and find some frivolous excuse for their conduct. One had purchased a farm, and he must needs go and see it; another had bought five yoke of oxen, and he wanted to try them; and a third is just married, and therefore he pleads, I cannot come. But the truth is, I will not; his wife would have found a welcome too, that need not have hindered him. Note, (1.) Any thing will serve for a hinderance to those who want an excuse; and the devil will take care that they shall not be at a loss, who have no inclination to duty. (2.) Hearts full of worldly cares, and set on amassing wealth, must needs be deaf to gospel calls. (3.) The folly of men of the world is great as their sins; for what trifles do they barter heaven! (4.) Inordinate affection to lawful comforts, even to our dearest relatives, may prove a dangerous stumbling-block in our way to glory.

3. The servants returned with grief to their master, and reported the repulse they had met with; and just indignation kindled in the master's bosom at the ingratitude and contempt shown to his gracious invitation. Note, (1.) Ministers carry their complaints to God against the souls among whom they have laboured in vain, and spent their strength for nought; and a fearful account will such despisers of the gospel shortly give. (2.) Abused mercy turns to fiercest wrath; rejection of the calls of grace must needs issue in ruin.

4. Though they who were invited refuse to come, the feast shall not be lost. The master bids his servants go into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in the poor, the maimed, the halt, and the blind; since the Scribes and Pharisees, with all the rich and noble among the Jews, rejected his salvation, the gospel was to be preached to the lowest of the people, many of whom were brought to the obedience of faith. And when the servants, having executed their commission, reported that yet there was room, their Lord sends them into the highways and hedges, even to the Gentile world, to call the vilest sinners, and urge them to come in, assuring them of a hearty welcome. Note, (1.) The unbelief of the impenitent shall not prevent the promise of God from taking effect. Christ will have a church and people in the world, though the wise, mighty, and noble reject him. (2.) The gospel has usually most success among those whom the proud, the wise, and self-righteous despise, even the ignorant, the poor, the publicans, and open sinners; nor must the servants think it any disparagement to themselves or their master, that of such is the kingdom of heaven. (3.) The compulsion which Christ's ministers must use is, the force of argument and persuasion; not violence, or the civil power, which can only make men hypocrites. (4.) None are excluded from Christ who do not exclude themselves; there is room, and we are welcome: if we refuse to come, our ruin lieth at our own door.

5. He seals up the despisers of the gospel under wrath and reprobacy. I say unto you that none of those who were bidden, shall taste of my supper. The unbelieving Jews to whom the gospel was first preached, and all who hear and reject the counsel of God against their own souls are justly abandoned to the delusions they have chosen, and left to perish in their sins.

Mat 10. 37. & 16. 25. & 19. 29. Deut. 33. 9. & 13. 6. John 21. 17. Ps. 73. 25, 26. & 142. 4, 5. Rev. 12. 11.

c Mark 8. 34. Mat. 10. 38. & 16. 24. & 11. 29. ch. 9. 23. 2 Tim. 3. 12.

d Prov. 24. 27. 1 Kin. 5. 15. 1 Pet. 2. 5. Jude 20. These parables teach us that we must resolve to lose all, and suffer all, for Christ, when we set out in religion.

e Gal. 3. 3, 4. Heb. 6. 4—8. & 10. 26, 27. with 2 Pet. 1. 4—12. & 3. 12. Col. 2. 6, 7. Tit. 2. 11—13. 2 John 8. 18.

f Prov. 20. 18. Men had better never profess to serve Christ, than apostatise from him. 2 Pet. 2. 20—22. Rev. 3. 15, 16.

g Mat. 5. 25. ch. 12. 58. Heb. 12. 14.

h Mat. 16. 24, 25. & 19. 27—29. ver. 26, 27. Phil. 3. 7—9. Ps. 73. 25, 26.

i Col. 4. 6. Mat. 5. 13. Mark 9. 49, 50. ver. 28, 29. with Gal. 5. 6. & 6. 15. Heb. 10. 26, 38. & 6. 4—8. Tit. 1. 16. Is. 66. 3, 24. & 1. 11—15. Christ's doctrines, graces, and ministers are useful for reforming and preserving; but if once professors and ministers turn erroneous and carnal, they are most useless, contemptible, and ripened for misery.

k Ch. 9. 44. & 3. 8. Mat. 11. 15. & 13. 9. Rev. 2. 7, 11, 17, 29. & 3. 6, 13, 22.

25. ¶ And there went great multitudes with him: and he turned, and said unto them, 26. [b] If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple. 27. [c] And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple. 28. [d] For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it? 29. Lest haply, after he had laid the foundation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it begin to mock him, 30. Saying, [e] This man began to build, and was not able to finish. 31. Or what king, going to make war against another king, [f] sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand? 32. Or else, while the other is yet a great way off, he [g] sendeth an embassage, and desireth conditions of peace. 33. So likewise, [h] whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple. 34. ¶ [i] Salt is good: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be seasoned? 35. It is neither fit for the land, nor yet for the dunghill; but men cast it out. [k] He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

Verses 25—35. Multitudes followed Christ probably in hopes to share in that temporal kingdom which they expected the Messiah would set up. To undeceive them, he lets them know,

1. The terms of discipleship. They will not find that ease, affluence, and honour, with which they flattered themselves, but the very reverse: they must be ready to quit their nearest and dearest relations, when Christ's service calls for them; must be content to leave all behind, and to be banished from their best friends; if parents' commands come in competition with our duty to him, we must not hesitate whom we shall obey: nay, our own lives must not be dear to us, when his glory requires us to lay them down. The love of him must constrain us stronger than death: every cross which he is pleased to lay upon us, cheerfully should we take up; content to be nailed to it, if he so ordain. And if without such entire surrender of ourselves to him, we cannot be his disciples, much less may we think we belong to him, if we are afraid to disoblige a friend or a relation for his sake, if we cannot bear a name of infamy, or a badge of reproach. Such as shrink from these lesser trials, and are ashamed to make profession of him, will certainly never go with him to prison or to death.

2. He exhorts his followers seriously and deliberately to weigh the difficulties and dangers, before they embark in his cause; lest after having made a profession, they should expose themselves to contempt, and bring heavier ruin upon their souls, by drawing back unto perdition: and this he illustrates by two comparisons, (1.) By a man sitting down to build a tower, who makes an estimate of the charge before he begins the fabric; lest otherwise, rashly embarking in a work for which his abilities are not sufficient, the unfinished ruins should expose him to contempt. We have this tower of salvation to build on, Jesus, the sure foundation; it will cost us much labour, prayer, self-denial, reproach, loss, perhaps of life itself, ere it be finished. Before, therefore, we commence professed disciples, we should well weigh the consequences, whether we have really power from on high, divine faith, and a vital principle of grace to carry us through. Many have begun, and failed, and thereby exposed themselves to just contempt; for even the wicked world, to whom they return, will ridicule and despise those who draw back from their holy profession. (2.) By one king going to war against another. Before he takes the field, he will weigh the danger, and consider whether he is a match for his antagonist; and if he finds his strength utterly unequal, it is wisest, before matters are driven to extremities, to send ambassadors, and seek peace. Such is our case: a Christian is a soldier, who must expect and prepare to endure hardness; the powers of earth, corruption, and hell, under Satan, their king, are the twenty thousand with whom we have to conflict. Clothed, therefore, in the panoply of God, and supported with his might in the inner man, we should go forth; and the sword once drawn, we must never sheath it till death. But if deterred by difficulties, persecutions, and sufferings, we seek an ignominious peace with the world which lieth in wickedness: under the government of that wicked one; and instead of forsaking all, stagger in the hour of trial; the case is desperate, we shall continue enslaved by sin and cannot be Christ's disciples.

3. He warns them against apostasy, whether ministers or people. Salt is good; my gospel and they who dispense it, are the salt of the earth; but if the salt hath lost his savour, and those who profess to spread the lively truths of God, adulterate the word, and grow degenerate in their temper and manners, wherewith shall it be seasoned? The case appears desperate, where such rooted departure from the truth in practice and principle prevails; it is neither fit for the land, nor yet for the dunghill; such persons are not only useless, but noxious, and therefore men cast it out; all good men abandon such faithless professors, and they should be cast out of the church, as they will infallibly be separated eternally from the communion of the faithful in heaven. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear; and let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall.

CHAP. XV.—anno domini, 32.

Christ vindicates himself from the cavils of the Pharisees, offended at his conversing with publicans and sinners, ver. 1, 2. In three parables, 1. Of the lost sheep, ver. 3—7. 2. Of the lost silver, ver. 8, 9, 10. 3. Of the prodigal son, ver. 11—32.

1. THEN drew near unto him, [a] all the publicans and sinners for to hear him. 2. And the Pharisees and scribes [b] murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them. 3. ¶ And he spake this parable unto them, saying, a Ch. 14. 21. & 5. 29—32. & 7. 29. Mat. 21. 31, 32. & 9. 10, 13. Mark 2. 15, 16. Ezek. 18. 23. 1 Tim. 1. 15.

b Mat. 9. 11. & 20. 15. ch. 5. 30. & 19. 7. Acts 11. 3. ch. 19. 7. 10. Gal. 2. 12

4. [c] What man of you, having a hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it? 5. And when he hath found it, [d] he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing. 6. And when he cometh home, he calleth together his [e] friends and neighbours, saying unto them, Rejoice with me; for I have found my sheep which was lost. 7. I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine [f] just persons, which need no repentance. 8. ¶ Either what woman having ten [g] pieces of silver, if she lose one piece, doth not light a candle, and sweep the house, and [h] seek diligently till she find it? 9. [i] And when she hath found it, she calleth her friends and her neighbours together, saying, Rejoice with me; for I have found the piece which I had lost. 10. Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.*

c Mat. 18. 12, 13. Jer. 50. 6. Ezek. 34. 6, 8, 16, 23. Is. 53. 6, 10—12. John 10. 11, 16. 1 Pet. 2. 25. Ps. 119. 176. Is. 63. 1, 4. & 27. 12, 13. & 45. 22, 24. Ezek. 34. 16. Phil. 1. 6. 1 Tim. 1. 13—16. ch. 9. 10.

d Is. 40. 11. & 46. 3, 4. & 63. 9. & 53. 10. ch. 19. 9. & 23. 43. & 7. 36—50. John iv. Acts ix. 1 Tim. 1. 13—16.

e Ver. 7, 9, 10. Rev. 11. 15. & 12. 10. & 18. 20. & 3. 21. ch. 2. 13, 14. 1 Thes. 2. 19.

f Ch. 5. 32. Prov. 30. 12. Mat. 18. 13.

g Drachma was seven-pence three farthings, i. e. equal to the Roman penny. Mat. 18. 28.

h Mat. 18. 11. ch. 19. 10. Ezek. 34. 12. 2 Tim. 4. 2.

i See ver. 6, 7.

* This consideration should inflame the zeal and quicken the industry of the spiritual shepherd for the conversion of sinners, as knowing this is a work so highly acceptable to the God of heaven.—Whitby.

Verses 1—10. Offended, perhaps, with the hard sayings of the former chapter, many of his attendants withdrew, and made way for another set of hearers.

1. The publicans and sinners drew near to hear him. The publicans were usually persons of the most infamous character, and the sinners were either public and notorious offenders, or, it may be, some of the heathen, as from the multitude of strangers who dwelt there, the country was called Galilee of the Gentiles; these assembled around him, they needed such a gracious Saviour.

2. The proud Pharisees and Scribes hereupon expressed their displeasure; offended, that one who professed himself a prophet, should deign to permit such wretches to approach him, receive them with kindness, and sit with them at the same table. Their insolent self-conceit would have said, Come not near me; but he, who came to be the sinner's friend, did not disdain their company; they were the lost he came to save. Note, The censure of the self-righteous falls heaviest usually on the most excellent persons, in the noblest exercises of charity.

3. Christ vindicates himself from their reproaches, in two parables: and shows that the highest glory would redound to God from the conversion of these sinners, and joy fill the celestial host on that occasion. We have,

(1.) The parable of the lost sheep, wherein we may observe, [1.] The case of the miserable sinner: he is lost, gone astray from God's fold; wandering endlessly in mazes of ignorance and error; a stranger to all spiritual comfort and happiness; running headlong to destruction, and ready to perish everlastingly. [2.] The peculiar care of the Saviour towards his people in their lost estate; like a shepherd who leaves his flock in the wilderness to seek one straying sheep, so doth the Lord pursue his wanderers; he finds them when they do not seek him, takes them up in the arms of his grace, weak and impotent of themselves to return, and brings them back to his fold with that effectual power and tender pity, which secures them from all harm. (3.) There is greater joy in heaven over one such sinner recovered by sovereign grace, than over ninety and nine just persons which need no repentance; which seems to be spoken with a peculiar reference to the Pharisees who trusted that they were righteous and needed no repentance. These our Lord left in the wilderness of unregeneracy, to perish in their pride; the conversion of one poor Gentile sinner, the recovery of the most notorious offender, was matter of greater rejoicing in heaven, and brought more glory to God than that form of godliness in which they boasted.

(2.) The parable of the lost piece of money, which is nearly of the same import as the foregoing. The woman represents the Lord, the possessor of all; the silver, the souls of men, infinitely more precious: the nine pieces, design the Scribes and Pharisees, and all self-righteous persons; the one lost piece, the heathen or any poor perishing sinner, sunk in the dregs of pollution, or lost in the dirt of worldly mindedness and sensuality; The candle is the blessed gospel which shines in this dark place the world, where the sinner lies buried in corruption; the sweeping the house represents the diligence of the faithful ministers of Christ, whose instrumentality he uses to seek after lost souls; and when he hath designs of grace towards a soul, he never ceases seeking him, till the means are made effectual to his conversion and salvation: and great is the joy arising from this happy event. The angels of God rejoice in it, and the more desperate the case seemed, and the more unexpected the recovery, the more sensible is the pleasure. To see the chief of sinners brought to repentance, raises their loudest songs of praise. Those therefore, who made such objections to his receiving sinners, evidently showed themselves destitute of a heavenly mind, and unlike the angels of God.

11. ¶ And he said, [k] A certain man had two sons: 12. And the younger of them said to his father, [l] Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his living. 13. And not many days after, the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a [m] far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living. 14. And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; [n] and he began to be in want. 15. And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to [o] feed swine. 16. [p] And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat: and [q] no man gave unto him. 17. And when [r] he came to himself, † he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger! 18. [s] I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against Heaven, and before thee, 19. [t] And am no more worthy to be called thy son: [u] make me as one of thy hired servants. 20. And he arose, and came to his father. [x] But when he was yet a great way off, [y] his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him. 21. And the son said unto him, Father, [z] I k Mat. 21. 28. i. e. Jews and Gentiles, or moralists and profane persons.

l Mal. 2. 10. Is. 64. 8. Num. 16. 22. Heb. 12. 9.

m Eph. 2. 13, 17. Ps. 73. 27. Is. 57. 19. Rom. 1. 21—32. Tit. 3. 3. 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. Is. 1. 4. Jer. 2. 13, 17.

n Prov. 5. 11. Hos. 2. 14. Amos 8. 11.

o Ps. 4. 6. Tit. 3. 3. Eph. 2. 1—3. 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10.

p Ch. 16. 21. Job 15. 16. & 20 12—16. Is. 55. 2. Ezek. 7. 19. Hos. 12. 1.

q Rev. 3. 17. Ps. 142. 4.

r Eccl. 9. 3. Acts 26. 11.

† He who lives a sinful life is beside himself; he acts against his reason, his judgment, and his conscience.—Whitby.

s Hos. 2. 7. Mat. 11. 28. Lam. 3. 40. Jer. 31. 18, 19. ch. 18. 13. Dan. 4. 26. Prov. 5. 21. Ps. 51. 4.

t Gen. 32. 10. Jer. 3. 5, 19. ch. 5. 8. 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. Tit. 3. 3. Eph. 2. 1—3, 12. 1 Tim. 1. 13.

u John 6. 28. Acts 2. 37. & 16. 30. Rom. 10. 3. & 9. 31. Ps. 84. 10. Jer. 31. 18, 19.

x Ch. 18. 13. Acts 2. 39. Rom. 4. 5. Eph. 2. 12, 13, 17.

y Ezek. 16. 6—8. Mic. 7. 18, 19. Is. 49. 15. Hos. 11. 8.

z Ver. 18, 19. ch. 18. 13. Josh. 7. 9. Jer. 3. 13. Rom. 7. 8—14. Gen. 32. 10.

have sinned against Heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son. 22. But the father said to his servants, Bring forth [a] the best robe, and put it on him; and put a [b] ring on his hand, and [c] shoes on his feet: 23. And bring hither the [d] fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat, and be merry: 24. [e] For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost and is found. And they began to be merry. 25. Now his elder son was in the field: and as he came and drew nigh to the house, he heard [h] musick and dancing. 26. And he called one of his servants, and asked what these things meant. 27. And he said unto him, [i] Thy brother is come; and [k] thy father hath killed the fatted calf, because he hath received him safe and sound. 28. [l] And he was angry, and would not go in: therefore came his father out, and entreated him. 29. And he answering said to his father, [m] Lo, these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment; and [n] yet thou never gavest me a kid, that I might make merry with my friends: 30. [o] But as soon as this thy son was come, which hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf. 31. And he said unto him, Son, [p] thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine. 32. [q] It was meet that we should make merry, and be glad: for this [r] thy brother was dead, and is alive again; and was lost, and is found.

a Mat. 22. 11. Rom. 13. 14. Rev. 19. 8. Ezek. 16. 10—12. Is. 61. 10. Gal. 3. 27.
b Ezek. 36. 27. 2 Cor. 1. 22. Eph. 1. 13, 14. Acts 10. 44—47.
c Song 7. 1. Eph. 6. 13.
d Prov. 9. 2. Is. 25. 6. Mat. 22. 4. & xxvi, xxvii. John 6. 51—58. Zeph. 3. 17. Is. 42. 21. & 53. 10. & 62. 5. Rom. 5. 11.
e Eph. 2. 1—8, 10, 12, 13, 19—22. & 5. 14. Col. 1. 13.
f Acts 26. 17, 18. Tit. 3. 3—7. 1 Cor. 6. 9—11. 1 Tim. 1. 13.
g Mat. 20. 10—12
h Acts 8. 39. Rom. 5. 1, 11. Phil. 4. 4. 1 Thes. 5. 16.
i Acts 13. 46—48 & 11. 17. & 28. 28. Eph. 2. 17—20. & 3. 6—8. Col. 1. 6, 23.
k Ver. 23. Eph. 3. 8.
l Acts 11. 2, 3. & 13. 45, 50. & 14. 2, 19. & 17. 13. & 18. 5, 6. & 22. 21, 22. Rom. 9. 30—33. & 11. 12. 1 Thes. 2. 16. Gal. 2. 12. m John 8. 33, 41. ch. 16. 15. & 18. 11, 12. Is. 58. 2. & 1. 15. Rev. 3. 17. Is. 29. 13. n Is. 58. 3. Mat. 20. 11, 12.
o Ver. 13, 22, 23.
p Exod. 19. 4—6. Deut. 32. 9. Ps. 147. 19, 20. Rom. 9. 4, 5. Mat. 13. 12. & 25. 29.
q Rom. 15. 9—13. Is. liv, lx—lxii.
r Song 8. 8, 9. Eph. 2. 1—10. Acts 26. 17, 18. see ver. 24. 1 Cor. 6. 9—11. Tit. 3. 3—7. Hos. 13. 9. ch. 19. 10. Ps. 22. 27—30.

Verses 11—32. Yet farther, to show how little cause the Scribes and Pharisees had to murmur at the favour shown to publicans and sinners, he added a third beautiful parable, wherein miserable and wretched sinners may ever read the compassions of a pardoning God, and be engaged by the riches of his grace to return to the arms of his mercy.

The certain man here spoken of, is God, the common Father of all: the two sons are either the Jews, the elder brother, and the Gentiles, the younger; or rather, by the one are meant the Scribes and Pharisees, by the other the publicans and sinners; both as descendants of Abraham, the children of God, in a covenant of peculiarity. And to this latter sense, the occasion of the parable seems to direct us.

The character of the miserable sinner is here drawn under the figure of the younger son. We have,

His departure from home, and the miseries into which his extravagance brought him.

(1.) He was impatient of restraint, as young men usually are; wanted to get from his father's eye; conceited himself able to manage better for himself than his aged parent for him, and therefore forwardly demands, Give me the portion of goods which falleth to me, as if he had a right to challenge them as his due: just such are we all by nature. (1.) Discontent under God's government, and affecting independency. (2.) Desirous to fly from him, and foolishly flattering ourselves that we can be hid. (3.) Puffed up with high imaginations of our own abilities and excellence. (4.) Looking upon God's gifts as our own property, for the use of which we are accountable to none. (5.) Coveting a present portion, and seeking all our happiness from the world careless and unconcerned about our future state.

(2.) The father, though he might justly except to such a forward demand, divided his substance, and gave the younger son his share; evidently showing, he was not that morose and harsh parent, which this headstrong youth probably represented him. Thus God bestows liberally the bounties of his providence on the evil and unthankful; and leaves his own children for a while to the devices of their own hearts, that dire conviction may teach them their folly and their sin.

(3.) No sooner had he got his share, than in haste to be gone, he stayed but a few days to pack up his all, and took his journey into a far country, where he apprehended no rebuke from his watchful father; and there giving a loose to every appetite, he soon dissipated his fortune among women, wine, and riotous living. How exact the representation! (1.) Such wanderers are we; as soon as we are born we go astray. (2.) In this alienation from God the sinner habitually continues, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind. (3.) We are enslaved by vile affections, and naturally devoted to those youthful lusts which war against the soul. (4.) Present gratification usually weighs with us more than any considerations about futurity. (5.) As extravagance and whoredom have the most direct tendency to rob us of our substance, much more will these, and the like sins, infallibly ruin our souls.

(4.) Great were the miseries in which this prodigal now felt himself involved. When he had spent all, which would not hold long in such bad company as he kept, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and as those on whom he had lavished his money, now dropped off from his acquaintance as the leaves in autumn, he began to be in want, without a morsel of bread to appease the cravings of hunger. Reduced now to the utmost distress, without a farthing in his pocket, without a friend to assist him, necessity drives him to court the meanest drudgery to keep body and soul together, he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country, and he sent him into his fields to feed swine; yet even there he could not earn enough to satisfy his hunger; he envied the very swine their husks, and would fain have filled his belly with them, but could not, or was not permitted that favour, and no man had the least compassion for his case, or gave unto him the least morsel of sustenance: such is the misery of the sinner. (1.) He is in want of all true comfort, and destitute of all grace; the favour of God, as the dew of heaven, is withheld; his hard heart produces nothing good, and he pines away in his iniquities. (2.) He is the vilest slave in nature; the devil is the citizen, in whose hard service he is employed; he is like the swine, wallowing in the lusts of uncleanness, or grovelling in worldly-mindedness. (3.) His soul is harassed with raging desires, which none of his pursuits can gratify; for they who depart from God, to seek satisfaction in the creature, must feel the curse of incessant hunger, and find nothing but husks before them. The world, and all the things of it, can provide no solid food for an immortal soul.

Some give a different interpretation of the words. They suppose the citizen of that country to be a Pharasaical legal preacher to whom the awakened sinner flies under his distress. He sets him to work in his fields; directs him to moral duties, to the law, to the conditions of the covenant, in order to obtain peace with God: but the husks of self-righteousness are unsatisfactory; conscience is unappeased; guilt unatoned for; corruption unmortified; and he continues a companion of swine.

2. Distress at last brought him to consider the wofulness of his state, and what possibility there yet was of preventing his dying for want in that strange land. When he came to himself, for hitherto he had acted as a madman, or one possessed, he began to reflect on the plenty which reigned in his father's family, where there was not a hired servant, but had bread enough and to spare; and I, says he, perish with hunger. He resolves therefore to return, and cast himself on his father's mercy, acknowledging his sin against heaven and against him, owning it his just desert to be disowned for a son, and begging it, as the highest favour he dares to ask, to be admitted among the hired servants. And what he resolved, he immediately executed: his urgent want admitted of no delay: happy the soul in whom such a gracious purpose is stirred up! Note, (1.) Every impenitent sinner is beside himself; all his thoughts, words, and ways bespeak the madman; fancying himself wise, great, happy, when infatuated, poor, and miserable; and putting a value upon the straws of his cell, the gain and pleasures of this world, as if they were sterling gold, whilst he is insensible to all the eternal glories that are above. (2.) In our most desperate estate, whilst there is life there is hope; it is never too late to return unto God; the vilest sinner may find mercy, the most abominable be converted and changed. (3.) Afflictions are often made the blessed means of driving our souls to God; softened by the rod of correction the heart is made tender, and disposed to listen to the words of wisdom, which were before despised and rejected. (4.) Though the conversion of the soul to God is alone effected by the power of divine grace, yet he works in such a way as that it is our own choice, and the result of reason, consideration, and conviction. He opens our understandings to see our true state, and beholding the inevitable ruin which is before us, we are driven by mere necessity to Christ for pardon and salvation. (5.) None need perish who return unto God right humble: there is with him grace abounding, bread enough and to spare. (6.) In our returns to God, we must all adopt the prodigal's spirit and language; we have sinned more than we can express or conceive; we should reflect upon all the aggravations of our sin, how ungratefully we have behaved towards the Father of mercies, how impiously affronted the Most High, whose throne is in the heavens, that so we may truly loathe ourselves for all our abominations. (7.) We are never truly humbled for sin, till we feel and own our unworthiness of the least mercy, and our just desert of being utterly abandoned and rejected of God; so that if the least favour be shown us, we shall acknowledge it with deepest gratitude. (8.) Vile and wicked as we may have been, we must not forget that endearing name of Father, to encourage our hopes, to awaken genuine and godly sorrow, and to embolden our faith to approach him. (9.) When God is working with our hearts, all depends upon our immediate obedience to his calls and warnings. To-day, whilst it is called to-day, harden not your hearts.

3. His reception was unspeakably beyond his expectations. He came to his father, and was welcomed with open arms. Let offended parents learn such compassion towards their returning prodigals. When he was yet a great way off, as if the father's longing eyes had been looking out for his coming, he saw him, and though in rags and nakedness, emaciated and changed, so that another could scarce have known him, he discerned the long-lost child. Melted with compassion at his piteous case, yet overjoyed once more to behold him, he ran with eagerness and fell on his neck, embracing him with the warmest emotions of paternal tenderness, and kissed him, the token of welcome, the seal of pardon: such are the tender mercies of our God towards poor sinners; he sees, well pleased, the first rising desire in our hearts towards him; he pities our miseries though we have brought it upon ourselves, and have so highly dishonoured him: his arms of grace are open to receive us, he will not upbraid our folly, but is ready instantly to pardon our sin, and through Christ Jesus to forgive and forget all that is past, sealing our pardon, and speaking peace to our souls. The prodigal deeply affected with his own vileness, and now more deeply struck with his ingratitude than ever, under the reception of such amazing tenderness as his father showed him, with grief and shame unfeigned, cries, Father, I have sinned, &c. The sense of God's pardoning love, instead of making the sinner proud, abases him to the dust, and makes him abhor himself for having ever offended a God so gracious. The son would have proceeded, but the father's heart is so overjoyed, he prevents him with blessings and loving-kindness, commanding the most splendid dress and the noblest entertainment to be provided for him. So far is the Lord from upbraiding poor returning penitents, that their iniquities, like a cloud, are blotted out, and glory and honour are put upon them.

[1.] The father commands his servants to bring forth the best robe, to put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet, that his nakedness may not only be covered, and his filthy garments taken away, but that he may be adorned as became a dear child of that noble family: and how much more glorious the provision which Jesus hath made for his returning prodigals! A robe of righteousness, perfect and everlasting, is provided for them, arrayed in which they appear without spot even in the presence of God. Their filthy garments of sin are taken away, and beautiful in holiness impressed as well as righteousness imputed, they all are seen to be the children of a king. The ring, the seal of reconciliation and union, the Spirit of Jesus gives, sealing them unto the day of redemption; and shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, they run the way of God's commandments with delight.

[2.] The noblest entertainment is ordered. Bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it, and let us eat and be merry. Hungry and faint, he had long been a stranger to such rich provision; and pining in want and wretchedness, was a stranger to joy: but now he shall be fed to the full, and partake of the general gladness which his return occasions. Note, (1.) In the gospel, the richest provision is made for the hungry; Christ with all his fulness is provided, and faith feeds upon him, to the strengthening and refreshing of the soul. (2.) They who are brought by grace to taste of the sweetness of God's love, will truly say, that every thing compared with that, is but husks. (3.) There is joy among all the household of God when one poor sinner returns to join the happy family.

[3.] The cause of the father's joy is this, My son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found; he was as bad as dead, yea, worse than dead, whilst living in riot and excess: lost to his family, undone himself; but his return is life from the dead. Note, (1.) Every impenitent sinner in the midst of life is in death; spiritually dead to God, and ready to suffer the wages of eternal death in hell. (2.) The soul lost in sin, is lost for ever, unless recovered by sovereign grace. (3.) Though God's dearest children may lie down in common with others, sunk under guilt, and enslaved by corruption, yet in God's purposes they are still his: and this blessed and happy change shall pass upon them: The dead, shall live, the lost be found.

4. The family readily joined the master of the house, rejoicing with him on the present happy occasion. The elder son alone appeared discontented; he was in the field when his brother returned, and heard with surprise, as he drew near to the house, the music and dancing. Inquiring of one of the servants, he soon learns the occasion, and expresses his disgust and discontent against his father's behaviour, as if the kindness shown to his brother was an injury done to himself; who, he conceives, had deserved so much better at his father's hand. This character properly belonged to the Pharisees, and is applicable to all who are influenced by the same spirit of pride and self-righteousness. They are in the field of this world, in a state of unregeneracy; the slaves of earth, minding worldly things, working for life, and expecting to receive the harvest of eternal glory as the fruit of their own labours. They draw nigh to the house, the church of God, in profession, but never enter it by a spiritual union with the head of the church, Christ Jesus. They hear the music and dancing, the sweet sound of the great and precious promises, which makes the hearts of the miserable and guilty dance for joy; and strangers to the divine consolation themselves, they are vexed that any others should partake of it; and angry, that those should be admitted to the enjoyment of all the riches of his grace who had behaved so profligately, and be put on a level with themselves, who have, as they conceit, deserved so well at God's hands. They will not go in, not submitting to the righteousness, nor content to receive the salvation of God freely, as lost and undone as much as the vilest of mankind. In vain the Lord, by the ministry of the word, remonstrates with them on their perverseness, and urges upon them the necessity of a better righteousness than their own; entreating them to accept of that provided by the Redeemer, and thus come in and partake of the feast. They vaunt their own meritorious services, and in their own conceit fancy they never transgressed at any time the commandments, and therefore have a claim to the divine favour. They cannot regard publicans as their brethren, and think the kindness of God to perishing sinners is injustice to them, and unbecoming him; that these, instead of being received into his arms, should smart under his rod; and at least ought only to be received into a lower place, after having done long penance for their offences.

Some suppose that the elder brother represents a gracious man, who having himself escaped from the grosser pollutions that are in the world, is apt to entertain too high thoughts of himself, and too little compassion towards such as have more grossly offended. To avoid which, we should learn, (1.) To entertain the lowest thoughts of ourselves, and especially to watch against spiritual pride. (2.) Never to complain of God as unjust to us, but to acknowledge ourselves unworthy of the least of all his mercies. (3.) Not to harbour unkindness against, and treat with severity, those who may have dishonoured their profession by their unfaithfulness, but to be happy to give them again the right hand of fellowship, whenever they return to God. (4.) To rejoice in the gifts and graces of those who have been most eminent sinners, and not to envy them their distinguished mercies, though they may now far outshine and eclipse ourselves.

5. The father silences and rebukes his unreasonable murmurs. Son, thou art ever with me; the Scribes and Pharisees, or the Jewish people, enjoyed peculiar privileges, the ordinances of worship, and the special presence of God in the midst of them: and all that I have is thine; if by their unbelief they did not cut themselves off, the mercy shown to Gentiles to the chief of sinners, would prove no diminution of the favours they should enjoy. It was meet that we should make merry and be glad: for this thy brother was dead and is alive again, and was lost and is found; the conversion of the Gentiles and other notorious sinners, dead in trespasses, and ready to perish for ever, so far from being a ground of discontent, should be to all matter of rejoicing. Note, (1.) They who are truly God's children, may be assured that all things are theirs, all spiritual blessings in time and in eternity. (2.) The abounding grace of God is never exhausted by the myriads who partake of it; the happiness of others is no diminution of our own, but rather increases our delight. (3.) Whatever God doth is well done; every murmur must be silenced before him; and in all the dispensations of his providence and grace, he is ever to be acknowledged as righteous, just, and good.

CHAP. XVI.—ANNO DOMINI, 32.

We have here, 1. The right use of worldly enjoyments represented in the parable of the unjust steward, ver. 1—13. 2. A reproof of the Pharisees for their covetousness, ver. 14—18. 3. The danger of setting our hearts on an earthly portion, illustrated in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, ver. 19—31.

1. AND he said also unto his disciples, [a] There was a certain rich man which had a steward; and the same was accused unto him that he [b] had wasted his goods. 2. And he called him, and said unto him, [c] How is it that I hear this of thee? [d] give an account of thy stewardship; for thou mayest be no longer steward. 3. Then the steward said within himself, What shall I do? for my lord taketh away from me the stewardship: [e] I cannot dig; to beg I am ashamed. 4. [f] I am resolved what to do; that, when I am put out of the stewardship, they may receive me into their houses. 5. So he called every one of his lord's debtors unto him, and said unto the first, How much owest thou unto my lord? 6. And he said, An hundred * measures of oil. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and sit down quickly and write fifty. 7. Then said he to another, And how much owest thou? And he said, An hundred † measures of wheat. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and write fourscore. 8. And the lord commended the unjust steward, ‡ because he had done [g] wisely: [h] for the children of the world are in their generation wiser than [i] the children of light. 9. And I say unto you, [k] Make to yourselves friends of the [l] mammon of unrighteousness; that, when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations. 10. [m] He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much: and he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much. 11. If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous ‡ mammon, who will commit to your trust the [n] true riches? 12. And if ye have not been faithful in ° that which is another man's, who shall give you that [p] which is your own? 13. [q] No servant can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. [r] Ye cannot serve God and mammon. 14. ¶ And the Pharisees also, [s] who were covetous, heard all these things: and they [t] derided him. 15. And he said unto them, Ye are they which [u] justify yourselves before men; but [x] God knoweth your hearts: [y] for that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in

[a] Ps. 24. 1. & 50. 10, 11. & 115. 16. Is. 66. 1.
[b] Deut. 32. 14, 15. Ezek. 16. 15—21. Hos. 2. 8, 9. ch. 15. 13, 30. Jam. 4. 3.
[c] Gen. 3. 11. & 4. 10. & 18. 20. Is. 1. 2.
[d] Eccl. 11. 9. & 12 11. Mat. 12. 36. Rom. 14. 12. 2 Cor. 5. 10. 1 Pet. 4. 5. Rev. 20. 12.
[e] Tit. 1. 12. Is. 56. 10. 2 Thes. 3. 11.
[f] Jer. 4. 22. Jam. 3. 15. Is. 29. 15.
* A bath contained a little more than three pecks and three pints English.
† A cor contained ten baths, or eight bushels.
‡ We may read here, commended the prudence of the unjust steward.
[g] Prov. 6. 6—8. 1 Tim. 6. 19. see ver. 4.
[h] Ps. 17. 14. Phil. 3. 19.
[i] 1 John 3. 10. Eph. 5. 8. 1 Thes. 5. 5, 8. John 12. 36. & 3. 3, 5.
[k] Dan. 4. 27. Prov. 19. 17. Mat. 6. 19. & 19. 21. ch. 14. 14. & 11. 41. & 19. 8. Acts 10. 4. 1 Tim. 6. 17—19. Mat. 25. 34—40.
[l] Or riches. Mat. 6. 24.
[m] Mat. 25. 21. ch. 19. 17.
‖ Or riches.
[n] Mat. 6. 20, 33. ch. 12. 33. & 18. 22. Prov. 8. 18. Eph. 3. 8. 1 Pet. 1. 4. Phil. 3. 7—14. Rev. 3. 18.
[o] Job 1. 21. Ezek. 16. 15—21. Hos. 2. 8, 9. Ps. 115. 16. Ezek. 46. 17. Mat 25. 14—29. ch. 19. 12—26.
[p] Ch. 10. 42. Ezek. 46. 16. Is. 55. 3. 1 Cor. 1. 30. 1 Pet. 1. 4.
[q] Mat. 6. 24. Rom. 8. 5—8. Phil. 3. 18, 19. ch. 9. 50. & 11. 23. Tit. 1. 16. 2 Tim. 3. 5.
[r] Josh. 24. 14. Mat. 4. 10. Jam. 4. 4. 1 John 2. 15, 16. Tit. 2. 12.
[s] Mat. 23. 14. & 13. 22. Ezek. 33. 31. ch. 20. 47.
[t] Ps. 22. 6. & 69. 9, 19, 20.
[u] Mat. 6. 2. ch. 18 11, 12. & 10. 29. & 20. 20.
[x] Ps. 7. 9. Jer. 17 10. Rev. 2. 23. John 21. 17.
[y] 1 Sam. 16. 7. Mat. 23. 13—30. ch. 11. 39. Jam. 4. 4.

the sight of God. 16. [z] The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it. 17. [a] And it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle of the law to fail. 18. [b] Whosoever putteth away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adultery; and whosoever marrieth her that is put away from her husband committeth adultery.

z Mal. 4. 4. ch. 1. 16, 76. John. 1. 17. Mat. 11. 12, 13. Mark 1. 14, 15, 38. 45. Mat. iii. Luke iii. The gospel dispensation hath been published, and both Jews and Gentiles have seemed earnestly desirous of its blessings.

a Mat. 5. 18. 1 Pet. 1. 25. Is. 40. 8 & 51. 6. Ps. 102. 26, 27. Josh. 23. 14. 1 Sam. 3. 19. & 15. 29. Rom. 9. 6.

b Mat. 5. 32. & 19. 9. 1 Cor. 7. 10—12. Rom. 7. 1—3.

Verses 1—18. To direct us in the right improvement of worldly wealth, we have here,

1. The parable of the unjust steward. God is our master and Lord; all who are intrusted with any of his gifts, are his stewards, and should improve them to his glory. This man was accused of wasting his master's goods; and how justly liable are we to the same charge? How often have we abused the substance we have enjoyed, and the abilities we have been blessed with, to God's dishonour? In consequence of his ill management, he is called to an account, ordered to leave the service: and a terrible reckoning will that be for us, if hurried away by death, we are called to God's bar, cut off in the midst of our sins, and banished for ever from his presence. Too lazy to dig for his maintenance, too proud to beg, he resolves, by deeper frauds, to secure for himself a maintenance, and calling privately his lord's debtors, whose accounts were in his hands, he agreed with them to draw a new state of their debts, abating twenty measures of wheat to one, and fifty of oil to another; thus endeavouring to make them his friends, that, when he was dismissed from his lord's service, he might have their houses to receive him. Note, (1.) One step in sin always tends to lead on to farther abominations. (2.) Pride and laziness often drive men to the most wicked methods to supply their wants, unable to bear the labours of honest industry for a subsistence, or to submit to ask relief. (3.) They who trust too much to stewards, and seldom inspect their own accounts, will usually suffer for it.

2. The Lord commended the unjust steward's conduct; not as truly laudable in itself, but as an instance of foresight, care, and contrivance, worthy imitation in a better way; for the children of this world, such as this man was, who place their happiness in earth and a portion here below, are in their generation wiser, act more prudently, and show greater industry to secure worldly advantages, than the children of light, do to obtain the infinitely more momentous acquisitions of grace and glory. Let us go to them, therefore, to learn, and be ashamed to see ourselves outdone in diligence by those who pursue a perishing world, when we have at stake the interest of an immortal soul and an awful eternity.

3. Christ applies the parable to his disciples. I say unto you, Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, employ your worldly goods in such a way, as shall be to your own advantage in the day of judgment; that when ye fail, and at death this perishing world is left behind with all its enjoyments, they may receive you into everlasting habitations; they who have received the comfort of your bounty, God's poor saints, or Christ and God himself, who will reward such works of faith, and labours of love, with everlasting glory. Note, (1.) This world's wealth is called the mammon of unrighteousness, or of deceit, because usually it is abused to the vilest purposes, and gotten by unjust and deceitful means. (2.) The only way of turning those riches to our advantage, which others abuse to their ruin, is by employing them for the glory of God, and the good of our fellow-creatures, and then they will be blessings. (3.) At death, all things fail us; nothing of our earthly affluence can go down with us to the grave; unless we have sent our treasures before us, they can then afford us no satisfaction. (4.) Our one great business here below is to secure for ourselves the everlasting habitations; and though no money can purchase a mansion in glory, yet will they, who have laid out their talents in God's blessed service, find themselves hereafter repaid with the richest interest.

Our Lord enforces his exhortation by the following arguments, (1.) That the misimprovement of the gifts of God's providence must effectually exclude them from the treasures of his grace, for as a servant who is faithful in a little matter, gains our confidence to be intrusted with more; so where he is unjust in trifles, no prudent master would care to employ him in matters of greater importance. If therefore we are unfaithful in the abuse of worldly things, it cannot be thought we should make a better improvement of the nobler talents, the means of divine wisdom and grace; and therefore these true riches he will justly withhold from us, ver. 11. and if we have behaved as dishonest stewards in that which God hath intrusted us with, and which is not our own, but his, how can it be expected that we should possess that good part, the riches of grace, which most properly may be called our own because once possessed, it shall never be taken from us? (2.) It is impossible to serve two masters: God and Mammon; because their demands being opposite and contradictory, so far as we love and serve the world, we must hate and disobey God: and on the other hand, if we love and serve him we must be dead to the world, and ready to forego all its honours, interests, pleasures, and esteem, whenever they stand in competition with his glory. God requires the heart, he cannot suffer a rival, nor will he admit of an allowed partition: to attempt reconciling the inconsistent services of God and Mammon, is all the devil asks to insure our ruin.

5. The Pharisees were highly offended with truths which touched them so nearly. Their character was drawn in this unjust steward, and their covetous, worldly minded hearts, under all their most plausible guise of religion, were the slaves of Mammon: they treated him therefore with the greatest disdain and contempt. Note, (1.) The inordinate love of this world is the bane of many a fair professor. (2.) When the word of God presses the conscience hard, the obstinate sinner often affects to despise, and turn off with a laugh, what he feels himself unable to answer. (3.) If we are treated with insult and derision by those to whom we minister the gospel, Jesus our master endured the like treatment before us.

6. Christ sharply rebukes their hypocrisy and worldly mindedness. He despised their reviling, yet warns them of their ruin, that they might yet repent of their sins before it was too late. Ye are they which justify yourselves before men, pretending the strictest piety, and most scrupulous devotion; but God knoweth your hearts, that they are full of deadly poison, of pride, envy, covetousness, falsehood, and oppression: for that which is highly esteemed among men, these pompous shows of exterior sanctity, is abomination in the sight of God, who sees the odious principles which actuate your whole conduct, and abhors all your pretended services. Note, (1.) The most rigid services of formal religion, instead of justifying men before God, render them only the more abhorred. (2.) The opinion of the world is a very fallacious rule of judgment: usually the most admired characters in the eyes of men, are in his regards an abomination; and they who are set up as patterns of piety, will be found in fact a sink of iniquity.

7. He turns to the poor publicans and sinners, whom the Pharisees despised, encouraging them to press into that kingdom which his grace had opened to them. The Old Testament dispensation was now at an end, since the preaching of John the Baptist: the prophecies concerning the Messiah were about to receive their accomplishment, and the free grace of the gospel to be universally published through the world, when the distinction of Jew and Gentile should cease. Every man, therefore, without exclusion of any sinner, whatever crimes he may have committed, is welcome to the Saviour, and sure to find mercy. And these glad tidings engaged the hearts of many, whom the self-righteous Pharisees despised, to press into it amidst all opposition. Note, They must strive against the world who would enter into heaven.

8. He precludes an objection which his self-righteous enemies would be ready to start, that he meant to invalidate the authority of the divine law. No. The frame of heaven and earth shall sooner be dissolved than one tittle of the law can fail; all the prophecies, types, and figures, must receive their accomplishment; the precepts in their true spiritual meaning, were now more than ever explained by Christ's preaching, and magnified by his own obedience to them; and, far from admitting a laxer system of moral duty, this holy law must abide the unchangeable rule of righteousness; and conformity to it would now be enforced by the strongest motives: as for instance in the article of marriage: divorce under the law of Moses was permitted to prevent greater evils; but under the gospel it is entirely prohibited, and marriage restored to its primitive institution, nothing being admitted as a plea for its dissolution but unfaithfulness to the marriage bed. Whosoever therefore for any other cause putteth away his wife, and marries again, is an adulterer; as is he also who shall marry her who is divorced. The gospel, wherever it is truly received, strikes at the root of corrupt affections, and engages us to walk, not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

19. ¶ [c] There was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day: 20. [d] And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, [e] full of sores, 21. [f] And desiring to be fed with the crumbs * which fell from the rich man's table: moreover, [g] the dogs came and licked his sores. 22. And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and [h] was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and [k] was buried; 23. And in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, and [l] seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom. 24. And he cried and said, [m] Father Abraham, [n] have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that [o] he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame. 25. But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy life-time [p] receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented. 26. And besides all this, between us and you there is a [q] great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us that would come from thence. 27. Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house: 28. For I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment. 29. Abraham saith unto him, [r] They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear [s] them. 30. And he said, Nay, father Abraham; but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent. 31. And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, [s] neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead. *

c Job 21. 7—15. Ps. 17. 14. & 73. 3—9. & 119. 70. Jam. 5. 5. Job 15. 27.

d Mat. 11. 5. Jam. 2. 5. 1 Cor. 1. 26, 27. Prov. 1. 7.

e Job 2. 7. 8. Ps. 73. 14. & 34. 19.

f Ps. 107. 5. & 142. 4. 1 Cor. 4. 11. Heb. 11. 37, 38.

* Campbell, and several other eminent critics, are of opinion that there is no foundation in this expression for supposing, as our commentator has done, that the poor man was refused even the crumbs.

g Rom. 8. 28. Hos. 2. 18.

h Heb. 1. 14. Ps. 91. 11, 12.

i Mat. 8. 11. ch. 13. 28. & 23. 43. Ps. 73. 24. Phil. 1. 21, 23.

k Is. 14. 18. Gen. 50. 9, 10.

l Ch. 13. 28. Mat. 8. 11, 12.

m Ch. 3. 7. John 8. 33, 39. Mat. 3. 9.

n Jam. 2. 13. ch. 19. 42—44. Rev. 22. 11. Jer. 22. 23.

o Zech. 14. 12. Is. 33. 14. & 66. 24. Mark 9. 44—48. Rev. 14. 10, 11.

p Job 12. 6. & 21. 13. Ps. 37. 35—37. Is. 57. 2. 20. 21. Rev. 14. 13. & 20. 15. & 21. 8. ch. 6. 24.

q Ps. 50. 22. John 7. 26. 2 Thes. 1. 9.

r Is. 8. 20. & 34. 16. Mal. 4. 4. John 5. 39, 45. Acts 15. 21. & 17. 11. 2 Tim. 3. 15—17.

s John 12. 10, 11.

* It should be recollected that many of those who witnessed the resurrection of Lazarus, were not induced to believe in Christ, even by that stupendous miracle.

Verses 19—31. This parable seems to be particularly designed to rebuke the pride of the Jews, who, enriched with outward privileges, treated the poor Gentiles with disdain, as unworthy a place among the dogs of their flock; and yet there was grace in store for the poor diseased sinners whom they despised, whilst, through their unbelief and impenitence, they themselves would be rejected and ruined. It is also more generally applicable to what we see sadly verified every day, that rich epicures wallow in luxury, whilst God's dear children pine under want and hunger; whose end will be as it is here represented; where the veil is taken off from the world to come, and we behold the glories of the one, and the unutterable miseries of the other.

1. The state of a rich wicked man is set before us. There was a certain rich man, whose fortune enabled him to gratify every appetite; he appeared in the most splendid robes, equalling the majesty of princes, clothed in purple and fine linen; and his table was spread with every delicacy, he fared sumptuously every day. It may be said, Where is the harm of this? he was born to his estate, and the expense was no more than he could afford. Admit the fact. The harm was not in the use, but the abuse, of the creatures of God. He lived a life of sensuality, and sat unconcerned about the miseries of others. And it is designed to teach us, (1.) That this world's riches are often given to those who know not God, and that his love and favour are never to be judged of by outward things. (2.) That wealth and affluence are dangerous to the soul, and affording the means to gratify men's bestial appetites, often plunge them in perdition and destruction.

2. The state of the poor godly man. He is called Lazarus: and to the miseries of poverty were added the more afflicting portion of a nauseous disease; wanting a morsel of bread, overspread with ulcers, without even rags to cover them, unable to walk, he is carried to the rich man's gate, and laid on the cold ground, desiring to be fed, if but with the crumbs which fell from the table. We hear no complaints, no murmuring at his condition; he was reduced to want, and not ashamed to beg; but from what appears, he begged in vain; either his requests were refused, or, which amounted to the same thing, neglected and disregarded: but the dogs possessed of more humanity than their master, came and licked his sores. Behold here the condition of a dear saint of God, and learn of him, (1.) Not to estimate a man's spiritual state by his afflictions: for it is often seen, that those whom the Lord most loveth he is pleased most severely to exercise. (2.) Patient submission to God's providential chastisements is a gracious proof of our adoption. (3.) The cries of the poor, which have been rejected or unnoticed, will by and by be remembered to the confusion of those who thus unkindly treated them. (4.) They will have a grievous account to answer for, who have spent more on their dogs than they ever gave to the necessitous; and see them well fed, when many of their fellow-creatures are famishing.

3. Death at last came, with friendly hand to remove at once all the poor beggar's miseries. Emaciated with hunger and disease, worn down with pain and misery, he closed his eyes, and bid adieu to human wretchedness; seeking a refuge in the grave, where the wicked cease from troubling. We hear of no burial given him; probably some hole was dug to remove the nuisance from the gate; and, buried with the burial of an ass, not a friend followed the bier, not a tear was dropped over the grave; but he rests in peace, and now his eternal triumphs begin: attending angels, who minister to the heirs of salvation, and hover round their dying beds, received the departing spirit, and, on their wings mounting to the skies, shouted aloud, Lift up your heads ye gates, and be ye lift up ye everlasting doors, that an heir of glory may come in. Led to his seat on high, admitted to the richest entertainments of that blessed world, he is placed next to Abraham, and receives that distinguished honour of leaning on the patriarch's bosom. What a glorious prospect does this present! amidst all our present evil, how should such a hope support and comfort us! Death must be the farthest limits of a believer's sufferings; beyond the grave, all is happiness eternal, and bliss uninterrupted.

4. The rich man also died, and was buried. Probably his funeral was pompous, as his living was grand. A noble tomb received the corpse, and spices and perfumes made the clods of the valley sweet unto him, whilst perhaps charity wept on the monument, and the flattering marble proclaimed his munificence, liberality, and every virtue that ever yet adorned man. How vain this pageantry! to which the body is now insensible; and the soul, alas! whither is it fled? In hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, the just punishment of his abused affluence; and now how changed are the circumstances! He sees with astonishment, Abraham, afar off, and Lazarus, the poor despised Lazarus, in his bosom, admitted to this state of highest honour and dignity. Note, (1.) The misery of the wicked, and the happiness of the just, immediately commence at their death. (2.) Every sight in hell is aggravating; even the prospect of heaven before the damned can only torment them with the views of that glory into which they must never enter.

5. In this fearful situation we have the rich man's request. He cried, with eagerness and importunity, extorted by the pangs he felt. How different from the songs of riot that before echoed through his palace! Father Abraham, have mercy on me; perhaps in his cups he had ridiculed the old story of Abraham; or it may be he had depended upon his outward privileges as descended from him, but now found how vain were his expectations. Note, Many, who had never prayed before, will pray loud enough in hell, but pray in vain. His request seems small; Send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame: how is his proud crest fallen? he who did not give this poor beggar a crumb from his table, now would fain crave a drop of water at his hands. He little thought once he should be so reduced. Observe, (1.) His complaint, I am tormented in this flame. Damned sinners have nothing but wrath before them, that preys like fire upon their souls, as much as their bodies are tormented by the everlasting burnings. They who will not hear and fear, and do no more wickedly, in this day of mercy, will then feel, when every pang will be embittered with despair. (2.) The day is near when they who despised the people of God would be glad to receive from them the least favours.

6. Abraham's answer is most confounding and upbraiding; for in hell no requests are granted, not even a drop of water to cool a flaming tongue. They who neglect the day of grace have nothing before them but misery, without abatement, and without end. Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things; but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented. (1.) He addresses him as a son, the remembrance of which relation aggravated the guilt of his degenerate conduct. Our abused privileges will increase the measure of our guilt. (2.) He bids him remember; for conscience then will be awake, and self-tormenting reflections embitter every pang. The sinner will remember every means of grace he hath trifled with, every call of God he hath slighted, every affliction which he hath misimproved, every blessing he hath abused. (3.) He reminds him of the good things which he had received, and misapplied; unthankful for them; placing his happiness in them; prostituting them to the basest purposes of serving his lusts and pleasures; and, as he reckoned these during life his chief good, he had his all in hand, and nothing to expect after death but wrath to the uttermost. (4.) He leads him to reflect on the evil things, Lazarus had received, which patiently he had borne, though denied at his gate a crumb which fell from the table. (5.) He bids him now observe how the tables are turned; he is comforted: the miseries of a child of God, however sharp, are comparatively speaking, light afflictions, which are but for a moment: death will put an end to every sorrow, and instantly his everlasting bliss will commence. But thou art tormented, the triumphing of the wicked is but for a moment; they can carry nothing with them into the grave; and the joys and delights, in which they wallowed before, will only make the change more terrible, when they are driven into the everlasting burnings, where there is weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth. (6.) He leaves him without hope of mercy, or prospect of the least relief: for, besides all this between us and you there is a great gulf fixed, impassable on either side, so that they who would pass from hence to you cannot; if a glorified saint wished to afford the least relief to a damned sinner, it would be in vain; not that he will ever feel such a desire, but will approve and applaud the justice of God in their eternal torments. Neither can they pass to us that would come from thence; when once the pit of hell hath closed its mouth upon the miserable soul, despair seals up the door of mercy; no gleam of hope ever reaches that dire abode: the decree once gone forth is irreversible; as the tree falleth it must lie. How awful! how awakening the thought! Sinner, hear and tremble. The door of mercy is not yet shut against thee. Oh flee quickly thither. Cry mightily to God, if yet there may be hope; in a moment it will be too late to knock when the door is shut.

7. Again he prefers another request, but meets with a second repulse. Since he is doomed to despair to suffer himself, he cannot, without increasing horror, reflect on meeting his brethren at that place of torment, whom he probably had been greatly instrumental to ruin by his bad example and influence, and whose bitter upbraidings he wished to prevent: for not love of their souls, but desire to prevent an increase of his own miseries, seems to have dictated the request. Earnestly, therefore doth he entreat, that, if Lazarus may not come to him, he may go to them, and prevent their eternal ruin, if he may not alleviate his torment. Note, (1.) They who have been tempters to others, and companions in sin, will shortly become mutual tormentors. (2.) Even a tormented sinner in hell expresses a concern for the souls of his brethren, when thousands on earth never give themselves a thought about them.

Abraham denies the request: it is unnecessary as it is impossible. They have Moses and the prophets, let them hear them. They wanted not the means of conviction and conversion, if they did not obstinately harden their hearts. Note, The Scriptures are the ordinary means God employs to turn men's hearts. They who neglect to attend to these sacred oracles, are left to their own devices, and sealed up under wrath.

8. Once more he redoubles his plea, yet meets with no more success. In hell no prayers are answered; it is here alone that prayers can profit us. He replied, Nay, father Abraham; though they may pay no regard to Moses and the prophets, too long it may be, accustomed to treat all revelation with contempt: yet, if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent; such a messenger must needs carry conviction along with him, and compel them to turn from the error of their ways. So ready are foolish men to be requiring evidence which God is not pleased to give, and which, should he comply with our request, would still be utterly ineffectual: for, as Abraham declares, if they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead. Indeed it is impossible they should. One from the dead could not speak with more authority and certainty than the Scriptures. We should have much more reason there to suspect a delusion, than in the oracles of truth. And though we might perhaps be terrified with the apparition, our hearts could never be changed thereby, since that the power of God alone can effect. We should by degrees recover from the fright, or be laughed out of our fears, and our corruption would soon get the better of our convictions. The word of God therefore is ordinarily the alone, and sufficient means he is pleased to use: it is presumption in us to prescribe, and folly to desire any other. If we harden our hearts against the warnings therein contained, visits from the dead, yea being dragged through the belly of hell itself, and sent back again to earth would be utterly ineffectual to convert our souls. To the law therefore and the testimony, Isa. viii. 19, 20.

CHAP. XVII.—ANNO DOMINI, 32.

In this chapter, 1. Christ teaches his disciples to take heed of giving offence, and to forgive the injuries done them, ver. 1—4. To pray for the increase of their faith, ver. 5, 6. And then teacheth them humility, whatever service they had done for God, ver. 7—10. 2. He cleanses ten lepers, one only of whom thanks him, and he a Samaritan, ver. 11—19. He discourses with his disciples upon occasion of an inquiry of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should appear, ver. 20—37.

1. THEN said he unto the disciples, It is impossible but that offences will come: but woe unto him through whom they come? 2. [b] It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones. 3. ¶ [c] Take heed to yourselves: If thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him. 4. [d] And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again to thee, saying, I repent; thou shalt forgive him. 5. ¶ And the apostles said unto the Lord, [e] Increase our faith. 6. [f] And the Lord said, If ye had faith as a grain of mustard-seed, ye might say unto this sycamine-tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea; and it should obey you. 7. But which of you, having a servant plowing or feeding cattle, will say unto him by and by, when he is come from the field, Go and sit down to meat? * 8. And will not rather say unto him, Make ready wherewith I may sup, [g] and gird thyself, and serve me, till I have eaten and drunken; and afterward thou shalt eat and drink? 9. Doth he thank that servant because he did the things that were commanded him? I trow not. 10. So likewise ye, [h] when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants:† we have done that which was our duty to do.

a Mat. 18. 6—9. & 5. 29, 30. 1 Cor. 11. 19. 1 John 2. 19. 2 Thes. 2. 11, 12. Mat. 26. 24. Mark 9. 42—48.

b Mark 9. 42. Mat. 18. 6. & 25. 41—45. & 26. 44. 2 Thes. 1. 6—9.

c Mat. 18. 10, 15—17. Lev. 19. 17. Prov. 17. 10. & 27. 5. Jam. 5. 19. Prov. 9. 8, 9.

d Mat. 18. 21, 22. 1 Cor. 13. 4, 5, 7. Eph. 4. 31, 32. Col. 3. 12, 13. Rom. 12. 19, 20.

e Mark 9. 24.

f Mat. 17. 20. & 21. 21. & 13. 31. Mark 9. 23. & 11. 23. 1 Cor. 13. 2.

* An amended punctuation will enable us to read this verse thus: Would any of you who hath a servant, &c. say to him on his return from the field, Come immediately and sit down, &c.

g Ch. 12. 37.

h Job 9. 2, 3. & 22. 3. & 35. 7. Ps. 16. 2. & 130. 3. & 143. 2. Rom. 11. 35. 1 Cor. 9. 16. with Mat. 25. 30. Rom. 3. 12. Phil. 3. 8, 9. Isa. 6. 5. & 64. 6.

† Or we have conferred no favour.

Verses 1—10. This discourse is particularly addressed to the disciples, and contains,

1. A warning against giving offence. It must needs be, considering the corruption of our nature, the craft of Satan, and the temptations of the world, that offences come; but wo to persecutors, who discourage and oppose the work of God; wo to seducers, who corrupt the truth, and deceive the souls of men with pernicious heresies; wo to faithless professors, whose carnal lives stumble the weak and harden the wicked: better were it for them to die with the vilest of malefactors than live to increase their everlasting misery.

A command to forgive all injuries. Take heed to yourselves, as not to give offence, so also not to take it. When others are provoking, hold in your own spirit, and in patience possess your souls: let no angry thought, no passionate word nor wish, no violence break forth. Mildly endeavour to convince an offending brother, and the moment he expresses his repentance, let the arms of forgiveness and reconciliation be open to him; yea, if he, through carelessness or forgetfulness, seven times in a day repeat the offence, and turn again, professing his sorrow, and promising greater watchfulness, we must still forgive, and neither upbraid him, nor keep in mind his repeated provocations.

3. Here is instruction given, how we can alone discharge this difficult duty. Lord, says the apostles, increase our faith. This is the root from whence all other graces flow; as this strengthens, they are in exercise. The apostles themselves were conscious of the weakness of their faith; they knew his grace alone could supply their wants: therefore in prayer to him they make their application. We must go to the same Saviour, and he will not send us empty away. To their request the Lord replied, If ye had faith as a grain of mustard-seed, ye might say unto this sycamine-tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea; and it should obey you; such being the mighty efficacy of divine faith; and every duty, under its influence, becomes practicable.

4. Christ enjoins upon them humility in all their services. Whatever works they were enabled to perform, whatever difficulties they might be called to encounter, they must regard themselves as his servants, and fulfil the duties of their station, nor think they had merited any thing by their labours: for, as a servant, when he returns from his work in the field, doth not expect to be attended, but is required first to wait on his master before he sups himself, nor is thanked for so doing, because it is his duty; in like manner must Christ's ministers and servants, when they have done their best, acknowledge they are unprofitable servants, and, if they had indeed performed all things commanded them, they would have done no more than was their duty to do, and would have no merit to plead: our goodness extendeth not to God, we can never make him our debtor for duty, whilst we must daily own ourselves his debtors for pardoning and sanctifying grace.

11. ¶ And it came to pass, as he went to Jerusalem, that he [i] passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee. 12. And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, i John 4. 4. ch. 9 51.

which stood [k] afar off: 13. And they lifted up their voices, and said, [l] Jesus, Master, have mercy on us. 14. And when he saw them, he said unto them, [m] Go shew yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that, as they went, [n] they were cleansed. 15. And [o] one of them, [p] when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God, 16. And [q] fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks; and he was a [r] Samaritan. 17. And Jesus answering, said, Were there not ten cleansed? [s] but where are the nine? 18. [t] There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger. 19. And he said unto him, [u] Arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole.

k Lev. 13. 45, 46. Num. 5 2. 2 Kin. 7. 3. & 5. 27. 2 Chr. 26. 20, 21. ch. 18. 13.
l Mat. 15. 22. & 8. 2. & 20. 30, 31. Mark 9. 22. ch. 18. 13, 30, 39.
m Lev. xiii, xiv. ch. 5. 14.
n Ps. 19. 11. & 33. 9. & 107. 20. Mat. 8. 3. & 11. 5.
o Exod. 23. 2. Rom. 12. 2.
p Ps. ciii, cxvi, cxiv, cv, cvii, xviii, xcv.
q Gen. 32. 10. Ps. 116. 12. & 75. 1, 2. & 115. 1, 2.
r John 4. 9. & 8. 48. 2 Kin. 17. 24—41. Ezra iv, v. Neh. iv, vi. ch. 9. 51, 52.
s 2 Chr. 32. 25. Ps. 106. 13. Rom. 1. 21. Mat. 7. 14.
t Mat. 8. 10. & 15. 28. John 4. 29.
u Is. 11. 10. Gen. 45. 10. Mat. 8. 11, 12. & 21. 41, 43. & 20. 16.

Verses 11—19. The leprosy was a disorder not only incurable, and most nauseous, but which rendered the unhappy patient ceremonially defiled, and excluded him from the comforts of human society. We have here the miraculous cure of ten men afflicted with that miserable disease.

1. They met Christ on his journey, bearing, it may be, of his coming that way, and assembled to move his compassion, and unite their supplications to him. Keeping at a humble distance, they lifted up their voice and cried aloud for mercy to him whom fame had proclaimed the Saviour of the miserable. Note, (1.) A humble sense of our own vileness should deeply affect our souls in all our approaches to God. (2.) Joint sufferers should unite their prayers, and thus more powerfully besiege the throne of grace.

2. Christ sent them to the priest for inspection, whom the law had made the judges of leprosy. And herein he intimated his design to cleanse them, if they in faith obeyed his direction; and withal hereby his power and glory would be made evident to those in the sanctuary, who, pronouncing these persons clean, might learn by what means the wondrous cure was wrought.

3. As they went they were healed. They did not hesitate about the journey, or say, To what purpose should we go? but went in faith, and were accordingly healed; for in the way of duty we may expect Christ's powerful hand of grace to work effectually for us, where we are utterly unable to help ourselves.

4. One of the poor lepers no sooner received his cure than he immediately returned, with a loud voice glorifying God, adoring the power of grace which he had so richly experienced, and fell at the feet of Jesus, with warmest gratitude expressing his acknowledgments of the mercy which he had received. Note, The least we can render to God for his goodness towards us is praise; and therein we are bound to be speedy and hearty, deeply sensible that we are less than the least of all his mercies.

5. Christ expresses his approbation of his conduct, and encourages his faith. Nine out of the ten went on; but this man, though a Samaritan, a stranger to the commonwealth of Israel, evidenced deeper gratitude and more unfeigned religion than those who professed to know the true God. Our Lord therefore dismisses him with an assurance of his salvation. His faith had not only obtained the cure in common with the rest, but had saved his soul also. Note, (1.) Ingratitude is a common sin. How many more receive mercies from God than are thankful for them? (2.) We often meet with the greatest gratitude where we least expected it; whilst sometimes they who make profession of religion most grievously disappoint us.

20. ¶ And when he was demanded of the Pharisees when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God* cometh not [x] with observation. 21. Neither shall they say, [y] Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is [z a] within you. 22. ¶ And he said unto the disciples, [b] The days will come when ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of man, and ye shall not see it. 23. [c] And they shall say to you, See here! or, see there! go not after them, nor follow them. 24. [d] For as the lightning, that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven, shineth unto the other part under heaven; so shall also the Son of man be [e] in his day. 25. But [f] first must he suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation. 26. [g] And as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man. 27. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and the flood came and destroyed them all. 28. [h] Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; 29. [i] But the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all. 30. [k] Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed. 31. [l] In that day, he which shall be upon the house top, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away: and he that is in the field, let him likewise not return back. 32. [m] Remember Lot's wife. 33. [n] Whosoever shall seek to save his life shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life shall preserve it. 34. [o] I tell you, in that [p] night there shall be [q] two men in one bed; the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left. 35. Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken, and the other left. 36.* Two men shall be in the field: the one shall be taken, and the other left. 37. And they answered and said unto him, [r] Where, Lord? And he said unto

* Or, the reign of God.
x Or with outward show. Zech. 4. 6. Dan. 2. 44. John 18. 36. Rom. 14. 17. & 12. 2.
y Mat. 21. 23. ch. 21. 8. Mark 13. 21.
z Or among. John 1. 26.
a Mat. 12. 28. & 21. 43. Rom. 2. 29. & 14. 17. Col. 1. 27. John 3. 3, 5. Gal. 6. 15. 2 Cor. 5. 17. 1 Sam. 16. 7.
b Mat. 9. 15. John 7. 33, 34. & 8. 21. & 12. 35. c Mat. 24. 23. Mark 13. 21. ch. 21. 8. 1 John 4. 1.
d Mat. 24. 27. Is. 30. 13, 14. & 24. 1—6.
e Mat. 24. 30. & 25. 31. & 26. 64. Rev. 11. 15. 1 Tim. 6. 15. Acts 17. 31. 1 Pet. 4. 7.
f Mat. 16. 21. & 17. 22, 23. & 20. 18, 19. ch. 9. 22. & 18. 31. & 24. 7, 26.
g Mat. 24. 37—41. Gen. vi, vii. Job 22. 16. 1 Pet. 3. 19, 20. 2 Pet. 2. 5. & 3. 6. Heb. 11. 7. Phil. 2. 21. ch. 18 8. 1 Thes. 5. 2, 3. Is. 30. 13, 14.
h Gen. 13. 13. & 18. 20. Ezek. 16. 49, 50. Gen. 19. 4—14. Is. 22. 12, 13. Phil. 2. 21. Jam. 4. 3, 4. & 5. 5.
i Gen. 19. 24. Deut. 29. 23. Job 18. 15. Is. 13. 19. Jer. 50. 40. Hos. 11. 8. Amos 4. 11. Zeph. 2. 9. 2 Pet. 2. 6. Jude 7.
k Ver. 24. Mat. 26. 64. & 24. 30 & 25. 31. Rev. 11. 10, 15. & 20. 11, 12. 1 Thes. 6. 2, 3. ch. 18. 8. 2 Thes. 1. 7.
l Mat. 24. 16, 17, 18. Mark 13. 14—16 Job 2. 4. Mat. 6. 25. Jer. 45. 5.
m Gen. 19. 26. ch. 13. 3, 5. n Mat. 16. 25. & 10. 39. Mark 8. 35. ch. 9. 24. John 12. 25.
o Mat. 24. 40, 41.
p Joel 2. 31. Zeph. 1. 14, 15. Amos 8. 9, 10. & 5. 30. & 8. 22. & 13. 9, 10.
q 1 Cor. 4. 7. 1 Thes. 4. 17. Ps. 20. 8. Job 22. 20. Ps. 26. 9. & 28. 3.
* This verse is wanting in many Greek copies.
r Mat 24. 28. Job 39. 29. Dan. 9. 26, 27. Amos 9. 1—4. 1 Thes. 2. 16. ch. 19. 43.

† The Roman armies shall hunt out and destroy the corrupt Jews wherever they are.

them, Wheresoever the body is, thither will† the eagles be gathered together.

Verses 20—37. We have here our Lord's answer to the Pharisee's question, when the kingdom of God should come; that glorious temporal kingdom of the Messiah which their prejudices taught them to expect.

1. He informs them that it will come with none of that outward show which they imagined, nor occasion any such observation; as when a prince makes his progress through his kingdom, every mouth is full of it, Lo here he comes, or lo there he resides: for behold the kingdom of God is within you; the heart is the seat of the Messiah's kingdom; there he sets up his throne, bringing the soul with all its faculties, into obedience to his blessed Self. Note, (1.) Christianity knows no sect or party; Christ is not confined here or there; but all who believe in him and love him in sincerity, are subjects of his happy government. (2.) We must look into our hearts, whether Christ be formed in us. All true religion is internal and experimental, and without this the form and show of godliness avail nothing.

2. He directs his discourse to his disciples, with a view to warn them of the difficulties they must encounter. Far from becoming great men in this world, esteemed and honoured as they flattered themselves, they would meet with such seasons of distress and persecution, as would make them look back with desire and regret upon one of these days, when they enjoyed Christ's personal presence with them, and wish for it in vain.

3. He foretells them of his speedy and unexpected appearance to destroy the Jewish people; when driven to extremities, they would be ready to hearken to every impostor who pretended Christ was here or there, ready to rescue them from the power of the Romans; but, like lightning he would appear and utterly consume that devoted city and nation. Or this may represent also the mighty efficacy of his gospel, which, with irresistible power and rapidity, should spread to the ends of the earth, notwithstanding all opposition.

4. He informs them the Messiah must suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation: but when, by death, he hath accomplished the salvation of his people, then all his enemies and theirs must fall before him.

5. His coming to destroy Jerusalem would be sudden and terrible, as the flood which consumed the old world, and the fire that devoured the cities of Sodom; whilst the sensuality and carnal security of the Jewish people would be like that which prevailed in the days of Lot and Noah, whose warnings were despised and disbelieved, till the threatened ruin came, and, too late, brought the dire conviction of their truth. So would the unbelieving Jews reject the warnings of Christ and his apostles, and perish as these despisers of old. Note, (1.) The inordinate pursuit of this world's gratifications are apt to lull the soul into a fatal security. (2.) It is common for sinners to go fast asleep into eternal misery, and not to be apprehensive of their danger till they lift up their eyes in torments. (3.) A few, in the most evil days, are rescued, whom God will take care of amidst every danger. (4.) The coming of our Lord Jesus Christ will be matter of the same surprise to a careless world at the last day as his judgments of old have been.

6. He admonishes his disciples, as soon as they saw the danger approach, and the Roman army advancing to Jerusalem, to flee without delay; nor to regard what they may have left behind in the city, nor stop to cast a look thitherwards, lest, as Lot's wife was made a monument of divine vengeance, a like destruction should overtake them, if, solicitous about what they left, they should look back, or go back to save it. In these days of persecution, when tempted to save their lives by base compliances, they must remember this would be the sure way to perish everlastingly; whilst readiness to meet death itself in the way of duty, would most effectually secure their eternal life and glory. Note, (1.) We should often remember Lot's wife, and tremble at the thought of drawing back. (2.) If we would make a right estimation of our gain and loss, we must look forward to eternity, and take that into the reckoning.

7. God's distinguishing providence will in that day take care of his own people, who, though exposed to the same dangers as others, shall be then singularly preserved, and escape from the grand desolation. Note, God knoweth those that are his, and will always take care they shall be safe, either beneath the sun or above it.

8. In answer to his disciples, who inquired, Where, Lord? what will become of those who are left, and where shall the judgment light? he informs them, where the body is, there will the eagles be gathered together; wherever the Jews are, the Romans, as eagles, will pursue them, seize them in their fastnesses, and utterly root them out of the land. And this may be applied to Christ himself, to whom all people eagerly flock, and feed on him, to the great strengthening and comfort of their souls.

CHAP. XVIII.—ANNO DOMINI, 32.

In this chapter we have, 1. The parable of the importunate widow, designed to teach us fervency in prayer, ver. 1—8. 2. The parable of the Pharisee and the Publican, designed to teach us humility, and humiliation for sin in prayer, ver. 9—14. 3. Christ's favour to little children that were brought to him, ver. 15, 16, 17. 4. The rich man who loved his wealth more than Christ, ver. 18—30. 5. Christ's foretelling of his own death and sufferings, ver. 31—34. 6. His restoring sight to a blind man, ver. 35—43. And these four passages we had before in Matthew and Mark.

1. AND he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought [a] always to pray, and not to faint; 2. Saying, There was in a city a judge, [b] which feared not God, neither regarded man: 3. And there was a [c] widow in that city: and she came unto him, saying, Avenge me of mine adversary. 4. And he would not for a while; but afterward he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard man; 5. Yet, [d] because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me. 6. And the Lord said, [e] Hear what the unjust judge saith. 7. [f] And shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them? 8. I tell you that [g] he will avenge them speedily. Nevertheless, [h] when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?

[a] 1 Thes. 5. 17. ch. 11. 5—8. & 21. 36. Rom. 12. 12. Eph. 6. 18. Col. 4. 2. Gen. 32. 26.
[b] 1 Sam. 2. 12. Job 21. 14, 15. Mic. 3. 1—3.
[c] Ps. 83. 3, 4. Deut. 27. 19. Is. 1. 17, 23.
[d] See ver. 7. ch. 11. 8.
[e] Mat. 7. 11. ch. 11. 16. & 16. 8.
[f] Ch. 11. 8. Ps. 9. 18. & 13. 1. & 22. 1, 2. & 103. 9. John 13. 1. 2 Thes. 1. 6, 7. Rev. 6. 10, 11. Hab. 2. 3. Heb. 10. 35—37.
[g] 2 Pet. 3. 8, 9. Ps. 46. 5. Heb. 10. 37. Rev. 18. 8.
[h] 2 Tim. 3. 1. & 4. 3. 1 Tim. 4. 1. 2 Thes. 2. 3. When Christ comes to destroy the Jews and judge the world, he will find little real religion among them.

Verses 1—8. The intention of the parable before us, as we are informed in the first verse, is to encourage us in persevering prayer, even though we may not always find the immediate answer of our requests. We have,

1. The parable of the importunate widow and unjust judge. He was a man of abandoned principles, destitute of religion and honesty, neither fearing God nor regarding man; and miserable is that country where such magistrates are in office. A poor oppressed widow appealed to him for redress; cruelly taking advantage of her weakness, some crafty or covetous wretch had defrauded or injured her: and, with ceaseless importunity, at the judge's gate, she cried for justice to be done her. Deaf for a while to her entreaties, he paid no regard to her cause, till, wearied out with her perpetual clamour, merely to get rid of it, he granted her suit, and redressed her wrongs.

2. Christ applies the case, for the encouragement of his praying people. If the unjust judge was thus prevailed upon by importunity, how much more shall God avenge his own elect, who cry to him day and night, though he bear long with them? I tell you that he will avenge them speedily. Note, (1.) God's people are his elect: they have not chosen him, but he hath chosen them. (2.) Dear as they are to him, they meet with many a sore trial, and much oppression in this world: and to him they carry all their complaints. (3.) We must not be weary, though our requests do not immediately succeed; but patiently persevere in calling upon God day and night. (4.) God bears long with his enemies, to see if they will yet repent and turn to him; and he defers long the prayers of his people to exercise their graces; but he will speedily avenge them, punishing their enemies, and rescuing them from their sufferings.

3. He foretells his disciples how little faith would be found among the Jewish people when he came to judge them; and at his second coming the remnant of the faithful would be alike small; a fearful consideration! Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall, and redouble his prayers that he may never faint nor fail under any trials.

i Ch. 10. 29. & 16. 15. Phil. 3. 4—6. Rom. 9. 31, 32. & 10. 2, 3. Is. 65. 5.

* Or as being righteous.

k Mat. 21. 31, 32. ch. 7. 29, 30. & 15. 1, 2.

l Mat. 6. 2, 5, 16. & 23. 14. & 9. 14. Is. 1. 11—15. & 58. 2. Rev. 3. 17. 1 Sam. 15. 13. Mat. 23. 23. Phil. 3. 4—6. Gal. 1. 14. Rom. 10. 2, 3.

† Or But.

m Ezra 9. 5, 6, 15. Jer. 31. 18, 19. & 3. 13, 25. Ezek. 16. 63. ch. 23. 48. Acts 2. 37. 1 Tim. 1. 15. Ps. 40. 12. Job 40. 4. Rom. 7, 24.

n Rom. 3. 20. Gal. 2. 16.

o Mat. 23. 12. ch. 14. 11. & 1. 52. Job 22. 29. Prov. 3. 34. & 15. 33. & 18. 12. & 29. 23. Jam. 4. 6, 10. 1 Pet. 5. 5, 6.

9. ¶ And he spake this parable unto certain which [i] trusted in themselves * that they were righteous, and despised others: 10. Two men went up into the temple to pray; [k] the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican. 11. [l] The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. 12. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess. 13.† And the publican, [m] standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner. 14. I tell you, this man went down to his house [n] justified rather than the other: [o] for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

Verses 9—14. The purport of this parable is intimated in the opening of it, He spake this parable unto certain who trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and despised others. They were puffed up with a vain conceit of their excellence above other men; they presumed their own doings and duties would insure their acceptance with God: and, high in self-opinion, looked down with contempt on the herd of vulgar sinners as far beneath them; though in God's sight they were infinitely more vile and abominable than those whom they despised. We have,

1. The account of two men of very different characters, who went up to the temple to pray. The one a Pharisee, proud, self-righteous, who, confident of his own goodness, expected the admiration of men, and counted even God his debtor. The other a publican, a poor, broken-hearted, self-condemned sinner, who, feeling his misery fled to God for mercy. Note, (1.) Prayer is every man's duty. They must be inexcusable who live in the neglect of it. (2.) The temple was the type of Jesus Christ, through whom alone our prayers can come up before God with any prospect of acceptance.

2. The Pharisee's address to God bespoke the abominable arrogance of his heart. He stood and prayed thus with himself, in some conspicuous place where others might admire his devotion and piety, God, I thank thee that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. He pretends to thank God, but in fact all he said was merely a compliment on himself. Much evil he had avoided, much good he had done; not only abstaining from grosser vices, from extortion, adultery, injustice, but also he was often in fastings, and scrupulous in paying tithes of all that he possessed; and with much self-complaisance congratulates himself that he was so much superior to other men, and boasts to God how far he exceeded in goodness that vile publican, whom he passed in the outer court of the temple. Thus spoke this swelling worm: what he called his prayers breathed nothing but the language of pride, uncharitableness, and censure. Yet, detested as this character appears, how many who hope for heaven come short of it, and live indulging these vices, from which even this Pharisee was free?

3. The publican's prayer was just the very reverse. In humility, self-abhorrence, and earnest desire after mercy, he bows into the dust before God. He stood afar off, keeping a humble distance from the Pharisee, whom he counted so much his superior; or in the outer court of the Gentiles, as unworthy a place among true Israelites; and would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven; with downcast looks, which bespoke the deep dejection of his soul, as if he was unworthy to turn even his eyes towards God's holy habitation; but smote upon his breast, where that vile heart lodged in which so much evil had dwelt, and against which he would express a holy indignation. Then raising, as it were, a deep sigh from his inmost soul, in one short ejaculation he breathed forth the desires of his sinful soul, God be merciful to me a sinner! He owns his guilt, by nature, by practice, ill-deserving, hell-deserving; he disclaims all hope and dependence upon himself, and trusts alone upon the promised mercy of God through the blood of atonement; assured he must otherwise eternally perish: and therefore he casts his soul down before the throne of God's grace, earnestly begging that mercy which he so greatly needed. A pattern which every poor sinner must imitate: and in this way alone may the miserable hope to find mercy. We are all in this publican's state; and, if ever we would be saved, we must learn his spirit and adopt his prayer.

4. Very different was the acceptance which these men's prayers met at a throne of grace. However to outward view the specious Pharisee might be generally among men preferred to this despised publican, God seeth not as man seeth: this poor, self-abased, and penitent sinner went down to his house justified, his sins pardoned, his person accepted, his prayer granted, and peace spoken to his soul; and not the other; the proud self justifier was left to his native guilt and sin, abhorred of God, his very prayers an abomination, and all his boasts were but delusion, and must prove his destruction. And the reason of this is added, which contains also an axiom which will be for ever proved true; every one that exalteth himself, in the vain imagination of his own self-sufficiency and righteousness before God, looking down with disdain upon others, as so much his inferior in goodness, he shall be abased; his pride will be mortified, his sins will take hold of him, and the wrath of God in hell for ever abideth upon him, whilst he that humbleth himself, taking shame for his sinfulness and baseness before God, confessing his guilt, and acknowledging his unworthiness of the least mercy, shall be exalted to the favour of God in this world, and to his eternal glory in a better.

15. ¶ And [p] they brought unto him also infants, that he would touch them: but when his disciples saw it, [q] they rebuked them. 16. [r] But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God. 17. [s] Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein.

p Mat. 19. 13—15. Mark 10. 13—16. Gen. 48. 14. 15. 1 Sam. 1. 24. Jer. 49. 11.

q Mat. 15. 23. & 16. 22. & 20. 31.

r Heb. 2. 17. Is. 65. 1, 2. Ps. 34. 11. & 45. 10, 11. Prov. 8. 17. & 4. 1. & 23. 26.

s Mat. 18. 3, 4. John 3. 3, 5. 1 Pet. 2. 1, 2. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Gal. 6. 15. 1 Cor. 14. 20. Ps. 131. 2.

Verses 15—17. This passage or story hath before been twice recorded; and a third time it is profitable to consider it:

1. As an encouragement to parents early to bring their babes to Jesus, in prayer committing them to his benediction, by baptism offering them to become visible members of his church, and engaging to bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

2. We must not be disheartened in our application, if we find those discountenance us from whom we hoped for encouragement; the Master himself will treat us more kindly.

3. The longest day we live, we need still to set before us a little child for our pattern. In the school of teachableness, humility, and simplicity, the best and wisest have yet many lessons to learn.

18. ¶ [t] And a certain ruler asked him, saying, Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life? 19. And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? [u] none is good save one, that is, God. 20. [x] Thou knowest the commandments; Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Honour thy father and thy mother. 21. And he said, [y] All these things have I kept from my youth up. 22. Now when Jesus heard these things, he said unto him, [z] Yet lackest thou one thing: sell all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come, follow me. 23. And when he heard this, he [a] was very sorrowful; for he was very rich. 24. ¶ And when Jesus saw that he was very sorrowful he said, [b] How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God! 25. For it is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. 26. And they that heard it said, [c] Who then can be saved? 27. And he said, [d] The things which are impossible with men are possible with God. 28. ¶ [e] Then Peter said, Lo, we have left all, and followed thee. 29. And he said unto them, [f] Verily I say unto you, there is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, 30. Who shall not receive manifold more in this present time,* and in the world to come life everlasting.

t Mat. 19. 16—30. Mark 10. 17—26. ch. 10. 25—30. John 6. 28. Acts 2. 37. Rom. 9. 30, 32. & 10. 2, 3.

u 1 Sam. 2. 2. Exod. 34. 6, 7. Ps. 119. 68. Jam. 1. 17.

x Ch. 10. 26—28. Exod. 20. 12—17. Rom. 13. 9. Gal. 5. 21. & 3. 10, 12. & 5. 14. Jam. 2. 8. Deut. 5. 16—21. Col. 3. 20.

y Ver. 11, 12. Gal. 1. 14. Phil. 3. 6. Rom. 10. 2, 3.

z Ch. 12. 33. & 16. 9. 1 Tim. 6. 18, 19. Mat. 6. 19, 20. Acts 4. 34.

a Ch. 8. 7, 14. & 21. 34. Judg. 18. 23, 24. Ps. 17. 14. Phil. 3. 19. 2 Cor. 7. 10.

b See ver. 23. Job 31. 24. Ps. 62. 10. Prov. 11. 28. 1 Cor. 1. 26, 27. 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10. Jam. 2. 5. & 4. 4. Mat. 19. 23—26. Mark 10. 23—27.

c Ch. 13. 23. & 1. 34.

d Job 10. 13. & 42. 2. Jer. 32. 17. Gen. 18. 14. Zech. 8. 6. ch. 1. 37.

e Mat. 19. 27—29. Mark 10. 28—31. ch. 5. 11. Phil. 3. 7—9. Deut. 33. 9.

f Ch. 14. 26, 27. & 9. 23, 24. Phil. 3. 7—14. Ps. 19. 11. 1 Cor. 15. 58. 1 Tim. 4. 7, 8. Rom. 6. 23. Rev. 2. 17. & 3. 21.

* From the joys of a good conscience and of the Holy Ghost, the sense of God's favour, and the hopes of treasures in heaven, and the affection of good Christians to him.—Whitby.

Verses 18—30. We have here,

1. Our Lord's discourse with the young ruler, who inquired after the way to eternal life. The inquiry was important, and what the greatest of men need seriously to consider; for they are dying worms as well as others. Could men keep the commandments, this would be still the road to glory; but since the fall, that door of paradise is barred, and none can any longer hope to enter heaven by personal obedience, since all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. To flatter ourselves we have kept the commandments, would prove our ignorance of the spirituality of God's law, and of the corruption of our own hearts. Thus deceived was this young ruler; and the delusion was evident the moment he was called upon to part with all for Christ; when unable to bear that hard saying, he departed sorrowful. Note, Wordly things are usually dire hinderances in the way to glory: for the sake of some one darling lust, how many make shipwreck of their souls.

2. Our Lord took occasion from hence to warn his disciples, whose hearts were too full of the hopes of temporal grandeur, how difficult, and next to impossible, it was for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God. And, when they expressed their astonishment thereat, he refers them to that almighty grace which can effect that for us which we could never do for ourselves. Note, Instead of grasping at abundance, we should tremble at the perilousness of our situation; if God in his providence gives us much, we have so many more hinderances in our way to heaven, unless he gives us also proportionable grace to improve our talents to his glory.

3. In answer to Peter's question, what they should have, who left all to follow him, Christ replies, they should be abundant gainers thereby, receiving manifold more in this present time, if not in kind, yet in comfort in the present graces and gifts of God's Spirit, and in the enjoyment of his love and favour; and in the world to come life everlasting, which will infinitely overpay all our present losses.

31. ¶ [g] Then he took unto him the twelve, and said unto them, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and all things that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of man shall be accomplished.* 32. For he shall be delivered unto the Gentiles, [h] and shall be mocked, and spitefully entreated, and spitted on; 33. And they shall scourge him, and put him to death; and the third day he shall rise again. 34. [i] And they understood none of these things: and this saying was hid from them, neither knew they the things which were spoken.

g Mat. 20. 17—19. Mark 10. 32—34. Ps. 22. 1—21. & 69. 1—21. Is. 53. 2—10. ch. 9. 22. 44. & 13. 33. & 12. 50. & xxii—xxiv. Mat. xxvi—xxviii. Mark xiv, xv, xvi. John xviii, xix, xx.

* Better, All that the prophets have written shall be accomplished on the Son of man.

h Ps. xxii, lxix. Is. 50. 6. & liii. Dan. 9. 24—26. Mic. 5. 1. Zech. 13. 7.

i Ch. 9. 45. & 24. 25. John 16. 17, 19. & 12. 16.

Verses 31—34. We have here,

1. The warning Christ gave his disciples of the sufferings he must endure, to arm them against that dire event. He was about to suffer every indignity, and at last death itself. Nor ought this to surprise them, since the Scriptures had foretold that thus it must be; and not one jot or tittle of the divine word can fail. But as they declared his sufferings, they had insured his resurrection also; and therefore his disciples need not despond, having this glorious event in their view.

2. So strong were the unhappy prejudices the apostles had imbibed, that they understood none of these things. The prophecies which spoke of the Messiah's sufferings and reproaches were hid from them; they could not reconcile the glorious things spoken of his kingdom to such a scene of indignities and humiliation: and, having their eyes dazzled with the temporal grandeur of the Messiah's kingdom, they overlooked all beside. But then, now, and ever, ought we to remember, that the way to glory, both for the head and the members, lies through much tribulation; and no cross, no crown.

35. ¶ [k] And it came to pass, that as he was come nigh unto Jericho, a certain blind man sat by the way-side begging: 36. And hearing the multitude pass by, he asked what it meant. 37. And they told him, that [l] Jesus of Nazareth passeth by. 38. And he cried, saying, [m] Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me. 39. And they which went before [n] rebuked him, that he should hold his peace; but [o] he cried so much the more, Thou son of David, have mercy on me. 40. And [p] Jesus stood, and commanded him to be brought unto him: and when he was come near, he asked him, 41. Saying, [q] What wilt thou that I shall do unto thee? and he said, Lord, that I may receive my sight. 42. And Jesus said unto him, [r] Receive thy sight: thy faith hath saved thee. 43. [s] And immediately he received his sight, and followed him, glorifying God: and all the people, when they saw it, gave praise unto God.

k Mat. 20. 29—34. Mark 10. 46—52. Mat. 9. 27. & 12. 22. & 11. 5. Mark 8. 22—25. John 9. 1—7, 39. Is. 59. 10. l Ch. 1. 26, 27. & 2. 4, 39, 51. & 4. 16. John 1. 45. Mat. 2. 23.
m Is. 9. 6, 7. & 11. 1. Jer. 23. 5, 6. Ezek. 34. 23. Rom. 1. 3, 4. 2 Tim. 2. 8. Rev. 22. 16. Mat. 1. 1. & 9. 27. & 12. 23. & 15. 22.
n Ver. 15. ch. 11. 52. & 19. 39.
o Mat. 15. 22—28. ch. 11. 8. Gen. 32. 26. Ps. 22. 2. Mat. 7. 7. ver. 1. p Heb. 2. 17. & 5. 2. q Gen. 32. 27. & 2. 9. John 20. 13. Mat. 7. 7. Rev. 3. 20. with Is. 35. 5.
r Ps. 107. 20. & 33. 9. ch. 7. 50. & 8. 48. & 17. 19. Mat. 15. 28. s Mat. 9. 22. & 17. 15. & 7. 16. Ps. 103. 1—3. & 116. 12. & 115. 1. & ciii—cviii, cxxxiv—cxxxvi, cxlv—cl. ch. 1. 46—55, 64—79.

Verses 35—43. It was prophesied of the Messiah, that he should open the eyes of the blind: here we see him fulfilling the prophetic word. And he who gave light to the darkened body, shines still with brighter beams, as the Sun of Righteousness, into the benighted soul, and communicates also the faculty of spiritual vision to those whose souls the god of this world hath blinded.

1. The patient here was blind and poor; and such beggars have a claim upon our charity.

2. He sat by the way-side, where he hoped for relief, and there he found more than his most sanguine wishes expected; for, whilst we are waiting upon God in his ways, he is pleased often to give us more than we can ask or think. He heard of the multitude that Jesus passed by, and now resolved to seize the happy moment to prefer his request; nor would be silenced by any rebukes of those who were near him, crying with loud and ceaseless importunity, Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me. Note, Wherever God thus pours out a spirit of prayer and supplication, it is a sure earnest that he intends to grant our petitions.

3. Christ in his wonted compassion, calls the poor man, bids him prefer his petition, and grants his request, giving him sight according to his desire. The tender hearted Saviour feels for human wretchedness, and will not send the poor and humble supplicant away without an answer of peace. If we have faith to trust him, he hath power and willingness to heal all our infirmities, and to supply all our wants.

4. The poor beggar now restored to sight, with delight followed Jesus in the way, glorifying God for the mercy he had experienced; and all the people joined his praises. Note, (1.) If we have received spiritual sight, then shall we follow Jesus without delay in all his holy ways. (2.) The mercies of others demand our thankfulness, as well as our own; for we are members one of another.

CHAP. XIX.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

In this chapter we have, 1. The conversion of Zaccheus the publican at Jericho, ver. 1—10. 2. The parable of the pounds which the king intrusted with his servants, and of his rebellious citizens, ver. 11—27. 3. Christ's riding in triumph into Jerusalem, and his lamentation in prospect of the ruin of that city, ver. 28—44. 4. His teaching in the temple, and casting the buyers and sellers out of it, ver. 45—48.

1. AND Jesus entered and passed through [a] Jericho. 2. And, behold, there was a man named Zaccheus, [b] which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich. 3. And he [c] sought to see Jesus who he was; and could not for the press, because he was little of stature. 4. And he ran before, and climbed up into [d] a sycamore-tree to see him: for he was to pass that way. 5. And when Jesus came to the place, he [e] looked up, and saw him, and said unto him, Zaccheus, [f] make haste and come down; for to-day [g] I must abide at thy house. 6. [h] And he made haste, and came down, and received him joyfully. 7. And when they saw it, [i] they all murmured, saying, that he was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner. 8. [k] And Zaccheus stood, and said unto the Lord, Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold. 9. And Jesus said unto him, This day is [l] salvation come to this house, forsomuch as he also [m] is a son of Abraham. 10. [n] For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.

a Josh. 2. 1. & 6. 1, 26. 1 Kin. 16. 34. 2 Kin. 2. 18—21.
b 1 Cor. 1. 26. ch. 18. 24, 25. with 2 Chr. 17. 5, 6.
c Ch. 23. 8. & 9. 7.
d 1 Kin. 10. 27. Amos 7. 14. Is. 9. 10.
e Ezek. 16. 6, 8. John 1. 48.
f Eccl. 9. 10. Prov. 27. 1. Mat. 11. 28. 2 Cor. 6. 1, 2. Is. 55. 1—7.
g Eph. 3. 20. John 4. 4. & 10. 16. 1 Tim. 1. 15. ver. 10.
h Ps. 119. 59, 60. Gal. 1. 15, 16. 1 Tim. 1. 13—17.
i Mat. 9. 11. ch. 5. 30. & 7. 29. & 15. 2. Job. 5. 2. Eccl. 4. 4.
k Mat. 3. 8. & 21. 31, 32. ch. 7. 29, 30. & 18. 13, 14. 1 Cor. 10. 11. 1 Tim. 1. 16. 2 Cor. 7. 11. ch. 12. 33. & 16. 9. & 18. 22. & 3. 14. Exod. 22. 1.
l Ch. 2. 30. Ps. 98. 3. Is. 45. 17, 22. & 49. 6. 1 Tim. 1. 15. ver. 10. m Ch. 13. 16. Rom. 4. 11, 12, 16. & 9. 8. Gal. 6. 16. & 3. 7, 26. n Mat. 18. 11. & 1. 21. & 20. 28. & 10. 6. & 15. 24. & 9. 13. 1 Tim. 1. 15. Ezek. 34. 16. Is. 63. 1. Hos. 13. 9. Heb. 7. 25. Acts 13. 47.

Verses 1—10. Whilst the conversion of every sinner's heart bespeaks the great power of God, the change wrought on some appears still more worthy to be remembered and admired; as in the case of Zaccheus.

1. He was a publican, yea chief among the publicans, and rich; two great obstructions, in human view, to the salvation of his soul; but Christ has his elect among the great and wealthy, as well as among the poor, and nothing is too hard for his almighty grace. The chief of sinners he can make the chief of saints.

2. He took great pains to get a sight of Christ, and to satisfy a curiosity which the great fame of him had raised: being short, and unable to overlook the crowd of people that usually attended Jesus in his travels, he ran before, and climbed up into a sycamore-tree, that he might see him as he passed by. Note, (1.) They who would gain a sight of Jesus must break through every obstacle in their way. (2.) Curiosity, though often blameable, in many cases is praiseworthy. To see and hear those of whom there are strange reports, is the best way to judge for ourselves.

3. There the eye of Jesus discovered him; and, as he had led him to that tree by the hand of his providence, he now surprises him with the call of his grace, and, by name addressing him, desires him to come down quickly, intending to be that day his guest. With joy the publican obeyed, little expecting such a favour, and received him with heartiest welcome. Note, (1.) Many who have come merely through curiosity to hear and see some minister, whose fame hath been spread abroad, have been graciously surprised with the call of God, and from that hour converted unto him. (2.) There is a wondrous providential disposition of our affairs, which, when we are turned to God, we can reflect upon with amazement, and see his hand leading us when we had not one thought of his designs. (3.) When Christ calls we should gladly run; his word can open for him a welcome into our house and our hearts, and make us with delight reply, Come in, dear Lord, to me. (4.) Come down, is the gospel call: we must sink low in our own eyes, to rise high in God's favour.

4. Many, who were present, were exceedingly offended, that one, who professed himself a prophet of such distinguished sanctity, should go to eat with a person who was so notorious a sinner. His profession made him odious as a publican, his riches might be reguarded as the fruit of extortion, and his character might be known as infamous: but it did not follow, because he had been bad, that he was so, as their censure implied: nor was Jesus to be blamed for visiting those, who, the more desperate their case seemed, so much the more needed his healing grace.

5. Whatever Zaccheus had been, he now gives the most undoubted proofs of genuine and unfeigned repentance. The grace of Jesus had powerfully wrought upon his heart, and the effects of it appeared visible in his words and actions. However grasping he had been of wealth, and intent on gain, now at a stroke half his goods he gives to the poor, and, if any man had ought to lay against him of fraud or extortion, he was ready to make the utmost restitution which the law demanded. Note, (1.) One of the best symptoms of real conversion to God is deadness to the world. (2.) There can be no true repentance without restitution, at least without the desire to make it to the utmost of our power. (3.) They who would show the spirit of true charity, should not leave it merely to their wills to bequeath their wealth to pious uses, but employ it during their lives.

6. Christ testified his approbation of Zaccheus' conduct, and comforted him with the assurance of that salvation which was now come to him and to his house, forasmuch as he also was a son of Abraham. He now showed himself a genuine descendant of this father of the faithful; his salvation was therefore secured, his sins pardoned, his person accepted, and eternal glory his portion, whilst all his family also shared his mercy. And what Christ had done in this case was in direct conformity with the great design of his coming into the world, to seek and save that which was lost. Note, (1.) Every sinner is a lost soul; lost in error and sin, unable to recover himself, and ready to perish eternally; and a great point is gained, when we begin to be deeply convinced of this alarming truth. (2.) Christ is the Saviour of the desperate: none are so far gone as to be past his recovery. (3.) He must first seek us, or we shall never seek to him for salvation.

11. ¶ And as they heard these things, he added and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because [o] they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear. 12. [p] He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a [q] far country [r] to receive for himself a kingdom, and [s] to return. 13. And he called his ten servants,* and [t] delivered them ten† pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come. 14. But [u] his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him saying, We will not have this man to reign over us. 15. And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, [x] then he commanded these servants to be called unto him to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading. 16. Then came the first, saying, Lord, [y] thy pound hath gained ten pounds. 17. And he said unto him, [z] Well, thou good servant; because thou hast been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities. 18. And the second came, saying, Lord, [a] thy pound hath gained five pounds. 19. And he said likewise to him, [b] Be thou also over five cities. 20. And another came, saying, [c] Lord, behold, here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin: 21. For I [d] feared thee, [e] because thou art an austere man: thou takest up that thou layedst not down, and reapest that thou didst not sow. 22. And he saith unto him, [f] Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant. Thou knewest that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow: 23. Wherefore then gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with usury? 24. And he said unto them that stood by, [g] Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds. 25. (And they said unto him, Lord, [h] he hath ten pounds.) 26. For I say unto you, [i] That unto every one which hath shall be given; [k] and from him that hath not, even that he hath shall be taken away from him. 27. [l] But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me.

o Ch. 17. 20. Acts 1. 6. 2 Thes. 2. 2, 3. p Mat. 25. 14—30. Mark 13. 34. ch. 9. 6, 7. & 12. 13.
q Mark 16. 19. ch. 24. 51. Acts 3. 21. ch. 20. 9.
r Mat. 22. 18. Phil. 2. 9—11. Eph. 1. 14.
s Acts 1. 11. & 17. 31. Heb. 9. 28. Rev. 1. 7.
* More correctly, having called ten of his servants.
t Rom. 12. 6—8. Eph. 4. 11—13. 1 Cor. 12. 7, 11, 28, 29. Mat. 21. 33. 2 Cor. 3. 5.
† A mina contains 50 shekels, or £3 14*s.* u John 1. 11. 1 Sam. 8. 7. Mat. 22. 5, 6. x 2 Cor. 5. 10. 1 Cor. 3. 12—15. & 4. 5. Rom. 14. 12. Eccl. 12. 14. ch. 16. 2.
y 1 Cor. 15. 10. Col. 1. 28, 29. 2 Tim. 4. 7, 8. Rom. 12. 3, 6—8. 1 Thes. 2. 19, 20. Prov. 16. 31. & 11. 30. James 2. 18. z 1 Cor. 4. 5. Rom. 2. 29. Mat. 25. 21. & 24. 47. Ps. 49. 14. Rev. 2. 26, 27. ch. 16. 10. & 22. 30. 2 Tim. 2. 12. Gen. 30. 4. a 2 Cor. 8. 12. Rom. 12. 3, 6, 7, 8. 1 Pet. 4. 10, 11. 2 Tim. 4. 2. & 2. 15. 1 Cor. 4. 2. 1 Tim. 4. 16.
b See ver. 17.
c Mat. 7. 21. ch. 6. 46. 2 Tim. 3. 5. Tit. 1. 16.
d Mat. 25. 25. Rev. 21. 8. 1 John 4. 18. Ps. 53. 5.
e Ps. 50. 21. Is. 5. 19. Jer. 17. 15. Ezek. 18. 25, 29.
f Job 15. 5, 6. 2 Sam. 1. 5—16. Mat. 12. 37. & 25. 26, 27. Tit. 3. 11.
g Mat. 25. 28. & 13. 12. Ezek. 46. 17. 1 Sam. 16. 14. Zech. 11. 17. ch. 8. 18.
h Ver. 16.
i Mat. 13. 12. & 25. 29. Mark 4. 25. ch. 8. 18. John 15. 2—4. Rev. 22. 11. Ps. 27. 14. 1 Cor. 15. 10.
k Ezek. 33. 13. & 46. 17. 2 John 8. Gal. 3. 4.
l Mat. 22. 7. ver. 42, 43, 44. & 21. 20—24. Prov. 1. 24—32. Ps. 21. 6—12. & 69. 22—28. 1 Thes. 2. 15, 16. 1 Sam. 15. 38. Num. 14. 36, 37. The Jews shall be fearfully destroyed.

Verses 11—27. What Christ had said to Zaccheus gave occasion to some, who heard him, to conclude that the temporal kingdom of the Messiah was about to be set up in the world, and that, on his arrival at Jerusalem, he would declare himself openly. To rectify such a mistake therefore he spoke the following parable, intimating to them therein, that the generality of the Jewish people would not submit to the kingdom of his glory, and that the kingdom of his glory was more distant than they imagined.

1. A certain nobleman, a person of high birth, went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom; to be invested with sovereign authority, as the governors of Judah were by Roman emperors: and to return, with full power and authority, to reward or punish his subjects. Thus the Lord Jesus ascended into heaven, to receive the mediatorial kingdom, and sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on high; being quickly to return from thence in the mission of his Spirit, to spread his gospel through the earth; in the destruction of the Jewish people and nation; and finally at the day of judgment. And as surely as he once came into the world, so surely will he return again, and will not tarry.

2. He committed to his servants a certain sum of money, that during his absence they might trade (πραγματευσασθε) and improve their capital, in order that at his return he might receive the fruits of their industry. The ministers of Christ in particular, and all his people in general, are those servants: each hath his portion of gifts, natural or providential, which he is required to employ for his Master's honour and interest. All we have is derived from him, and should be devoted to him. Till he comes, we are called upon to use all diligence. Every soul won by us will prove our own unspeakable gain: and whatever be the success of our labours whether more or less, if we approve ourselves faithful to him till death, we are sure not to lose our reward.

3. Two of the servants, on their master's return, with satisfaction appeared before him, and rendered him a faithful account of the trust committed to them. The one had gained more, the other less; but both had been diligent, received his commendation, and were preferred according to the advantages they had made. Whence we are taught, (1.) That we must one day be called upon to give a solemn account to our great Lord and Master of all the means and mercies, gifts and grace, which we have enjoyed, and our profiting thereby. (2.) They who are found faithful will receive the approbation of the Chief Shepherd, and be rewarded by him. (3.) Whatever success we have, we must, to the glory of our Lord, own, that it is thy pound hath gained it; for not to our endeavours, but to his grace, are we indebted for the effect of our ministry. (4.) If we have the Saviour's commendation of our diligence we need not care who may find fault with us. (5.) They who are most zealous in their labours for Christ will receive the greater reward, exalted, as one star differeth from another star in glory.

4. The third, sunk in sloth and carelessness, began to seek excuses: and, having produced the pound committed to his charge, pretended his fear of his master's austerity, as if he would cast on him the blame of his own idleness. But out of his own mouth was this wicked servant condemned; since that apprehension he pleaded of his master's austerity should at least have led him to place the money at the bankers, where, with lawful interest, he might have received his own. Justly therefore he commands the pound to be taken from him, and given to him who had gained the ten pounds; for his having so much is so far from being an objection as some present intimated, ver. 25. that it was a reason why he should have more, having made so good a use of the former trust; whilst he, who made no use, or so bad a one, of the pound delivered to him, justly deserved to have it taken from him. Note, (1.) Not only the abuse of our gifts, but our negligence to improve and employ them for Christ's honour and the good of men's souls, will be esteemed highly criminal. (2.) The pleas of slothful professors, in a judgment-day, shall turn to their everlasting confusion and condemnation. (3.) Idle servants are wicked servants. Ministers who are not active in Christ's service, effectually serve the interests of Satan. (4.) Hard thoughts of God are at the bottom of every unhumbled sinner's heart. (5.) Diligence to improve the gifts and graces, which the Lord hath bestowed on us, is the sure way to have both abundantly increased under his blessing; whilst sloth makes all our attainments to wither and decay.

5. He foretells the ruin of the Jewish people in general. They were the citizens who sent after him in his absence, refusing to submit to his government; they paid no regard to his apostles and ministers when he was ascended into heaven: and, having filled up the measure of their iniquities by rejecting his gospel, he seized the rebels with his arm of judgment, and the Roman sword miserably massacred innumerable multitudes of this devoted people, and ruined their country. And such will be the case with all impenitent sinners. They say, in the pride and rebellion of their hearts, We will not have this man to rule over us, rejecting the government of his laws and the warnings of his servants: but their terrible destruction approaches: the King, their Judge, clothed with vengeance, is ready to be revealed from heaven, when wrath to the uttermost will come upon them; and they who refused to bow to the sceptre of his grace shall be broken with the rod of his judgments. They who will not be ruled must be eternally ruined.

28. ¶ And when he had thus spoken, [m] he went before, ascending up to Jerusalem. 29. [n] And it came to pass, when he was come nigh to Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount called the mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples, 30. Saying, Go ye into the village over against you; in the which at your entering ye shall find a colt tied, whereon yet never man sat: loose him, and bring him [p] hither. 31. And if any man ask you, Why do ye loose him? thus shall ye say unto him, Because [o] the Lord hath need of him. 32. And they that were sent went their way, and found even as he had said unto them. 33. And as they [s] were loosing the colt, the owners thereof said unto them, Why loose ye the colt? 34. And they said, The Lord [p] hath need of him. 35. And they brought him [t] to Jesus: and [q] they cast their garments upon the colt, and they [r] set Jesus thereon. 36. And as he went, they spread [u] their clothes in the way. 37. And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the [s] mount of Olives, [t] the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice [s] for all the mighty works that they had seen; 38. Saying, [u] Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the [x] Lord: peace in heaven, and glory in the highest.* 39. [x] And some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said [y] unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples. 40. And he answered and said unto them, I tell you, that if these should [†] hold their peace, [y] the stones would immediately cry out.†

[m] Ch. 12. 4. & 13. 33. & 18. 31. Ps. 40. 8. John 18. 11. ch. 12. 50.

[n] Mat. 21. 1—11. Mark 11. 1—15. John 12. 12—16.

[o] Ps. 24. 1. & 50. 10, 11. Acts 10. 36. Heb. 1. 2, 3. John 3. 35. & 17. 2. & 13. 13.

[p] 2 Cor. 8. 9. Zech. 9. 9.

[q] 2 Kin. 9. 13. Mat. 21. 7. John 12. 13.

[r] Mat. 21. 5, 7. John 12. 14, 15. Zech. 9. 9.

[s] 1 Kin. 11. 7. 2 Kin. 23. 13. Zech. 14. 4. Mark 13. 3. & 14. 26. Acts 1. 11, 12.

[t] Ps. 8. 1, 2. & 118. 22—26. ch. 7. 16. & 17. 15. & 18. 43. John 12. 12, 13.

[u] Ps. 118. 26. & 72. 17—19. Zech. 9. 9. ch. 2. 10—14. Col. 1. 20. Eph. 1. 10. & 2. 14. & 3. 21. 1 Tim. 1. 17. Rev. 5. 9—13.

[s] Mark most fully describes this triumphant progress of our Lord.

[x] Is. 26. 11. Acts 4. 2. & 13. 45. Job 5. 2. Eccl. 4. 4. Mat. 23. 13. James 4. 5.

[y] Hab. 2. 11. Mat. 27. 19, 24, 5, 54.

† The expression is proverbial, but the calling of the Gentiles seems here alluded to.—Scott

Verses 28—40. Eager to accomplish the salvation of his people, the blessed Jesus hastens to the scene of his sufferings, not intimidated by all the dreadful events he foresaw. Was he so willing to die for us, and shall we be cowards in his service? We have here what we met with twice before:

1. The triumphant entry of Jesus into Jerusalem, amidst the acclamations of the multitude. He was mounted, not as a conqueror on a triumphal car, but, as Zion's lowly king, on an ass' colt; and that not his own. He sent to borrow it for this occasion; and, having the dominion over all creatures, and in his hands the hearts of all men, the owners readily sent him at the Saviour's bidding. Mounted thereon, the garments of his poor disciples were the trappings, and served as carpets spread to adorn his entry; whilst filled with wonder and praise at all the miracles they had seen, the multitude cried, Blessed be the king, Messiah: may all happiness and prosperity attend him that cometh in the name of the Lord, invested with divine authority and power: peace in heaven; let the God of heaven bless his undertaking, and crown it with success, appearing now a reconciled God to us; and glory in the highest; let the greatest honour, praise, and adoration, redound to him for this salvation, and be ascribed to him by men on earth and angels in heaven.

2. Christ vindicates his disciples from the envious cavils of the Pharisees, who could not bear to hear such acclamations, and would insinuate that it was the highest pride to permit such incense to be offered to him. But though he came in great humility, the present occasion demanded these praises; and if the multitude had been silent, he assured these cavillers the very stones would cry out, reproaching their stupidity, and ascribing to God the glory due unto his name.

41. ¶ And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and [z] wept over it,
42. Saying, [a] If thou hadst known, even thou at least in [b] this thy day, [c] the things which belong unto thy peace! but now [d] they are hid from thine eyes.
43. [e] For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side.
44. [e] And shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation.
45. ¶ [f] And he went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold therein, and them that bought;
46. Saying unto them, It is written, [g] My house is the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves.
47. ¶ [h] And he taught daily in the temple. But the chief priests and the scribes and the chief of the people sought to destroy him.
48. And could not find what they might do: for all the people [i] were very attentive to hear him.

z Jer. 9. 1. Hos. 11. 8. Mark 3. 5. John 11. 33.
a Deut. 4. 29. & 32. 29. Lam. 1. 9. Is. 26. 11. b Ps. 32. 6. Is. 55. 6. ch. 3. 9. & 21. 30, 31. c Ch. 2. 11, 14. Heb. 2. 1, 3. & 4. 1. Acts 13. 26, 46.
d 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. Rom. 11. 7—12, 25. Is. 6. 9, 10. & 29. 10, 14. & 42. 19. & 44. 18. Rom. 11. 8.
e Ps. 37. 13. Deut. 28. 47—52. Is. 29. 3. Jer. 6. 3, 6. ch. 21. 20—24. Mat. 24. 2, 15—22. 1 Kin. 9. 7, 8. Mic. 3. 12. Ps. 21. 8—12. Dan. 9. 27. Prov. 1. 24—32. 1 Thes. 2. 15, 16. 1 Pet. 2. 12. & 4. 17, 18. All this was fulfilled when Titus and his Roman army besieged and destroyed Jerusalem. f Mat. 21. 12, 13. Mark 11. 15—17. John 2. 13—16. with Deut. 14. 25, 26.
g Is. 56. 7. & 60. 7. Ps. 93. 5. Ezek. 43. 12. with Jer. 7. 11. Hos. 12. 7. Mark 11. 17.
h Mat. 21. 14, 15, 45, 46. Mark 11. 18. & 12. 12. & 14. 1. John 7. 19. & 8. 37.
i Or hanged on him. Neh. 8. 3. Acts 16. 14.

Verses 41—48. We have here,

1. The tears of Jesus shed over the devoted city Jerusalem. Being now in full view of that rejected place, and foreseeing the impending miseries ready to overwhelm the inhabitants, he wept over it, as man feeling the tenderest compassion towards them; saying, If thou hadst known, or, O that thou hadst known! even thou, a wicked and bloody city as thou hast been, at least in this thy day, when the most abundant means of grace have been vouchsafed to thee, the things which belong unto thy peace, temporal and eternal; but now they are hid from thine eyes; thou art abandoned to judicial blindness, and utter reprobacy, the consequence of which will shortly be utter ruin; when thine enemies shall besiege and enter into thee, massacre thy inhabitants, and leave not one stone upon another: because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation; rejecting the light of my gospel, the warnings of my ministers, and the overtures of mercy which were vouchsafed to thee. Note, (1.) A Christian's heart, like his Master's, feels the tenderest compassion towards perishing sinners and grieves to behold their approaching miseries. (2.) There is a time of visitation, when the Lord is pleased to set before us the things which belong to our pardon, peace, and salvation, and to urge them upon us by his providence, his word, his Spirit: not to know, or abuse this day of grace, is to be undone. (3.) However long we have trespassed on God's patience, or however greatly we have provoked him; if at last we are prevailed upon to return to him, it is never too late to find favour with him. Let none therefore despair, who desire now to return without delay to the Lord. (4.) Justly are they given up to judicial blindness and hardness of heart, who reject the counsel of God against their own souls. (5.) All the threatenings of Jesus will be as surely fulfilled, as we have seen this against Jerusalem accomplished in the total overthrow of that city and people. Let every sinful city, every sinful soul, take warning by her fall.

2. Being come to Jerusalem, he goes immediately to the temple, cleanses it from the profanations there practised; casting out the buyers and sellers, who had made that house of prayer a den of thieves: testifying his zeal for his Father's honour: and when he had thus purged this holy place from such gross abuses, he preached there to the people the doctrines of his rich grace. Note, The preaching of the gospel is the great glory of every temple devoted to the Saviour's honour.

3. The chief priests, scribes, and rulers, were highly exasperated at his discourses and conduct, which so deeply reflected on their corruptions, and therefore sought how to murder him immediately; but they could not just then contrive any scheme for the execution of their bloody purposes, the people in general being very attentive to his discourses, (ἐξεκρέματο) they hung upon his lips, eagerly catching every word which dropped; for he spoke with such power, energy, and conviction, as from their own scribes they had never heard before.

CHAP. XX.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's answer to the chief priests' question concerning his authority, ver. 1—8. 2. The parable of the vineyard let out to the unjust and rebellious husbandmen, ver. 9—19. 3. Christ's answer to the question proposed to him concerning the lawfulness of paying tribute to Cesar, ver. 20—26. 4. His vindication of the resurrection of the dead and the future state, from the foolish cavils of the Sadducees, ver. 27—38. 5. His puzzling the scribes with a question concerning the Messiah's being the son of David, ver. 39, 44. 6. The caution he gave his disciples to take heed of the scribes, ver. 45—47.

1. AND [a] it came to pass, that on one of those days as he taught the people in the temple, and preached the gospel, [b] the chief priests and the scribes came upon him, with the elders, 2. And spake

a Mat. 21. 23—32. Mark 2. 11, 27—33.
b 1 Chr. xxiv. Exod. 19. 7. Num. 11. 16. Ruth 4. 4. 1 Sam. 15. 30.

unto him, saying, Tell us, [c] by what authority doest thou these things? or who is he that gave thee this authority? 3. And he answered and said unto them, [d] I will also ask you one thing; and answer me: 4. [e] The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men? 5. And they reasoned with themselves, [f] saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say, Why then believed ye him not? 6. But and if we say, Of men; [g] all the people will stone us:* [h] for they be persuaded that John was a prophet. 7. And they answered, [i] that they could not tell whence it was. 8. And Jesus said unto them, [k] Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

c Ex. 2. 14. Acts 7. 27. & 4. 7. Mat. 7. 29.
d Mat. 10. 16, 17. Eph. 5. 15. Job 5. 12, 13.
e Ch. 3. 1—20. & 7. 29, 30. Mark 1. 1—11. Mat. iii. John 1. 6—36. & 5. 32—35. Prov. 15. 28. & 26. 4, 5.
f Mark 11. 31. Mat. 21. 25, 31, 32. ch. 7. 29, 30.
g Mat. 21. 26, 46. & 14. 5. Mark 11. 32. & 12. 12.
* They had themselves taught the people this violence. See John 10. 31. Acts 11. 19.
h Mat. 14. 5. Mark 6. 20. John 5. 35. ch. 7. 26—29.
i Rom. 1. 18, 21, 22, 28. 2 Cor. 2. 15. & 4. 3, 4. 2 Thes. 2. 9, 10. k Prov. 26. 4. Job 5. 13.

Verses 1—8. Whilst Jesus was engaged in the blessed work of preaching to the people the glad tidings of salvation, the chief priests, scribes, and elders came upon him to interrupt him in these labours of love. Note, We may not wonder if in the service of the gospel we meet with many interruptions from the great enemy of souls, and his emissaries.

They demanded his authority for what he said and did; insinuating, that as it belonged to them to judge of the pretensions of those who assumed the prophetical character, unless he produced his commission, they must proceed against him as a deceiver. He answers their question by another, respecting the baptism of John, which not caring to answer for fear of the people, and unwilling to own the divine mission of the Baptist, they pretended ignorance, and gave him a just reason to refuse them a farther account of himself, seeing they had already rejected the plainest evidence. Note, It is but lost labour to endeavour to persuade those who are before resolved not to be convinced.

9. ¶ Then began he to speak to the people this parable: [l] A certain man planted a vineyard, and let it forth to [m] husbandmen, and went into [n] a far country for a long time. 10. And at the season he [o] sent a servant to the husbandmen, that they should give him of the fruit of the vineyard: [p] but the husbandmen beat him, and sent him away empty. 11. And again he sent another servant: and they beat him also, and entreated him shamefully, and sent him away empty. 12. And again he sent a third: and they wounded him also, and cast him out. 13. Then said the lord of the vineyard, What shall I do? [q] I will send my beloved son: it may be† they will reverence him when they see him. 14. But when the husbandmen saw him, they reasoned among themselves, saying, This is [r] the heir: come, [s] let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours. 15. So they cast him out of the vineyard, and killed him. [t] What therefore shall the lord of the vineyard do unto them? 16. He shall come and destroy these husbandmen, and shall give the vineyard to others. And when they heard it, they said, God forbid. 17. And he beheld them, and said, What is this then that is written, [u] The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner? 18. [x] Whosoever shall fall upon that stone shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder. 19. ¶ [y] And the chief priests and the scribes the same hour sought to lay hands on him; and they feared the people: for they perceived that he had spoken this parable against them.

l Mat. 21. 33—46. Mark 12. 1—12. Is. 5. 1—4. Song 8. 11, 12. Jer. 2. 21. Ps. 80. 8—14. 1 Cor. 3. 6—9.
m Num. iii, iv, viii. Deut. 1. 15. & 16. 18. & 17. 9—15.
n Ch. 19. 12. Acts 1. 11. & 3. 21. Eph. 20. 21. 1 Pet. 3. 22. Ps. 110. 1.
o 2 Kin. 17. 13, 14. 2 Chr. 36. 15, 16. Neh. 9. 29, 30. Jer. 44. 4, 5. Hos. 6. 5. p 1 Kin. 22. 24. 2 Chr. 16. 10. & 23. 19, 21. & 36. 16. Jer. xx, xxvi, xxxvi—xxxviii. 1 Thes. 2. 15. Neh. 9. 26. Heb. 11. 35—37. Mat. 23. 31—37. Acts 7. 52.
q Is. 7. 14. & 9. 6, 7. & 11. 1. Jer. 23. 5, 6. Ezek. 34. 23, 29. John 3. 16. & 1. 14. Rom. 8. 3. Gal. 4. 4. Heb. 1. 6.
† Better, surely they will, &c.
r Heb. 1. 2. Ps. 89. 27.
s Mat. ii, xxvi, xxvii. Mark xiv, xv. ch. xxii, xxiii. John v, vii, viii, x, xviii, xix. Acts 3. 15. 1 Cor. 2. 8. Heb. 13. 12. 1 Thes. 2. 15. Gen. 37. 18. John 11. 50, 53.
t See Mat. 21. 41, 43. & 8. 11. 12. Ps. 21. 8—12. & 69. 22—28. Prov. 1. 24—32. Rom. 11. 7—25. Acts 13. 46. & 18. 6. Mark 16. 15, 16. u Ps. 118. 22 Acts 4. 11. Mark 12. 10. Mat. 21. 42. Is. 28. 16. Mat. 16. 18. Eph. 2. 11—22. & 1. 20—23. Phil. 2. 9—11. 1 Pet. 2. 7.
x Is. 8. 14, 15. Rom. 9. 33. 1 Pet. 2. 7. Mat. 21. 44. Zech. 12. 3. Ps. 2. 9. 1 Thes. 2. 16. 2 Cor. 3. 14 & 4. 3, 4. Dan. 2. 34, 35, 44.
y 2 Tim. 4. 3. ch. 11. 45, 53, 54. Mark 12. 12. Mat. 21. 45, 46. ver. 6.

Verses 9—19. This parable is designed for a warning to the priests and rulers, of the ruin coming upon them and their nation for their persecutions of the messengers of God, and their rejection of the Messiah.

1. This vineyard was the Jewish people, which had been taken under God's peculiar care; and having instituted a magistracy and ministry among them, he expected suitable returns of love and duty from them; but instead of that, they treated with the greatest cruelty those divinely appointed messengers, whom he sent to remind them of his just expectations, and now were about to murder the son, who was come on the same errand, the consequence of which would be the ruin of the nation, and the eternal destruction of these miscreants. Note, (1.) The best of men have met with the cruellest usage from those, whose good alone was the object of their labours. (2.) The end of obstinate transgressors is to be rooted out at the last.

2. Struck with the denunciation of vengeance, they could not but deprecate the wrath threatened, and express their abhorrence of such a crime as the murder of the Messiah: but Christ with deepest concern beheld them, assured of their determined obstinacy, and approaching ruin. Though their efforts would be all fruitless, that stone which these Jewish builders rejected, would, notwithstanding, become the head of the corner. This Jesus, whom they despised, would be exalted to the right hand of the Majesty on high, and invested with all power and authority in heaven and in earth; and his enemies, who were offended at him, and on whom his vengeance would light, must terribly perish.

3. The chief priests plainly perceived the drift of the parable, and rage boiled in their bosoms. They would gladly have seized and murdered him on the spot, but were deterred through fear of the people, and forced reluctantly to defer their bloody purpose to a more convenient opportunity. So little effect has the fairest warnings upon those who harden their hearts against conviction.

20. [z] And they watched him, and sent forth spies, which should feign themselves just men, that they might take hold of his words, that so [a] they might deliver him unto the power and authority of the governor. 21. And they asked him, saying, [b] Master, we know that thou [c] sayest and teachest rightly, neither ac-z Mat. 22. 15—26. Mark 12. 13—17. Ps. 38. 12. Jer. 18. 18. 22. 1 Tim. 4. 2, 3.

a Mat. 20. 19. & 27. 1, 2. John 18. 28—32. & 11. 50.
b Mat. 22. 16. Mark 12. 15. Ps. 12. 2. & 55. 21. Mat. 26. 49. 50. c 2 Cor. 2. 17. 1 Thes. 2. 4. Gal. 1. 10. Acts 10. 34, 35. Is. 11. 2 ceptest thou the person of any, but teachest the way of God* truly: 22. [d] Is it lawful for us to give tribute unto Cesar, or no? 23. But [e] he perceived their craftiness, and said unto them, [f] Why tempt ye me? 24. Shew me a [g] penny. Whose image and superscription hath it? They answered and said, [h] Cesar's. 25. And he said unto them, [i] Render therefore unto Cesar the things which be Cesar's, and unto God the things which be God's. 26. And they could not take hold of his words before the people: and they [k] marvelled at his answer, and held their peace.

* Or of a truth.

d Mat. 22. 17—21. Ezra 4. 13. Acts 5. 37. Jer. 42. 2, 3.

e Ch. 5. 22. & 6. 8. & 11. 17.

f Ver. 20. ch. 11. 16, 53, 54. Mat. 12. 38. & 16. 1. & 19. 3. Ps. 90. 9.

g See Mat. 18. 28. & 20. 2. & 22. 19, 20.

h Ch. 2. 1. & 3. 1. & 23. 1.

i Mat. 22. 21. & 17. 25. Rom. 13. 7. Prov. 21. 21. 1 Pet. 2. 17.

k Mat. 22. 21, 33, 46. 1 Cor. 1. 19, 20. Job 5. 12, 13. ver. 39, 40.

Verses 20—26. Resolved if possible to destroy him, and not having the power in their own hands, they determined to try if they could not ensnare him and render him obnoxious to the Roman government, as a seditious person: for which purpose we have here,

1. The insidious question proposed to him by certain of the Pharisees and Herodians, who, under the guise of conscientious regard to their duty, pretended a great concern to know whether it was lawful to give tribute to Cesar or not, and thereby acknowledge themselves the subjects of a foreign power. They suggest their fullest confidence in the rectitude of his decisions, their opinion of his integrity unawed by the fear of men, and their satisfiedness in that divine commission under which he acted; and thus they endeavoured to flatter him into an unguarded freedom, which either must embroil him with the civil powers, or render him odious to the people. Note, (1.) The garb of piety hath often served to cover the vilest designs. We need to be on our guard against some who feign themselves just men, and not credulously trust to every specious professor. To be wise as serpents is our duty, as well as to be harmless as doves. (2.) It hath been the common artifice of persecutors to endeavour to represent the faithful as enemies to the state, and thus to gain the civil powers to oppress them.

2. His answer confounds and silences his enemies. He perceives their craftiness; for from him nothing is hid, nothing is secret; and out of their own mouth draws a decision of the question, to which they cannot object. As they own their money bore Cesar's image and superscription, he had certainly a right to his own; though this interfered not with God's demands, to whose worship and service their hearts and lives must be devoted. Unable to object, in sullen silence they held their peace, marvelling at his wisdom, yet obstinate in their infidelity.

27. ¶ [l] Then came to him certain of the Sadducees, which deny that there is any resurrection, and they asked him, 28. Saying, Master, [m] Moses wrote unto us, If any man's brother die, having a wife, and he die without children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother. 29. There were therefore seven brethren: and the first took a wife, and died without children. 30. And the second took her to wife, and he died childless. 31. And the third took her; and in like manner the seven also: and they left no children, and died. 32. Last of all the woman died also. 33. Therefore in the resurrection whose wife of them is she? for seven had her to wife. 34. And Jesus answering said unto them, [n] The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage: 35. But they which [o] shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead,* neither marry nor are given in marriage: 36. [p] Neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection. 37. Now that the dead are raised, [q] even Moses shewed at the bush, when he called the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. 38. [r] For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto him.

l Mat. 22. 23—33. Mark 12. 18—27. Acts 23. 6, 8. 1 Cor. 15. 12. 2 Tim. 2. 17.

m Deut. 25. 5, 6. Gen. 38. 8, 26. with Job 1. 2. & 42. 13. The design of the Sadducees here seems not so much to have been to draw out a discourse from our Saviour, which might have touched his life —which was the Pharisee's design — as to have exposed him by bringing him into an absurdity.—Poole.

n Ch. 17. 27. 1 Cor. vii. 1 Tim. 4. 3. & 5. 14. Heb. 13. 4.

o 2 Thes. 1. 5. Rev. 3. 4. Jam. 2. 5. 1 Cor. 7. 29.

* Our Lord, agreeably to the Jewish style of the period, calls that only the resurrection, which is a resurrection to glory. — Campbell.

p 1 Cor. 15. 53—55, 42, 49. 1 John 3. 2. Rom. 8. 23. Col. 3. 4. Ps. 17. 15. & 16. 10, 11. 2 Tim. 2. 12.

q Exod. 3. 6. Gen. 17. 7. & 28. 21. & 32. 9. Lev. 26. 12. Acts 7. 32. Heb. 11. 16. Mark 12. 26. Mat. 22. 32.

r Rom. 4. 17. Col. 3. 3, 4. Is. 26. 19. John 11. 25. & 4. 14. & 6. 40, 54. & 14. 19. Eccl. 12. 7.

Verses 27—38. This confutation of the Sadducean objection to the resurrection of the dead was considered before, Matt. xxii. 23. Mark xii. 18. But our Lord here enlarges somewhat concerning that awful state which after death succeeds. The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage; necessary it is that the world should thus be supplied with inhabitants, and the ravages of death be repaired by the rising generation: but they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, have higher joys than even the marriage state can afford, and need not to increase, where death is swallowed up in victory. They are said to be accounted worthy, not that in and of ourselves we have any merit; our worthiness consists in being found in Christ, justified by his blood, complete in his righteousness, and sanctified by his Spirit. In that unseen world to which the blessed go, [1.] They neither marry nor are given in marriage; their holiness and happiness is complete without it; the delights of sense are swallowed up in the infinitely surpassing ecstasies of the soul. [2.] Neither can they die any more: that world needs not to be replenished with new inhabitants, where life eternal reigns, and death never enters. [3.] They are equal to the angels; partaking in their service, enjoying the same bliss; glorious and immortal as these seraphic spirits. [4.] They are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection; as adopted sons they have now the title to the eternal glory, and at the resurrection day will be put in possession of the purchased inheritance.

39. Then certain of the scribes answering said, Master, thou hast well said. 40. And after that [s] they durst not ask him any question at all. 41. ¶ And he said unto them, [t] How say they that Christ is David's son? 42. And David himself saith in the book of Psalms, [u] The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 43. Till I make thine enemies thy footstool. 44. David therefore calleth him Lord, [x] how is he then his son? 45. ¶ Then, [y] in the audience of all the people, he said unto his disciples,

s Mat. 22. 33, 34, 36. Mark 12. 34.

t Mat. 22. 41—46. Mark 12. 35—37.

u Ps. 110. 1. Acts 2. 31. 1 Cor. 15. 25. Heb. 1. 3, 13. & 8. 1. & 10. 13. Eph. 1. 20—23. 1 Pet. 3. 22. Ps. 21. 8—12 & 110. 5, 6. & 92. 9. & 69. 22—28.

x Is. 7. 14. & 9. 6. John 1. 14. Rom. 1. 3, 4. & 9. 5. Rev. 22. 16. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Gal. 4. 4. 2 Tim. 2. 8. ch. 1. 35.

y Mat. 23. 1. 1 Tim. 5. 20. Is. 58. 1. Ps. 40. 9, 10. ch. 12. 1.

z Mat. 23. 3, 5—7. Mark 12. 38—40. ch. 14. 7. 3 John 9. Prov. 16. 18. & 18. 12. & 29. 23. Hab. 2. 4.

a Mat. 23. 14. Mark 12. 40. ch. 11. 43. 2 Tim. 3. 5, 6. Gal. 4. 17. 1 Thes. 2. 5. Ezek. 20. 25.

b Mat. 11. 22, 24. ch. 10. 12, 14, & 12. 47, 48.

46. z Beware of the scribes, which desire to walk in long robes, and love greetings in the markets, and the highest seats in the synagogues, and the chief rooms at feasts; 47. a Which devour widows' houses, and for a shew make long prayers: b the same shall receive greater damnation.

Verses 39—47. The scribes, the established expositors of the law, expressed their high approbation of his answer to their Sadducean opponents; and, struck with the surprising wisdom which appeared in all his discourses, declined attempting any further to encounter him, conscious of his superiority. But though they had done with him, Christ had not done with them.

1. He proposes to them a question, which seemed of easy solution, but which quite disconcerted them for an answer. Ignorant of the mystery of the person of the Messiah, in whom the divine and human natures should be united, they could not account how David's Son should be David's Lord. To us this mystery is unfolded; we behold God and man in one Christ.

2. He condemns the hypocrisy and covetousness of the scribes, and cautions his disciples against them. They made a vast parade of profession, and with flowing robes in solemn stateliness as they passed, expected homage, as due to their superiority; delighted in hearing the incense offered to their vanity; proudly affected precedency; and whilst by their long prayers they insinuated themselves into the confidence of widows, they basely and wickedly abused the trust reposed in them, and devoured their substance. These shall receive greater damnation; wickedness committed under such a veil of piety, brings the most aggravated guilt on the conscience, and must be attended with the most terrible vengeance of God.

CHAP. XXI.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's approbation of a poor widow that cast two mites into the treasury, ver. 1—4. 2. A prediction of the destruction of Jerusalem, and of the second coming of Jesus Christ to judge the world, under the type and figure of that, ver. 5—33. 3. A practical application of this by way of caution and counsel, ver. 34—36. 4. An account of Christ's preaching, and the people's attendance on it, ver. 37, 38.

a Mark 12. 41—44. 2 Kin. 10. 9. Mark 7. 11.

b See Mark 12. 42. i. e. a fifth part of a farthing.

c 2 Cor. 3. 2, 3, 12. & 9. 6, 7. Prov. 11. 24, 25. & 3. 9.

* The treasure designed for the use of his temple.—Whitby.

1. AND he looked up, a and saw the rich men casting their gifts into the treasury. 2. And he saw also a certain poor widow casting in thither b two mites. 3. And he said, Of a truth I say unto you, c that this poor widow hath cast in more than they all: 4. For all these have of their abundance cast in unto the offerings of God: * but she of her penury hath cast in all the living that she had.

Verses 1—4. The commendation of this poor widow's offering we heard, Mark xii. 41. We may observe, (1.) That it is the duty of all, according to their ability, to contribute to the service of the sanctuary, the maintenance of a gospel ministry, the education of youth, and the relief of the necessitous. (2.) The least mite which is given to the offerings of God from a heart zealous for his glory, and breathing fervent charity, shall be remembered, and infinitely recompensed in the great day.

d Mat. 24. 1—8. Mark 13. 1—8.

5. ¶ d And as some spake of the temple, how it was adorned with goodly stones and gifts, he said, 6. As for these things which ye behold, the days will come, in the which e there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down. 7. ¶ And they asked him, saying, Master, f but when shall these things be? and what sign will there be when these things shall come to pass? 8. And he said, g Take heed that ye be not deceived: for h many shall come in my name, saying I am Christ; and the time draweth near: go ye not therefore after them. 9. But i when ye shall hear of wars and commotions, be not terrified: for these things must first come to pass; but k the end is not by and by. 10. l Then said he unto them, Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: 11. And great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines, and pestilences; and fearful sights, and great signs shall there be from heaven. 12. But before all these, m they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogues, and into prisons, being brought before kings and rulers for my name's sake. 13. And n it shall turn to you for a testimony. 14. o Settle it therefore in your hearts, not to meditate before what ye shall answer: 15. p For I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which q all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist. 16. q And ye shall be betrayed both by parents, and brethren, and kinsfolks, and friends; and some of you shall they cause to be put to death. 17. And ye shall be hated of all men r for my name's sake. 18. s But there shall not an hair of your head perish. 19. t In your patience possess ye your souls.

e Ch. 19. 44. Mat. 23. 38. Jer. 5. 10. & 26. 18. Mic. 3. 12. 1 Kin. 9. 7. Ezek. 7. 20—22.

f Mark 13. 3, 4. Mat. 24. 3. Dan. 12. 4, 6, 8. John 21. 21. Ps. 111. 2.

g Jer. 29. 8. 1 Cor. 6. 9. & 15. 33. & 3. 18. Eph. 5. 6. Col. 2. 8, 18. 2 Thes. 2. 3. Gal. 6. 7. 1 John 3. 7. & 4. 1.

h Jer. 23. 21, 25. & 14. 14. John 5. 43. Mat. 24. 5, 23, 24. Mark 13. 6, 21—23. with Acts 5. 36, 37.

i Jer. 4. 19. & 5. 10, 11. Ps. 46. 2, 3. & 27. 1—3. & 112. 7. Is. 8. 12. & 51. 12, 13.

k Mat. 24. 6, 14, 15. Jer. 4. 27. & 5. 10, 18. & 46. 28.

l Hag. 2. 22. Heb. 12. 27. Dan. 2. 34, 35, 44. Zech. 14. 13. Acts 11. 28. Joel. 2 30.

m Mat. 10. 17—22. & 24. 9—14. Mark 13. 9—13. John 15. 20. & 16. 2. 1 Thes. 2. 15, 16. ch. 13. 34. & 19. 14. Acts iv—xxvi. Rev. 2. 10. 1 Pet. 4. 12, 14.

n Phil. 1. 28. 2 Thes. 1. 5

o Mat. 10. 19. Mark 13. 11. ch. 12. 12. Phil. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 7.

p Deut. 33. 25. 1 Cor. 10. 13. Exod. 4. 12. Is. 54. 17. ch. 12. 12. Jer. 1. 6, 9, 19. Acts 2. 4, 37, & 4. 1, 17, 32. & 5. 13. & 6. 10.

q Mic. 7. 5, 6. Jer. 9. 4. Mat. 10. 21, 22. John 16. 2. & 15. 20. Acts 7. 59. & 12. 2.

r Col. 1. 24. 2 Tim. 3. 12. & 2. 12. & 4. 7. Rev. 2. 3, 13. & 3. 10.

s Mat. 10. 30. Is. 41. 10. & 46. 4. Ps. 122. 3, 8. 1 Sam. 14. 45. & 25. 29. 2 Sam. 14. 11.

t Heb. 6. 11, 12. & 10. 35, 36. Jam. 5. 8. Ps. 27. 14.

Verses 5—19. The disciples, vastly pleased with the magnificence of the temple, and the gifts with which it was enriched, could not but grieve at the thoughts that it should be utterly destroyed, and fain would move the Saviour's compassion to reverse the sentence he had pronounced; but he confirms the doom of that devoted place, and in answer to their request informs them of the signs preceding the threatened desolation.

1. False Christs would arise, making great profession of delivering the Jews from the Roman yoke, and affirming the time fixed in the ancient prophecies was near, when the temporal kingdom of the Messiah should be set up. But they are to beware of such deceivers, and neither follow nor be led by them. His kingdom they had been often advised was not of this world, nor must they look for any other Messiah but himself.

2. Terrible commotions and awakening judgments would precede the day of his coming to destroy the Jewish nation. Bloody wars and tumults would ravage the country; earthquakes rock the ground; famines and pestilence desolate the land; and fearful sights in the heavens terrify the beholders, and portend the approaching dire calamities. But they must not be terrified, at the signs, nor apprehensive of the consequence; for they shall be under the peculiar care of the divine providence, though greater evils are still behind.

3. They must expect fiery persecutions, and will find their nearest and dearest relations, filled with enmity against the gospel, their bitterest enemies. They will be scourged in the synagogues by their own countrymen; cast into prison; brought before heathen magistrates and kings; hated of all men; and called to resist unto blood, sealing the truth they professed with martyrdom. But to support and encourage them herein, Christ assures them, [1.] That their sufferings and persecutions shall tend to make the gospel-word more diffused, and be a testimony against those who maliciously and cruelly persecuted them. [2.] He promises them extraordinary aid in times of extraordinary trials. They need not be solicitous about the answer they should make, when cited before the tribunals of magistrates and kings: nor must depend on their own prudence for their defence, but expect divine assistance. I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay or resist. The Holy Ghost should furnish them with matter and words; fill their mouths with such arguments, and give such energy to their discourse, as should quite confound and silence their persecutors, if it did not convince them. And all God's faithful ministers and people, when suffering for truth's sake, and called in defence of the gospel to answer before the rulers, may still depend on the same superior help, see Acts iv, v, vi. [3.] Out of all their severest trials God will save them harmless. Not an hair of your head shall perish: either literally he would strangely deliver them from the most imminent perils, as he saved them out of Jerusalem when the Romans came to besiege the city; or, figuratively, it expresses his singular care of them; so that though they should be delivered to prison, or to death, his eye should be upon them for good, and give them at least, a happy issue out of all their afflictions; bringing them through these tribulations to eternal life and glory; so that they should be infinitely gainers by all their sufferings. [4.] He exhorts them patiently to bear up under every temptation, and not to be ruffled or discomposed, but with holy serenity and calm resignation to cast their care upon God, and quietly wait for his salvation. Note, (1.) In trying times the hardest conflict is within, to preserve the tranquillity of our own souls by humble confidence in God. (2.) A little patience will bring us to the end of every human wo.

20. [u] And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh. 21. [x] Then let them which are in Judea flee to the mountains; and let them which are in the midst of it depart out; * and let not them that are in the countries enter thereinto. 22. [y] For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled. 23. [z] But woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days! [a] for there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people. 24. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. 25. ¶ [b] And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; 26. [c] Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. 27. [d] And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. 28. And when these things begin to come to pass, then [e] look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh.

u Mat. 24. 15—28. Mark 13. 14—23. ch. 19. 43. Dan. 9. 27.
Gen. 19. 15, 16. Job 2. 4. Mat. 6. 25. Prov. 22. 3.
* Or rather, let those in the city make their escape.
y Mat. 24. 21. Mark 13. 19. Lev. 26. 14—36. Deut. 28. 15—68. Ps. 21. 8—12. Prov. 1. 24—32. Is. 65. 12—15. Zech. 11. 1.
z Mark 13. 17. ch. 23. 29. Hos. 13. 16. Deut. 28. 56, 57. Lam. 4. 10. a See ver. 22. 1 Thes. 2. 16. Heb. 6. 8. & 10. 26—31. 1 Pet. 4. 17, 18. ch. 19. 27, 43, 44. Mat. 21. 41, 44. & 22. 7. & 3. 7, 10, 12. Rom. 11. 25. Rev. xix. Dan. 9. 27. & 12. 7. b Mat. 24. 29—35. Mark 13. 25—31. Joel 2. 30, 31. Acts 2. 19, 20. Zeph. 1. 14—18. Amos 5. 20. & 8. 9, 10. with Is. 8. 21, 22. & 5. 30. & 13. 10. Ezek. 32. 7. Rev. 6. 12—17. 2 Pet. 3. 10. c Lev. 26. 36. Deut. 28. 32, 34, 65. Heb. 10. 26, 27. Is. 24. 4. d Dan. 7. 10, 13. Zech 14. 5. Mat. 16. 27, 28. & 26. 64. Rev. 1. 7. Acts 1. 11. 1 Thes. 4. 16. 2 Thes. 1. 8—10. Mat. 25. 10, 31. e Ps. 50. 1—6. & 96. 11—13. & 93. 5—9. Is. 25. 8, 9. Rom. 8. 23.

Verses 20—28. Having exhorted them to bear up in these dangerous days that should precede the final destruction of Jerusalem, he passes on to describe her utter overthrow.

1. After a variety of fearful signs, at last the destroying army of the Romans shall approach, the signal for the faithful to leave the devoted place, and fly for their lives, as history informs every Christian did, so that not one perished in Jerusalem. The days of vengeance then shall come upon the Jewish nation for all their wickedness, and especially for that blood of the Messiah, the curse of which they imprecated upon their heads, and now shall terribly seize them. Great indeed would be the distress of those who fled, especially of such as were with child, or who gave suck, because this must retard their speed, and add to their other afflictions; yet greater far would be the misery of those who remained, on whom the full vials of wrath would be poured out; the sword making the most fearful ravages among them, and the few who remained alive after the siege being led captives, and dispersed into all nations; whilst their once glorious city, rased from the foundations, should long lie in ruins, and never be restored to its former grandeur, but continue under the power of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled; when the fulness of them in the last days being come in, we have hope that Israel shall again be gathered, and Jerusalem, as some suppose, be again restored, and inhabited by the Jewish converts. This desolation of Judea would be terrible, as if the very elements were dissolving around them: their whole civil and ecclesiastical polity would be utterly destroyed; and, half dead with terror and dismay, the wretched inhabitants would sink under the load of complicated evils. Then to their confusion they will too late perceive, that he whom they crucified was the true Messiah, when, according to his predictions, they shall behold him coming thus terribly to take vengeance on them, and to set up his gospel kingdom, in defiance of all opposition. Such fearful signs shall also precede the final dissolution of all things, when the Judge of quick and dead shall at last be revealed from heaven, taking vengeance on all that know not God, and obey not his gospel.

2. Christ encourages his disciples, when these calamities begin, to lift up their heads in joyful hope, knowing that their redemption draweth nigh. The destruction of the Jewish people, who were the most inveterate persecutors of the first Christians, would be to them a great deliverance, and afford matter for their thankfulness to God, who had avenged them of these bitter enemies. And thus in the day of final judgment shall the destruction of the ungodly be the triumph of the saints.

29. And he spake to them a parable; [f] Behold the fig-tree, and all the trees;

f Mat. 24. 32—35. Mark 13. 28—31.

30. When they now shoot forth,* ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand. 31. So likewise ye, [g] when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. 32. Verily I say unto you, [h] This generation shall not pass away, till all be fulfilled. 33. [i] Heaven and earth shall pass away: but my words shall not pass away. 34. ¶ [k] And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. 35. [l] For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. 36. [m] Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be [n] accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man. 37. [o] And in the day time he was teaching in the temple; and at night he went out, [p] and abode in the mount that is called the [q] mount of Olives. 38. [r] And all the people came early in the morning to him in the temple, for to hear him.

* When ye observe them shooting forth.

g Jam. 5. 9. 1 Pet. 4. 17, 18. Heb. 10. 37. Mat. 11. 16. & 16. 28. & 23. 36. Ezek. 7. 2—13. & 12. 22—28.

h Mat. 24. 34. & 16. 28. & 23. 36. ch. 11. 50, 51.

i Ps. 102. 27. Is. 51. 6. & 10. 3. Mat. 5. 18. & 24. 35. 2 Pet. 3. 7, 10. 1 Pet. 1. 25.

k Rom. 13. 11—13. 1 Thes. 5. 6. 1 Pet. 4. 7. Phil. 4. 5.

l Is. 24. 17. Eccl. 9. 12. Mat. 24. 42—44. 1 Thes. 5. 2. 2 Pet. 3. 10. Rev. 3. 3. & 16. 15.

m Mark 13. 33—37. & 14. 38. Mat. 24. 42—44. 46. & 25. 13 ch. 11. 40. & 18. 1. Eph. 6. 18, 19. 1 Thes. 5. 6, 17.

n Ch. 20. 35. Rev. 3. 4. 1 John 2. 28. Prov. 22. 29. Ps. 1. 5. Eph. 1. 6. & 5. 27.

o John 8. 1, 2. & 4. 31. & 5. 4.

p Mark 11. 11, 12. & 14. 3. Mat. 24. 17. John 12. 1. ch. 22. 39.

q See ch. 19. 37.

r Mal. 3. 1. Hag. 2. 7. Gen. 49. 10 Is. 52. 13, 15.

Verses 29—38. These signs of the times which Christ had set before them, if duly remarked, would as clearly point out to them the approach of the threatened judgments, as the summer is known to be at hand, when the buds and flowers of spring appear. The time for the fulfilment of this prophecy was near, and the accomplishment of it sure: therefore,

1. He cautions them to beware of sensuality and security, lest the day of his coming should surprise them unprepared to meet him. Note, (1.) We are in jeopardy every hour: the day of death and judgment is uncertain: we need be every moment on our guard. They who are immersed in the cares and pleasures of the world, will be terribly surprised by it; and wo to those on whom it shall come as a snare, and seize them in their sins. (2.) If we would meet our Judge with comfort, and be found of him in peace, we must keep a strict rein on inordinate appetite, and learn to die daily to the world, and sit loose to all its cares and enticements. They who are dead to the world whilst they are in it, will be the readiest to go out of it at the most sudden summons. (3.) Surfeiting and drunkenness must necessarily unqualify us to meet our God. A glutton! a drunkard! what a fearful reckoning must he make in the day of judgment! (4.) The cares of this world as effectually stupify the conscience, as the fumes of liquor do the body; and though men are apt to think a sober worldling a decent character compared with a notorious drunkard, yet is their state equally dangerous, and perhaps the former the most difficult to be wrought upon. The drunkard sleeps and is sober: but the worldly-minded rises up as he lay down, overcharged with the same load of worldly anxiety and carking solicitude.

2. He exhorts them to watch and pray always, that they may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man, with comfort and confidence of his favour and regard. Not that our watchfulness and prayers confer any merit; we must be counted worthy and accepted in the beloved; but these are the means God hath appointed, in the use of which he hath promised his grace and blessing to us: and whilst we are awake, and expect our Lord's arrival, and look up to him for strength continually, he will bring us safe through every temptation, and give us to partake at last in his final salvation.

3. During these few days between his triumph and his sufferings, he continued indefatigable in his labours, preaching daily in the temple; and when the evening came, he retired to the Mount of Olives for prayer and meditation, returning in the morning to his delightful work in the temple, where an attentive auditory waited eager to hear his divine discourses.

CHAP. XXII.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

In this chapter we have, 1. The plot to take Jesus, and Judas' coming into it, ver. 1—6. 2. Christ's eating the passover with his disciples, ver. 7—18. 3. The instituting the Lord's supper, ver. 19, 20. 4. Christ's discourse with his disciples after supper, upon several heads, ver. 21—38. 5. His agony in the garden, ver. 39—46. 6. The apprehending of him, by the assistance of Judas, ver. 47—53. 7. Peter's denying him, ver. 54—62. 8. The indignities done to Christ by those that had him in custody, and his trial and condemnation in the ecclesiastical court, ver. 63—71.

1. NOW [a] the feast of unleavened bread drew nigh, which is called the Passover. 2. And the chief priests and scribes sought how they might kill him; [b] for they feared the people. 3. ¶ [c] Then entered Satan into Judas, surnamed Iscariot, being of the number of the twelve. 4. And he went his way, and [d] communed with the chief priests and captains how he might betray him unto them. 5. And they were glad, and [e] covenanted to give him money. 6. And he promised, and sought opportunity to betray him unto them * in the absence of the multitude.

a Mat. 26. 1—5. Mark 14. 1, 2. John 11. 55—57. Exod. 12. 15. Ps. 2. 1—5. & 22. 12, 16. ch. 19. 47, 48. & 20. 19. Acts 4. 27.

b See ch. 20. 6, 21.

c Mat. 16. 14—16. Mark 14. 10, 11. Ps. 41. 9. & 55. 12—14. & 9. 6. John 6. 70, 71. & 13. 2, 18, 21—30.

d Mat. 26. 15. Prov. 1. 16. & 4. 16. Rom. 3. 10—18. Mic. 7. 5, 6. Jer. 9. 4.

e Zech. 11. 12, 13. Exod. 21. 32. Mark 14. 11. 1 Tim. 6. 10.

* Or without tumult.

Verses 1—6 The awful hour now approaches, when the great Redeemer must offer himself a sacrifice for the sins of his people. We have,

1. The chief priests and scribes consulting how to perpetrate the bloody deed they had resolved. The fear of the people restrained them from open violence, and now they plotted how to take him off secretly.

2. Judas, the traitor, opportunely appeared to further their scheme. Satan, whose slave he had ever continued, even though advanced to the dignity of an apostle, now urged him on to the precipice of ruin; and going to the chief priests, in council assembled, who gladly embraced the offer he made, they soon struck up the bargain, and for thirty pieces of silver he engaged to betray his Master; and accordingly he watched for a secret opportunity, when, in the absence of the people, they might seize him without fear of a tumult. Note, (1.) All the malice of open enemies do not strike at the cause of Christ so deeply as the perfidy of false disciples. (2.) The devil watches the weak side of professors: and whether it be gold, or wine, or women, &c., he prepares the bait, and apostates readily catch at it.

7. ¶ [f] Then came the day of unleavened bread, when the passover must be †killed. 8. And [g] he sent Peter and f Mat. 26. 17—19. Mark 14. 12—16. John 18. 28. Exod. 12. 6—28. & 13. 3. Lev. 23. 5, 6. Num. 9. 3. & 28. 16, 17. Deut. 16. 1—4.

† Or sacrificed.

g Mark 14. 13. Mat. 26. 17, 18.

John, saying, Go and prepare us the passover, that we may eat. 9. And they said unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare? 10. And he said unto them, [h] Behold, when ye are entered into the city, there shall a man meet you, bearing a pitcher of water; follow him into the house where he entereth in. 11. And ye shall say unto the goodman of the house, [i] The Master saith unto thee, Where is the guest chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples? 12. And he shall shew you a large upper room furnished: there make ready. 13. And they went, and [k] found as he had said unto them: [l] and they made ready the passover. 14. [m] And when the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him. 15. And he said unto them, [n] With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer: 16. For I say unto you, [o] I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God. 17. And he took the cup, and [p] gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves: 18. For I say unto you, [q] I will not drink of the fruit of the vine until the kingdom of God shall come. 19. ¶ [r] And he took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave it unto them, saying, This [s] is [t] my body, which is given for you: [t] this do in remembrance of me. 20. Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, [u] This cup [x] is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you.

h Is. 41. 22. & 42. 9. & 41. 8. & 45. 21. & 46. 10. John 16. 4. Acts 15. 18.

i Mat. 8. 25. & 21. 3. & 23. 8—10. & 26. 18. John 20. 16. & 11. 8, 28. Acts 10. 36. Col. 1. 15—18. & 2. 9, 10.

k Ps. 33. 9. Num. 23. 19.

l Sam. 15. 22. Exod. 23. 21. John 14. 15. & 15. 14.

m Mat. 26. 20—25. Mark 14. 17—21. Exod. 12. 6. Lev. 23. 5. Deut. 16. 1.

n This is a Hebraism, signifying, I have heartily desired. Ch. 12. 50.

o Ch. 14. 15. ver. 18. Acts 1. 3. Mat. 3. 2. & 4. 17. Dan. 2. 44. Rev. 11. 15. & 19. 7, 9.

p Deut. 8. 10. Exod. 23. 25. 1 Tim. 4. 5. ch. 9. 16. Mat. 24. 19. & 15. 36.

q See Mark 14. 25. Mat. 26. 29. ver. 16.

r Mat. 26. 26—28. Mark 14. 22—24. 1 Cor. 11. 23—29. & 10. 16, 17. with Rom. 14. 6. 1 Tim. 4. 4, 5.

s 1 Cor. 11. 24—26.

t 1 Cor. 2. 2. & 1. 24. Mat. 20. 23. & 1. 21. Tit. 2. 14.

u Mat. 26. 28. Exod. 24. 8. Zech. 9. 11. Heb. 9. 14—17. Rom. 5. 6—11, 15—21. 2 Cor. 1. 20.

x i. e. Signifies. Gen. 41. 26, 27. 1 Cor. 10. 4. Exod. 12. 11, 12. ver. 19.

Verses 7—20. The day of the preparation of the passover being come, we have,

1. The solemnization of it according to the law. His disciples, Peter and John, had been sent to make ready, and directed whither to go; and having followed the orders of their Master, and prepared the paschal lamb, at even he came and sat down with the twelve, Judas being still of the number, his treachery not having yet openly appeared. Being seated, with warm affection he addressed them, saying, With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer. He was happy to have this last meeting with them; he longed for the hour when the great work he had undertaken should be accomplished, and that was now at hand. He welcomed those approaching sufferings which procured their salvation, and was now about to put a period to all the ceremonial institutions. Therefore he adds, I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God: for when as the Lamb of God, he should be offered, who was the true passover, this typical ordinance must cease of course. In the gospel kingdom, the supper he was now about to institute would supersede it; and in the great day of his appearing and glory, most eminently they should rejoice together in the final accomplishment of their glorious liberty; when departed from this world, the house of their prison, they should enter with him into the heavenly Canaan of eternal rest. Presenting therefore the passover cup to the disciples, in which it was usual for the company to pledge the master, he takes a solemn farewell of the fruit of the vine until the kingdom of God come; either when, after his exaltation, his gospel should be spread through the earth, and his presence be manifested in the midst of his church, where his disciples assembled to partake of his supper: or when the heavenly kingdom shall come, where his redeemed people shall be for ever satisfied with the pleasures that are at his right hand.

2. The institution of the Lord's supper, which should be continually celebrated in his church, in memory of a greater redemption than that from Egypt, even the deliverance which he hath obtained for us by the sacrifice of himself, from Satan, sin, death, and hell. The bread is broken in token of his body being broken on the cross; it is given us as spiritual food for our immortal souls, that by faith feeding upon the great doctrines of his atonement and righteousness, we may be comforted and strengthened with might in the inner man. And the wine represents to us that blood he shed for the remission of our sins, and seals to us all the promises of the everlasting covenant of which we are assured partakers, when faith realizes the signs, and makes Christ's flesh meat indeed, and his blood drink indeed, for then we have everlasting life in him.

21. ¶ [y] But, behold, the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table. 22. [z] And truly the Son of man goeth, as it was determined: but [a] woe unto that man by whom he is betrayed! 23. [b] And they began to enquire among themselves, which of them it was that should do this thing. 24. ¶ [c] And there was also a strife among them, which of them should be accounted the greatest. 25. And he said unto them, The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and they that exercise authority upon them are called benefactors. 26. But [d] ye shall not be so: but he that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger; and he that is chief, as he that doth serve. 27. For [e] whether is greater, he that sitteth at meat, or he that serveth? is not he that sitteth at meat? [f] but I am among you as he that serveth. 28. Ye are they which have continued with me [g] in my temptations: 29. And [h] I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me; 30. That ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. 31. ¶ And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, [i] behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat: 32. [k] But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: and when thou art [l] converted, strengthen thy brethren. 33. And he said unto y Mark 14. 18—22. Mat. 26. 20—25. John 13. 18, 21—30. Ps. 41. 9. & 55. 13. John 6. 71.

z Gen. 3. 15. Ps. 22. 1—21. & 69. 1—21. Is. 52. 14, & 53. 2—12. & 50. 5, 6. Dan. 9. 24, 26. Zech. 13. 7. Acts 4. 27, 28. & 2. 23.

a Ps. 55. 15—23. & 109. 1—20. Mat. 27. 3—5. Acts 1. 16—20. Is. 3. 11.

b Mat. 26. 22. John 13. 21—25.

c Mat. 20. 24—28. Mark 10. 41—45. & 9. 34—37. ch. 9. 46, 48. Hab. 2. 4.

d Mat. 20. 26, 27. & 18. 3, 4. & 23. 8—12. ch. 14. 11. & 18. 14. John 13. 12—17. 1 Cor. 9. 19—23. Jam. 4. 6, 10. 1 Pet. 5. 3, 5.

e Ch. 17. 7—9. & 12. 37.

f Phil. 2. 7, 8. John 13. 5, 14. Mat. 20. 28. Heb. 5. 8. 2 Cor. 8. 9.

g Mat. 19. 28, 29. Heb. 4. 15. & 2. 18.

h Ch. 12. 32. 2 Cor. 1. 7. 2 Tim. 2. 12. Rev. 3. 21. & 2. 26, 27. Mat. 19. 28. & 24. 47. & 8. 11. Rev. 19. 9. ch. 14. 15. 1 Cor. 6. 2, 3. Ps. 49. 14.

i 1 Pet. 5. 8. Job 1. 11. & 2. 5. Rev. 12. 10. Zech. 3. 1. Amos 9. 9.

k Mat. 16. 18. John 17. 9, 11 15, 20. & 21. 15—17.

l Jer. 31. 18. Ps. 94. 17, 18. & 51. 12, 13. John 21. 15—17. Is. 35. 3. Heb. 12. 13. 2 Cor. 1. 4.

m Jer. 10. 23. & 17. 9. Mat. 26. 33, 35. Mark 14. 29, 31. John 13. 37. Ps. 30. 6.
n Mat. 26. 3. Mark 14. 30. John 13. 38.
o Mat. 10. 9, 10. ch. 9. 3. & 10. 4. Mark 6. 8, 9. p Acts 14. 22. John 16. 33. 1 Cor. 4. 11—13. 2 Cor. 11. 25—27. Heb. 10. 34, 36. & 11. 36, 37. 2 Tim. 2. 3, 4. & 3. 12. Ye have need of preparation against the approaching dangers.
q Is. 53. 12. Mark 15. 27, 28. ch. 23. 32. Mat. 27. 38. John 19. 18. Heb. 9. 28. 2 Cor. 5. 21.
r John 18. 36. 2 Cor. 10. 4. & 6. 4—7. Eph. 6. 10—18. 1 Pet. 5. 9.

him Lord, [m] I am ready to go with thee both into prison and to death. 34. [n] And he said, I tell thee Peter, the cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me. 35. ¶ [o] And he said unto them, When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, lacked ye any thing? And they said, Nothing. 36. Then said he unto them, [p] But now, he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip: and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one. 37. For I say unto you, that this that is written must yet be accomplished in me, [q] And he was reckoned among the transgressors: for the things concerning me have an end: 38. And they said, Lord, behold, here are two swords. And he said unto them, [r] It is enough.

Verses 21—38. Christ having finished the supper, addresses himself to his disciples.

1. He admonishes them, that, though strange the relation, yet one of them should betray him. That he should thus go, was ordained by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God; yet dreadful would be the guilt of that wretch who should perpetrate the horrid deed. Astonished at the information, the disciples with anxious solicitude began to inquire which of them he pointed at, shocked with the thought of being guilty of such enormous wickedness. Note, (1.) There are in every age traitors, who eat of Christ's bread, and yet betray him. (2.) Though God foresees and permits the wickedness of sinners, yet will not this at all exculpate them from their guilt. (3.) Holy jealousy over ourselves, lest we should be faithless, is the surest way to preserve our fidelity inviolable.

2. He rebukes the sinful affectation of precedency, for which his apostles, whose heads were still full of his temporal kingdom, had been disputing among themselves. He corrects their vain imaginations, and assures them, that the kingdom he was about to erect, was in no ways like the kingdoms of the Gentiles, where the princes and rulers exercised despotic sway over their subjects, affected the title of benefactors, and were flattered with it by their subjects: but they who bore his commission must not imitate such examples, nor think of lording it over their brethren. The way in which his ministers can only hope to rise in eminence, is by condescending to every work and labour of love; to serve the meanest and least of his disciples; in honour preferring others to themselves, and being ever little and low in their own eyes. His own example was a powerful argument to enforce humility upon them. Though he was their master, and they his servants, he submitted even to wash their feet, that they might learn of him. Hitherto they had continued with him during all his trials and humiliations; they have only to persevere in the same way, expecting nothing on earth but sufferings, and looking for higher honours than the fading ones of this world; either in the kingdom of grace, in which they should fill the most important stations, be made eminent instruments of God for good to men's souls, and partake of the rich provision of gospel ordinances, or, in the kingdom of glory, where they should reign with their excellent Lord, filled with eternal consolations, and sit down on thrones prepared for them at his right hand, assessors with him in the judgment, as he himself was now about to take the mediatorial throne appointed to him by his Father, and should reign over his redeemed people in glory everlasting. Note, (1.) In Christ's kingdom humility is the only way to honour; and our ambition must be, not to be admired as great, but to lay ourselves out in doing good. (2.) They who faithfully adhere to the Saviour in the midst of manifold temptations, shall find, that as their tribulations abound for Christ, their consolations even in this world shall abound also, and that they shall, in the world to come, obtain a throne of glory that fadeth not away. (3.) Those who receive the kingdom of grace or glory, are purely indebted for it to the gift of Jesus. (4.) The saints of God are now usually despised and trampled upon; but shortly their revilers and persecutors shall see them exalted to a throne, and assessors with the great Judge, before whose bar they must stand trembling, and be covered with everlasting shame and contempt.

3. He warns Peter of his approaching fall, but assures him withal of his grace to recover him, that he should not finally be cast away, Simon, Simon, Satan hath desired to have you, even all of you, as he desired God's permission to tempt Job, without which he dared not touch a hair of his head: and his purpose is, to sift you as wheat; hoping either to prove them chaff, and destroy them by apostasy; or at least to distress, terrify, and scatter them in the hour of temptation: but I have prayed for thee, in particular, against whom the fiercest attack will be made, that thy faith fail not, totally and finally, though it will be grievously shaken. And when thou art converted, recovered from this grievous fall of temptation, strengthen thy brethren; taught by experience admonish others of the rock of self-confidence on which thou hast struck, and to beware of temptation: but if they are overcome, encourage them again to return, and not to despair, since there is mercy for the basest backsliders, and no repenting sinner is rejected. Note, (1.) Satan is unable without leave to hurt the least of God's saints. (2.) A person may be overcome by temptation, and yet his faith not utterly fail. (3.) Where true faith is in the heart, the soul cannot finally perish. (4.) All our perseverance and stability is not to be ascribed to any resolution of our own, but to the ceaseless intercession of our divine advocate. (5.) When we have fallen, we may not lie down in despair, but arise, and return with shame and humble confession to a pardoning God, that we may find mercy. (6.) They who have been most tempted and exercised themselves, are the best counsellors for others under the like trials, and will have most compassion for them, and be able by their own experience to comfort and encourage them in their distress.

4. He silences Peter's boasts with express assurances of his being about to deny him thrice. Peter resolutely declared, neither a prison nor death should ever make him be false to his Master, or quit him for a moment: but Christ assures him, that night he would have a dire conviction of the weakness of his resolutions, and the strength of the tempter's power over him, even so far as to make him deny that he ever knew his Master. Note, We could not suspect there was so much evil in our hearts, if in a day of temptation we had not proved it to our grief; but Christ knows it all, and provides the grace for our recovery, even before we have fallen.

5. He appeals to his disciples for his past care over them: and they own, that in all their journeys, when they travelled without money or provisions, they lacked nothing. Note, (1.) The more we reflect on the divine providence in the days that are past, the more we shall be compelled to acknowledge, that hitherto God hath helped us. (2.) Past experience of the Lord's goodness should engage our present confidence in his mercy. (3.) Christ's disciples must be satisfied with a little, and their Master will take care they shall not be destitute.

6. He bids them now prepare for and expect more perilous times, and days of greater distress. He was about to suffer among transgressors, in the greatest torment and ignominy, according to the ancient prophecies concerning him, all which now were ready to be accomplished: and they, for the testimony of his gospel, would be exposed to want and suffering. They must now take all they have, and employ it in providing those necessaries for themselves which they will want; and need, though at the expense of their garments, to purchase a sword, as more needful for their own defence against the perils of robbers, which they may be called to encounter in their travels. Or, figuratively, this may rather refer to the persecutions and violence of their enemies, against which it would require all their fortitude and courage to bear up. The disciples, supposing that he meant literally, that they should repel force by force, replied, Lord, here are two swords, as if they wished to know whether they should procure more; but he said unto them, It is enough; these were sufficient to answer the instructive design for which he mentioned them. It was not by those weapons of war that his kingdom was to be spread, or their safety secured; but by the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, and by the armour of righteousness on the right hand and the left.

39. ¶ [s] And he came out, and went, as he was wont, to the mount of Olives; and his disciples also followed him. 40. [t] And when he was at the place,* he said unto them, Pray that ye enter not into temptation. 41. [u] And he was withdrawn from them † about a stone's cast, and kneeled down, and prayed, 42. Saying, Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless not my will but thine be done. 43. [x] And there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him. 44. [y] And being in an agony, he prayed more earnestly: and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground. 45. And when he rose up from prayer, and was come to his disciples, he found them sleeping for sorrow. 46. And he said unto them, [z] Why sleep ye? rise and pray, lest ye enter into temptation.

s Mat. 26. 36—46. Mark 14. 26, 32—42. John 18. 1. ver. 28.

t Mat 26. 41. & 6 13. Mark 14. 38. ch. 11. 4. Eph. 6. 18, 19. ver. 46. 1 Pet. 5. 8, 9.

* The garden of Gethsemane.

u Mat. 26. 36, 39, 42, 44. Mark 14. 35, 36. Heb. 5. 7. John 18. 14 & 5. 30. & 6. 38. & 12. 27. Ps. 40. 8.

† Whether from the eight, or from Peter, James, and John also, doth not appear.—Poole.

x Ps. 91. 11, 12. Mat. 4 11. & 26. 53. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Heb. 1. 14.

y John 12. 27. Gal. 3. 13. Heb. 5. 7. Jon. 2 3. Mat. 26. 37, 38. Ps. 22. 1, 2, 14, 15. & 69. 1, 2. & 18. 5, 6. & 116. 3.

z Jon. 1. 6. Prov. 6. 9. see ver. 40. ch. 21. 34, 36.

Verses 39—46. We have here Christ's agony in the garden, the account of which the other evangelists had given us in nearly the same words. See Matt. xxvi. 36. Mark xiv. 32. Three circumstances are here particularly taken notice of.

1. That an angel appeared from heaven, strengthening him, in his agony; probably suggesting to him, as man, some powerful inducements to encourage and support him under his unutterable distress; that the conflict would be short, the issue glorious, the victory sure, and the eternal salvation of his people be the great reward. So low did the Son of God humble himself, as to need their services, who were the work of his own hands; and they who ministered to him, will not fail to perform the like kind offices to the heirs of salvation. If the Lord lays upon us heavy burdens, he will send us help in the needful time of trouble.

2. That being in agony, he prayed more earnestly. All the storms and billows of divine wrath were now going over him, and the great enemy of souls with all his fury hurled his fiery darts against him. With strong crying and tears he redoubled therefore his supplications, and was heard. Note, Prayer is at all times seasonable: but when we are under distress of body or soul, we are peculiarly called to cry mightily to him, whose strength is made perfect in weakness, and every wrestling Jacob will be a prevailing Israel.

3. His sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground. The intenseness of his agony threw the humours of his body into so violent a fermentation, that though it was night, and he lay on the cold ground, the blood exuded with his sweat through the pores, and the reeking drops, trickling down, dyed the earth on which he lay. What a bloody baptism was he baptized with? My soul, behold, admire, and adore! It was love for thee that brought thy Saviour thus low: these drops of bloody sweat are the expiation of thy iniquities.

47. ¶ And while he yet spake, [a] behold a multitude, and he that was called Judas, one of the twelve, went before them, and drew near unto Jesus [b] to kiss him. 48. But Jesus said unto him, Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with [c] a kiss? 49. When they which were about him saw what would follow, they said unto him, Lord, shall we smite with the sword? 50. ¶ [c] And one of them smote a servant of the high priest, and cut off his right ear. 51. And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far.* And he touched his ear, and healed him. 52. [d] Then Jesus said unto the chief priests, and captains of the temple, and the elders, which were come to him, Be ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and staves? 53. When I was [e] daily with you in the temple, ye stretched forth no hands against me: but this is [f] your hour, and the power of darkness.

a Mat. 26. 47—57. Mark 14. 43—52. John 18. 2—11. Acts 1. 16. Ps. 2. 1. & 3. 1. & 22. 16.

b Ezek. 33. 31. Ps. 12. 2. & 55. 21. 2 Sam. 20. 9.

c John 18. 10. Mat. 26. 51, 52. Mark 14. 47. 2 Cor. 10. 4. Rom. 12. 19.

* Or, let this suffice, intimating that they were not to proceed further in the way of resistance, as it was not to such methods of defence that our Lord chose to recur. —Campbell.

d Mark 14. 48, 49. Mat. 26. 55. John 18. 3, 20. Ps. 22. 12, 16. & 2. 12. & 3. 1. & 69. 19.

e Ch. 20. 47, 48. Mat. 21. 14, 15, 45. 46. John 7. 19. & 8. 37.

f Acts 2. 22. & 4. 27, 28. Gen. 3. 15. John 12. 27. & 14. 30. Ps. 22. 11—21. & 69. 1—21. Is. liii.

Verses 47—53. The traitor with an armed band now appears, and we have,

1. Christ betrayed. The signal given by Judas was a kiss. Adding hypocrisy to his treachery, he approached him; and Jesus, who well knew his design, with one kind word of expostulation on his baseness, readily surrendered himself into the hands of his enemies. Note, The Lord is privy to the secret thoughts of apostates in heart, and sees the traitor under all the specious profession he makes.

2. The disciples, who instantly would have stood on their defence, and rescued him, asked his leave to unsheath their swords; but Peter, too impatient to wait for an answer, drew, and aiming a blow at one of those who were active in seizing on his Master, a servant of the high priest's, the sword glanced down the side of his head and took off his right ear. But Christ rebuked Peter for his rashness, and desires his enemies not to resent the blow which Peter had struck, the damage of which he immediately repairs, and on the spot gave them an evidence of his power and grace, by healing the servant, and restoring his lost ear; which if their hearts had not been hardened as the nether mill stone, could not fail to have convinced them both of the wickedness and ingratitude of their conduct. May we learn of our Lord thus ever to render good for evil.

3. He expostulates with the chief priests, and the captains of the temple, and elders, some of whom, even at that unseasonable hour, forgetting their dignity, and instigated by their malice, now mingled with the soldiers, and came to make sure of their prey. Christ reasons with them on the uselessness of such a military force, when he never would have attempted resistance, nor ever meant to abscond, since he appeared daily in public at the temple: But, says he, this is your hour, and the power of darkness. Till that hour came, all the powers of earth and hell could not prevail against him; now it was come, they would find no difficulty in performing what was the pre-determined counsel of God.

54. ¶ [g] Then took they him, and led him, and brought him unto the high priest's house. [h] And Peter followed afar off. 55. And when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the hall,* and were set down together, Peter sat down among them. 56. But [i] a certain maid beheld him as he sat by the fire, and earnestly looked upon him, and said, This man was also with him. 57. And he [k] denied him, saying, Woman, I know him not. 58. And after a little while another saw him, and said, Thou art also of them. And Peter said, Man, I am not. 59. And about the space of one hour after, another confidently affirmed, saying, Of a truth this fellow also was with him; for he is a [l] Galilean. 60. And Peter said, Man, I know not what thou sayest. And immediately, while he yet spake, the cock crew. 61. And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter.† And Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how he had said unto him, [m] Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. 62. [n] And Peter went out, and wept bitterly.

g Mat. 26. 57. Mark 14. 53. John 18. 12—14. Acts 8. 32. Is. 53. 7. Lam. 4. 20. Acts 2. 23.

h Mat. 26. 58, 69—75. Mark 14. 54, 66—72. John 18. 15—18, 25—27. with ver. 33, 34. Prov. 9. 6. & 13. 20 Ps. 1. 1. & 26. 4, 5. & 28. 3.

* Or rather court.

i Gen. 3. 13. & 16. 2. Eccl. 7. 26.

k Ver. 33, 34. Col. 3. 9. Zech. 8. 16. Eph. 4. 25.

l John 1. 43, 44. ch. 13. 1. Judg. 12. 6.

† What effect that look must have had on the heart and on the countenance of Peter, every one may perhaps in some degree conceive, but it is utterly impossible for any words to describe, or, I believe, even for the pencil to express.—Porteus.

m Mat. 26. 34. Mark 14. 30. John 13. 38. ver. 34.

n Mat. 26. 75. Mark 14. 72. Ps. 119. 59, 60. Ezek. 7. 16. Jer. 31. 18. Zech. 12. 10. 2 Cor. 7. 11. Is. 66. 2.

Verses 51—62. We have here,

1. Peter's sad fall. Willing to see what would be the end of his Master's trials, he stole into the palace, and hoped to pass unperceived among the crowd; but his look, his behaviour, his speech, discovered him, and excited repeated charges from the by-standers, which he solemnly disowned, declaring he did not know the man Jesus whom they spoke of, and confirming the horrid lie with the most profane oaths and perjury. One wilful lie has often led men to the most dreadful lengths. None know where they shall stop, when for a moment they deviate from the path of truth.

2. His gracious recovery. The cock crew to warn him of his guilt, and rung in Peter's ears a peal of loudest thunder; and one look of Jesus broke his heart with anguish. He turned, and looked upon Peter; and that glance spoke more than words could utter. It showed him, that though now on his trial, Christ was apprised of all that passed; it conveyed the deepest conviction, the tenderest expostulation, the kindest compassion, and the most effectual call of grace to his heart. Peter's guilt now rose in blackest colours to his view: his baseness, his ingratitude, every aggravating circumstance returned to his memory; and overwhelmed with grief, anguish, horror, and shame, he went out, and wept bitterly.

63. ¶ [o] And the men that held Jesus [p] mocked him, and smote him. 64. And when they had blindfolded him, they struck him on the face, and asked him, saying, Prophesy, who is it that smote thee? 65. And many other things blasphemously spake they against him. 66. ¶ [q] And as soon as it was day, the elders of the people, and the chief priests, and the scribes, came together, and led him into their council, saying, 67. [r] Art thou the Christ? tell us. [s] And he said unto them, If I tell you, ye will not believe: 68. And if I also ask you, ye will not answer me, nor let me go. 69. Hereafter shall the Son of man [t] sit on the right hand of the power of God. 70. Then said they all, Art thou then the son of God? And he said unto them, [u] Ye say that I am. 71. And they said, What need we any further witness? for we ourselves have heard of his own mouth.

o Mark 14. 65—65. Mark 26. 59—68. John 18. 19—24.

p Mat. 26. 67, 68. Mark 14. 65. 1 Pet. 2. 23. ch. 7. 16. & 23. 11. Job 16. 10. Ps. 22. 6—21. & 69. 1—21. Is. 50. 6. & 52. 14. & liii. Mic. 5. 1.

q Mat. 27. 1. Mark 15. 1. Is. 53. 3 Ps. 22. 12, 16, 21. & 2. 1. & 3 1. Acts 4. 26.

r Mat. 14. 4, 5. & 16. 16. John 1. 20, 49.

s Is. 52. 13. Mat. 10. 16. Eph. 5. 15. Job 5. 12, 13.

t Ps. 110. 1. Dan. 7. 13, 14. Mark 16. 19. Acts 1. 11. & 3. 21. Heb 1. 3. & 8. 1. ch. 21. 27. 1 Thes. 4. 16. Rev. 1. 7. & 20. 11, 12.

u Mark 14. 62—64 Mat. 26. 64—66. John 5. 17. & 10. 30. This was a common mode of assenting to the affirmative of a question.

Verses 63—71. Behold with horror and indignation,

1. The insults put on this innocent sufferer by the abjects who gathered themselves against him. The servants who kept Jesus in custody till the council met, mocked him, buffeted him: and blindfolding him, in derision of his prophetical character, struck him on the face, and bid him tell who smote him: with other blasphemies, which he silently and patiently endured.

2. The injustice and cruel oppression which his judges, the chief priests and scribes, showed at his trial. Early they arose, at break of day, eager to hasten his condemnation; and, having brought him before them, demanded a direct answer, whether he were the Messiah, or no. Christ knew that their wicked design was to employ his own words as the ground of his condemnation, and therefore expostulates with them on their unfair and unreasonable proceedings. If I tell you, ye will not believe; they were resolved at all events, in hardened obstinacy, to reject his pretensions; and if I ask you, what you can object to the evidences of my divine mission which I have given, you will not answer me; unable to refute them, yet determined not to be convinced by them, though reduced to silence: nor will you let me go, though unable to prove a single charge against me. Therefore he refers them for conviction to his coming with vengeance on the throne of judgment; when they should know, to their cost, whether he really was possessed of that character which he assumed. With indignation they tumultuously asked, whether he dared arrogate the title of the Son of God? He boldly replied in the affirmative, so they said, and so indeed he was. With one voice they instantly condemned him as a blasphemer, counting any further witness unnecessary; when his own confession proved, as they concluded, the blasphemy of his pretensions. So were they given up to a reprobate mind, and blind to the clearest evidence of truth, wilfully rushed on their eternal ruin, filling up the measure of their iniquities.

CHAP. XXIII.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

This chapter carries on and concludes the history of Christ's sufferings and death. We have here, 1. His arraignment before Pilate the Roman governor, ver. 1—5. 2. His examination before Herod, ver. 6—12. 3. Pilate's struggle with the people, to release Jesus; at last he condemns him to be crucified, ver. 13—25. 4. An account of what passed as they led him to be crucified, ver. 26—31. 5. An account of what passed at the place of execution, ver. 32—38. 6. The conversion of one of the thieves, as Christ was hanging on the cross, ver. 39—43. 7. The death of Christ, and the prodigies that attended it, ver. 44—49. 8. His burial, ver. 50—56.

1. AND [a] the whole multitude of them arose, and led him unto Pilate. 2. And a Ch. 22. 66. Mat. 27. 2. 11—31. Mark 15. 1—20. John 18. 28—40. & 19. 1—16. Ps. 2. 1—4. & 22. 1—21. & 3. 1. & 69. 1—21. Acts 2. 23. & 4. 27, 28. 1 Thes. 2. 15.

they began to accuse him, saying, [b] We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Cesar, saying that he himself is Christ a king. 3. And Pilate asked him, saying, [c] Art thou the King of the Jews? And he answered him and said, Thou sayest it. 4. Then said Pilate to the chief priests and to the people, [d] I find no fault in this man. 5. And they were the more fierce, saying, He stirreth up the people, teaching through all Jewry, beginning [e] from Galilee to this place. 6. When Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked whether the man were a [f] Galilean. 7. And as soon as he knew that he belonged unto [g] Herod's* jurisdiction, he sent him unto Herod, who himself also was at Jerusalem at that time. 8. ¶ And when Herod saw Jesus, he was exceeding glad: for he was [h] desirous to see him of a long season, because he had heard many things of him; and he hoped to have seen some miracle done by him. 9. Then he questioned with him in many words; but [i] he answered him nothing. 10. And the chief priests and scribes stood and [k] vehemently accused him. 11. [l] And Herod with his men of war† set him at nought, and mocked him, and arrayed him in a gorgeous robe, and sent him again to Pilate. 12. ¶ And the same day, [m] Pilate and Herod were made friends together: for before they were at enmity between themselves.

b] 1 Kin. 18. 17. Jer. 38. 4. Acts 17. 6, 7. & 24. 5. John 18. 30. & 19. 12. with Mat. 17. 25. & 22. 21. ch. 20. 25, 27. Rom. 13. 7.

c] Mark 15. 2. Mat. 27. 11. John 18. 33—37. 1 Tim. 6. 13.

d] Mat. 27. 18, 19, 24. Mark 15. 10, 14. John 18. 38. & 19. 4, 6. 2 Cor. 5. 21. 1 Pet. 2. 22, 24. & 3. 18.

e] Mat. 4. 12—25. Mark 1. 14. Luke 4. 16—44. John 1. 43. & 2. 1—11.

f] Ch. 13. 1. Acts 5. 37.

g] Ch. 3. 1. & 9. 7, 9.

* Herod Antipas, the same who had beheaded John. Herod, it is probable, was at this time in Jerusalem, on account of the passover.—Hammond.

h] Ch. 9. 7, 9. Mat. 14. 1. Mark 6. 14.

i] Is. 5. 3, 7. Ps. 38. 13, 14. & 15. 4. Mat. 7. 6. & 10. 16. Amos 5. 13. 1 Pet. 2. 23. Is. 58. 7. Ps. 39. 9.

k] Ver. 2, 5. Gen. 19. 9. Acts 6. 12—14. & 18. 18. & 24. 5.

l] Is. 53. 3. Ps. 22. 6. & 69. 9, 20. Prov. 29. 12.

† The military officers or attendants.

m] Acts 4. 27. Jam. 4. 4. Ps. 83. 5. with ch. 13. 1.

Verses 1—12. Though they had condemned our Lord as worthy to die as a blasphemer, yet not having the power of life and death in their hands, and this pretended crime not being of such a nature as the Roman government might deem capital; in order to execute their bloody purposes, the chief priests are obliged to have recourse to some other charge. Therefore,

1. They accuse him to Pilate, as a fomenter of sedition, setting up himself for king, and forbidding to give tribute to Cesar; though he had so expressly enjoined it, when they meant to ensnare him; and so far from affecting royalty, had opposed the mistaken zeal of his followers, who would have set him up for their king, John vi. 15. but the purest innocence is no defence against the blackest calumny. Nay, in the present case, they knew themselves in their hearts to be the rebels; they abhorred the Roman government, and so far from thinking it a crime to oppose it, would gladly have embraced the first favourable occasion to revolt. And by the just judgment of God, that pretended crime, on account of which they demanded the condemnation of Jesus, was shortly after the real crime, for which themselves, and the whole Jewish nation, were destroyed by the Romans. Note, The poisoned chalice will return to him who mingled it.

2. Christ plainly and directly answers Pilate's interrogatories, and confesses himself indeed King of the Jews; but not in opposition to Cesar, with whose government he never interfered. His kingdom was of a quite different nature, not of this world, but purely spiritual over the hearts of men.

3. Pilate, convinced of the innocence of Jesus, declares he can find no fault in him; whatever religious doctrines he taught, they came not under his cognizance, and therefore he would have released him: but the chief priests, exasperated even to fury at the thought of his being discharged, insisted upon it they could prove him guilty of many seditious discourses, and attempts to raise insurrections through Galilee, the chief scene of his preaching, and in all Judea.

4. Pilate, on the mention of Galilee, having found he was of that country, would very gladly have rid himself of that disagreeable affair; and Herod, the tetrarch of Galilee, being then at Jerusalem, to whose jurisdiction he belonged, he referred them to him: and thus was the scripture fulfilled, Psalm ii. 2. Acts iv. 26, 27.

5. Herod was highly pleased at the sight of Jesus. The fame of his mighty works had long excited a desire to see him, and he hoped his curiosity would be gratified by seeing some miracle now performed by him. But he was mistaken: as Christ knew the spirit with which he put the several questions to him relative to his miracles, he deigned not to make the least reply. The poorest beggar that came with his diseased body, would have met the kindest words and speediest relief, but he will not prostitute his power to gratify the curiosity of the proudest potentate.

6. Whilst Jesus held his peace, his accusers, with open mouths, belched out their malice, endeavouring to exasperate Herod against him, and to awaken his jealousy with charges of seditious conduct in Galilee: but Herod thought him an object rather to be despised than feared; and after treating him as a weak silly wretch, and suffering his soldiers to make sport of him, in derision of the pretences which Jesus was said to form, he decked him in a robe of mock majesty, and sent him back to Pilate, desirous, he should determine concerning him as he thought fit. Note, If we are set at nought, insulted, despised, and treated as fools or madmen, let it not be grievous to us; we are but like our Lord.

7. Pilate and Herod were on this occasion reconciled. They had been at enmity between themselves, on what account is not said; perhaps on account of the slaughter of the Galileans, Herod's subjects, mentioned chap. xiii. 1. but the mutual civilities which passed on this occasion, healed the breach, and made them friends again. He who come to remove the enmity which subsisted between God and man, is here the peacemaker even between his persecutors.

13. ¶ [n] And Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests, and the rulers, and the people, 14. Said unto them, Ye have brought this man unto me, [o] as one that perverteth the people: and, behold, I, having examined him before you, [p] have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him: 15. No, nor yet Herod: for I sent you to him; and lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him.* 16. [q] I will therefore chastise him, and release him. 17. ([r] For of necessity he must release one unto them at the feast.) 18. [s] And they cried out all at once, saying, Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas: 19. (Who for a certain sedition made in the city, n] Mat. 27. 23. Mark 5. 14. John 18. 38. & 19. 4.

o] Ver. 2, 5.

p] Ver. 4. Dan. 6. 4. Acts 25. 16. & 26. 31. Ps. 35. 7.

* He hath done nothing worthy of death.

q] Mat. 27. 26. Mark 15. 15. John 19. 1.

r] Mat. 27. 15. with 26. 2, 5. Mark 15. 6. John 18. 39. with 2. 13. & 4. 45.

s] John 18. 40. Mark 15. 11. Mat. 27. 20. Acts 3. 14. & 21. 36. & 22. 22.

and for murder, was cast into prison.)
20. Pilate therefore, willing to release Jesus, [t] spake again to them. 21. [u] But they cried, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. 22. [x] And he said unto them the third time, Why? what evil hath he done?
I have found no cause of death in him: I will therefore chastise him, and let him go. 23. [y] And they were instant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified. And the voices * of them and of the chief priests prevailed. 24. [z] And Pilate † gave sentence that it should be as they required. 25. And he released unto them him [a] that for sedition and murder was cast into prison, whom they had desired; but he delivered Jesus to their will.

t Mark 15. 12. Mat. 27. 19, 21. John 19. 12.

u John 19. 15. Mat. 27. 22, 23. Mark 15. 14. Acts 3. 15.

x See ver. 20.

y See ver. 21. Ps. 22. 12, 16. & 3. 1. & 41. 4, 11.

* Or, their clamours, and those of, &c.

z Mat 27. 24—46. Mark 15. 15. John 19. 16.

† Or assented.

a John 18. 40. Mat. 27. 16. Mark 15. 7. Prov. 17. 15. Is. 5. 23. & 59. 14.

Verses 13—25. Jesus being brought again from Herod to Pilate.

1. He called the chief priests and rulers, and the people; and convinced of the innocence of the prisoner, he declares, after the strictest examination, he can find no shadow of a crime: nor had Herod testified the least mark of his displeasure against Jesus as a criminal, or as one deserving capital punishment. He offers, therefore, to chastise him, as if he were a criminal, to gratify them, and cover their persecution from the suspicion of malice: and since he must release one to them at the feast, he proposes Christ as the person; who, though his life was spared, would be thus stigmatized as a malefactor. Thus doth this corrupt judge desire to trim between his conscience and the people, unwilling to imbrue his hands in innocent blood, yet solicitous to show his utmost complaisance to them.

2. The proposal was abortive. The people, instigated by their priests and rulers, rejected the offer, demanding the release of Barabbas, whose notorious crimes of murder and insurrection called for the severest punishment, and cried out for the immediate execution of Jesus. In vain Pilate again and again remonstrated against the injustice and cruelty of such a demand, but they only grew more outrageous at his opposition: and, not satisfied with the chastisement he offered to inflict upon Jesus, demanded his crucifixion with such clamour, noise, and violence, as quite terrified Pilate into a compliance. He feared men more than God, and dared not disoblige a lawless multitude, though at the expense of innocent blood.

3. Pilate, though reluctantly, at last pronounces the sentence of execution upon the innocent Saviour; and having released that infamous criminal Barabbas, as preferred before him, delivers Jesus to their will; and the enmity which they had shown against him plainly foretold, that their tender mercies would be cruelty.

26. ¶ [b] And as they led him away, they laid hold upon one Simon, a Cyre-nian, coming out of the country; and on him they laid the cross, that he might bear it after Jesus. 27. And there followed him a great company of people, and of [c] women, which also bewailed and lamented him. 28. But Jesus turning unto them, said, Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, b Mat. 27. 32. Mark 15. 21. John 19. 16, 17. Bearing his cross.

c Ver. 55. ch. 8. 2. & 2. 36. Mark 15. 40. Mat. 27. 55, 56. That sex which first sinned now adhered best to the Saviour from sin.

and for your children. 29. For, [d] behold, the days are coming, in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave suck. 30. [e] Then shall they begin to say to the mountains,
Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us.*
31. [f] For if they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?

d Ch. 21. 23, 24. & 19. 43, 44. Mark 13. 17, 19.

e Is. 2. 19. Hos. 10. 8. Rev. 6. 16. & 9. 6.

* Strong expressions, signifying the greatness of the calamities that were about to fall on them.

f Jer. 25. 29. 1 Pet. 4. 17, 18. Prov. 11. 31. Ezek. 20. 47. & 21. 3. Mat. 3. 10. & 12. 33. John 15. 6. Jude 12. Heb. 6. 8.

Verses 26—31. Behold the Lamb of God led to the slaughter, amidst the tears of Jerusalem's daughters.

1. His executioners seized on Simon, a Cyrenian, compelling him to bear the cross under which Christ was ready to expire; and not out of pity, but lest by death he should elude their malice, they released him for a moment that they might shortly bind him faster to it with iron.

2. A multitude followed him, and among them many women bewailing his unhappy fate, and touched with tenderest sympathy at his innocent sufferings. Note, A sight of the cross-bearing Saviour may well excite our deepest grief. For he bore our sins and carried our sorrows.

3. He addresses the mourners, and kindly bids them direct their tears into another channel: weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children; deep as his agonies were, he freely submitted to them; his sufferings were voluntary, and the issue of them would be glorious: but the judgments coming upon their people and nation, would be imbittered with the wrath of God, and end in their utter destruction. Then barrenness would be accounted a blessing, for better were it to be destitute of children, than to see them devoured by famine and the sword. A refuge then, under falling rocks and mountains would be welcome, rather than to meet the fearful executioners of God's vengeance; for if they have done this thing in the green tree, what shall be done in the dry? If these wicked men have inflicted such sufferings on me, who am innocent, what shall be done to them, who by their sins, are as fuel prepared for the devouring flames? And if the Romans, whom they have instigated, are permitted to exercise such cruelty on me who have never given them provocation, what vengeance will they wreak on the Jewish people, when to the utmost exasperated, and consuming them as fire doth the dry wood? Note, (1.) Though barrenness is often counted a misery, the days may come when not to have children may be reckoned among our mercies. (2.) They who will not fly to the arms of Jesus for mercy, will cry in vain to rocks and mountains to shelter them from the frowns of his wrath. (3.) Every view of the sufferings of Jesus should fill us with horror at the dreadful evil and danger of sin; if when it was imputed to him only, the wrath of God fell so heavy upon him, with what an intolerable load must the impenitent soul be overwhelmed, when all the wrath of God due for his own sins shall light down on his devoted head. If Christ's sufferings were so great, what must the torment of the damned be?

32. ¶ And there were also two others, malefactors, led with him to be put to death. 33. And when they were come to the place which is called [g] Calvary, [h] there they crucified him, and the male-factors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left. 34. ¶ Then said Jesus, Father, [i] forgive them; for they know not what they do. [k] And they

g Or the place of a skull. Heb. 13. 12.

h John 19. 17, 18. Mat. 27. 33, 38. Mark 15. 22, 27. 28. Is. 53. 12. Zech. 12. 10. & 13. 7.

i Gen. 50. 17. Mat. 5. 44. Acts 7. 60. 1 Cor. 4. 12. & 2. 8. ver. 48. Acts 2. 37, 38. & 3. 17.

k Mat. 27. 35. Mark 15. 24. John 19. 23. Ps. 22. 18.

parted his raiment, and cast lots. 35. ¶ And the people stood beholding. And the rulers also with them [l] derided him, saying, He saved others; let him save himself, if he be [m] Christ, the chosen of God. 36. And the soldiers also mocked him, coming to him and [n] offering him vinegar, 37. And saying, if thou be the King of the Jews, save thyself. 38. [o] And a superscription also was written over him in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew, THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS. 39. ¶ And [p] one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on him, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us. 40. But the other answering, [q] rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation? 41. [r] And we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds: [s] but this man hath done nothing amiss. 42. And he said unto Jesus, [t] Lord, remember me when thou comest into [u] thy kingdom. 43. And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, [x] To-day shalt thou be with me in [y] paradise.

l Mat. 27. 39—43. Mark 15. 29—32. Ps. 22. 6—8, 12—17. & 35. 15. & 69. 7—12, 18—20.

m The elect of God. The title is adopted from Is. 42. 1.

n Ps. 69. 21. Mat. 27. 34, 48. Mark 15. 23, 36. John 19. 29.

o John 19. 19—22. Mat. 27. 37. Mark 15. 26. with Acts 4. 12. Jude 3. Mark 16. 15. Is. 45. 22.

p Mark 15. 32. Mat. 27. 44. 2 Cor. 28. 22. Jer. 5. 3.

q Eph. 5. 11. Josh. 7. 19. Lev. 19. 17.

r Ps. 51. 4. Dan. 9. 7. Jer. 3. 17. Ezek. 16. 63.

s Rom. 10. 10. ch. 12. 8. 1 Pet. 2. 7. Song 5. 10.

t John 20. 28. Phil. 3. 8, 9. ch. 18. 13, 38, 39. 2 Tim. 1. 18. & 4. 8.

u John 18. 36. & 17. 2. Ps. 110. 1. Heb. 1. 3. & 8. 1. & 10. 18.

x 2 Cor. 5. 8. Phil. 1. 23.

y 2 Cor. 5. 1. & 12. 2, 4. Rev. 2. 7. i. e. heaven.

Verses 32—43. We have here,

1. The crucifixion of the Son of God between two malefactors; who, to increase the ignominy of his sufferings, were led with him to Calvary, the place of execution, and crucified on each side of him. There amidst the taunts and insults of his enemies, he was hung up, in torments to expire; and over his head, his pretended crime was written in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, This is the King of the Jews. Whilst they are mocking, let us bow down with adoration, and wonder at that love which fastened him to the accursed tree. If, as they challenged him to do, he refused to save himself, it was because he could not then have saved us, it was needful that he should die upon the cross, that we might not eternally perish under the wrath of God.

2. His prayer for his murderers. Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do; they were blinded by prejudice and ignorance, and as the dying sufferer forgave them, he became, as mediator, their advocate with his Father, that he might obtain their pardon, and prevailed. Some of those who nailed him to the tree, experienced the glorious efficacy of that atoning blood with which their hands were stained. Note, (1.) There are no crimes so great but the blood of Jesus can cleanse us from them; even murder itself is not unpardonable. (2.) The persecutors of God's people know not what they do, and that should be an argument with us, after our Lord's example, to bear with, forgive, pity, and pray for them.

3. The conversion of the thief upon the cross, wherein we behold a most glorious evidence of the mighty efficacy of the Saviour's grace, even in the lowest step of his humiliation, and a striking display of the great design of his sufferings, to save that which was lost. We are told by the other evangelists, that both the malefactors reviled him, as I am inclined to believe at first they did; though afterwards one of them by the effectual sovereign grace of God, became a signal monument of mercy, as is here related. One indeed continued hardened to the last, railing on him, and challenging him if he was the Christ, to save himself and them. Thus afflictive providences, without the grace of God, serve only to harden and exasperate, instead of humbling the impenitent. The other, snatched as a brand from the burning, is here held up an illustrious monument of the salvation of Jesus even to the uttermost; an object which stains the pride of human glory, and renders all self-wrought human righteousness contemptible, when such a wretch enters the eternal kingdom, from which the most devout, decent, and orderly Pharisee must be for ever excluded. The fears which some have expressed, lest this example should embolden sinners, and the many insinuations they have suggested to advance the good character of the thief, as if he had never heard of Christ before, this was the first crime, &c. appear unnecessary, not to say unchristian; and whatever specious shows of piety they bear, are calculated merely to tarnish the transcendent lustre of the unsearchable riches of Christ, and to derogate from the sovereignty and freedom of the grace of God. It is enough that the Saviour was pleased to exercise a signal act of favour towards one desperate sinner, as an encouragement to the most miserable still to trust in his mercy.

(1.) The behaviour of this malefactor evinced the blessed influence which a sense of redeeming love instantly wrought in his heart. No sooner was he struck with the conviction, that this suffering man who hung by his side was the true Messiah, and God's eternal Son, than instantly his tone is changed to every expression of real penitence. (1.) He sharply rebukes his companion, Dost thou not fear God? When ready to appear at his tremendous bar, how unsuitable is such reviling in thy lips, seeing thou art in the same condemnation, suffering the same kind of punishment, and therefore humanity dictated mutual compassion. (2.) He reminds him of the justness of their punishment, and takes shame to himself for his crimes. We indeed suffer justly, for we receive the just reward of our deeds, and that should have covered them both with confusion, and sealed up their lips in silence. Thus every real penitent justifies God in his judgments, and owns all he suffers to be no more than his sins deserve. (3.) He bears testimony to the innocence of Jesus, this man hath done nothing amiss; he was fully convinced his sufferings were for sins not his own, and his confession seems to intimate he was well acquainted with the Saviour's character; and what he had seen of Christ's behaviour on the cross, his meekness, patience, and charity towards his murderers, were striking evidences of his innocence. (4.) He addresses himself to the dying Redeemer, as a dying sinner commending himself to his mercy. Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom. His faith staggered not at the ignominious circumstances in which he beheld the Son of God; he pays him the divine honours due to him as the Lord of life and glory; he professes unshaken dependence on his all-sufficiency to save even at the latest gasp, the vilest of sinners. Humbly he presents his request; one kind remembrance only he asks, unworthy the least regard; but if the Lord will think of him in that glorious kingdom, to which he is now assured he is about to be advanced, that will be enough to insure his salvation. Lord, give me like faith in thy power and love! Thus dying, may I be able to commend my spirit into thy hands! Content to stand on a level with this wretched malefactor, and founding all my hopes on thy rich and sovereign grace alone!

(2.) Christ is pleased most graciously to answer his request, and to give him even more than he asks. Verily I say unto thee, and my word is truth, my promises sure, this day shalt thou be with me in paradise; thy soul, as soon as it departs from the body, shall join the assembly of the blessed in that state of happiness and glory, which God hath prepared for his redeemed people. Note, (1.) The prayer of faith is sure of an answer of peace; the chief of sinners, when they return to God, shall be placed among his saints in glory everlasting. (2.) There is a state of blessedness immediately prepared for the souls of the faithful, where they are in joy and felicity before the resurrection-day, when in body and soul their happiness will be complete. (3.) Where Christ is, there is heaven; to be with him, is to be eternally blessed.

The Descent from the Cross

Engraved by J. Freeman from an Original Painting

Published by Arch.d Fullarton & Co.a Glasgow.

44. ¶ [z] And it was about the sixth hour; and there was darkness over all the ‡earth until the ninth hour. 45. And the sun was darkened, [a] and the vail of the temple was rent in the midst. 46. ¶ And [b] when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, [c] Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit: and having said thus, he gave up the ghost. 47. ¶ Now [d] when the centurion saw what was done, he glorified God,* saying, Certainly this was a righteous man. 48. And all the people that came together to that sight, beholding the things which were done, [e] smote their breasts, and returned. 49. [f] And all his acquaintance, and the women that followed him from Galilee, stood afar off, beholding these things.

z Amos 8. 9. Mat. 27. 45—49. Mark 15. 33—38.
‡ Or land.
a Exod. 26. 31. 2 Chr. 3. 14. Mat. 27. 50—53. Mark 15. 38. Eph. 2. 14—18. Heb. 6. 19. & 10. 19. 2 Cor. 3. 14, 16. John 14. 6.
b Mat. 27. 46, 50. Mark 15, 34, 37. John 19. 30. c Ps. 31. 5. Acts 7. 59. Heb. 9. 14. Phil. 2. 8.
d Mat. 27. 54. Mark 15. 39.
* Acknowledged these convulsions of nature to be an evidence of divine interposition.—Hammond.
e Ver. 34. Acts 2. 37. ch. 18. 13.
f Mat. 27. 55. 56. Mark 15. 40, 41. ch. 8. 2. ver. 27, 55. Job 19. 13. Ps. 38. 11.

Verses 44—49. We are told,

1. The prodigies which happened whilst Jesus hung on the tree. The sun was eclipsed from twelve o'clock at noon till three, and the veil of the temple rent, signifying the state of judicial blindness, to which the Jewish people were abandoned; the abolition of all the typical institutions, the one great sacrifice being now offered which they represented; and the free access which all, whether Jews or Gentiles, now have to a throne of grace, through this new and living way consecrated through the veil, that is to say, his flesh, Heb. x. 19, 20.

2. The last dying words of Jesus, which he uttered aloud, not as one exhausted, but as having still his full strength, Father, into thy hands, I commend my spirit; and having thus said, he gave up the ghost. He borrows the Psalmist's words, for Scripture language is ever most expressive in our addresses to God. He testifies the fullest confidence in the favour of God his Father, as the great high priest and sacrifice; he by the eternal Spirit, offers himself for the sins of his people; and now by his death, pays down the ransom in full to divine justice; he commits his human body and soul, that now were to be separated, to his Father's care, and waits in hope until the third day, when they should be re-united, and, he should rise again. And thus must the dying saints of God, by faith, cheerfully commend their departing souls to their Father's keeping, until the happy resurrection morn; when, fashioned like to Christ's glorious body, our sleeping ashes shall be re-animated, and we shall be taken to dwell with him in his eternal kingdom.

3. The centurion's confession. Deeply affected with what he saw, and heard, he could not refrain from expressing his fullest conviction of the innocence of Jesus; and, to the glory of God, acknowledges the righteousness of his eternal Son.

4. The spectators, many of them at least, perhaps some also, who had cried, Crucify him, now full of anguish and remorse, returned smiting on their breasts. The prodigies they beheld startled their consciences, and terrified them with the apprehensions of what would be the consequence of this atrocious deed, at which even the heavens above, and the earth under their feet, testified their indignation.

5. A multitude of his disciples, and of the women who followed Jesus from Galilee, stood at a distance, overwhelmed with grief at what they saw, and under the deepest dejection, as if the cross of Jesus was the death of all their hopes, when, in fact, by these sufferings alone his victories were to be obtained, and his kingdom established.

50. ¶ [g] And, behold, there was a man named Joseph, a counsellor; and he was a good man, and a just: 51. (The same [h] had not consented to the counsel and deed of them;) he was of Arimathea, a city of the Jews: who also himself [i] waited for the kingdom of God. 52. This man went unto Pilate and begged the body of Jesus. 53. And he took it down, [k] and wrapped it in linen, and laid it in a sepulchre that was hewn in stone, wherein never man before was laid. 54. [l] And that day was the preparation, and the sabbath drew on. 55. ¶ [m] And the women also, which came with him from Galilee, followed after, and beheld the sepulchre, and how his body was laid. 56. And they returned, and prepared [n] spices and ointments; and [o] rested the sabbath-day, according to the commandment.

g Mat. 27. 57—61. Mark 15. 42—47. John 19. 38—42. 1 Cor. 1. 26. Ps. 22. 29.
h Is. 8. 12. 1 Tim. 5. 22. Eph. 5. 11. Prov. 1. 10.
i Ch. 2. 25, 38. Is. 8. 17. & 25. 9. Gen. 49. 18. Ps. 130. 5, 6. Lam. 2. 25. k Mat. 12. 40. & 27. 59, 60. Mark 15. 46. John 19. 38—41. Is. 53. 9. with 2 Kin. 13. 21. l Mat. 26. 62. & 15. 42.
m Ch. 8. 2. ver. 49. Mat. 27. 61. Mark 15. 45. ch. 24. 10.
n John 19. 39. 2 Chr. 16. 14. Mark 16. 1. ch. 4. 1. o Exod. 20. 8—10. & 31. 12. & 35. 2. Is. 56. 2, 4, 6. & 58. 13, 14. Jer. 17. 24, 25.

Verses 50—56. The corpse of Jesus was now in danger of being cast with those of the malefactors into a common grave; but when none of his other disciples had courage to appear, or ability to give him an honourable interment, God is pleased to raise up one to discharge this last kind office.

1. His name and character are here given us. He was called Joseph, a man of signal piety and probity; a counsellor, probably one of the great Sanhedrim, who consented not to the counsel and deed of them; either he entered his protest against their proceedings, or, seeing opposition in vain, withdrew. He was of Arimathea, a city of the Jews: who also himself waited for the kingdom of God, expecting, according to the prophecies, that it would shortly appear.

2. He went unto Pilate, and having obtained permission to take down the body from the cross, he wrapped it in linen, and laid it in his own new tomb, where never man before lay, in haste to finish the funeral, because the sabbath drew on. The women, the constant attendants of Jesus, followed the corpse to the grave; and returning, prepared spices and ointments, that they might come and embalm him, as soon as the sabbath was past; during which, they observed the rest enjoyed on that holy day. Note, The Lord's day now, as the sabbath of old, is sacred; all our affairs must be so ordered, as not to break in upon the hours expressly set apart for the immediate service of God.

CHAP. XXIV.—ANNO DOMINI, 33.

We have here glorious testimonies borne to the resurrection of Jesus, 1. By two angels to the women, who reported it to the apostles, ver. 1—12. 2. By Christ himself, to two of the disciples, as they went to Emmaus, ver. 13—35. 3. He appears to the eleven disciples themselves, the same day at evening, ver. 36—48. 4. He ascends into heaven, to the joy and praise of his disciples, whom he left behind, ver. 49—53.

1. NOW [a] upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them.* 2. And they found [b] the stone rolled away from the sepulchre. 3. And they entered in, and [c] found not the body of the Lord Jesus. 4. And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold, [d] two men stood by them in shining garments: 5. And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye [e] the living among the dead? 6. He is not here, but is risen: [f] remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee, 7. Saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again. 8. [g] And they remembered his words, 9. [h] And returned from the sepulchre, and told all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest. 10. [i] It was Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary the mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told these things unto the apostles. 11. [k] And their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not. 12. ¶ [l] Then arose Peter, and ran unto the sepulchre; and stooping down, he beheld the linen clothes laid by themselves, and departed, wondering in himself at that which was come to pass.

a Mat. 28. 1—8. Mark 16. 1—8. John 20. 1—10.

* The women spoken of here are mentioned in the last verse but one of the foregoing chapter, as 'the women who had accompanied Jesus from Galilee.' They were probably now joined by some of our Lord's female disciples from Jerusalem. —Campbell.

b Mat. 27. 60, 66. & 28. 2. Mark 15. 46. & 16. 4. John 20. 2.

c John 20. 2, 6, 7.

d Mark 16. 5—7. Mat. 28. 5—7: Gen. 18. 2. & 19. 15. Josh. 5. 13. Acts 1. 10. Dan. vii, viii, x. Zech. i—vi.

e Or him that liveth. Rev. 1. 18. Heb. 7. 8. 1 Tim. 1. 17.

f Mat. 16. 21. & 17. 22, 23. & 20. 18, 19. Mark 8. 31. & 9. 31. & 10. 33, 34. ch. 9. 22. & 18. 33. Mat. 12. 40.

g John 2. 22. & 12. 16. & 14. 26.

h Mat. 28. 8. Mark 16. 8. ver. 22—24.

i John 20. 1. ch. 8. 2, 3. & 23. 49, 55. Mat. 27. 55, 56. Mark 15. 40, 41.

k Ver. 25. Acts 12. 15. Num. 11. 22, 23. Ps. 73. 22. & 126. 1. Gen. 18. 12. & 19. 14. 2 Kin. 7. 2.

l John 20. 2, 6—10.

Verses 1—12. The sabbath being ended, the good women who had prepared the spices to embalm the body, were early up, to visit the sepulchre; and, to their surprise, found the stone rolled away from the door: and, to the increase of their perplexity, on entering the sepulchre, they found not the body. Whereupon we are told,

1. The glorious vision which appeared to them of two angels, whose presence at first greatly terrified them, and with deep respect they bowed their faces to the ground; but these heavenly messengers soon relieved them from their distress, with words of kindest consolation, Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen: Jesus your Master is no longer the prisoner of the grave; he lives, for ever lives, the conqueror of all his foes; remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee; it need not surprise them when he had so repeatedly foretold the sufferings and death he must undergo from the hands of wicked men, and his resurrection which would follow; and on being reminded of this, they remembered the prediction which the angel mentioned. Note, We are strangely forgetful of the great things which Jesus hath spoken, and need to have our memories often refreshed, that we may not let them slip.

2. The haste the women made to apprize the apostles, and the rest of the disciples, of what they had seen and heard. But, though the fact was asserted by the women, so slow of heart were they to believe, that they treated the report as idle tales and believed them not; they imputed it to the power of imagination, and were sunk in despair, and so totally unapprehensive of Christ's resurrection, that they seem not to have had the least expectation of it, nor the least remembrance of the assurances concerning his rising again, which he had so repeatedly given them.

3. Peter roused by the report, resolved however to see for himself, and ran immediately to the sepulchre: and stooping down, saw the grave clothes regularly folded up, and laid separate, but the body gone; whereupon he departed, wondering in himself at that which was come to pass. Not having the least expectation of his Master's resurrection, he could not account for these strange circumstances. Had he remembered the words of Jesus, his wonder must have ceased.

13. ¶ [m] And, behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs. 14. And they [n] talked together of [o] all these things which had happened. 15. And it came to pass, that, while they communed together and reasoned, [p] Jesus himself drew near, and went with them. 16. [q] But their eyes were holden, that they should not know him. 17. And he said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad? 18. And the one of them, whose name was [r] Cleopas, answering, said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem,* and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days? 19. And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was [s] a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people: 20. [t] And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him. 21. But we trusted that it had been he [u] which should have redeemed Israel: and, besides all this, to-day is the third day since these things were done. 22. [x] Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre; 23. And when they found not his body, they came, saying, that [y] they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that he was alive. 24. [y] And certain of them which were with us went to the sepulchre, and found it even so as the women had said; but him they saw not. 25. Then he said unto them, [z] O fools, † and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken! 26. [a] Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, m Mark 16. 12, 13. ver. 18.

n Deut. 6. 7. Acts 8. 28. Mal. 3. 16.

o Mat. 27. 45—53. & 28. 1—8. Mark 15. 33—39.

p Ver. 36. Acts 8. 30. Mat. 18. 20. Exod. 20. 14.

q John 20. 14. & 21. 4. Mark 16. 12. ver. 31.

r Or Alpheus. Mat. 10. 3. Mark 3. 18. ch. 6. 15. John 19. 25.

* Art thou alone such a stranger in Jerusalem as to be unacquainted, &c.

s Mat. 21. 11. John 4. 19. & 6. 14. Acts 3. 22. & 7. 37. & 10. 38. ch. 7. 16. & 2. 52. & 23. 47.

t Mat. xxvi, xxvii. Mark xiv, xv. ch. xxii, xxiii. John xviii, xix. Ps. xxii, lxix. Is. liii.

u Gen. 49. 10. Is. 9. 6, 7. Jer. 23. 5, 6. & 30. 21. Ezek. 34. 23, 29. Dan. 2. 44. & 7. 14. Mic. 5. 2. ch. 1. 68. & 2. 25 Acts 1. 6.

x Ver. 3. 9—12. Mat. 28. 7, 8. John 20. 1—10.

y Ver. 12. John 20. 3, 10.

z Gal. 3. 1. Heb. 5. 11

† More literally, O thoughtless men!

a Is. 50. 6. & 52. 13—15. & liii. Ps. xxii, xvi, ii, lxix. Phil. 2. 6—11. Heb. 2. 8—10. & 1. 3. & 12. 2. 1 Pet. 1. 11. Acts 17. 3. ver. 46.

and to enter into his glory? 27. And [b] beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself. 28. And they drew nigh unto the village whither they went; and he made as though he would have gone further. 29. But they [c] constrained him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them. 30. And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, [d] and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them. 31. And their eyes [e] were opened, and they knew him; and he * vanished out of their sight. 32. And they said one to another, Did not our heart [f] burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures? 33. And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven [g] gathered together, and them that were with them, 34. Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath [h] appeared to Simon. 35. [i] And they told what things were done in the way, and how he was known of them in breaking of bread.

b Gen. 3. 15. & 22. 18. & 26. 4. & 49. 10. Exod. xxv—xxx, xxxv—x. Lev. i—xvi. Num. 21. 9. Deut. 18. 15—18. Ps. ii, viii, xvi, xxii, lxix, lxxii, xlv, cxxxii. Is. 7. 14. & 9. 6. 7. & 35. 3—6. & 11. 1—10. & 42. 1—7. & xlix. 1, lii, liii. Jer. 23. 5, 6. & 30. 21. & 31. 22. & 33. 15, 16. Ezek. xxxiv. Dan. 2. 44. & 9. 24—27. Mic. 5. 2—4. Zech. 3. 8, 9. & 6. 12, 13. & 13. 7. Mal. 3. 1—3. Hag. 2. 7. John 1. 45. Acts 10. 43.

c Gen. 19. 2, 3. 2 Kin. 4. 8. & 5. 16. Acts 16. 15. Heb. 13. 2. Mark 6. 48. Gen. 32. 26.

d Ch. 9. 16. 1 Tim. 4. 4, 5. Acts 27. 35.

e Ver. 16. John 20. 16.

* Or ceased to be seen.

f Jer. 20. 9. & 15. 16. Job 23. 12. John 5. 35. Ps. 104. 34.

g John 20. 19, 26. Acts 1. 13.

h 1 Cor. 15. 5. Mark 16. 7. with ch. 22. 54—62.

i Mark 16. 10—13. John 20. 10. Mat. 28. 9, 10.

Verses 13—35. This passage just mentioned by Mark, is here more at large related. We have,

1. The discourse of two of the disciples as they walked to a village called Emmaus, about seven or eight miles from Jerusalem. Their business we are not told; perhaps despair had seized upon their hearts of ever again seeing their crucified Master, and they were now returning homewards. And as they went, the melancholy events which had passed were the subject of their conversation, together with the report which the women had spread of the resurrection of their Lord, on the probability of which they might be reasoning. Note, Godly conversation makes the most pleasing journey.

2. An unknown stranger to appearance, joins them on the road, as they were in deep discourse; and walking with them, kindly inquires what caused their melancholy looks and earnest conversation. They little thought who now was of their company; either their sight was miraculously affected, or their downcast eyes were never lifted up to look upon the person who had overtaken them. Note, (1.) Where two of Christ's disciples meet to talk about the things which appertain to his kingdom and glory, he will be in the midst of them, instructing and comforting them. (2.) The children of God are often without reason, sad, and fear their case is desperate, when their salvation is most secure; but their eyes are holden; through the weakness of their faith they cannot take the comfort which is offered them. (3.) When we are sad and dejected, solitude increases the evil, whilst the converse of a gracious friend serves to alleviate our sorrows; and where we are fellow-mourners, by comparing our cases, we should seek to be mutual comforters.

3. In answer to his question, Cleopas replied, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in those days? The city had rung of the horrid execution of Jesus, and Cleopas presumes that no man who came from thence, could possibly be unacquainted with the transactions which had passed on that occasion.

4. When Christ still pretended ignorance of the things to which Cleopas alluded, in order to draw on farther discourse in answer to his question, Cleopas succinctly relates the past and present state of the affair. He begins with an account of his dear Lord and Master Jesus of Nazareth, who was a prophet, a teacher come from God, who confirmed his divine mission by the heavenly doctrine he taught, and the miracles he wrought; was evidently approved of the Most High, who endued him with such mighty powers, and bore witness to him from heaven; and was for a while greatly caressed and admired by the people, who in crowds attended his ministry. Him, at the instigation of the chief priests and rulers, the Roman governor had crucified, though confessedly innocent; the remembrance of which grievous scene deeply afflicted them: especially as they acknowledge themselves his disciples, and own their late sanguine hopes, that this had been he, who should have redeemed Israel; the promised Messiah, the great prophet, whom Moses had bid them expect. But, alas! their hopes were now almost buried in their Master's grave: it was true indeed, he talked about rising on the third day, which was now drawing to a period, and certain strange reports had been spread by some women of their company, who had been that morning at the sepulchre to look after the body, and astonished them with an account of having seen a vision of angels, who said he was alive, but they gave little credit to the report. Some of their men, however, hereupon ran to the tomb, and found the body gone as the women had said, but saw nothing of the angels, or their Master, which rendered the matter very suspicious, and made them suppose the women mistaken; since, if he was really arisen, they could not but conclude he would rather have notified it to his apostles than to them, so that on the whole they were deeply dejected, and scarce entertained the least prospect of ever seeing him again.

5. The unknown traveller hereupon took up the discourse. He begins with a just rebuke of their folly and unbelief; O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken. Had ye reflected upon, and embraced the prophetic writings, you might as soon have entertained suspicions about the rising of the sun, as the resurrection of Jesus: for ought not Christ to have suffered these things, according to the eternal counsels of God, the express declarations of his prophets, and for the honour of the divine justice, and to enter into his glory, the reward of his sufferings and death? So far, therefore, from harbouring doubts because of these, that he could not be the Messiah, nor would ever rise again, what he endured was absolutely a proof of the reality of the character he assumed; and should have encouraged their fullest confidence, that as they had beheld his humiliation on the cross, they should also see his exaltation to his mediatorial throne. Then beginning from the books of Moses, he proceeded through the prophets, expounding to them the types and prophecies which related to himself, and spoke of his sufferings, and the glory which should follow. Note, The Old Testament, as well as the New, is full of Christ. We never understand Moses and the prophets aright, unless we see him as the great object which they continually hold forth to us.

6. At last Christ discovers himself to them. Drawing nigh to Emmaus, he made as if he would have parted company, and passed on farther; but they were too much charmed with his discourse to let him go, and therefore as the evening was advanced, they pressed him to stay: and at their importunate request he went in with them. And sitting down at table, with authority, as the master of the house, he took bread, according to his usual manner, and craving the divine benediction, broke, and gave to them. Immediately their eyes were opened; they looked up, and discovered the well known features of their crucified Master; when instantly he became invisible and withdrew, leaving them to reflect on what they had seen and heard. Note, (1.) They who wish for Christ's company must solicit the favour; he loves the importunity of prayer. (2.) If we have tasted the satisfaction of communion with Jesus, like the spouse we shall hold him fast in the arms of faith and love, and desire never to let him go. (3.) Our meals must be sanctified by prayer and thanksgiving, and then they will serve to minister food to our souls as well as our bodies. (4.) In the ways of his ordinances, the Lord opens the eyes of our faith, and enables us to behold his glory; he hath often since this made himself known to his people in the breaking of bread at his table. (5.) The visits of Jesus upon earth are transient; in heaven alone we can expect the uninterrupted beatific vision.

7. The disciples could not help hereupon reflecting on the lively impressions the discourse of Jesus had made upon them in the way. On comparing, they found that both their hearts had glowed with holy fervour as he spoke: such irradiation darted on their minds, whilst he opened to them the Scripture; such life and energy accompanied his discourse, that they cannot but marvel at their own stupidity not to have discovered him before; since none could have taught them with such demonstration of the Spirit and power, but he who spoke like as never man spoke before. Note, Nothing can warm the sinner's frozen heart like the preaching of a crucified Jesus; and his delightful name should be the continual subject of our discourses.

8. They immediately resolved to return, and carry the glad tidings to their brethren at Jerusalem. Not a moment was to be lost; they knew by what themselves had felt how melancholy and distressed their fellow-disciples were, and how they could bring them news that could warm their hearts, as it had fired their own. Accordingly, though it was evening, they hasted back, and found opportunely the apostles assembled with the rest of the faithful; who, before they had power to speak, eagerly prevented them, saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared unto Simon; so that it is not a woman's report merely, but a certain fact. The two disciples then corroborated the evidence with what had passed in the way, and the discovery which Jesus made of himself to them, in breaking of bread, when they sat down together to take some refreshment. Note, (1.) The gracious experiences which the Saviour gives us of his love, we should delight to communicate for the comfort and encouragement of our brethren. (2.) Nothing serves more to comfirm the faith, and enliven the hopes of real Christians, than comparing the observations, and the dealings of God with their souls. As iron sharpeneth iron, so doth such gracious communications mutually quicken and strengthen the heart.

36. ¶ [k] And as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you. 37. [l] But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit. 38. And he said unto them, [m] Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts? 39. [n] Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have. 40. And when he had thus spoken, he shewed them his hands and his feet. 41. And while they yet believed not for joy, * and wondered, he said unto them, [o] Have ye here any meat? 42. And they gave him a piece of a broiled fish, and of an honey-comb. 43. And he took it, and did eat before them. 44. And he said [p] unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me. 45. Then [q] opened he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures, 46. And said [r] unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: 47. [s] And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name [t] among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. 48. [u] And ye are witnesses of these things. 49. ¶ And, behold, I send [x] the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high.

k Mark 16. 14—18. John 20. 19—23. Mat. 13. 12. & 28. 9. ch. 10. 5. 1 Cor. 15. 5, 7.

l Mat. 14. 26. Acts 12. 9.

m Ps. 42. 5, 11. & 43. 5. Is. 41. 10, 14. Rev. 1. 17, 18. John 14. 1.

n John 20. 20, 27. 1 John 1. 1. Ps. 103. 12, 13.

* Yet, if they had not now believed, they doubtless would not have rejoiced; their faith was the cause of their joy, yet the excess of their joy was the hindrance of their faith. So dangerous are the excessive motions of our affections!—Poole.

o John 21. 5, 10, 13. Acts 10. 41.

p Mat. 16. 21. & 17. 22, 23. & 20. 18, 19. Mark 8. 31. & 9. 31. & 10. 33. ver. 6, 7. ch. 9. 12. & 18. 31, 32. Mic. 5. 2. Hag. 2. 7. Zech. 9. 9. & 13. 7. Mal. 3. 1—3. & 4. 2. see on ver. 27. John 16. 1. & 1. 45.

q Acts 16. 14. 1 Cor 2. 13 Mat. 13. 11. 2 Cor. 4. 6. Ps. 119. 105.

r See on ver. 26, 27, 44. Ps. 22. 7—16. & 16. 8—11. Acts 2. 25. & 13. 35. & 17. 3.

s Zech. 12. 10. Mat. 9. 13. Acts 2. 38. & 3. 26. & 13. 38. & 5. 31. 1 John 2. 21. & 1. 7. Rev. 1. 5, 6.

t Ps. 2. 6, 8. & 22. 22, 27. & 110. 2. Is. 2. 2—4. & 11. 10. & 28. 16. & 40. 9. & 49. 1, 6, 22. & 53. 12. & 52. 15. & 59. 19, 20. & 60. 9. & 61. 1, 23. Jer. 31. 33, 34. Dan. 7. 14. & 2. 44. Joel 2. 32. Mal. 1. 11. Mat. 8. 11, 12.

u John 15. 27. Acts 1. 8, 22. & 10. 39, 41. 1 John 1. 2, 3. & 5. 9.

x Joel 2. 28. Is. 44. 3, 4. Prov. 1. 23. Ezek. 36. 27. John 14. 16, 26. & 15. 26. & 16. 7—14. Acts 1. 4, 8. & 2. Gal. 3. 14.

Verses 36—49. This is the fifth appearance of Jesus the same day he arose. First he was seen by Mary, John xx. 14. Then by the women, Matt. xxviii. 9. By Peter alone, 1 Cor. xv. 5. By the two disciples; and now by all who were assembled together.

1. He suddenly appeared in the midst of them, whilst they were talking over this glorious event, the resurrection of their Lord; and with most encouraging words of consolation, wishes them all peace and happiness. He mentions not one upbraiding word of their perfidy in forsaking him; of Peter's profaneness and perjury in denying him; they had turned again, and he had sealed their pardon; the past, therefore, is not only forgiven, but forgotten, and he is come to assure them of his unchangeable love.

2. They were terrified and affrighted at his presence, and supposed at first it was an apparition, or a spirit, that had assumed the form of Jesus. So surprised were they, that they forgot the proofs of his resurrection for a moment, on which they had just been discoursing.

3. He soon convinced them of the groundlessness of their fears, and their folly to be startled at his appearance, which should have been their greatest joy, Why are ye troubled, and why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Note, We often cause ourselves needless disquiet, brooding over melancholy apprehensions, when perhaps the very distress we feel is a symptom for good; as the deep convictions of sin show the Spirit of God is at work with our hearts, and will shortly issue in peace and joy in believing. To remove, therefore, their doubts,

(1.) He bids them examine him, and gain the fullest evidence to their senses. There were his hands and his feet, where still the scars of the nails remained; those glorious scars in his victorious conflict over all the powers of darkness, their enemies, and his: handle me, and see, satisfy yourselves fully in the certainty of my resurrection, and the identity of my body: for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have, but is incorporeal, though it may appear under the resemblance of a human form. Accordingly he showed them his hands, his feet, his side, that they might have the fullest conviction of his being the same Jesus; for bearing testimony to whose resurrection, they would afterwards be exposed to the most furious persecutions, and therefore it was needful that their own assurance of the fact should be put beyond a doubt.

(2.) He eats and drinks with them, to prove most fully to them that he had really a living body like their own. The astonishment they were in, and the inexpressible joy they felt, quite overcame them; they were ready to believe, that what they saw and heard, was too great and too good news to be true, and could not yet credit the testimony of their own senses. To give time to recover from this ecstasy, and confirm their faith, he sat down with them, and did eat in their presence some broiled fish, and a piece of a honeycomb, which they gave him; so that they might be assured hereby he was no spectre.

(3.) He not only gave this conviction to their senses, but poured a flood of divine light upon their souls. He refers them to his former discourses with them, concerning the things written in the law, the prophets, and psalms, relative to his sufferings and glory; and by the powerful operations of his Spirit he wonderfully brought all he had spoken to their memory, and opened the intent and meaning of the Scriptures to their hearts with such evidence, clearness, and certainty, that they perceived the full accomplishment of all in him. Note, (1.) Our understandings are darkened, till Christ shines upon us as the Sun of Righteousness, and also by his Spirit communicates the faculty of vision. (2.) The most enlightened mind hath daily need to cry, Open thou mine eyes. (3.) The way in which Christ teaches is in and by the Scriptures: we must look for no wisdom unto salvation out of the written word:—Though, (4.) The plainest truths of God's revealed will are never to be spiritually discerned, till the Holy Ghost guides us into the sense and meaning of them.

(4.) He gives them instructions for the work in which they were now about to be employed. (1.) They were to be witnesses of his death and resurrection, proving from the Scriptures the predictions concerning both which were now accomplished in him; in consequence whereof, repentance and remission of sins must be preached by them in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. He being exalted at the right hand of God, in consequence of his sufferings, to bestow those inestimable blessings on as many as believed in his name, not of the Jews only, but of the Gentiles also: and nothing could so powerfully influence and engage the hearts of sinners to return to God, as this free and full salvation preached to them in his name. They must begin at Jerusalem, which had been the chief scene of his life and sufferings; the oracles of God, to which they appealed, were in the hands of the Jews; there the facts were transacted, to the truth of which they might most confidently appeal: and there his murderers dwelt, who most especially needed to be called to repentance; and to many of whom he would signalize the riches of his grace, in pardoning and saving them. The gospel is grace abounding to the chief of sinners. (2.) He bids them wait awhile at Jerusalem, and in a few days he would pour out upon them the Spirit from on high, which he had promised them to qualify them for their arduous undertaking, and strengthen them in the discharge of it. His kingdom was to be established, not by human endeavours, but by divine energy: therefore the instruments were poor, weak, illiterate fishermen, and this the more magnified the effectual working of that mighty power which appeared in them. They were endued with such wisdom as none of their adversaries could resist; with such courage, that no danger could dismay them; with such miraculous powers, as evidently spoke the finger of God; and were blessed with such amazing success, that in spite of all opposition, they were enabled to lay the foundations of that church, against which the gates of hell can never prevail.

50. ¶ And he led them out as far [y] as to Bethany; and he lifted up his hands, and [z] blessed them. 51. And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he [a] was parted from them, and carried up into heaven. 52. And they worshipped him,* and returned to Jerusalem with [b] great joy: 53. And were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God. Amen.

[y] Mat. 21. 1 Mark 11. 1. Acts 1. 10—12.

[z] Gen. 27. 4. & 48. 9. & 49. 28. Ps. 72. 17. Eph. 1. 3.

[a] Mark 16. 19. Acts 1. 9, 12. Heb. 1. 3. Eph. 1. 20, 21. & 4. 10. 1 Pet. 3. 22.

[b] Ps. 30. 11. & 149. 2. John 14. 31. Mat. 28. 20.

* Or, having worshipped him.

Verses 50—53. We have here the account of the ascension of Jesus into heaven, after he had forty days conversed with his disciples after his resurrection.

1. He gives them his parting benediction. He led them out as far as to Bethany, from whence he had made his triumphant entry into Jerusalem, some few days before his death. And lifting up his hands, as the great high priest, Lev. ix. 22. he pronounced a blessing upon them.

2. He was parted from them just as he had finished his benediction, as Elijah from Elisha, and carried up into heaven, either by the ministry of angels, or his own divine power; making his triumphant entry into the glorious courts above, and sitting down on the mediatorial throne prepared for him as the reward of his sufferings. Note, Though dearest friends must now part, we follow Jesus to that kingdom where we shall part no more.

3. The disciples bowed down in adoration before him, as the very God who, though in his human nature removed out of sight, yet filled heaven and earth with his presence. Note, The incarnate Jesus justly claims the worship and service of all his faithful followers.

4. They returned to Jerusalem with great joy. Their sorrows now were banished, bright hope and burning love possessed every bosom, and they waited confidently expecting the fulfilment of the promise their Lord had given them; and were continually in the temple, at the stated hours of worship; perhaps, as some suggest, they took up their abode in one of the rooms which adjoined to it, through the favour of some Levite, who might be a disciple, Acts i. 14. praising and blessing God, joining the temple songs, and offering their joyful acknowledgments for all the wondrous mercies they had received, and for the promises of greater yet in store for them. Amen: May we in our blessing and praises seek to emulate these happy disciples, till we come to join the songs of eternity; and in the better temple, among the blessed, shall day and night for ever celebrate redeeming love.

A PRACTICAL COMMENT UPON THE

GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST JOHN.

Introduction.

JOHN, the writer of this Gospel, was the favoured disciple whom Jesus peculiarly loved and who leaned on his bosom. He wrote the last of all the apostles, and some suppose, even after he had lived to see the destruction of Jerusalem; though the year and place when and where this gospel was written are not certainly fixed. He relates much of what the other evangelists had omitted, especially some of the most spiritual discourses of Jesus, and explicitly asserts and proves his divine power and Godhead. He is said to have lived to a great age, and to be the only one of the twelve apostles who died a natural death, the rest having all sealed their testimony with their blood.

CHAP. I.—ANNO DOMINI, 27.

The scope and design of this chapter is to confirm our faith in Christ as the eternal Son of God, and the true Messiah and Saviour of the world, that we may be brought to receive him, and rely upon him as our prophet, priest, and king, and to give up ourselves to be ruled, and taught, and saved by him. In order to this, we have here, 1. An account given of him by the inspired penman himself, ver. 2—5. And again, ver. 10—14. And again, ver. 16, 17, 18. 2. The testimony of John Baptist concerning him, ver. 6—9. And again, ver. 15. But most fully and particularly, ver. 19—37. 3. His own manifestation of himself to Andrew and Peter, ver. 38—42. to Philip and Nathanael, ver. 43—51.

1. IN [a] the beginning was the [b] Word, and the Word was [c] with God, and the Word [d] was God. 2. The same was in the beginning with God. 3. [e] All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made. 4. [f] In him was life, and the life [g] was the light of men. 5. And [h] the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not.

a Gen. 1. 1. Ps. 2. 7. Prov. 8. 22—30. Col. 1. 17.
b Rev. 19. 13. 1 John 1. 1, 2, & 5. 7. Heb. 1. 3. ch. 3. 34.
c Prov. 8. 30. ch. 17. 5. Zech. 13. 7.
d Ch. 10. 30, 33. Phil. 2. 6. Heb. 1. 3. 1 John 5. 7, 20. Tit. 2. 13. Rom. 9. 5. Is. 9. 6. e Ps. 33. 6. Ver. 10. Eph. 3. 9. 1 Cor. 8. 6. Col. 1. 16, 17. Heb. 1. 2. ch. 5. 17, 19. Rev. 4. 11.
f Ch. 5. 26. & 6. 63. & 12. 50. 1 John 5. 11. Col. 3. 3, 4. Gal 2. 20.
g Ch. 8. 12. & 9. 5. & 12. 46. Is. 42. 6, 7. & 49. 6.
h Ch. 3. 19. Rom. 1. 19. Heb. 1. 1. Rom. 8. 7. Eph. 5. 8. 1 Cor. 2. 14.

Verses 1—5. St John opens his gospel with an account of that divine personage, concerning whom he was about to write. He is called the Word, or Logos; the essential Word of God, to whom he ascribes all the attributes peculiar to the One Jehovah. We have,

1. His eternal self-existence. In the beginning was the Word. not only before his incarnation, but ere creation rose, or time began to measure its periods; from everlasting he existed, as the great I AM.

2. His co-existence with the Father. The Word was with God, and the Word was God; not as one God with another, but as one divine person co-existing with another in the same Godhead, and partaking with the Father in the same divine nature and essential perfections. The same was in the beginning with God, before any creature had yet been spoken into being.

3. His agency, in the formation of the world, and all things therein. All things were made by him, not as a subordinate instrument, but as the self-sufficient author of them; and without him was not any thing made that was made, from the highest to the lowest all are the creatures of his hand, and such power proves him to be very God, Isa. xliv. 24.

4. He is the original of life and light to all the creatures he hath made. In him was life, self-existent and independent; and he is the eternal fount from whence all beings, sensitive or rational, receive their life, and are maintained by supplies out of his fulness; and the life was the light of men; from him was communicated to us all that reason and understanding of which we are possessed, and from him alone comes all divine light and life since the fall, by which we can be restored to the knowledge and enjoyment of God.

5. The light shineth in darkness. By the fall all divine light is utterly banished from the minds of men, and they are by nature sunk in the blackness of spiritual darkness. The glimmering of tradition, and the brighter light of revelation, shining in the shadows and types of the law, or the prophecies and promises of the Old Testament, were utterly ineffectual to lead men to eternal life and salvation, without divine illumination: the darkness comprehended it not: the plainest and most obvious truths the natural man can no more comprehend, than the blind can discern the objects before them: He, therefore, who first gave eyes to our bodies, must, by the same divine power, give sight to our darkened minds, or we must for ever remain under spiritual darkness and ignorance.

6. ¶ [i] There was a man sent from God, whose name was John. 7. [k] The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe. 8. [l] He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of

cir. 27.
i Mal. 3. 1. & 4. 5, 6. Is. 40. 3—6. Mat. iii, xi, xiv. Mark 1. 1—11. Luke i, iii. ch. 3. 22—36. & 5 33, 35. Acts 13 24, 25. & 19. 3, 4. ver. 33.
k Mal. 3. 1. Is. 40. 3—9. Mat. iii.
l Ver. 30. ch. 3. 28.

Mark i. Luke iii. & 1. 16, 76, 77. see on ver. 6.

that Light. 9. That [m] was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world. 10. He was in the world, and [n] the world was made by him, [o] and the world knew him not. 11. [p] He came unto his own, and [q] his own received him not. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he * power [r] to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name: 13. [s] Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. 14. ¶ [t] And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, [u] the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) [x] full of grace and truth.

m Ver. 4, 5, 7, 8. ch. 8. 12. & 9. 5. & 12. 46. Is. 49. 6. & 42. 6, 7. & 28. 26—29. Luke 2. 32. 1 John 2. 8. & 5. 20. Mal. 4. 2. n Heb. 11. 3. & 1. 2. Eph. 3. 9. Col. 1. 16, 17.
o Is. 53. 1—3. 1 Cor. 1. 21. & 2. 8, 14. p Rom. 9. 5. Gal. 4. 4. Mat. 10. 6. & 15. 24. Acts 3. 25. & 13. 46. Rom. 15. 8.
q Luke 19. 14. Is. 53. 2, 3. Mat. 21. 38, 39. Heb. 10. 29. ch. 15. 24.
* Or the right or privilege.
r Rom. 8. 15. Gal. 3. 26. 2 Pet. 1. 4. 1 John 3. 1. Is. 56. 5. 2 Cor. 6. 17, 18.
s Ch. 3. 3, 5. Jam. 1. 18. 1 Pet. 1. 23. 1 Cor. 3. 6. Deut. 30. 6. Ezek. 36. 26.
t Gal. 4. 4. Rom. 1. 3. & 8. 3. & 9. 5. Is. 7. 14. Mat. 1. 16—25. Luke 1. 26—35. & 2. 1—7, 10, 11. Phil. 2. 6—8. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Heb. 2. 14, 16. 1 John 3. 8.
u Is. 9. 6. Heb. 1. 3. Phil. 2. 6. Col. 1. 15. & 2. 9. Mat. 17. 2. 2 Pet. 1. 17. Is. 40. 5.
x Col. 1. 19. & 2. 3, 9. 1 Cor. 1. 30.

Verses 6—14. The clearest revelation of gospel light began with the Baptist's ministry. To him, therefore, the Evangelist refers, as bearing the most glorious testimony to the uncreated Word.

1. He relates the mission and preaching of John. There was a man sent from God, whose name was John: his miraculous birth, his extraordinary gifts, and remarkable sanctity, were plain indications of his mission from above. The same came for a witness to bear witness of the Light; to point out to their notice the Sun of Righteousness, that was now about to arise; but to whom through the blindness of their hearts, they were not disposed to pay due attention and regard; and to testify that this was the Messiah of God: that all men through him might believe; not every individual, but men of all sorts, who were, without distinction, invited by him to look to Jesus and to be saved. He was not that Light; though his energetical discourses, and mighty influence, raised in the minds of many, an apprehension that he was the promised Christ, he assumed no such title; but his honour was to be the morning star, the harbinger of day, to usher in the rising Sun; he was sent to bear witness of that Light, and prepare the way of the Lord. Whilst we rejoice in the light of ministers, we must remember they are only witnesses to the Light; and as they preach not themselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord, to him must our eyes be alone directed.

2. Before he proceeds farther with John's testimony, the Evangelist enlarges on the glorious character and office of him, to whom the Baptist bore record. That was the true Light, in opposition to the false lights of Gentile philosophy, and in contradistinction to the glimmering taper of ceremonial types and figures: he was eminently the true Light, the fountain from which all wisdom and knowledge flow, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world, either as the author of natural reason to all men, or as sending the light of his gospel to all nations, or rather as the giver of spiritual light to the soul of every sinner who is brought out of the kingdom of darkness, and translated into that new world, the kingdom of God's dear Son. He was in the world, and the world was made by him: from the beginning his power and providence were displayed; but such was the blindness and stupidity of mankind, that the world knew him not, nor in the expanded volume of nature, opened to their view, discerned his eternal Godhead. Nay, he came unto his own, appearing incarnate in the fulness of time, and manifesting himself by his doctrine and miracles to the Jewish people, who were his own in a covenant of peculiarity, and his kinsmen according to the flesh; and his own received him not; they were in general hardened and obstinate, and rejected their God and Saviour, But a remnant according to the election of grace received, and to as many as received him in his real character, as the promised Messiah, the Prophet, Priest, and King of his people, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name. By faith embracing him as their God and Saviour, and placing their whole dependence on his atonement and righteousness, they were advanced to the high dignity and privilege of being accounted the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty, entitled to the inheritance of glory as joint heirs with Christ, and endued with all those heavenly graces and filial dispositions which proved their adoption of God. And all who truly believe in, and receive the same Jesus into their heart, trusting on him alone as the atoning Saviour, and are devoted to him as their Lord and Master, shall be made partakers of the same invaluable blessings and honours. We who were by nature children of wrath, are now become the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ. And this is not merely a relative change, but a real one: where God confers the dignity of a child, he gives the spirit of adoption. Those therefore are his sons, which were born not of blood, nor by natural descent, for nothing but corruption runs in the blood of all the fallen sons of Adam; nor by circumcision, which was only the outward sign of an inward and spiritual grace, without which that bloody rite availed nothing to the soul; nor of the will of the flesh; our regeneration springs not from any power or ability in ourselves, for we are not sufficient of ourselves to think any thing as of ourselves; nor doth it come of the will of man: the wisest reasoners, the most powerful orators, spend their rhetoric in vain, moral suasion is ineffectual, unless enforced by divine operation; and therefore the Evangelist adds, but of God: the renovation of the soul is the work of sovereign and almighty grace alone, and we can only be quickened from the death of trespasses and sins to spiritual life by the same divine power and energy which first breathed into the lifeless clay a living soul. And, in order to this great design of man's salvation, the Word was made flesh, became incarnate, not by the conversion of the Godhead into flesh, but by taking the manhood into God: he took our nature, that, in the likeness of sinful flesh, he might make reconciliation: and dwelt among us, in all the fulness of the Godhead taking up his abode in the body, which was prepared for him, as the Shechinah dwelt in the temple. And we beheld his glory, the brightness of which darted through the veil that for a time obscured its lustre, and appeared in all the miracles he wrought, in the transcendent wisdom, goodness, grace, power, and majesty, he displayed on various occasions, and particularly blazed forth at his transfiguration, his resurrection, and ascension; all which divine manifestations of himself, the more they considered, the more were they filled with reverence and godly fear, and could not but regard the glory of Jesus as the glory of the only begotten of the Father, such as it became this Divine Personage to appear in, who was the brightness of his Father's glory, and the express image of his person; and who was full of grace and truth; full of grace, of all spiritual blessings to bestow on his people; and truth, fulfilling in his own person, as the substance, all those typical institutions which were the shadows of good things to come, together with the prophecies which chiefly centred in him, and accomplishing all the engagements he had undertaken in the behalf of his people. With what entire satisfaction then may we rest our souls on this adored Redeemer, so admirably qualified for the office of Mediator, possessed of all the excellence which the human nature is capable of receiving, and infinitely exalted in the uncreated glory of the divine? The more we consider his humiliation in becoming incarnate, the more deeply should we be affected with the sense of his grace and love: and, whilst we view the man Christ Jesus as the very God of very God, the more confidently should we trust upon his complete salvation.

15. ¶ John bare witness of him, and cried, saying, [y] This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me; for [z] he was before me.
16. [a] And of his fulness have all we received, and grace for grace. 17. [b] For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. 18. [c] No man hath seen God at any time: the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

y Acts 13. 24, 25. Mat. 3. 11. ch. 3. 30, 31. & 5. 33. ver. 27, 30.
z Ver. 1. Mic. 5. 2. Prov. 8. 22—30. ch. 17. 5. & 8. 58. Is. 9. 6. Col. 1. 17.
a Col. 1. 19. & 2. 9, 10, 19. ch. 15. 1—5. & 3. 34. ver. 14, 17. Eph. 1. 3, 7.
b Exod. xx. to Deut. xxxi. Col. 2. 17. Heb. i—x.
c 1 Tim. 6. 16. & 1. 17. ch. 5. 37. 1 John 4. 12. Mat. 11. 27. & 3. 17. Luke 10. 22. ch. 6. 46. & 14. 9. Exod. 33. 20. Deut. 4. 12. Is. 48. 17. & 61. 1. Jer. 31. 34.

Verses 15—18. We have here,

1. The Baptist's farther testimony to Christ. John bare witness of him, and cried, saying, This is he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me. He was the herald sent to prepare the way of the King Messiah, to proclaim aloud the coming of the incarnate God, and at his baptism to point him out to the notice of the world, as infinitely his superior in dignity, though after him, in point of time, entering upon his ministry and mission. And this pre-eminence he justly ascribes to him, both in the view of his eternal existence as a divine Person, and also of his constitution to the office of Mediator before the worlds were; for he was before me. Note, (1.) The greatest of ministers and the chief of saints are always most careful to ascribe nothing to themselves, but ever to exalt the name of their adored Lord and Master as alone worthy of all honour and glory. (2.) The younger in office is often seen to be the greater in grace.

2. The Evangelist takes up the word, and expatiates on the unsearchable riches of Christ, in connection with what he had said, ver. 14. Out of his fulness, the plenitude of gifts and graces resident in this Son of God's eternal love, have we all received; not only they, as apostles, were indebted to their incarnate Lord for all the wondrous abilities with which they were qualified for the discharge of the trust committed to them, but also all Christians, of every degree, in every age, draw from the everflowing, overflowing fountain of a Saviour's grace, the supply of all their spiritual wants; and grace for grace; which singular expression is differently interpreted; either as representing the fulness as well as freedom of the gospel blessings, as grace upon grace, heaped up unto glory; or as the supply suited to our necessities, and effectual to strengthen us for all the work and duty to which the Saviour calls us; or such grace as exactly corresponds to that which is in him, transforming us into the same image, as the wax bears the impression of the seal; or as descriptive of the more abundant measures of grace dispensed under the gospel than under the law, to which sense the following verse seems to direct us, For the law came by Moses; he, as the minister of God, declared his will to the Jewish people; and it was matter of grace and favour that God by him revealed himself and his law unto them: but one unspeakably greater than Moses is here, the author of a new dispensation, which in glory, far excelleth, 2 Cor. iii. 10. for grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. He is the sum and substance of all the types and prophecies, and in him they receive their accomplishment: the gospel, which he declared, contained the brightest discoveries of the divine grace and goodness, and the most reviving promises, confirmed by the veracity of the unchangeable God; and as he reveals the only way of obtaining the divine favour, and how we may walk so as to please God, he ministers also the ability for that which he enjoins, and his gospel is a law of the Spirit of life, communicating spiritual life and power to the soul. The greatest prophets who went before him are not to be compared with him; and his word must needs, in the clearness and fulness of it, excel all the other revelations of his will which God hath been pleased to vouchsafe to the sons of men: for no man hath seen God at any time; neither men nor angels are capable of that intimate knowledge of the divine counsels, nor were ever admitted into his secrets: the only begotten Son which is in the bosom of the Father, and by his participation of the Godhead most perfectly understands all the designs of grace which were in the eternal mind; in nature one with the Father, and infinitely dear to him; he hath declared him, being most transcendently qualified to make such discoveries of God and his eternal counsels, particularly of his wisdom and grace in the redemption of lost sinners, as none of the prophets, nor John himself, could be supposed to do, they being but servants over the house of God: He the Son in his own house; and therefore hath more gloriously and distinctly than ever brought life and immortality to light by his gospel. They who went before us saw but through a glass darkly: we with a distinctness of vision, like that of face to face. May the light of gospel truth, so clearly revealed to us in and by the Son, be accompanied with the effectual power of gospel grace to our hearts.

19. ¶ [d] And this is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou? 20. And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ. 21. And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, [e] I am not. Art thou [f] that prophet? And he answered, No. 22. Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest thou of thyself? 23. [g] He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, * Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias. 24. And they which were sent were of the [h] Pharisees. 25. And they asked him, and said unto him, Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not [i] that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet? 26. John answered them, saying, [k] I baptize with water: but there standeth one among you [l] whom ye know not; 27. He it is, who coming after me is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose. 28. These things were done in [m] Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing.

cir. 29.
d Ch. 5. 33. Luke 3. 15. ch. 3. 28—36. Acts 13. 24, 25. & 13. 25. e Not 1 Kin. 17. 1. but Mal. 4. 5. Mat. 11. 14. & 17. 10—12.
f Or a prophet. Deut. 18. 15—18. with Mat. 11. 9—11.
g Is. 40. 3. Mat. 3. 3. Mark 1. 3. Luke 3. 4. ver. 15. Mal. 3. 1. & 4. 5.
* Or, I am he whose voice proclaimeth in the wilderness. h Luke 7. 30. Mat. 21. 31, 32. Acts 23. 8. & 26. 5. Phil. 3. 5, 6.
i Dan. 9. 25, 26. 1 Kin. 17. 1. 2 Kin. 2. 11. Deut. 18. 15—18.
k Mat. 3. 11. Mark 1. 7. Luke 3. 16. Acts 1. 5. & 11. 16. & 19. 4. & 13. 24.
l Ver. 10. 1 Cor. 2. 14. Mat. 3. 11. Acts 19. 4. & 13. 25. ver. 15, 18, 30. ch. 3. 28—36. & 5. 33.
m House of passage. Josh. 3. 17. ch. 10. 40.

Verses 19—28. The testimony of John is here re-assumed, which he delivered to those who were sent from Jerusalem to examine into his credentials.

1. The Sanhedrim, whose business it was to take cognizance of all religious matters, sent priests and Levites to inquire who he was; and what character he assumed? the time being at hand when the Messiah, according to the prophets, was now about to appear. And as many took John to be the Christ, or at least an extraordinary personage raised up for some great purposes, they wanted to hear from his own lips what he professed himself to be.

2. John's answers to their questions were direct and faithful. As to his being the Messiah he freely and earnestly disclaims every such pretension: he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ. Note, We must never arrogate to ourselves honours which do not belong to us; but should reject every temptation to pride with abhorrence. In reply to their question, whether he were Elias? he said, No. The Jews looked for the person of Elias; John only came in the spirit and power of that zealous reformer, and therefore was not the Elijah they expected. He declares himself to be neither Jeremias nor that prophet of which Moses spoke, nor any of the ancient prophets risen again, one of whom they supposed would precede the coming of Elias. Hereupon they urge him to give them a positive answer who he was, if he was neither of those whom they had mentioned, that they might carry back something determinate to those who sent them. To this he gave a direct answer in the words of Scripture, Isa. xl. 3. I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias. He is the harbinger of the Messiah: his office was to cry aloud and spare not, rebuking the sins and rectifying the errors of the people, and thus calling upon them to prepare to meet their God incarnate. And this is the great work of every true minister of Christ: with zeal which fires his discourses, he labours to call sinners to the Saviour; and, eager in his exhortations, desires to lead them to repentance unto life. Since he disclaimed the character of the Messiah, and those prophets which they had mentioned, they expostulated with him on his assuming authority to baptize; for it seems those Pharisees, who were now delegated in this commission, tenacious of their traditions, and proud in the conceit of their own goodness, fancied they needed no repentance, and unable to brook the freedom and severity of the Baptist's rebukes, would gladly have taken occasion to suppress and silence him. In answer to their question he replied, I baptize with water, as the outward sign of an inward and spiritual grace, which I pretend not to confer; but there standeth one among you, or there lately stood one among you, even Jesus who had been baptized by him, whom ye know not, he not having yet publicly appeared in his glorious character, as the Messiah; He it is, who coming after me, is preferred before me, as infinitely my superior, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose; so transcendently glorious and exalted in his dignity, that to be employed in the meanest office about his person, is an honour far beyond all that I can pretend to deserve. This conversation passed at Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing: but we find no inquiries made after him, concerning whom John informed them.

29. ¶ The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, [n] Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world! 30. This is he of whom I said, [o] After me cometh a man which is preferred before me; for he was before me. 31. And [p] I knew him not: [q] but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water. 32. [r] And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him. 33. And I knew him not:* but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, [s] the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. 34. And I saw, and bare record [t] that this is the Son of God. 35. ¶ Again, the next day after, John stood, [u] and two of his disciples: 36. And looking upon Jesus as he walked, he said, [x] Behold the Lamb of God!

n Ver. 36. Exod. 12. 3. Is. 53. 7. 1 Pet. 1. 19. & 2. 24. Heb. 9. 12, 14. Acts 8. 32. 1 John 1. 7. & 2. 2. & 3. 5, 8.
o See ver. 15, 18, 27. ch. 3. 28—36. Luke 3. 16.
p Luke 1. 80. & 2. 39, 51.
q Luke 1. 16, 17, 76—79. Mal. 3. 1. & 4. 5, 6. Is. 40. 3. Mat. iii.
r Mat. 3. 16. Mark 1. 10. Luke 3. 22.
* All that is affirmed here is, that, till this evidence was given him, he did not know him to be the Messiah.—Campbell.
s Mat. 3. 11. Luke 3. 16, 22. Acts 1. 5 & 2. 4. Joel 2. 28. John 3. 34. Prov. 1. 22—24.
t Ver. 6—8, 18. Mat. 3. 17. 2 Pet. 1. 17. 1 John 5. 20.
u Mat. 11. 2. Mal. 3. 16.
x Ver. 29. Is. 42. 1. & 65. 1, 2. Heb. 3. 1.

Verses 29—36. Jesus had now finished his glorious conflict with the great enemy of souls, and was returned from the wilderness victorious to the banks of Jordan. There John saw him, and bore repeated testimony to him as the Christ of God.

1. He points out Jesus to the notice of his disciples, as he walked near the river's side, saying, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world. He is the Lamb without spot and blemish, which the daily sacrifice and paschal lamb prefigured; he is the Lamb of God, appointed by him as the great oblation which should once be offered, with whose sacrifice he would be well pleased: taking away the sin of the world, of all his people, not of the Jews only, but of the Gentiles also; and by the one oblation he hath once offered, hath fully, completely, and everlastingly made the atonement; so that all, in every age or place, under whatever degrees of guilt or power of corruption they lie, who come to him, are sure to find a complete salvation wrought out for them; and therefore we are directed to behold him, to look to him with an eye of faith, that we may be made partakers of the eternal redemption that is in him.

2. He declares this is the person to whom he had before borne witness. This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me; for he was before me: a man, yet more than man, even God-man. And I knew him not; there was no personal acquaintance between them before, nor were they in league together to serve any sinister end or purpose: but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water; this was the great end of John's ministry, to point out to Israel the anointed Saviour.

3. He mentions the sign which the Lord had given him to discover that distinguished personage whose forerunner he was, but of whom till then he had no personal knowledge. The sign given was the visible descent of the Spirit as a dove, and on whomsoever of those, who came to him to be baptized, he should see it light, he might be fully assured that this was he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. This he saw at Jordan, when Jesus came to be baptized of him; and heard the voice from heaven mentioned, Mat. iii. 17. On these sure grounds therefore he bore record then, and ever after continued to repeat the same testimony, that this is the Son of God incarnate, the true Messiah promised from the beginning.

4. The next day, again looking earnestly on Jesus as he walked, he pointed him out to two of his disciples, saying, Behold the Lamb of God, desirous to engage their attention to the heavenly Saviour, and to lead them to value, regard, and embrace him, as the one great atoning sacrifice for the sins of men, which all those offered under the law prefigured and represented. Note, (1.) The doctrine of Christ's sacrifice for our sins is the glorious subject on which ministers must continually insist. (2.) They who have beheld the excellency of Jesus cannot but delight to recommend him to the regard and notice of others.

37. [y] And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus. 38. Then Jesus turned, and saw them following, and saith unto them, [z] What seek ye? They said unto him, Rabbi, (which is to say, being interpreted, Master,) ‡ where dwellest thou? 39. He saith unto them, [a] Come and see. They came y Rom. 10. 17. Mat. 4. 18. Is. 55. 10, 11. z Luke 18. 41. Mat. 7. 7.

‡ Or abidest.
a Ch. 6. 37. Is. 55. 1, 6. Rev. 22. 17.

and saw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day: for it was || about the tenth hour. 40. One of the two which heard John speak, and followed him, was [b] Andrew, Simon Peter's brother. 41. He first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the [c] Messias, which is, being interpreted, [d] the Christ. 42. And he brought him to Jesus. And when Jesus beheld him, he said, Thou art Simon the son of Jona: thou shalt be called Cephas, which is, by interpretation, [e] A stone.

|| Two hours before sun-set according to the Jewish reckoning.

b Ch. 6. 8. Mat. 4. 18. & 10. 2.

c Ps. 2. 2. Dan. 9. 25. Is. 61. 1. & 11. 2.

d Or the anointed. 1 Sam. 2. 10. Ps. 2. 7. & 89. 20. & 84. 9. Dan. 9. 24—26. ch. 4. 25.

e Or Peter. Mat. 10. 2. & 16. 18.

Verses 37—42. The first disciples of Jesus here begin to commence their acquaintance with him.

1. The two, who were with John when he pointed out Jesus to their notice, immediately followed him, desiring to be indulged in a greater intimacy with him. And the gracious Lord, who observes and is delighted with the first steps a soul takes in approaching him, kindly accosted them, and inquired what they sought. With respectful address and humble inquiry they replied, Rabbi, where dwellest thou? Rabbi was the title given to the most famed of their wise men; and most deserving of it must he be in whom dwelt all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. They desire to be admitted to a longer conversation with him than they could enjoy as they walked, and would gladly, if they might be permitted, wait upon him to receive his divine instructions. Note, Abiding communion with Jesus is the thing a soul, who is at all acquainted with him, importunately desires. Christ courteously invites them to his lodgings: Come and see: he was ready to give them an immediate welcome; for his arms are ever open to receive those who desire to come to him. With thankfulness and joy they immediately embraced the offer. Where the soul is at stake, every delay is dangerous. They came and saw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day: for it was about the tenth hour: so that they spent that day in delightful conversation with him. The name of one of these disciples was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother; the other probably the author of this gospel, who here, as in other places, modestly suppresses his own name, when the mention of it would be to his honour. A noble instance of his unfeigned humility.

2. A third disciple is added. Andrew, eager to communicate the glad tidings to his brother, Simon, findeth him, and with exultation relates the important discovery they had made, We have found the Messias, (which is, being interpreted in the Greek language, the Christ,) the anointed of the Lord, so often spoken of in the Scriptures; and he brought him to Jesus, who took particular notice of him: and calling him by his name, which though a stranger to him probably before, he well knew, he gives him a new name, Cephas, which signifies a stone, as adopting him into his family, and intimating the steadiness of his heart in the work of the gospel, and his being appointed one of those pillars on which with his brethren the apostles, the church should stand firm, grounded on Jesus the chief corner-stone and sure foundation. Note, (1.) They who have tasted the riches of a Saviour's grace themselves, cannot but be active to draw others unto him. There is in Christ enough and to spare. (2.) They who are nearly related to us in blood, claim a peculiar interest in our regard and prayers; and the best token of our love to them will be shown in leading them to Jesus. (3.) The faithful in Christ Jesus stand firm as a rock, unmoved with the storms of tribulation, which for his sake they may be called to endure.

43. ¶ The day following Jesus would go forth into Galilee, and [f] findeth Philip, and saith unto him, [g] Follow me. 44. Now Philip was of [h] Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter. 45. Philip findeth Nathanael, and saith unto him, We have found him of whom [i] Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, [k] Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph. 46. And [l] Nathanael said unto him, [m] Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, [n] Come and see. 47. Jesus saw Nathanael coming to him, and saith of him, Behold [o] an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile! 48. Nathanael saith unto him, Whence knowest thou me? Jesus answered and said unto him, Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig-tree, I saw thee. 49. Nathanael answered and saith unto him, Rabbi, [p] thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Israel. 50. Jesus answered and said unto him, Because I said unto thee, I saw thee under the fig-tree, believest thou? [q] thou shalt see greater things than these. 51. And he saith unto him, [r] Verily, verily, I say unto you, [s] Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the [t] Son of man.

f Is. 65. 1. 1 John 4. 19.

g Mat. 4. 19, 21. & 9. 9. & 16. 24.

h Mat. 11. 21. Mark 6. 45. & 8. 22. Luke 9. 10. ch. 12. 21.

i Gen. 3. 15. & 22. 18. & 49. 10. Deut. 18. 15—18. 2 Sam. 7. 12. Is. 7. 14. & 9. 6. & 42. 1—7. & xlix, lii. Jer. 23. 5, 6. & 31. 22. Ezek. 17. 22. & 21. 27. & 34. 23, 29. & 37. 24. Dan. 9. 24—26. Mic. 5. 2. Zech. 6. 12. & 9. 9. Mal. 3. 1. & 4. 2. see on Luke 24. 27, 44.

k Mat. 2. 23. Luke 2. 4, 39, 51. & 24. 19.

l Or Bartholomew. Ch. 21. 2. Mat. 10. 3.

m John 7. 41, 42, 52. Luke 4. 29.

n Ch. 4. 29. 1 Thes. 5. 21.

o Rom. 9. 6. & 2. 28, 29. Ps. 32. 2. 1 Tim. 1. 5.

p Ch. 1. 14. & 3. 16. Ps. 2. 6, 7. 1 Tim. 6. 15. Rev. 17. 14. Mat. 16. 16. & 21. 5. ch. 6. 69.

q Mat. 13. 12. & 25. 29. & iv—xxviii. Acts i—xii.

r Only Christ who is truth itself, uses this phrase. Ch. 3. 3, 5.

s Gen. 28. 12. Mat. 4. 11. Luke 22. 43. & 24. 4. Acts 1. 10. 1 Tim. 3. 16. 2 Thes. 1. 7. Jude 14.

t Mat. 16. 13. Dan. 7. 13. Ps. 80. 17. Zech. 13. 7. Is. 7. 14. Heb. 2. 11, 14, 16.

Verses 43—51. Our Lord having begun to make choice of his disciples, adds two more to the number, in Galilee, whither he went the day following.

1. Christ himself calls Philip. He found him, not by accident, but design, as the great Shepherd, seeking after his lost sheep, and gathering them unto himself; not one of whom shall perish: he knoweth their wanderings, and will bring them to his fold. He saith unto him, Follow me; and Christ's word instantly wrought effectually upon him. He was of Bethsaida, a town on the lake of Gennesareth, and a place very abandoned, Matt. xi. 21. yet there Andrew and Peter also dwelt; for in the worst of places God hath some chosen vessels, to be to the praise of the glory of his grace.

2. Philip immediately went in quest of some friends, to whom he might carry the glad tidings; and finding Nathanael, he with joy communicates the news, We have found him of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph. Probably our Lord had opened these Scriptures concerning himself to Philip's fullest satisfaction. But Nathanael, on the mention of Nazareth, starts an objection, Can any good thing come out of Nazareth? a place vile and despicable to a proverb. Philip, unable to solve the difficulty, yet not shaken in his own faith, saith, Come and see, persuaded that Jesus himself could easily silence that and every other objection which might be raised against him. Note, (1.) They who have found Christ, cannot but exult in this happy acquisition. (2.) Though we may not be capable of answering every objection that may be started, we are not therefore to conclude our religion is a delusion, but examine farther, and then we shall find enough to satisfy us that we have not believed cunningly devised fables. (3.) When we are in doubt we must come to Jesus, and by prayer and attention to his word, may be confident he will lead us into all truth.

3. Nathanael yielded to Philip's invitation, and quickly was convinced of the unreasonableness of the prejudices which he had entertained. (1.) Christ highly commends his character as he saw him coming near, saying to those who were in company with him at that time, Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile, a genuine son of simple hearted Jacob. Note, It is a great thing to be an Israelite indeed, in spirit and temper such as our profession demands, without allowed guile either towards God or man, but with regard to both, keeping a conscience void of offence. (2.) Nathanael expresses his surprise how Jesus should know him, whom he had never seen before; but the confirmation of it, which Christ gave, yet more amazed him, and silenced all his doubts, as it proved his omniscience: Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig-tree, I saw thee. Probably Nathanael had retired thither for some religious exercises, where no eye could see him, and there had offered up his fervent supplications to God for the Messiah's coming, or might be employed in meditation, perhaps on that dream of Jacob, Gen. xxviii. 12. to which our Lord refers, ver. 51. and such an instance of his knowing both the place of his retirement, and the very sentiments of his soul, could not but give Nathanael the strongest evidence of his being indeed the Messiah, as Philip had affirmed. Note, The eye of Jesus is upon us in our most retired moments, and he is acquainted with every sentiment of our souls. And this cannot but afford as much comfort to a gracious soul, as it speaks confusion to every hypocrite. (3.) Nathanael fully convinced, bows down before him, and makes solemn profession of his faith in him as the Messiah, Rabbi, thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Israel. His prejudices instantly vanished, and, assured of the divine mission and character of Jesus, he gladly yields himself up a loyal subject to Israel's King, trusting on him for salvation from all enemies.

4. Christ with approbation of his faith, and admiration of his noble confession, assures Nathanael he shall shortly see greater and more glorious evidences of his infinite wisdom and power, to confirm his confidence. Verily, verily, I say unto you, who am the faithful and true witness, Hereafter you shall see heaven opened, or from henceforth, when, entering upon his public ministry, he should begin to manifest his glory in the miracles he wrought, and the doctrines he taught; and ye shall see the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man, either literally, in their ministrations to him at his resurrection and ascension, or rather figuratively, such a friendly intercourse between heaven and earth would now appear to be restored, and such wonders wrought by Jesus in confirmation of his mission, that it would be proved with evidence strong and striking as if they saw the heavens themselves opened, and the angels employed in carrying on a correspondence between God the Father and the Son become man, for us men and for our salvation. Note, Through the Son of man the kingdom of heaven is opened to all believers, the angels of God minister to the heirs of salvation, and we may now enter boldly into the holiest of all, ascending by him, who is unto us, as the ladder of Jacob, the way to God and glory.

CHAP. II.—ANNO DOMINI, 29.

In this chapter we have, 1. The story of the first miracle which Jesus wrought, turning water into wine, at Cana of Galilee, ver. 1—11. and his appearing at Capernaum, ver. 12. 2. The story of the first passover he kept at Jerusalem after he began his public ministry. His driving the buyers and sellers out of the temple, ver. 13—17. and the sign he gave to those who quarrelled with him for it, ver. 18—22. with an account of some that followed him thereupon for some time, ver. 23, 24, 25. but he knew them too well to put any confidence in them.

1. AND the [a] third day there was a marriage in [b] Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there: 2. [c] And both Jesus was called, and his disciples, to the marriage. 3. And when they wanted wine the mother of Jesus saith unto him, [d] They have no wine. 4. Jesus saith unto her, [e] Woman, [f] what have I to do with thee? [g] mine hour is not yet come. 5. His mother saith unto the servants, [h] Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it. 6. And there were set there six water pots of stone, [i] after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins apiece. 7. Jesus saith unto them, Fill the water pots with water. And they filled them up to the brim. 8. And he saith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feast. And they bare it. 9. When the † ruler of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was, (but the servants which drew the water knew,) the governor of the feast called the bridegroom, 10. And saith unto him, Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have [k] well drunk, then that which is worse: but thou hast kept the good wine until now. 11. [l] This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory; and his disciples believed on him.

[a] Ch. 1. 43.
[b] Josh. 19. 28. ch. 4. 46.
[c] Mat. 11. 19. Luke 7. 34.
[d] Ch. 7. 3. with Luke 1. 35. Mat. 3. 17.
[e] Ch. 19. 26. Deut. 33. 9. The expression, in the ancient languages, conveys no idea of disrespect.
[f] Josh. 22. 24. Judg. 11. 12. 2 Sam. 16. 10. & 19. 22. 2 Kin. 3. 13. Deut. 33. 9. Our Lord here gently suggests that, in what concerned his office, earthly parents had no authority over him.—Campbell.
[g] Ch. 7. 6. Eccl. 3. 1—11.
[h] Exod. 23. 21. Deut. 5. 32. & 12. 32.
[i] Mark 7. 2—4. Mat. 15. 2. & 23. 25.
† Perhaps a Levite who was chaplain to them.
[k] Gen. 43. 34. Song 5. 1.
[l] Ch. 1. 14, 50, 51. & 3. 2. & 14. 11. & 1. 14. Ps. 90. 16, 17. & 102. 16.

Verses 1—11. The first miracle of Jesus was wrought at a marriage feast in Cana of Galilee. It was probably a marriage of some near relation of his mother Mary's, who seemed to be there not merely as a guest, but as one of the family. Christ was invited, and refused not the invitation given him, on this occasion, but went with his disciples to grace the bridal feast with his presence and company, and put an honour upon the institution. Note, (1.) Our marriages can only then be expected to issue happily, when Jesus with his benediction crowns the indissoluble union. (2.) Religion teaches none to be unsocial or uncivil, but commands us to rejoice with those that rejoice. We are told,

1. The concern expressed by the mother of Jesus to her Son on account of the deficiency of the wine at this entertainment. The number of the guests, perhaps more than were expected, consumed the small quantity which these persons, who were probably in mean circumstances, had provided, and they might not be able to afford more. It seems she expected that he would soon begin to display his glorious power, and intimated that the present necessity afforded an opportunity for his miraculous assistance. Note, (1.) In the height of our earthly joys something still is wanting. We must look only for perfect bliss in that kingdom, where they neither marry nor are given in marriage. (2.) A gracious heart interests himself in the distresses of his friends, and, when he can do no more to relieve them, fails not to commend their case to the kind Saviour's notice.

2. He gives her a reprimand for interfering in matters which did not belong to her. Though he was her son after the flesh, yet in the exercise of his miraculous powers he acted as the Son of God, and owed her no obedience: and to intermeddle in the direction of his conduct, respecting the affairs of his kingdom, was a very blameable presumption. What a direct condemnation of the horrid idolatry of that church, which prays to the mother to command her son? Besides he adds, My hour is not yet come; either it was not yet time to work this miracle, till all the wine was spent: or rather the time for the public manifestation of his glory, by his openly performing miracles, was not yet come; and, whatever he might do in private, he was not to be directed by her, or any other, when or how to act.

3. Though his mother silently submitted to his pleasure, she entertained apprehensions that he would grant her request, and take the matter into his consideration; and therefore privately bid the servants obey whatever orders he should give them. Note, (1.) We must not be discouraged in our faith, if our prayers are not immediately answered. (2.) Christ's commands are implicitly to be obeyed, without reasoning or hesitation.

4. Christ performs the needful miracle; and with circumstances that eminently displayed his glory. Six waterpots of stone were placed there, containing about two or three firkins each, which some suppose to be in quantity about nine gallons; it being customary with the Jews to make use of frequent washings, some of which were enjoined by the law of God, and more by the tradition of the elders, and therefore, where such a number of guests were present, much water was necessary. These waterpots Christ bids the servants fill with water to the brim, that there might be no suspicion of fraud in the miracle. They obeyed, and instantly the strange conversion was wrought. He orders them hereupon to draw out and carry this liquor to the governor of the feast, the person who was either the master of the ceremonies, or sat in the most honourable place on that occasion; or was the chaplain, the priest or Levite, who blessed the cup before it was sent round to the guests. No sooner had he tasted the wine which had been water, than he was struck with the delicious flavour, and, unacquainted whence it came, he observed with surprise to the bridegroom his unusual method of procedure. Others usually produced their best wine first, and afterwards, when men have well drank, that which is worse, (του ελασσω,) of a weaker body; but he had kept the good wine to the last, as the grace-cup, to conclude the entertainment. Note, (1.) God's creatures, and wine among the rest, are given us richly to enjoy. It is no sin to be pleased with the delicious flavour of the grape, when we remember with thankfulness who gave it that quality; only we must beware that we do not by intemperance abuse our mercies, and turn our blessings into a curse by excess of drunkenness. (2.) Feasts need a governor to restrain the irregularities of those who else perhaps, to their shame, would have no government over themselves. (3.) Whatever consolations believers here enjoy, the greatest are reserved for them at last, when, at the marriage supper of the Lamb, they shall drink the new wine in the kingdom of God.

5. At the conclusion of this miracle the Evangelist observes, that this was the first Jesus performed after his entrance on his ministry. Wherein he manifested forth his glory in such displays of his power and grace, wrought by his authoritative word, as exalted his own great name, and proved his own eternal godhead and glory; and his disciples believed on him, confirmed in their assurance of the truth of that high character which he assumed. Note, The more we become acquainted with Christ in his word, the more shall we be convinced that this is he who should come, and shall be engaged to rest our souls on him for life and salvation.

12. ¶ After this he went down to Capernaum, he, and [n] his mother, and ‡ his brethren and his disciples; and they continued there not many days.

13. ¶ And the Jews' [o] passover was at hand; and Jesus went up to Jerusalem,

14. And [p] found in the temple those that sold oxen,* and sheep, and doves, and the changers of money sitting:

15. And [q] when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables;

16. And said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence; [r] make not my Father's house an house of merchandise.

17. And his disciples remembered that it was written, [s] The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up.

18. ¶ Then answered the Jews and said unto him, [t] What sign shewest thou unto us, seeing that thou doest these things?

19. Jesus answered and said unto them, [u] Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up.

20. Then said the Jews, ‖ Forty and six years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days?

21. But he spake of [x] the temple of his body.

22. When therefore [y] he was risen from the dead, his disciples [z] remembered that he had said this unto them; and they believed § the scripture, and the word which Jesus had said.

m Mat. 4. 13. & 11. 23. Luke 4. 14, 31. & 10. 15.

n Mat. 12. 46. & 13. 57. ch. 7. 5.

‡ Cousins.

o Exod. 12. 6—14. & 23. 14—17. & 34. 23. Deut. 16. 1. Num. 28. 16. Luke 2. 41.

p Mat. 21. 12. Mark 11. 15. 16. Luke 19. 45. 46. Deut. 14. 23—26.

* More properly, cattle.

q Prov. 26. 3. Zech. 4. 6. Ps. 93. 5. 1 Cor. 5. 7.

r 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10. Mat. 21. 13. Mark 11. 17. Luke 19. 46. Is. 56. 7. Jer. 7. 11.

s Ps. 69. 9. & 119. 139. Rev. 2. 2.

t Ch. 6. 30. Mat. 12. 38. & 16. 1. Mark 8. 11. Luke 11. 29. 1 Cor. 1. 22.

u Mat. 26. 61. & 27. 40. Mark 14. 58. & 15. 29. 2 Cor. 5. 1. He meant their putting him to death. 1 Cor. 15. 3, 4.

‖ Since Herod began to rebuild it.

x 1 Cor. 3. 16. & 6. 19. 2 Cor. 6. 16. Col. 2. 9. Heb. 8. 2.

y Ps. 16. 10. Is. 53. 8. Mat. 12. 40. & 16. 21. & 17. 23. & 20. 19. Acts 2. 25. & 13. 32—34. & 26. 22.

z Luke 24. 8, 25, 26, 44, 45. John 14. 26.

§ Or, understood.

Verses 12—22. Capernaum was the place where Christ usually resided, Matt. iv. 13. Hither he came with his mother, brethren, and disciples, who, struck with what they had seen, attended him to observe the further manifestations of his divine power and glory which he should make. His abode at this time at Capernaum was not many days, the Passover being at hand, which called him up to Jerusalem. Where we find him,

1. Purging the temple of those intruders who had defiled that holy place. Under pretence of accommodating those, who came up to worship, with sacrifices and change of money, a market was kept in the temple by the connivance of the priests, who probably made some considerable advantage by permitting such a profanation. But Christ, beholding with indignation such corruptions in the house of God, immediately began to vindicate the honour of that sacred inclosure, and, having made a scourge of cords, he drove out the traders with their beasts, overturned the tables of the money-changers, and bade those who sold doves to take them away; remonstrating with them on the wickedness of their conduct, Make not my Father's house a house of merchandise; and, standing in so near a relation to the God of the temple, he could not endure to see him thus dishonoured. Note, (1.) The love of filthy lucre is generally at the root of the corruptions which creep into the church of God. (2.) If God is our father, we cannot but be grieved to see him dishonoured, and shall zealously appear in his cause. (3.) They who are bold and faithful for God, will often see that one can chase a thousand, and that, if we dare stand up in his name, the consciences of sinners will cover them with confusion.

2. The disciples remembered that it was written, The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up. And this confirmed still the more their faith, as they observed all the Scripture prophecies accomplished in him.

3. Being questioned by the Jews concerning the authority on which he acted, and required to give a sign, in proof of the mission to which he pretended, He answered and said unto them, Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up. Since they refused to be convinced by other miracles, he refers them to the last sign which should be wrought, even his resurrection from the dead by his own divine power, after they had destroyed the temple of his body: as he had now cleansed his house from their profanations, so would he raise his own body, which they should slay, and never suffer it to see corruption. They understood him as if he meant the material temple where he then was, which had now been forty-six years building and beautifying; since Herod took down that erected by Zerubbabel, and raised the present fabric on the same spot, which, though the body of it was finished in eight years, might probably till that time have continued to be more highly ornamented: though some suppose the words are to be interpreted of the time which Zerubbabel's temple was in building. However, they looked upon it as a most absurd pretension, for a mere man, as they presumed him to be, to assert that he could do that in three days, which had employed thousands of workmen so many years. Thus they ridiculed his assertion, though it appears they understood not his meaning. Note, (1.) It is just with God to give those up to their vain imaginations, who have no love of the truth, but have pleasure in unrighteousness. (2.) The grossest mistakes have been entertained by understanding literally what the Scriptures have spoken figuratively, as in the doctrine of transubstantiation, drawn from the words of Christ, This is my body. (3.) The body of Jesus was the true temple, in which the fulness of the Godhead dwelt; and of him the temple at Jerusalem was but the type and figure. (4.) As the temple was the medium of worship, and they who prayed turned their faces thitherwards, so is it through Christ Jesus alone that we can have access to and acceptance with God.

4. His disciples, though they, no more than the Jews, understood his meaning at that time, yet afterwards, when the events verified the prediction, and the Spirit, poured out from on high, opened their minds to understand the Scriptures, reflected on this prophecy, and, seeing the accomplishment of it in his resurrection, were the more deeply confirmed in their faith of the Scripture, and the word which Jesus had said. Note, The truths of Scripture which we learn in younger years, though not understood at that time, yet are of singular use, when in any future time, it pleases God to shine into our hearts, and open the eyes of our minds.

23. ¶ Now, when he was in Jerusalem at the passover, in the feast day, many [a] believed in his name, when they saw the miracles which he did. 24. [b] But Jesus did not commit himself unto them, because [c] he knew all men, 25. And needed not that any should testify of man: for he knew what was in man.

a Mat. 13. 5, 6, 20, 21. ch. 6. 14. Acts 8. 13. Jam. 2. 19.
b Prov. 14. 15. Mat. 10. 16, 17.
c Mat. 9. 4. Mark 2. 8. Luke 5. 22. ch. 6. 64. 1 Sam. 16. 7. 1 Chr. 28. 9. Acts 1. 24. Rev. 2. 23. Heb. 4. 13.

Verses 23—25. During the seven days of the feast Christ preached openly the doctrines of his kingdom, and wrought mighty miracles in confirmation of the truths he taught. The effect of which, we are told, was,

1. That many believed in his name; at least for the time they were so struck with his miracles as to give their assent to his doctrine, and own him as the Messiah. But,

2. Jesus did not commit himself unto them, did not trust himself with them, or repose any confidence upon them, because he knew all men; the wickedness of some, who would play the hypocrite in order to betray him; and the weakness of others, who in a time of danger might through timidity be tempted to desert him, or through mistake and indiscretion raise some disturbance, through their vain imaginations that his kingdom was temporal, and his throne to be established by arms. And, being thus allwise, he needed not that any should testify of man: for he knew what was in man: how deceitful above all things and desperately wicked his heart was, and therefore how little to be trusted. Note, (1.) We should be cautious in whom we confide, and try before we trust. (2.) Christ knows the secrets of all hearts; he sees the devices of his subtle enemies, and the falsehood of his pretended friends; and he will bring every sinner to judgment, and every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil.

CHAP. III.—ANNO DOMINI, 30.

In this chapter we have, 1. Christ's discourse with Nicodemus, ver. 1—21. 2. John Baptist's discourse with his disciples concerning Christ, ver. 22—36.

1. THERE [a] was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews: 2. The same came to Jesus [b] by night, and said unto him, [c] Rabbi, [d] we know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him. 3. Jesus answered and said unto him, [e] Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man [f] be born [g] again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. 4. Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born? 5. Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man [h] be born of water and of the Spirit, he [i] cannot enter [k] into the kingdom of God. 6. [l] That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. 7. Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born [m] again. 8. The [n] wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit. 9. Nicodemus answered and said unto him, [o] How can these things be? 10. Jesus answered and said unto him, [p] Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things? 11. Verily, verily, I say unto thee, [q] We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and [r] ye receive not our witness. 12. [s] If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I

a Ch. 7. 50. & 19. 39.
b Ch. 7. 13. & 12. 42. 43. & 19. 39. being ashamed to own him by day.
c Master. Ch. 20. 16.
d Ch. 9. 16, 33. Acts 2. 22. & 10. 33. Luke 24. 19. Zech. 4. 6. Gen. 18. 14. Jer. 32. 17, 27.
e Ver. 5, 11. ch. 5. 19, 24, 25. & 6. 26, 32, 47, 53. & 8. 34, 51, 58. & 10. 1, 7. & 12. 24. & 13. 16, 20, 21, 38. & 14. 12. & 16. 20, 25. see ch. 1. 51.
f Ch. 1. 13. Jam. 1. 18. 1 Pet. 1. 3, 23. Ezek. 36. 26. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Gal. 6. 15. Eph. 2. 5, 10. 1 John 3. 9. Tit. 3. 5.
g Or from above. Jam. 1. 18. 1 John 3. 9. & 5. 18.
h Ver. 3. Is. 44. 3, 4. Ezek. 36. 25—27. Tit. 3. 5—7. 1 Pet. 1. 2. & 3. 21. Mat. 3. 11. Eph. 5. 26.
i Luke 10. 42. & 13. 3, 5, 24. 1 Cor. 2. 14. Rom. 8. 5, 6. k Luke 17. 20, 21. Rom. 14. 17. ch. 18. 36. Rev. 21. 8, 27. & 22. 14, 15.
l Job 14. 4. Rom. 8. 1—13. Gal. 5. 17—24.
m Or from above. Cor. 11. Zech. 8. 6. ver. 3.
n Or spirit. Ezek. 37. 9. ch. 20. 22. Acts 2. 2. & 4. 31. Eccl. 11. 5. Mat. 20. 15. 1 Cor. 2. 11. & 12. 11.
o Luke 1. 34. ch. 6. 52, 60. ver. 4. 1 Cor. 2. 14.
p Mat. 11. 25. 1 Cor. 1. 26. with Ezek. 11. 19. & 36. 26, 27.
q Ver. 32. ch. 1. 18. & 7. 16. & 8. 28. & 12. 49. & 14. 24. Mat. 23. 37. ch. 1. 11. & 5. 45. 2 Cor. 4. 4. ver. 32.
r Is. 53. 1—3. & 49. 7. & 65. 2.
s 1 Cor. 3. 1, 2. Heb. 5. 11, 12.

tell you of heavenly things? 13. [t] And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven. 14. ¶ [u] And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: 15. [x] That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life. 16. ¶ [y] For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that [z] whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. 17. [a] For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved. 18. ¶ [b] He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. 19. [c] And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. 20. [d] For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be * reproved. 21. [e] But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that [f] his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God.

t Deut. 30. 12. Prov. 30. 4. Mat. 11. 27. ch. 1. 18. & 6. 33, 38, 51, 62. & 16. 28. 1 Cor. 15. 47. Eph. 4. 9.

u Num. 21. 9. ch. 8. 28. & 12. 32, 33. Mat. 26. 54. Luke 9. 22. & 17. 25. & 24. 7, 26, 46. 1 Cor. 1. 23, 24. Gal. 6. 14.

x Is. 45. 22. ver. 36. ch. 1. 12. & 11. 25, 26. & 6. 37, 40, 47. & 20. 31. Acts 8. 37.

y 1 John 4. 9, 10, 19. Rom. 5. 8. & 8. 32. 1 Cor. 1. 30.

z Is. 45. 22. & 55. 1—7. Mark 16. 15. Luke 2. 10, 11. & 19. 10.

a Ch. 12. 47. Luke 9. 56. ch. 5. 45. & 8. 15. & 9. 39. & 14. 6. & 4. 42. ver. 36. 1 John 4. 14. Mat. 18. 11. & 1. 21. & 20. 28. Is. 42. 6, 7. & 49. 6, 8.

b Ver. 36. ch. 5. 24. & 6. 40, 47. & 20. 31. Rom. 8. 1, 33. Mark 16. 16. 1 John 5. 10—13. Heb. 3. 19. & 4. 1—3. & 10. 26—31. & 12. 25—27.

c Ch. 1. 4, 5, 10, 11. & 8. 12, 37. Rom. 1. 32. 2 Pet. 2. 3. Is. 5. 20. & 30. 9—12. 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. ch. 15. 22—24.

d Job 24. 13—27. Amos 5. 10. 2 Tim. 4. 3. Acts 13. 45. Eph. 5. 13.

* Or discovered.

e Is. 8. 20. ch. 5. 39. Acts 17. 11. & 13. 47, 48.

f Gal. 5. 22—24. Eph. 5. 8. Phil. 1. 6. & 2. 12, 13. Is. 26. 12. 2 Pet. 1. 3—10.

Verses 1—21. Though not many mighty are called, we have here a singular instance of one made a monument of divine grace.

1. There was a man of great note and eminence, of the Pharisees, the sect which ever expressed the bitterest enmity against our Lord, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews, a member of the Sanhedrim; the same came to Jesus by night, solicitous to have some particular discourse with him concerning the things he had heard him preach; and he chose this time, as some suppose, out of shame and cowardice, as not daring to appear publicly with him for fear of the Jews; or because this was the season when Christ would be most at leisure, being engaged all the day in public, and when he might more freely and at large talk over with him the important points concerning which he desired to be resolved. With great respect he addressed him, and said unto him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God; for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him. These were such credentials of his divine mission, and wrought with such notorious evidence, that the more they were examined, the more forcibly they proved the author of them sent from God. Note, (1.) The grace of Jesus can reach those whose condition in life is most dangerous, and their prejudices the strongest against his gospel. (2.) When the profession of the true religion is reproachful and unfashionable, some, who dare not openly avow their sentiments, in secret approve the truths which others despise, and will slip in among the faithful, if they cannot be seen, as Nicodemus by night. (3.) Christ is come to be a teacher of babes, to lead a dark world to the light of life, and guide the erring feet of sinners into the paths of everlasting peace. May we be humble scholars then, and learn of him!

2. In consequence of the application of Nicodemus, Christ addresses him in the following instructive discourse.

(1.) On the nature and necessity of regeneration. Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, or from above, he cannot see the kingdom of God. Nicodemus, as the rest of his countrymen, tinctured with the common prejudices concerning the Messiah's kingdom, supposed the seed of Abraham would be all admitted to an honourable place in it. But Christ strikes at that radical mistake; assuring him, that no man's external privileges, religious profession, or moral attainments, availed any thing, if his heart and life were not effectually wrought upon by the regenerating influences of the Spirit of God. For, as we are born by nature corrupt, and polluted with sin, and spiritually dead in trespasses, we must receive another, a new, a divine nature, the work of God, as much as the life which he first gave to the clay, in order that man might be a living soul. And, unless this supernatural change passes upon us we can neither understand the nature of the Messiah's kingdom, nor receive any of the blessings and benefits which it was designed to convey to us.

Nicodemus, mistaking Christ's meaning, and understanding the words in a literal sense, expresses his surprise at the assertion, not comprehending how it was possible for a man, old as he was, to pass the second time through his mother's womb. In answer to his objection, Christ enforces and explains his declarations, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, a truth that is of most infallible certainty, Except a man be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God: Christ's word, however strange and unintelligible to the natural man, cannot change. There can be no entrance into glory, without that new birth which gives a meetness for it. The soul, by the powerful agency of the Spirit of God, must be cleansed from its natural pollution, as water purifies the body from any filth that it hath contracted; and by the ordinance of baptism, as the initiatory rite, regenerate souls are to be admitted into the visible communion of the faithful. And the necessity of such a spiritual change is evident, because that which is born of the flesh is flesh: could a man a thousand times pass through the womb, he would come forth still the same corrupted creature, unfit for the kingdom of God, man's nature being utterly sensual in his present fallen state, and all his appetites, delights, and pursuits, being after the flesh, and the things which gratify his bestial part: so that the soul is utterly enslaved, and the whole man flesh and not spirit. Whilst, on the contrary, that which is born of the Spirit is spirit; when the Holy Ghost works effectually on the heart, it is refined from the dregs of sensuality, the soul is restored to spiritual understanding, and the whole man, now brought under the influence of a new, divine, implanted principle of grace, becomes spiritual in his affections, pursuits, and designs, delivered from the bondage of base lusts and vile corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God, and restored to a capacity of enjoying him. Marvel not, therefore, adds the Lord, that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again; nor, though we are ignorant of the manner in which this divine change was wrought, is that any objection to the thing; for, in the world around us, we see effects, the immediate cause of which we are ignorant of. As for instance, The wind bloweth where it listeth, without control from any creature, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, nor whither it goeth: the effects produced by it are sensibly felt; but why it blows at one time stronger than at another, why from one point rather than another, where it begins and where it ends, these are secrets known only to him who bringeth the winds out of his treasures. So is every one that is born of the Spirit: with such sovereignty doth the uncreated Spirit work, affecting the con-sciences of some, and not of others; with power irresistible bearing down every obstruction; quickening, comforting, sanctifying the sinner's soul, and giving him blessed experience of his effectual power and influence; though he works mysteriously, and leaves the manner of his operations still a secret to us.

(2.) When yet Nicodemus appeared ignorant, and questioned how these things could be; for to the natural man the things of the Spirit of God are foolishness: Christ proceeds to reprove his dulness, and to enlarge on the certainty and sublimity of those glorious truths which he advanced: Art thou a master in Israel a famed teacher, and professor of divinity, and knowest not these things? Note, It is a shame for those who undertake to instruct others to be ignorant themselves, and, whilst they affect to pass for men of deep learning and erudition, to be unacquainted with the most important truths that pertain unto salvation. Verily, verily, I say unto thee, we speak that we do know: the truths Christ taught were of infallible certainty: he spoke as commissioned by his Father, and under the influences of the Spirit, in correspondence with what all the prophets and John had before declared: and testify that we have seen; not speaking on hearsay, but on the most undoubted evidence, and with the clearest assurance; and ye receive not our witness: such was the blindness, such the prejudices, that had spread over the Jews in general, and the Pharisees and rulers in particular, that they refused to receive and embrace the doctrines of salvation taught by the Son of God, though so infallibly true, so plainly delivered, and attested by such miracles: so that they were without excuse, as all infidels are, who refuse to submit to the evidence of revelation. If, therefore, I have told you earthly things, illustrating, with the familiar instances of water and the wind, the necessity of a spiritual change in the hearts of sinners here below, and ye believe not, comprehend not the meaning, nor give credit to the truths advanced, how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things? of the more sublime doctrines of the gospel, the amazing union of the divine and human nature, the design of the incarnation of the Son of God; his sufferings, death, exaltation; the nature of his spiritual kingdom, and of the beatific vision: how much more must these be mysterious, when delivered in language suitable to the vast subject, if the plainer truths appear so difficult to be understood? For instance, No man hath ascended up into heaven, but he that came down from heaven: the prophets of God indeed had spoken under a divine inspiration, and what they said came from heaven; but none of them ever spoke of their own knowledge, nor had been with God in glory, acquainted with all the secrets of his will; this was the distinguished privilege of the Son of man, the Messiah, who from eternity lay in the bosom of the Father, and was now come down from heaven, as a teacher eminently sent from God; and who, though upon earth, was even then the Son of man which is in heaven; though in his human nature he stood and talked with Nicodemus, his divine nature filled heaven and earth, was every where present, and, in virtue of that communication of properties which subsists between the two natures, the Son of man, though on earth, was, as God, in heaven; as the Lord of life and glory is said to be crucified, 1 Cor. ii. 8. and God, who is incorporeal, is said to purchase the church with his own blood, Acts xx. 28. that which was done by him in one nature being ascribed to him in the other. Note, (1.) There are mysteries above our comprehension, which are to be received on the evidence of God's word. Where reason fails, faith must be exercised. (2.) In all the humiliations of the Son of man, we must never forget that he is unchangeably the same, God over all, blessed for ever.

(3.) As the great prophet he proceeds to describe the end of his incarnation, and the eternal blessedness of those who truly believe in him. He came to seek and to save that which was lost, to heal our mortal wounds, and to recover our perishing souls.

[1.] He came to heal our mortal wounds, as the antitype of the brazen serpent which Moses in the wilderness lifted up, that those who were stung by the fiery serpents might look and live. And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life. (1.) We are mortally stung by the old fiery serpent Satan, and the deadly poison of sin is diffused through our nature: the wound is incurable, the torment intolerable and eternal, unless more than human help and healing be vouchsafed to us. (2.) Christ is the only hope of the desperate, the brazen serpent lifted up, for the healing of the nations, on the pole of the everlasting gospel, as crucified on a tree, but now exalted to the throne, bright shining with beams of grace on every miserable soul that turns the eye of faith towards him. (3.) It is looking to him alone which performs the wondrous cure. The soul that seeks to any other physician, or refuses this simple method of cure, Look to me and be ye saved, Isa. xlv. 22. perishes without remedy; whilst faith infallibly brings health and healing; for, (4.) However obnoxious we are by sin to the wrath of God, however deep our guilt, or aggravated our iniquities, he is a Saviour to the uttermost: whosoever looks to him shall live, though, like the dying thief, reduced to the last gasp; not only the chief of sinners shall be rescued from the eternal ruin he justly apprehends and fears, but shall have eternal life, entitled to all the bliss and blessedness of glory, through the complete and finished salvation which is in Jesus Christ, and can never afterwards perish.

[2.] He came to save our lost souls by the sacrifice of himself. For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

(1.) Christ is the universal Saviour, not of the Jews only, but of the Gentiles also; and, as his free salvation is preached to all, whosoever will is invited to come to him. They who reject his call sin against their own mercies. (2.) He is the only begotten of God, which bespeaks his infinite dignity and all-sufficiency to save those for whose sake he came into the world. (3.) The love of God in thinking upon us in our ruined state, and sending his Son to be the propitiation for our sins, is the astonishment of angels, and should be matter of our unceasing wonder, praise, and adoration. (4.) Whosoever by faith receives the Lord Jesus, as the Son of God and the Redeemer of lost souls, placing their whole dependence on his blood and righteousness, are sure to obtain the remission of all their sins, and in the world to come life everlasting. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, as the Jews supposed their Messiah would destroy the Gentile nations, and exalt them: but that the world through him might be saved. Even the vilest and most guilty, who believe in him, whether Jews or Gentiles, may now through him obtain salvation; whilst, out of him, ruin and despair must seize the whole fallen race. He that believeth on him is not condemned: there is no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus; nor will any charge lie against those whom God justifieth, and for whom the Saviour of sinners shed his blood. But, (5.) Destruction inevitable and eternal must be the portion of those who neglect or despise so great a salvation; he that believeth not the gospel word preached unto them, whether Jew or Gentile, is condemned already; lies at present under the curse which is the wages of sin, and is as surely a lost soul, as when the sentence shall be executed in the great day, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. Unbelief is the great damning sin: there can be no cure for those who reject the only remedy; and when God hath been so rich in grace, as to give his only begotten Son, the baseness of the ingratitude in rejecting him cannot but bring aggravated guilt and perdition on the sinner's soul. And this is the greatest and most fatal cause of their condemnation, that light is come into the world, the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, in which he shines as the Sun of Righteousness arisen to guide our feet into the ways of peace: and men, notwithstanding, loved darkness rather than light. The Jews hold fast their corrupt traditions; the Gentiles, their idolatrous superstitions; and both shun the light of truth, which makes manifest and condemns their works of darkness, because their deeds are evil; therefore they are sealed up under wrath; and such wilful ignorance, and obstinate rejection of the truth, must needs fill up the measure of their iniquities. (6.) This then will be the test between the wilfully impenitent and the sincere inquirer after truth. For every one that doeth evil; makes it his practice and his delight, and is wedded to his sins; hateth the light; his carnal mind is at enmity with Christ and his gospel; neither cometh to the light, but shuns the means of grace, the ministrations of the faithful, and the company and converse of such whose words and works would be a rebuke to his darkness; lest his deeds should be reproved; lest his darling corruptions should be held up to him in their own hideous form, his danger faithfully set before him, and his conscience wounded with remorse. But he that doeth the truth, in simplicity following the mind of God, as far as it is revealed to him, open to conviction, and willing to be searched, cometh to the light of God's word, desirous to know, and disposed to follow it, however contrary to his own natural inclination or worldly interests; that his deeds may be made manifest, his heart examined, his principles brought to the test, his mind enlightened, and his conduct regulated; so that it may appear he is now under the influence of a regenerate spirit, designing in all his works the divine glory, and evidencing that they are wrought in God, by his gracious influence, according to his holy will, and in a state of union and communion with him. Blessed and happy are the people who are in such a case!

22. ¶ After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the [g] land of Judea; and there he tarried with them, and [h] baptized. 23. ¶ And John also was baptizing in Ænon near to [i] Salim, because there was much water there: and [k] they came, and were baptized. 24. [l] For John was not yet cast into prison. 25. ¶ Then there arose a question between some of John's disciples and the Jews about [m] purifying. 26. [n] And they came unto John, and said unto him, Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, [o] to whom thou barest witness, behold, the same [p] baptizeth, and all men come to him. 27. John answered and said, [q] A man can †receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven. 28. Ye yourselves bear me witness, that I said, [r] I am not the Christ, but that I am sent before him. 29. [s] He that hath the bride is the bridegroom: but the friend of the bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice: [t] this my joy therefore is fulfilled. 30. [u] He must increase, but I must decrease. 31. [x] He that cometh from above is above all: he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth: he that cometh from heaven is above all. 32. [y] And what he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth; [z] and no man receiveth his testimony. 33. He that hath received his testimony [a] hath set to his seal that God is true. 34. [b] For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: [c] for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him. 35. [d] The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand. 36. [e] He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; [f] but the wrath of God abideth on him.

g Country places. Ch. 2. 13.
h Ch. 4. 1, 2.
i Gen. 14. 18. & 33. 18. 1 Sam. 9. 4.
k Mat. 3. 5, 6. Mark 1. 4, 5. Luke 3. 3, 7.
l Mal. 4. 12. & 14. 3. Luke 3. 19, 20. & 9. 7—9.
m Mark 7. 3, 4. Heb. 9. 10. with Mat. 3. 11. i. e. Whether John's baptism, or the legal and Pharisaical purifications, most effectually purged away sin?
n Eccl. 4. 4. Job 5. 2. Jam. 4. 5. Num. 11. 28. 1 Cor. 3. 4.
o Mat. 3. 11, 12. ch. 1. 7, 15, 26, 27, 29—36.
p Ver. 22. ch. 4. 1, 2.
q Heb. 5. 4. Jam. 1. 17. 1 Cor. 4. 7. & 15. 10.
† Or take unto himself.
r Ch. 1. 20, 30, 15. Mal. 3. 1 & 4. 4. 5. Mat. 3. 11, 12. & 11. 10—12. Mark 1. 2. Luke 1. 17. & 3. 16. s Song 3. 11. & 5. 1, 2. Mat. 22. 2. 2 Cor. 11. 2. Eph. 5. 25, 27. Rev. 19. 7. Hos. 2. 19, 20.
t Luke 2. 10, 11, 28.
u Is. 9. 7. & 52. 13. Dan. 2. 35, 44. Phil. 3. 8, 9.
x Ch. 8. 23. 1 Cor. 15. 47. Mat. 28. 18. Phil. 2. 9—11. with ch. 1. 15, 27, 30.
y Ch. 5. 20. & 8. 26. & 12. 49. & 14. 10. & 15. 15. ver. 11, 34.
z Ch. 1. 11. ver. 11, 12. Is. 53. 1. 1 Cor. 2. 14 2 Cor. 4. 4. Heb 2. 3. Prov. 1. 24, 25. Ps. 81. 11. a 2 Cor. 1. 22. 1 John 5. 10. Rom. 3. 4.
b Ch. 1. 16, 18. & 7. 16. Eph. 4. 7. c Ps. 45. 7. Is. 11. 2—5. & 61. 1—3. Col. 1. 19. & 2. 3. 9. ch. 1. 14, 16. d Is. 9. 6, 7. & 49. 6, 8. & 53. 12. Ps. 2. 8. & 89. 27. Dan. 7. 14. Mat. 11. 27. & 28. 18. ch. 5. 22. & 17. 2. & 13. 3. Heb. 2. 8, 9.
e Heb. 2. 4. 1 John 5. 10, 12. ch. 5. 24. & 6. 47, 54. & 1. 12. see ver. 15, 16, 18. Rom. 1. 17. Mark 16. 16.
f Gal. 3. 10. Ps. 7. 11. Heb. 2. 3. & 10. 29.

Verses 22—36. When our Lord had finished his discourse with Nicodemus, we are told,

1. Whither he went, and what he did. He left Jerusalem, and travelled into the country of Judea, where he continued some time, preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and by the ordinance of baptism, which his apostles administered, admitted those who professed their faith in him into the number of his avowed disciples.

2. John continued his ministry in another part of the country with success. He did not join with Jesus, lest their enemies should pretend there was a combination between them; nor did he desist from his labours, though he knew his superior was now gone forth to minister, but continued to preach, and to baptize all who came to him, having fixed himself at a place where were many streams of water, that rendered it convenient to administer baptism to the multitudes which resorted to him; for as yet he was not cast into prison, as he shortly afterwards was, and a period put to his farther usefulness. Note, The work of the ministry is wide; there is room for the exercise of all our several talents, nor must any be discouraged by their own comparative inferiority: they are suited for their place, and may hope to see their labours successful.

3. A contest arose between some of John's disciples and the Jews, concerning purifying. It would seem as if the disciples of John exalted their master's baptism above the ceremonial ablutions of Moses, or the purifications enjoined by the traditions of the elders; whilst many of the Jews probably contended for their own more ancient and authorized customs, and looked upon John's baptism as an innovation; suggesting that there would be no end to such novelties, as another person, one Jesus, was as much or more followed than their master, and his disciples would cry up his baptism as better than John's.

4. Puzzled with this difficulty, John's disciples carry the case to their master, and, jealous for his honour and their own, who were connected with him, report with concern what they had lately heard, and said unto him, Rabbi, he that was with thee, beyond Jordan, and, among others, received baptism; to whom thou barest witness, pointing him out with peculiar distinction; behold, the same baptizeth, setting up himself as a rival to thee; and all men come to him. They look upon it as a piece of presumption in Jesus to assume the Baptist's office, and ungrateful to make use of the testimony which John had borne, in prejudice to him: nor could they without envy behold their master eclipsed by him whom they regarded as lately but his disciple, and as one of themselves. So ready are good men to be under the temptation of a party spirit, and to feel unbecoming jealousies, and risings of envy against superior excellence, which seems to eclipse their own.

5. John's answer showed what spirit he was of. Far from envying Jesus as his rival, he rejoices in his success; and, confirming the testimony he had before borne to him, cheerfully turns over to him all his interest in Israel.

John answered and said, A man can receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven. God gives to every man severally as he wills, gifts, endowments, and success. If he is pleased to bestow more on one than another, there is no room for complaint: whatever our measure is, it is a matter of favour to us, and we have reason to be thankful, nor ought to envy the superior honours or usefulness of others; and this consideration should in every case silence every murmur of discontent or envy. The words also may have another reference, and intimate, that it was evident the plainest truths were insufficient, unless they were favoured with divine illumination; else could not his disciples, after what he had so repeatedly spoken of Christ, have stumbled at the rising fame of Jesus, and the application of the multitudes to him. And this is an universal truth, that unless a man be taught of God, he can never understand and heartily embrace the truths of God, which must be spiritually discerned.

He appeals to what he had uniformly advanced from the beginning. Ye yourselves bear me witness, that I said, I am not the Christ, but that I am sent before him. All the honour he had ever assumed was that of being his harbinger, and going before the face of the Lord to prepare his way; if therefore he was now arrived, his forerunner, far from being grieved, must rejoice in it. He that hath the bride is the bridegroom; Christ hath alone the right over his church, and to him must the gathering of the people be. He is come from heaven to espouse it to himself, the heavenly bridegroom: and having loved his people from eternity, draws their hearts to him in faith and love. There can be no reason therefore for murmurs or jealousy; but, far otherwise, the friend of the bridegroom, as he was, which standeth and heareth him, waiting upon him as his attendant, helping forward his interests, and desiring to advance his honour, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice, when he comes to take his bride, and issue his orders and instructions to those who wait in his train. This my joy therefore is fulfilled, to hear that Christ appears publicly, inviting his bride, his redeemed people, to come to him, and that multitudes flock to him, embracing the offers of his grace. And thus doth every faithful minister stand before the great Bridegroom of souls, to receive his commands, and deliver the messages of love to his church; delighted to behold the happy effects produced by them, when his people become a willing people in the day of his power; and rejoicing greatly in every soul converted to Jesus, and brought by faith and love to cleave to him alone.

Far from envying the rising glory of his Lord, John beholds with pleasure the fulfilment of the divine decree. He must increase, but I must decrease; his fame must spread, his glory be manifested, his disciples multiply; and to him doth John gladly turn over all his interest, content to fade before his superior brightness, as the morning star disappears before the rising sun, and well pleased to see that kingdom of the Messiah established and increasing, that must spread from pole to pole, and endure to the end of time. And to behold this, cannot but give the most singular delight to every faithful minister.

The glory of his person, and the surpassing excellence of his office, cannot but give him this superiority. He that cometh from above, is above all: his nature and original being divine, he must needs have the undisputed precedency, and supreme authority, over all other messengers sent from God, who speak only in his name, and by his commission. He that is of the earth, and such are the greatest saints and prophets, is earthly, and speaketh of the earth: as he sprung from the dust, and must return to the dust, he is naturally attached to earthly things; his conceptions low and grovelling; and, even when under divine inspiration, unable adequately to express the sublime mysteries of infinite wisdom; whilst he that cometh from heaven, is above all. Contrasted with the teaching of Jesus, in whom from eternity dwelt all the treasures of wisdom, as being one of the sacred self-existent Godhead; the wisdom of the wisest is weakness, and their speech not to be compared with his preaching. And the reason is evident, because what he hath seen and heard that he testifieth; from the most intimate knowledge of the divine nature possessing the Spirit without measure. But such was the blindness and obstinacy of those to whom he spoke, that, though he was greatly attended, and John's disciples apprehended all who followed him believed in him, he lets them know the case was far otherwise: no man receiveth his testimony; none, comparatively speaking, so few of the multitudes who came to him would be found his real disciples. Many are called by the gospel, but few truly converted by it; blessed and happy however are those who receive it in the light and love of it; for he that receiveth his testimony hath set to his seal that God is true. He subscribes to the faithfulness and veracity of God, in having fulfilled all the prophecies concerning the Messiah; and embraces, with full confidence of their completion, the gracious promises of his gospel as being all Yea and Amen in Christ Jesus. And herein God is glorified, when we trust our everlasting hopes upon the word he hath delivered to us by his Son; for he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God; all his language spoke the Divinity resident in him, and no word of human infirmity ever dropped from his lips; for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him. All the other prophets, who were sent of God, possessed but a measure of the Spirit, and only spoke under his immediate inspiration on some particular occasions, being at other times left to speak their own words; but he in whom dwelt the fulness of the Godhead bodily, ever spoke the words of God. The Father loveth the Son with a peculiar and transcendent regard, as being possessed of the same nature and perfections. He delights in his Son's undertaking, as Mediator, and hath given all things into his hand; investing him, in his human nature, with all power and authority in heaven and in earth. All the great affairs of the kingdom of providence, grace, and glory, are committed to his management, that his enemies may feel his vengeance; that his faithful ones may experience his blessing, protection, and care; and all at last appear before him as their eternal Judge. He that believeth, therefore, on the Son, receives him as God manifest in the flesh, and rests his hopes on the rich grace revealed in the gospel alone, hath everlasting life; he shall not only hereafter be put in possession of it, but hath actually already in himself the beginnings and foretastes of it, and possesses that title to it, confirmed by the immutable oath and promise of God, which never can be lost; and, on the contrary, he that believeth not the Son, rejecting his divine authority and mission, incredulous of his word, and disobedient to his will; shall not see life: whilst he remains under the power of unbelief, he is dead in trespasses and sins, and nothing but misery inconceivable and eternal awaits him, because the wrath of God, which is for ever wrath to come, abideth on him. How terrible is the end of all who believe not God, and obey not the gospel of his dear Son!

CHAP. IV.—ANNO DOMINI, 30.

In this chapter, we have Christ, 1. Departing out of Judea, ver. 1—3. 2. Passing through Samaria, (1.) His coming into Samaria, ver. 4—6. (2.) His discourse with the Samaritan woman at the well, ver. 7—26. (3.) The notice which the woman gave of him to the city, ver. 27—30. (4.) Christ's talk with his disciples in the mean time, ver. 31—38. (5.) The good effect of this among the Samaritans, ver. 39—42. 3. We find him residing for some time in Galilee, ver. 43—46. and his curing of a nobleman's son there that was at death's door, ver. 47—54.

1. WHEN therefore [a] the Lord knew how the Pharisees [b] had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John, 2. (Though Jesus himself [c] baptized not, but his disciples,) 3. [d] He left Judea, and departed again into Galilee.

Verses 1—3. Judea being now become a dangerous abode, through the malice of the Pharisees, our Lord retires into Galilee, that he might be farther removed from Jerusalem, where his bitter enemies chiefly resided. He had continued about eight months, (see ver. 35.) in Judea; and as his preaching had been very successful, and great multitudes followed him, who were admitted by baptism into the number of his professing disciples, he knew the wicked designs which his Pharisaical enemies had formed, on the information they received concerning his growing fame and interest among the people, as if he far exceeded John in his popularity and the number of converts, and therefore was to be apprehended as a more dangerous rival than the Baptist. Though in some particulars the information given to the Pharisees seems to be false; for it is not probable, that they who were baptized by the disciples of Jesus were more than those whom John had baptized: so it is certain, that Jesus baptized not, but his disciples, maintaining the dignity of his character, as sent to baptize with the Holy Ghost, and far superior to John, or any other. Or it may be also to remove all emulation among his disciples, which might arise, if he baptized some, and his servants others: or to show, that the validity of the ordinance depended not on the worthiness of the ministry, but on his blessing and institution. Note, (1.) The enemies of the gospel are ever envious and exasperated at its success. (2.) When danger threatens, it is prudent to avoid the storm by flight, where duty does not require us to stand and suffer.

4. [e] And he must needs go through Samaria. 5. Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which is called Sychar, near [f] to the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his son Joseph. 6. Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore, being [g] wearied with his journey, sat thus on the well: and it was about [h] the sixth hour. 7. There cometh * a woman of Samaria to draw water: Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink. 8. (For his disciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat.) 9. Then saith the woman of Samaria unto him, How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? [i] for the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans. 10. Jesus answered and said unto her, If thou knewest [k] the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee [l] living water. 11. The woman saith unto him, Sir, [m] thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep: from whence then hast thou that living water? 12. [n] Art thou greater than [o] our father Jacob, which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle? 13. Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water [p] shall thirst again: 14. [q] But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life. 15. The woman saith unto him, [r] Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw. 16. Jesus saith unto her, Go, call thy husband, and come hither. 17. The woman answered and said, I have no husband. Jesus said unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband: 18. For thou hast had † five husbands; and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband: in that saidst thou truly. 19. The woman saith unto him, Sir, I perceive that thou art [s] a prophet. 20. [t] Our fathers worshipped in this mountain; ‡ and ye say, that in [u] Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship. 21. Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, [x] when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father. 22. [y] Ye worship ye know not what: we [z] know what we worship: ‖ for salvation is of the Jews. 23. But the hour cometh, and now is, when the [a] true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him. 24. [b] God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth. 25. The woman saith unto him, I know that [c] Messias cometh, which is called Christ: when he is come, he will tell us all things. 26. Jesus saith unto her, [d] I that speak unto thee am he.

Verses 4—26. As Samaria lay between Judea and Galilee, he must necessarily pass through it in his way thither, unless he took a large compass about. That country was inhabited by the posterity of the colonies which the king of Assyria had planted there after the captivity; and being mingled with many apostate Jews, became a mongrel race, who, though retaining many heathen idolatries and superstitions, professed themselves worshippers of Israel's God, and received the books of Moses; were circumcised, and erected a temple on mount Gerizim, in opposition to that at Jerusalem, pretending that this was the spot where God ought to be worshipped. Hence arose the bitterest animosity between the Samaritans and the Jews, who regarded them as the most abominable of mankind. In this journey we are told,

1. The place where our Lord stayed to rest himself a while, a Ch. 1. 1, 14, 18. & 3. 35. & 13. 13, 14. Acts 10. 36.

b Ch. 3. 1, 2, 22, 26.
c 1 Cor. 1. 17. Acts 10. 48.
d Ch. 3. 22. Mark 1. 14, 15. Mat. 4. 12. Luke 4. 14. Mat. 10. 23.
e Luke 17. 11. & 9. 51—53. Mat. 10. 5. Rom. 15. 8.
f More literally, near to the heritage. Gen. 33. 19. & 48. 22. Josh. 24. 32.
g Heb. 4. 15. Rom. 8. 3.
h Mid-day. Mat. 27. 45. Mark 15. 33. Luke 13. 44. ch. 19. 14. & 11. 9.
* An inhabitant of Shechem, called Sychar, i. e. drunkenness.
i 2 Kin. 17. 24—41. Ezra iv, v. Neh. iv, vi. ch. 8. 48. Luke 9. 51—53. Acts 10. 28.
k Or, the bounty. Is. 9. 6. & 42. 6. & 49. 6, 8. & 35. 3, 4. Ps. 84. 11. Is. 44. 3, 4. Ezek. 36. 27. ch. 3. 16. 1 Cor. 1. 30. Rom. 8. 32.
l Jer. 2. 13. Is. 12. 3. & 44. 3, 4. ver. 14. ch. 6. 35. & 7. 38, 39. Zech. 13. 1. & 14. 8. Rev. 22. 1, 17.
m Ch. 3. 4. 1 Cor. 2. 14.
n Ch. 8. 53. Is. 49. 7. & 52. 2, 3.
o False. 2 Kin. 17 24.
p Ch. 6. 27, 58.
q Is. 49. 10. & 58. 11. ch. 7. 38, 39. & 6. 27, 35, 68. & 12. 50. & 17. 2, 3. & 20, 31. & 10. 10. Rom. 5. 21. & 6. 23. 1 John 5. 20. with Gal. 6. 14. Ps. 4. 6, 7. & 27. 4. & 73. 25, 26. & 142. 4, 5.
r Ch. 6. 26, 34. Jam. 4. 3. 1 Cor. 2. 14. Ps. 4. 6.
† Who, it seems, had divorced her for whoredom, and now she lived with another whoremonger.
s Luke 7. 16. & 24. 19. ch. 6. 14. & 7. 40.
t Gen. 12. 6. & 33. 18—20.
‡ To wit, Gerizim, at the foot of which Sychar was built.
u Deut. 12. 5, 11. 1 Kin. 9. 3. 2 Chr. 6. 6. & 7. 12, 16. Ps. 48. 1, 2. & 78. 68, 69. & 87. 1, 2. & 132. 13, 14. x Mal. 1. 11. 1 Tim. 2. 8.
y 2 Kin. 17. 29, 41. Acts 14. 16. & 17. 23, 30. z Ps. 147. 19. Rom. 3. 2. & 9. 4, 5. Heb. 7. 14. Is. 2. 3. Luke 24. 47.
‖ Rather, Ye worship what ye know not; we worship what we know.
a Phil. 3. 3. Rom. 1. 9. Is. 26. 8, 9. Ps. 62. 8. Heb. 10. 22.
b 2 Cor. 3. 17. 1 Tim. 1. 17. Rom. 1. 19. Phil. 3. 3. c Ch. 1. 41, 49. Dan. 9. 24—26. Is. 42. 1. & 11. 2, 3. & 61. 1—3. Prov. 1. 20—23. Deut. 18. 15—18 ver. 29, 39.
d Ch. 6. 69. & 9. 37. & 10. 30, 36.

being wearied with his journey. It was by a well-side belonging to a city of Samaria, called Sychar, (or Shechem, as it is supposed,) which city bordered on a piece of land which Jacob, having purchased of the sons of Hamor, had given to his son Joseph, see Gen. xlviii. 22. Josh. xxiv. 32. The well was called Jacob's either because he dug it, or used it for himself and family. Our Lord here appears truly man, subject to our sinless infirmities, weariness, thirst, and hunger; for it became him in all things to become like unto his brethren, sin only excepted. It was about the sixth hour, or mid-day, according to the Jewish computation of time; or six in the evening, if we follow the Roman method of reckoning.

2. The discourse which passed between Jesus and a woman of Samaria. She happened just at this time to come to draw water: so divine providence ordered it, leading her to Christ in a way she knew not, (see Gen. xix. 2. xxiv. 11. Exod. ii. 15.) The disciples being gone into the city to buy meat, he was alone, and is pleased graciously to improve that moment's leisure for the benefit of this poor stranger's soul, she being one of those lost sheep he came to seek and save.

He addressed her first, begging a little water to drink; for though he was rich, for our sakes he became thus poor, and condescends to ask a cup of cold water. Yet he had a farther end in view, even to engage her in conversation, and thereby to effect the purposes of his grace towards her. Occasional discourse with strangers hath been often found to have a blessed and abiding influence, and should encourage us, when travelling, to open our mouths, and speak a word for God, and immortal souls.

The woman expressed her surprise, that he who appeared to be a Jew, should deign to receive any act of kindness at the hands of a Samaritan; or that he should expect the least favour would be granted from one to the other, where the enmity between the two nations was so bitter and irreconcileable, as to cut off all manner of friendly intercourse between them. Religious quarrels are thus usually seen to be the most implacable; but where the spirit of bigotry and uncharitableness dwells, whichever side is right in the point disputed, the spirit of both is wrong, and utterly opposite to pure religion and undefiled.

Waving the subject of the controversy between the Jews and Samaritans, Christ designed to lead her to the knowledge of himself, and therefore replied, If thou knewest the gift of God, what an amazing instance of his love he hath given in sending his own Son into the world; and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; even that divine person now become incarnate; thou wouldest have laid aside these national prejudices, and have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water; those gifts of grace, and comforts of his Spirit, which to the sinner's soul are more desirable than the coolest and most refreshing stream to the parched throat and weary traveller. Note, (1.) Christ is the fountain of gardens, and well of living waters, open for every poor sinner, and freely given, that whosoever will may come unto him, and drink of the riches of his grace. (2.) Many carelessly disregard the invaluable blessings of the gospel, because they perceive not their excellence, nor their own want of them. (3.) They who would obtain the blessings of grace from Jesus and his holy Spirit, must seek them in importunate prayer; and he who is faithful and true, hath promised, that none such shall ask in vain.

